Another bus-shooting incident took place today, but this time it was a Trailways bus. State police in Kentucky say five shots were fired at a bus carrying the driver and one passenger about 60 miles south of Louisville. NO one was hurt. There have been several incidents of shootings at Greyhound buses since the Greyhound strike began a month ago.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - The stock market closed sharply higher Tuesday but off its best levels with the rally fueled by Tokyo's rebound from its plunge Monday, by institutional buying and by a late wave of computerized program buying.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 6.76 Monday, surged 36.26 to close at 2736.71.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.47 to 188.55 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 4.94 to 343.64. The price of an average share jumped 45 cents.

Advances pounded declines 1,066-422 among the 1,964 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume was 154,310,000 shares, compared with 124,360,000 shares traded Monday.

The market opened on a good note, taking its cue from the Tokyo market's rebound from the plunge Monday. Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange bounced back on late bargain hunting, one day after posting their biggest single-day loss since October 1987. The blue-chip Nikkei index surged 757.65 points to close at 28,759.72.

Analysts reported renewed institutional buying, especially of consumer stocks such as food and tobacco companies, which fueled the rally in the Dow industrials. These companies have relatively stable earnings and were attractive to investors nervous about what first-quarter earnings reports might show.

Late in the session a wave of computerized program buying swept through the market, taking prices to session highs and sending the Dow industrials up more than 40 points on the day. But before the close, the blue-chip indicator backed up slightly.

''I think this was the best-looking day of this rally,'' said Alfred Goldman, market strategist with A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis. ''There was improvement in volume and breadth (ratio of advances to declines). And it was orderly - we advanced, then paused, then advanced again.

''The sellers seem to have taken a walk,'' he said.

Goldman said what seemed to have encouraged investors was the inability of sellers to take the market down significantly after Tokyo's steep sell-off Monday.

''The bears had the ball when we came back from the weekend confronted by Tokyo's second-largest drop,'' he said. ''But with the ball in their court Monday morning, they fumbled it.''

When trading opened Tuesday, he said, many players resigned themselves to the fact that prices weren't going to fall much further right now and decided they might as well buy before prices went up.

On the trading floor, Philip Morris was the most active issue, up 1 3/8 to 40 7/8, leading the rally in blue-chip consumer stocks.

Unocal followed, down 1 5/8 to 32, after what were said to be negative comments from analysts. A Merrill Lynch analyst was said to lower his earnings estimate for the company. Other energy stocks rose, however.

Eastman Kodak was third, up 1 1/2 to 40 1/2.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T rose 3/8 to 42, IBM gained 3/4 to 106 5/8 leading other technology issues higher, and USX added 7/8 to 36 1/2. Reports after the close said a group led by Carl Icahn would ask shareholders to approve a proposal to separate the company's businesses into two publicly held companies, one focusing on energy and the other on the steel business.

Elsewhere in the consumer sector, Merck gained 1 1/4 to 71 5/8, Coca-Cola added 1 1/4 to 77 1/4, Procter & Gamble jumped 1 5/8 to 69 1/4 and Bristol-Myers Squibb climbed 1 1/4 to 59 1/2.

In other trading, General Development plunged 1 1/4 to 2 3/4 after reports saying it would close its homesite sales operations and lay off 1,100 workers. Amdura sank 5/8 to 7/8. Reports late Monday said the company and some units, as expected, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 182,876,040 shares, compared with 144,564,980 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed sharply higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index rose 2.28 to close at 361.65. Advances led declines 314-230 among the 802 issues traded. The price of an average share added 7 cents. Composite volume totaled 16,660,400 shares, compared with 16,001,200 shares traded Monday.

Energy Service led the Amex issues, up 1/4 to 5.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index up 4.47 to 437.65.

MINEOLA, NY (APRIL 3) UPI - A jury Tuesday convicted an unemployed weightlifter of murder charges in the slaying of a Long Island teenager whose nude, mutilated body was found stuffed in a garbage bag in the young man's basement.

The panel of nine men and three women deliberated for less than two days in Nassau County Court before announcing their verdict in the case against Robert Golub, 22, accused of killing his 13-year-old neighbor, Kelly Ann Tinyes.

Kelly Ann's naked, battered body was found stuffed in a plastic bag in a storage area in the basement of Golub's Valley Stream home on March 4, 1989, about 24 hours after a neighbor reported seeing her enter the house.

The girl, who lived a just a few houses down the street, had been beaten, strangled, sexually mutilated and slashed with a World War I bayonet in what police described as a frenzied assault.

Jurors were not allowed to consider lesser charges of first-degree manslaughter in the case against Golub because the judge ruled the brutal killing was ''only consistent with second-degree murder.''

The short, stocky body builder, who consistently denied any involvement in the killing but never took the stand in his defense, stood impassively before the jury, showing no emotion when the verdict was read shortly after 4 p.m.

Kelly Ann's mother, Victoria, burst into tears after Golub was convicted and shouted across the courtroom to his family, ''Are you happy now?'' Her remark came moments after Tinyes's aunt was led out of the courtroom, screaming hysterically.

Golub's father, John, sat stoically, but his wife, Elizabeth, and daughter Adele, began sobbing uncontrollably when the verdict was announced.

The convicted killer, who was remanded to the county jail, faces a maximum prison sentence of 25 years to life when he is sentenced on June 1.

The killing of Tinyes triggered bitter animosity against the entire Golub family from relatives of the dead girl and angry neighbors, who gathered on their front lawn shortly after the slaying, shouting ''devils!'' and demanding they move.

The jeers prompted the Golub family to stay with relatives for a week. The anger continued on their return home, leading the Golubs to summon police on several occassions to complain of neighborhood harassment.

The courtroom was also became a battle zone, with the slain girl's mother and aunts shouting ''Animal!'' and ''Murderer!'' at Kelly Ann's accused killer and her grandfather taking a swipe at Golub's father.

Court officers were subsequently assigned to keep the two families apart, but that did little to stem the hostility.

In one lunchtime confrontation, Golub's father claimed Kelly Ann's mother told him, ''You won't always have these men (the court officers) to protect you,'' and then held her hand out as if she had a gun ''and yelled 'Bam!.'''

The incident led the elder Golub to seek a court order of protection against the Tinyeses. That request was denied.

The prosecution's case against Golub was based almost entirely on circumstantial evidence, including bloody palm prints on the basement wall bite marks on the girl's neck and buttocks, and hair found in Golub's bed.

BONN, West Germany (APRIL 3) UPI - East Germany's ailing and disgraced former Communist leader Erich Honecker was taken under military escort Tuesday to a Soviet sanitarium in East Germany, a West German newspaper said.

The mass-circulation daily Bild said the move was requested by Honecker, 77, whose health had deteriorated since he was taken to live with his wife Margot in a pastor's home in Lobetal, just north of Berlin.

The couple was taken to Lobetal in January after the former leader was briefly held in police custody on his release from hospital, where he underwent a cancer operation.

Attempts last month to move the Honeckers to an East German government guest house failed after outraged villagers protested.

A Soviet military convoy drove the couple to the Soviet sanitarium in the Mark Brandenburg region, just west of Berlin, Bild said in its article, which was released in advance of publication.

East German authorities dropped treason charges against Honecker last month, citing lack of evidence and the fact that the former leader may be too ill to appear in court.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said Tuesday he will try to enter Lithuania from Poland later this week in defiance of Soviet moves that have virtually closed the border.

''It's important for someone to stand up for the cause of freedom,'' D'Amato said. ''Lithuania should know there are people ... who care and are not afraid to stand up, not afraid (of being) bowled over by Gorby-mania.''

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has refused to recognize Lithuania's declaration of independence.

D'Amato's press secretary, Frank Coleman, said, ''The senator was invited by the president of Lithuania to visit Lithuania and that's what the senator plans to do.''

D'Amato intends to leave Washington for Warsaw Wednesday and attempt to cross the Polish border into Lithuania Thursday using a Lithuanian visa. The Soviets have said they will only honor Soviet visas.

DETROIT (APRIL 3) UPI - President Bush called on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein Tuesday to retract a threat to use chemical weapons against Israel and said the United States had no evidence that Iraq has acquired a more poison gas arsenal.

''This is no time for talking about using chemical weapons,'' Bush said. ''This is no time to be escalating tensions in the Middle East. I found those statements to be bad and I strongly urge Iraq to reject the use of chemical weapons.''

Speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One as he flew here for a Republican Party fund-raiser, Bush underscored an earlier U.S. condemnation of Saddam's threat Monday to retaliate with chemical arms against any attack by Israel.

Saddam, whose statement was carried by the state-owned Iraqi News Agency, offered no specific basis for the threat. Fearing the development of an Iraqi nuclear arms capability, Israel destroyed a nuclear reactor southwest of Baghdad in June 1981.

Iraq's military capabilities and intentions also have come under increased scrutiny in the aftermath of arrests last week in what U.S. and British authorities described as an Iraqi plot to illegally obtain electronic triggers for nuclear weapons.

Bush, however, said there was ''no evidence that there's been any threat'' by Israel against any Iraqi military facilities. Of Saddam's threat, he said, ''I would suggest that those statements be withdrawn and forget about talk of using chemical and biological weapons.''

Saddam's use of the term ''dual chemical'' to describe the weapons in the Iraqi chemical arsenal raised questions about whether Iraq had developed or acquired an advanced form of ''binary'' weapons in which two otherwise harmless compounds, separated in artillery shells or missile warheads, combine on impact to create deadly nerve gas.

While taking note of the reference to ''dual weapons,'' Bush said ''preliminary checking'' by the U.S. government had produced ''no evidence that that means what we think of when we talk about binary weapons.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., whose district is in tobacco country, Tuesday denounced Health and Human Service Secretary Louis Sullivan's ''harsh, hyperbolic'' anti-smoking campaign as ''unwarranted and unprecedented.''

Neal made his remarks at a Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee hearing on anti-smoking legislation sponsored by the panel's chairman, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., that Sullivan also opposes.

The $185 million bill would allow states to ban tobacco advertising and calls for paid television ads against smoking, a center to regulate tobacco and public disclosure and government regulation of tobacco additives.

Neal said the bill is an example of good intentions leading to bad legislation and pointed to the importance of tobacco to his district, which is the home of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and the American Tobacco Co.

''It disappoints and offends us when HHS Secretary Louis Sullivan and others refer to people in the tobacco industry as merchants of death, characterize their wages as 'blood money,' and equate them with drug dealers,'' he said.

''Secretary Sullivan's harsh, hyperbolic speeches and comments about tobacco are unwarranted and unprecedented. Many of us wonder why he publicly exhibits more interest in tobacco than in health-care costs, AIDS drug and alcohol abuse, the elderly, the handicapped, the homeless and other matters in his department.

''Could it be that he gets better press by attacking tobacco?''

A Sullivan spokesman said Neal's comments were the first direct congressional attack on the secretary's anti-smoking campaign, which began with a successful call for Reynolds to withdraw plans to market a new cigarette aimed at blacks.

''Smoking is the No. 1 preventable cause of death in the United States. More than 1,000 Americans a day die as a result of smoking,'' the spokesman said. ''Anyone concerned with public health in our country has to put smoking and disease prevention in the top category of health priorities.''

Kennedy said Sullivan could defend himself, but told Neal the secretary had worked with the committee on a ''wide range'' of health issues.

Neal said the smoking issue really involvea ''individual freedom'' and compared efforts to limit smoking to government censorship of the arts.

''Our society has long valued and protected the people's right to choose - to make personal decisions without government interference. This right is guaranteed by the United States Constitution. It is the essential difference between our system of government and the totalitarian systems '' he said.

Kennedy's bill received support from Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, who said his subcommittee on transportation and hazardous materials has been told by the Federal Trade Commission that cigarette advertising is on the increase.

Lukens said unpublished FTC data shows tobacco companies spent a ''staggering'' $3.25 billion for advertising and promoting cigarettes in 1988 - a 27 percent increae over the $2.58 billion spent in 1987.

Sullivan has said he opposes Kennedy's bill because he fears attempts to regulate tobacco would make it appear safe and because he did not favor buying television time for anti-smoking ads.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - A federal appeals panel cleared the way Tuesday for ''Baby Bell'' companies spun off from the 1984 breakup of American Telephone and Telegraph to try to widen their services to include the electronic information market.

A three-judge panel for the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, however, upheld a lower court ruling that barred the spin-off companies from entering the long distance and telecommunications manufacturing business.

The seven Regional Bell Operating Companies, or Baby Bells, currently may transmit other companies' computerized information over their telephone lines but have been barred by court orders stemming from the AT&T breakup from writing their own electronic information.

The appeals panel ordered the case, which pits the government against the Baby Bells, back to federal court to determine whether a lifting of the ban on the generation of electronic information creates a possibility for a monopoly.

The appeals court advised the lower court to use a relatively broad standard in making its decision, saying it should determine not whether the lifting of the ban ''best serves society'' but whether it would be ''within the reaches of the public interest.''

A spokeswoman for Southwest Bell, one of the Baby Bells, said they were ''generally pleased with the direction given by the court,'' but declined further comment.

The other Baby Bell companies are Ameritech, BellAtlantic, BellSouth, NYNEX, Pacific Telesis Group and U.S. West.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - The dollar mostly declined in thin New York trading Tuesday as players exercised caution ahead of a Group of Seven meeting late in the week, but it staged a surprise rally against the Japanese yen.

Players weren't looking for major developments at a meeting Saturday in Paris of the finance ministers, treasury chiefs and central bank officials of the seven major industrial democracies - but most were on guard.

''I think we're in kind of a holding pattern until we see the G-7 meeting on the weekend,'' said currency analyst Earl Johnson, a foreign exchange vice president with the Harris Trust & Savings Bank in Chicago.

''On the one hand people, are expecting nothing,'' said Francoise Soares-Kemp, a treasury vice president for Credit Suisse in New York. ''But that is the time when people can get caught off-guard.''

Most currencies traded in narrow ranges, but the yen fell sharply against the West German mark and the dollar, according to Robert White, vice president for corporate trading with First Interstate Bank in Los Angeles.

After beginning the day on a relatively strong note, the yen was ''really on a roll'' in cross-trading with the mark, White said. The dollar owed its gains to the technical effects of action in the non-dollar cross market, he said.

In late New York trading, the U.S. currency was changing hands at 1.6970 West German marks, off from 1.7010 late Monday. Against the Japanese currency it was quoted at 159.80 yen, up from 159.15.

Analysts said Japan is likely to seek G-7 action to boost the yen, whose fall destabilized Tokyo financial markets. But U.S. officials aren't inclined to bail out the yen, and the Europeans are preoccupied.

Soares-Kemp said market participants suspect Japan may be obliged in the lack of G-7 assistance to hike its central interest rates again - even though this could wreak further havoc in equity and bond markets.

''The Japanese really are on their own as far as stemming the decline of the yen,'' she commented.

Other dollar rates: 1.5020 Swiss francs, off from 1.5035; 5.7070 French francs, down from 5.7190; and 1,247.50 Italian lire, off from 1,251.25.

The British pound rose to $1.6350 from $1.6340.

In Europe, the dollar was lower across the board. It slipped in Frankfurt, to 1.6990 marks against 1.7020 Monday, and also moved down in Zurich, to 1.5015 Swiss francs compared with 1.5050.

The dollar declined in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to 5.7190 French francs against 5.7210, 35.1700 Belgian francs against 35.1850 and 1,250.50 Italian lire compared with 1,252.90 Monday.

In London, the pound rose to $1.6335 against $1.6305.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell on profit-taking to close at 158.95 yen, off from 159.95 at Monday's close. Some traders said dollar-selling was motivated by a belief the G-7 meeting would yield a yen rescue plan.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $376 an ounce, up from $370.50 Monday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $375.30 an ounce, up from $369.80. In Zurich, gold finished higher at $375.50 an ounce, against $368.50. London gold rose to $375.25 an ounce from $369.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.03 an ounce, up from $4.965. The Comex closed spot silver at $5.007 an ounce, up from $4.946. Zurich silver closed higher at $5.07 an ounce, against $4.95. London silver rose to $5.01 an ounce compared with $4.96.

BUFFALO, NY (APRIL 3) UPI - Buses and light rail trains returned to operation in New York's second-largest city Tuesday while officals put the finishing touches on a complex funding package that ended a two-day transit shutdown.

Buses in Erie and Niagara counties and trains on Buffalo's 6.4-mile light rail rapid transit line were back on track for the morning rush hour after transit officials and workers scrambled overnight to get the system back in full operation.

''Things are running smoothly,'' Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority spokesman Daryl Rasuli said.

An estimated 135,000 commuters who use the transit system face a 10-cent fare hike - to $1.10 for the basic fare - as part of the government funding system hammered out Monday night to end the shutdown.

The fare hike will not take effect for several weeks because a public hearing is required to boost transit fares.

The plan, approved unanimously by the NFTA's board of commissioners, closed a $3.7 million budget gap faced by the authority and provides the transit system with about $10.2 million in total aid.

The package includes $1 million from the city of Buffalo, $750,000 from New York State from the gross receipts tax program and a $5 per $1,000 assessed valuation increase in the county's property transfer. A fraction of the county's sales tax will also be funneled to the transit system beginning next year.

The city contribution must be approved by the Common Council, and the county's part of the revenue deal must go before the county Legislature.

The lack of a dedicated source of funding for the NFTA has been plaguing the transit system for months, and three times in the past six months the county had to provide emergency funding to keep the system operating.

''We've been working week after week, and I've received a lot of calls from people who can't get mortgages,'' said Frank Verso, head of Local 1342 of the Amalgamated Transit Union, which represents NFTA transit workers. ''Some of them put in for mortgages five months ago and can't get them.''

''Now you can get them,'' he added.

Others relieved that the shutdown was over included transit riders, many of whom were forced to find alternate means of transportation while the system sat idle.

''I had to pay for a taxicab Monday,'' said Trina Watson, a student at Erie Community College. ''It cost me $9.30 to get to and from school. I think it's a shame that a city this size had to have its transit system shut down.''

While some complained about the 10-cent fare hike, others were just glad to see the buses and trains on the streets.

''It's not going to be a problem,'' Tandra Morrison, a health care aide, said of the increase. ''I'm just glad to be riding.''

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - The nation's inventory of crude oil rose substantially and gasoline stocks dropped sharply for the second consecutive week, the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday.

The increase should place a downward pressure on crude prices in coming days.

For the week ended Mar. 30, the API weekly survey found crude oil supplies rose 4.3 million barrels last week to 362.8 million barrels from 358.5 million barrels in the prior week and remained above year-ago levels of 325.5 million barrels.

Last week, API reported crude stocks had risen 7.5 million barrels in the previous week as refineries slowed down production during the annual maintenance turnaround from heating oil to gasoline production.

During the turnaround period, crude stocks increase while gasoline is taken from inventories to make up for reduced refinery output.

The industry organization said Tuesday that crude oil imports last week declined to 6.0 million barrels a day from 6.3 million barrels a day in the previous week but were substantially higher than year-ago imports of 4.4 million barrels a day.

U.S. refineries operated at 83.9 percent of capacity last week, compared with 83.7 percent a week earlier and 85.5 percent a year ago.

Gasoline supplies declined 7.1 million barrels to 228.3 million barrels from 235.4 million barrels in the prior week and moved below year-ago levels of 231.8 million barrels.

Stocks of unleaded gasoline, which accounts for 90 percent of the domestic market, declined to 172.2 million barrels from 177.7 million barrels a week earlier but remained significantly higher than year-ago levels of 159.2 million barrels.

Gasoline production climbed to 6.7 million barrels daily, from 6.5 million barrels daily in the previous week and higher than year-ago output of 6.6 million barrels a day.

Gasoline imports dropped to 205,000 barrels daily from 229,000 barrels daily in the previous week and were well below year-ago imports of 444,000 barrels daily.

Imports of refined products jumped to 2.1 million barrels daily from 1.7 million barrels daily in the preceding week but were less than year-ago imports of 2.7 million barrels daily.

Inventories of distillate - used for home-heating oil and diesel fuel - fell to 102.8 million barrels from 103.6 million barrels a week earlier but stayed above year-ago levels of 95.4 million barrels.

Distillate production edged up to 2.7 million barrels daily from 2.6 million barrels daily in the preceding week but was the same as year-ago output.

Distillate imports climbed to 356,000 barrels a day from 311,000 barrels a day in the previous week but were much less than year-ago imports of 668,000 barrels a day.

HAVANA, CUBA (APRIL 3) UPI - Cuban authorities said Tuesday it was costing the United States a lot more money to broadcast TV Marti into Cuba than it was costing Cuba to jam the signal.

Officials, who vowed to foreign journalists they would continue to block the broadcast of the Spanish-language television service from the United States, also said they had found flaws in the transmissions.

''We are spending about 2,000 pesos (officially about $2,000) a day in jamming TV-Marti signals,'' Cuban Communications Minister Manuel Castillo Rabasa told a group of foreign journalists.

He said the cost was negligible compared with the $7 million spent by Washington to test the Spanish-language television, broadcast from New York to Cuba via a blimp tethered off the Flordia Keys, and the $16 million a year it cost to operte the service.

The official Cuban Communist Party newspaper Granma said Tuesday that out of a total 18 hours of transmission - at a cost to the United States of $583,331 - TV Marti was seen on Cuban television for only 26 minutes.

The United States broadcast the test programs during the early morning hours for three days last week but Cuba quickly found and jammed the transmission signals.

Government officials said a senior Cuban Communist Partx aember, probably President Fidel Castro, will make a major speech on the project later Tuesday and clarify what action the government intends to take if the transmissions continue.

The speech was originally scheduled for 2 p.m. but was postponed until 6 p.m. EDT.

Since the first series of tests began March 27, Cuba has used Soviet-made MI-17 helicopters, naval vessels and land transmission towers to jam the broadcasts by sending alternative signals on the same frequency.

Castillo Rabasa said the United States has had difficulties with the signals, which originate in Washington and are relayed via a blimp tethered off the south Florida Keys to Havana 90 miles away.

''We have discovered technical weaknesses of the TV Marti project,'' Castillo Rabasa said. ''They have technical problems ... they have had that twice during the past eight days.''

Castillo Rabasa said TV Marti failed to broadcast Saturday and added that Cuban technicians have become more efficient every day.

''Today's transmission was neutralized after just 35 seconds,'' Castillo Rabasa said. He said TV Marti signals were transmitted at 3:45 a.m. local time and ceased at 6:45 a.m.

Castillo Rabasa repeated Cuba's accusations that the United States is violating international telecommunications accords and Cuban sovereignty by broadcasting the television signals into the Caribbean island nation. The United States has broadcast Radio Marti into Cuba since the mid-1980s.

He said Cuba has denounced the transmissions before the International Telecommunications Union, the developing world's non-aligned movement and other international organizations and agencies.

Castillo Rabasa said the International Frequency Regulatory Board has asked the U.S. government to provide an explanation of the programs directed at Cuba. He added that Cuban technicians are capable of ''carrying out this fight'' without the help of the Soviet Union.

MOSCOW (APRIL 3) UPI - The Estonian parliament Tuesday chose Popular Front leader Edgar Savisaar as prime minister in another sign of nationalists' increasing control of the Baltic republic.

Savisaar replaced Indrek Toome as head of the Estonian government four days after the new nationalist-dominated legislature approved a gradual transition to independence from the Soviet Union.

''The session of the Estonian Supreme Soviet today appointed Edgar Savisaar, 39, prime minister of the republic,'' the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

Estonian lawmakers also passed a resolution supporting the Lithuanian parliament's March 11 declaration of independence, Tass said.

Estonian leaders have said they will not follow Lithuania in forcing a confrontation with Moscow.

On Friday, the Estonian parliament, controlled by Popular Front activists and allied nationalists brought to power in March 18 elections, approved a measure saying it ''declares the beginning of a period of transition'' to full independence. ''The restoration of the Republic of Estonia has begun.''

The 3-week-old crisis in Lithuania ebbed Tuesday with the announcement that Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev had met for preliminary talks with Lithuanian Deputy Prime Minister Romualdas Ozales in the first high-level talks between Moscow and the breakaway republic.

MIAMI (APRIL 3) UPI - General Development Corp., which recently pleaded guilty in a $100 million fraud scheme, closed home site sales operations worldwide Tuesday after deciding they could no longer be operated successfully.

Because of the move, about 1,100 full- and part-time employees lost their jobs in about 24 offices in the United States, along with broker operations in Europe and the Far East.

''This business operates on a cash negative basis and the cost of generating sales in these offices no longer makes economic sense,'' General Development Chairman and President Charles J. Simons said in a statement.

General Development, one of Florida's oldest and largest real estate developers, pleaded guilty to conspiracy last month as part of a plea bargain with federal prosecutors that required the Miami company to make restitution to defrauded home buyers. General Development also agreed to pay a $500,000 fine.

Company executives said the restitution plan worked out with prosecutors could cost General Development as much as $100 million during the next 25 years.

In announcing the closings, Simons said the plea bargain made it impossible to keep the sales operations going.

At a hearing earlier in the day, U.S. District Judge Lenore Nesbitt said she had reservations about the plea bargain reached Mar. 22. She appointed Miami mortgage banker and lawyer Thomas DeLancey Wood as a ''master,'' or overseer, to review the restitution plan.

''I question whether I could effectively implement this plan in district court even with the help of a master,'' Nesbitt said. ''It is a unique and factual scenario that I am working on.''

Wood, 58, has been in mortgage banking for about 26 years. He is expected to complete his investigation and submit a report to the judge by May 22, when General Development's former chairman David F. Brown, 49, and former president Robert F. Ehrling, 50 - both of whom also pleaded guilty to a conspiracy charge in the fraud scheme - are to be sentenced.

Each faces a maximum prison term of five years and fines of up to $250,000.

Wood's appointment came one day after General Development said it may seek protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

The company said negotiations with lenders on a $60 million credit agreement broke down during the weekend, leaving it unable to meet debts.

Officials said the money was needed to meet payments on a $175 million revolving-credit account, a $75 million subordinated note and operating expenses.

Local governments owed money by General Development were concerned that bankruptcy proceedings could tie them up for years and cause serious financial problems. General Development owes nine Florida counties more than $10 million in property taxes.

Last week, the company said it was considering a sale of assets or of the entire company.

United Capital Corp., which owns 12.6 percent of General Development and is seeking to oust the company's board, said late Monday that it had offered to meet with General Development's lenders to discuss its willingness to provide financial backing.

United Capital said the offer was contingent on its receiving equal representation on the board and on the appointment of A.F. Petrocelli as co-chief executive officer.

United Capital said discussions with General Development ended after the company asked it to drop its proxy contest immediately and sign a three-year standstill agreement. United Capital refused.

A federal grand jury indictment returned March 14 charged General Development with inflating the value of the company's Florida homes and preventing buyers, many of them from northern states, from checking prices on competing properties.

The company, Brown and Ehrling, both of whom resigned Mar. 9, were each charged with seven counts of mail fraud, seven counts of interstate transportation of people to commit fraud and two counts of conspiracy to commit mail fraud.

Domestic offices ordered closed Tuesday were in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Virginia, Illinois and Florida, according to General Development.

SENATORS PROPOSE PLAN TO RAISE FARM INCOME

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Five Midwestern senators proposed legislation Tuesday aimed at boosting farmer income by raising the government's crop loan and subsidy rates and by creating a ''marketing loan'' for soybeans.

Net farm income has been at high levels the past couple of years - $48 billion in fiscal 1989 - but the senators said inflation has disguised the actual situation.

''This bill will give farmers the income they need to stay on the land and the flexibility they need to stay competitive in today's global marketplace,'' said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

The bill was filed by Conrad and Sens. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, Tom Daschle, D-S.D., Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., and James Exon, D-Neb. The Senate Agriculture Committee was scheduled to begin drafting its version of the new farm policy law Wednesday.

The five senators called for indexing crop target prices - a key factor in determining the size of subsidy payments - to changes in production costs beginning in 1991 and basing subsidy payments on prices in each state, not the national average. The administration has estimated a similar indexing idea would cost $5.7 billion over five years.

In addition, the minimum loan rate for corn and wheat would be raised sharply - by 80 cents a bushel on wheat and 43 cents for corn - and the government would be given less authority to reduce loan rates.

The soybean marketing loan would be set at $6.25 a bushel with sunflowers, canola, safflowers and flax eligible for a 12.5 cent-a-pound marketing loan. Under the marketing loan, farmers with a crop loan from the government can sell their grain at the world price - usually lower than the U.S. price - and pocket the difference between the sale price and the loan rate.

Congressional analysts say a soybean marketing loan could cost $100 million a year or run as high as more than $1 billion a year, depending if the government adjusts its feed grain programs to maintain crop volume in grain.

Under the plan proposed by the five senators, the government would be barred from ordering farmers to idle any oilseed land. Setasides would continue to be a tool to try to limit production of other crops.

The senators also would allow farmers who want to switch to so-called alternative agriculture practices to be governed by an agreement to limit how many bushels they market, rather than the acreage limitations that usually apply to farmers.

Like the Bush administration, the senators proposed adoption of a version of the ''normal crop acreage'' concept used in the 1970s. It would cover the land planted to the seven crops - wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice - covered by the farm program plus oilseeds such as soybeans.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - A group led by takeover artist Carl Icahn proposed to USX Corp. stockholders Tuesday that the steel and energy giant would be more valuable if it were split into two separate companies.

One company would be Marathon Oil Co., to handle USX's energy business, and the other would be known as U.S. Steel, according to the proposal, contained in proxy materials sent to shareholders by the Icahn group.

The group, which calls itself the USX Shareholders Advisory Committee, owns about 34 million shares, or more than 13 percent, of the Pittsburgh-based USX. The group is headed by Icahn, chairman of the board of Trans World Airlines Inc.

If the spin-off proposal were implemented, Marathon would have an estimated market value of $39 a share, and U.S. Steel would be valued at $9 a share. The aggregate value would be approximately $48 a share, the group said.

USX was up $1.50 to close at $37.125 Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stockholders would have to approve any spin-off plan.

''Under the proposal, U.S. Steel would be restored to its former role as the premier stand-alone steel producer in the United States and Marathon would reemerge as a leading energy company,'' the group said in the proxy material.

Both companies would remain publicly traded ''Fortune 100'' companies based on Fortune's 1989 rankings by sales, the group said.

Under the proposal, USX would distribute a dividend to common stockholders of not less than 80 percent of the equity of U.S. Steel. Stockholders also would retain their interest in USX Corp., which would consist of Marathon and any minority interest in U.S. Steel.

The shareholders group said it drew up the spin-off plan based on the historical performance, industry standing, prospects for growth, capital needs, general market and economic conditions and other factors of the USX's steel and energy businesses.

Since 1986, members of the shareholders committee have made substantial investments in USX common stock ''based on their view that USX has been substantially undervalued by the market,'' the proxy material said.

The annual stockholders meeting is scheduled for May 7 in Findlay, Ohio.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 4) UPI - Troubled First Executive Corp. said Tuesday that the Securities and Exchange Commission has started a formal investigation into the insurance holding company.

Fred Carr, First Executive's chairman and chief executive officer, confirmed the existence of a formal SEC probe but refused to comment on it.

The company disclosed in January that the agency had started an informal probe in connection with First Executive's announcement that it would write down $515 million in unrealized losses in its junk-bond portfolio.

The investigation reportedly has focused on whether the company adequately disclosed its financial problems during a securities offering last year.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL (APRIL 4) UPI - Don Mattingly warned the New York Yankees Tuesday if he is not re-signed by Opening Day he will file for free agency after the season.

Mattingly is in the final year of a three-year, $6.7 million contract. He is upset by what he perceives as a lack of effort by Yankee owner George Steinbrenner to work out a new deal.

The All-Star first baseman has vowed not to negotiate a deal once the season begins, but Tuesday was the first time he said he would file for free agency if a new pact isn't completed by Opening Day. And Mattingly indicated he does not think there is time to complete a contract.

''I don't know if George thinks I'll sign in May, June or July,'' Mattingly said. ''But I don't care if it costs me $20 million, when this season starts there is going to be no contract signed by me and when the season is over I'll file (for free agency). When the season is over it will not be pretty. I'm not going to look at it in terms of one team. I'm going to look at everything.''

Mattingly reiterated his first choice is to remain a Yankee, but that his ''eyes are open'' to other options. Steinbrenner was supposed to meet sometime Tuesday with Mattingly's agent Jim Krivacs.

''He said himself that he wants to stay in New York,'' Steinbrenner said. ''If ever I've seen a statement that shows no degree of urgency it's that. He wants to stay in New York and I want him to stay.''

Steinbrenner met briefly with Mattingly before Tuesday's game against the Dodgers and said afterward that striking a deal before Opening Day was still possible and that he will work diligently to complete one.

''I'm a little bit letdown that they had no interest in getting this done earlier,'' Mattingly said. ''They've put off and put off and put off something they had all winter to do. They're taking a chance. They're acting like I'm saying I won't go anywhere.''

Mattingly indicated when he came to camp that he wants a deal similar to the major leaue-high of Will Clark, four years at $17 million. However, Mattingly has said he would like a five-year package. Steinbrenner has hedged about the terms of the pact.

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (APRIL 4) UPI - The head of the Afghan resistance's government-in-exile denied to a senior U.S. official Tuesday that guerrilla commanders engaged in drug trafficking in Afghanistan, a rebel statement said.

The assertion by Sibghatullah Mojaddidi at a meeting with Melvyn Levitsky, U.S. assistant secretary of state for international narcotics matters, came as customs officials reported the seizure of 836 pounds of heroin near the Afghan border. It was one of the biggest such hauls in Pakistan this year.

Levitsky, on a five-nation Asian tour seeing ways to stem the heroin trade said Monday that the United States has warned the resistance it ''cannot accept a situation'' in which it is providing aid to the guerrillas while they are encouraging drug production and drug trafficking.

Mojaddidi, president of the Afghan Interim Government, which was set up last year as a government-in-exile, denied in his meeting with Levitsky that the resistance was involved in the drug trade, an AIG statement said.

''Rejecting categorically the allegations that Afghan Mujahideen are indulging in narcotics cultivation and trafficking, the president made it clear that Islam prohibited the cultivation and use of drugs and defined it as a great sin,'' the statement said.

''If any of the Mujahideen commanders are indulging in the narcotics business, we will punish them on the basis of Islamic and human principles.''

Levitsky's visit to Pakistan follows trips to Laos, Thailand and India. He is scheduled to continue to Turkey.

The drugs found Tuesday were hidden in an oil tanker stopped and searched by customs officers near Kohat, about 100 miles southwest of Islamabad. The driver and his assistant were arrested, customs officials said.

They said the heroin was produced in Afghanistan and the two smugglers had been taking it to the southern port of Karachi for shipment overseas.

Experts say about 25 percent of the heroin that reaches the United States comes from the so-called ''Golden Crescent'' area that includes Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iran.

In Afghanistan, some U.S.-backed Moslem guerrilla groups fighting the pro-Soviet government in Kabul have allegedly been involved in the cultivation of opium and the production and trafficking of heroin.

Clashes have reportedly erupted in some areas between rival groups for control of the trade.

(APRIL 3) UPI - Lithuania holds talks with Soviets... Iran-Contra jury sequestered... President Bush plants a tree... and a dip in Soviet industrial production. The top stories and more, next, from the wires of U-P-I:

A possible break-through is reported in the Lithuanian crisis.

Lithuanian lawmakers say Soviet Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev met today with the Lithuanian deputy prime minister and two Lithuanian legislators.

Lithuanian officials declined to say whether the meeting was in the Kremlin or another location. They also emphasized that these are ''consultations and conversations,'' NOT negotiations.

Yakovlev is a confidant of Soviet President Gorbachev , who has taken a firm stand against Lithuania's declaration of independence.

Today's apparent break-through came after Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said yesterday that the Baltic republic might be willing to delay full independence.

In Washington, Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze told reporters that the Soviets' ''main weapon in resolving issues is dialogue.''

Also today, Moscow restricted traffic at the border crossing between Lithuania and Poland, which has supported the Baltic republic's drive for independence.

Singer Elton John visited him and super-star Michael Jackson made a call.

White's doctor at the Riley Hospital for Children in Indianapolis says the 18-year-old is suffering from a respiratory infection complicated by AIDS.

He's under heavy sedation... but apparently in NO pain.

President Bush is in Indianapolis for a political fund-raiser and a tree-planting ceremony. He says he sends his prayers to White and his family... but he says it would NOT be appropriate for him to visit White.

White's doctor says this is the worst infection the boy has ever had... but he may yet pull through. White made national headlines five years ago when he challenged a school system that tried to exclude him because of his AIDS.

President Bush is finishing up a two-day trip of tree-planting and political fund-raising.

Under gray skies today, the president planted an elm tree at the corner of Washington and Alabama in Indianapolis, a symbol of his national goal of 10-BILLION new trees by the turn of the century.

At a fund-raiser for Republican Indiana Senator Dan Coats... who replaced Dan Quayle... Bush made a plug for the version of the clean-air legislation that his administration helped draft. The Senate is expected to pass the bill this evening.

The bill is designed to reduce urban smog, acid rain and cancer-causing industrial pollution. Bush says the compromise plan will go a long way to cleaning up the environment.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (APRIL 4) UPI - Duff & Phelps lowered the long-term deposit rating of troubled Columbia Savings and Loan Association Tuesday, two days after the once-profitable thrift announced it is insolvent because of huge losses in its junk bond portfolio.

The rating agency also said it expects regulators to seize Columbia. ''As a result of its insolvency, a takeover of Columbia by the Office of Thrift Supervision is likely,'' Duff & Phelps said.

The rating service said it had lowered the long-term deposit rating from single-B to triple-C.

''The downgrade reflects the severe erosion of the equity base over recent months which has resulted in Columbia's insolvency,'' Duff & Phelps said.

Columbia disclosed late Sunday that it had lost $379.1 million in the fourth quarter of last year and another $200 million in the first two months of this year. In the fourth quarter of 1988, Columbia made $16.2 million, or 39 cents a share.

As a result of the losses this year, Columbia said its stockholders' equity fell to a negative $121 million as of Feb. 28. That figure had been $77.6 million as of Dec. 31.

Columbia also said that it expects further losses and asset writedowns for the month of March.

(APRIL 3) UPI - NASA technicians are scrambling to keep the shuttle Discovery on track for blastoff next Tuesday. A power outage yesterday disrupted testing and raised the possibility of a minor delay.

Discovery is set to launch the one-and-a-half-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope into orbit to revolutionize astronomy by looking at the stars from a vantage point above the Earth's atmosphere.

NASA had been hoping to launch two days ahead of schedule on April 10th. But yesterday, an air conditioner cooling line in a utility building ruptured... spraying water on critical electrical equipment. A short circuit triggered a widespread power outage that forced critical computers to shut down. Power was NOT restored until early today.

But officials say the shuttle may still make deadline.

In Israel today... the Israeli space agency launched its second satellite into orbit. The Israelis are calling it a ''scientific experiment satellite.''

Ofek-2, launched from a Shavit rocket, is the second payload Israel has launched in 19 months. The Israelis deny the launching represents a new phase in the Middle East Arms Race.

The cost of the Air Force FA stealth jet fighter isn't a secret anymore.

The Pentagon said today that it has bought 59 of the radar-evading planes in the past nine years, at a cost of 106-Million dollars each.

The FA is an older cousin of the B-2 stealth bomber and has been a part of the regular U-S arsenal since 1983. One of its chief characteristics is its pinpoint accuracy.

Two of the bat-shaped fighter planes were used in the U-S invasion of Panama in December. Defense Secretary Cheney says they were used precisely because of their accuracy, which he says reduced casualties on both sides.

Also today, Air Force Secretary Donald Rice told a Senate panel that slower production of the B-2 stealth bomber is being considered as an austerity measure.

Rice says that such a move would NOT raise the overall cost of the plane significantly.

The House today sided with President Bush and rejected attempts to cut a 720-Million-dollar aid package for the newly democratic nations of Nicaragua and Panama. House members voted against plans to reduce or eliminate 300-Million dollars in aid for Nicaragua and 420-Million-dollars for Panama.

The aid package is part of a two-point-four-BILLION-dollar ''dire emergency'' supplemental spending bill for the current fiscal year. The measure generally supported by President Bush was overwhelmingly passed in the House. The President asked Congress to complete action by April 5th before lawmakers begin their Easter recess.

To partially offset the cost of the bill, the measure cuts Pentagon spending by close to one-point-eight-BILLION dollars... a figure accepted by Bush.

The Pentagon today released the first details of its mysterious FA stealth bomber.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams says the Air Force bought 59 of the planes from the Lockheed Corporation under a secret six-pointBILLION-dollar program that began in 1978. Three of jets crashed and the final two are to be delivered this fall, for a total force of 56.

As of today, 54 of the radar-evading, bat-like jets are ready for combat... at a cost of 106-Million dollars each.

Williams says the fighters are especially tailored for night missions, but refused to say if the planes are nuclear-capable.

The sinister looking fighters are the older cousins of the B-52 stealth bomber, which carried a price-tag of 530-Million dollars each and rolled into public view in November 1988.

SAN JOSE, CA (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Megatest Corp. Wednesday announced that Armand L. Trinitapoli has joined the company as director of sales for the Asia-Pacific region.

This territory includes Korea, Singapore, Taiwan and Japan.

Trinitapoli comes to Megatest from Mitsui Comtek (a subsidiary of Mitsui & Co. USA), where he had worked in sales and marketing since 1984. He was most recently marketing manager, responsible for international sales of Tokyo Seimitsu Co. Ltd., and Toshiba Seike Co., Ltd. and worked in a sales capacity in behalf of Senju Metal Industry Co. Ltd. and Denka Hitt Plate.

Prior to that, he was a project manager for Tokyo Seimitsu Co. Ltd. where he directed the sales and support staff for its North American markets.

Trinitapoli speaks Japanese, having lived in Japan for four years. He holds a master of arts in world history, from Jochi Dai Gaku (Sophia University, Tokyo), and a bachelor of arts in American history and political science from Quincy College in Quincy, Ill.

Trinitapoli's role will be to manage the sales operations for Megatest's offices in Korea and Singapore, as well as to supervise Spirox, the company's Taiwanese representative, and Genesis Technology Inc., a Tokyo-based joint venture between Megatest and Kobe Steel.

Megatest, a manufacturer of automatic semiconductor test equipment, conducts a substantial portion of its business in Southest Asia, deriving about 25 percent of its annual revenue from this region of the world.

Megatest manufactures and sells both logic and memory testers, but the larger portion of its Southeast Asian business comes from sales of memory testers used in the testing and manufacture of DRAMs and EEPROMs. Key customers in this region include Hyundai, Samsung, and Amkor, as well as the foreign-based manufacturing concerns of Texas Instruments and Intel.

Megatest's leading product in Southeast Asia is the Genesis II memory tester. Introduced in 1988, there are now 150 Genesis systems installed worldwide, many of those being in Korea, Singpore and other Southeast Asian countries. The Genesis II has made its mark on the basis of its high performance testing capability at a very low cost. Genesis systems start at $185,000.

PALO ALTO, CA (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Hewlett-Packard Co. Wednesday announced it has established a research laboratory in Tokyo as a satellite of HP Laboratories, the company's central research organization.

Nobuo Mikoshiba from Tohoku University in Sendai, Japan, has been appointed director of the new laboratory. Previously, Mikoshiba was director of the microelectronics laboratory and a professor of acoustoelectronics at the university's Research Institute of Electrical Communication.

The Japanese laboratory will focus on applied research in the areas of photonics, integrated-circuit testing and low-temperature electronic devices. Most of the research staff will be hired locally.

The staff will work with other HP scientists and engineers as well as visiting scientists and professors on projects of interest to HP and its Japanese joint venture, Yokogawa Hewlett-Packard (YHP).

HP and YHP will use technology developed in the laboratory to make products for the global market.

The laboratory is the latest in a series of expansions HP Labs has made in the last 14 months to help HP respond faster to the technological needs of its global customer base. Last year, the company announced the formation of two science centers -- one in the United States and the other in Italy -- in which HP scientists and visiting professors will conduct research together.

The Stanford Science Center, a partnership with Stanford University, will focus on database technology, artificial intelligence (software that gives a computer rudimentary ability to reason and learn) and neural networks.

(A neural network is a computer system that processes information similar to the way the brain does. It can handle a variety of input all at once and interpret what to do even if the input is imprecise.)

HP Labs established its first offshore laboratory in Bristol, England, in 1984. The Bristol facility focuses on information-technology and network and communications research.

Hewlett-Packard Co. is an international manufacturer of measurement and computation products and systems recognized for excellence in quality and support. The company's products and services are used in industry, business, engineering, science, medicine and education in approximately 100 countries. SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - The state of California could well be called a ''nation of shopkeepers,'' judging by the number and diversity of small businesses in the state.

That's one of the findings in Wells Fargo Bank's newest economic report on small business, released Wednesday, called ''Small Business in California: A State of Success.''

The report, prepared by the bank's economics department, provides an overview of small business in the state and the nation, offers an economic outlook, and includes sections on new business opportunities, legislation, franchising and financing. It also includes special inserts on four sectors: retailers, wholesalers, manufacturers and professionals - doctors dentists and lawyers.

The report is available to small business owners in the state.

''Small business is a force to be reckoned with in California,'' said Douglas Freeman, executive vice president of the Business Banking Group at Wells Fargo, which finances small businesses.

One out of every eight small businesses in the country is located in California, according to the report. In the last decade, these small businesses created one out of three jobs in the state.

Since 1982, income from small business in California has grown an average of 13 percent a year, compared to the national average of 11 percent and well ahead of the 8 percent rate for total personal income in the state.
Strong regions

Southern California accounts for the majority of the state's small businesses. Its large and diverse economy is spinning off opportunities for entrepreneurs in industries such as financial and legal services, advertising, tourism, construction, retail and manufacturing. In addition the region's important role in exports and imports has led to small business gains in trade-related industries.

The San Francisco Bay Area is another strong region for small business growth, notes the report, accounting for about one-fourth of the state's small businesses. The main spurs behind this growth have been the area's unusually diversified economy, its strong entrepreneurial spirit, an affluent and skilled workforce, an effective network of financial organizations and a fast-growing minority population.

Some of the better-performing small business sectors in the region are tourism, high-tech and business services.

''Small business growth has not been limited to the large metropolitan areas, however,'' said Freeman. The report highlights both the Central and Sacramento valleys as magnets for small businesses. Reasons behind the growth include lower operating costs, more space for growth and affordable housing. Construction, retail and light manufacturing are some of the fastest growing businesses in these regions.

The Central Coast region is also benefiting from a spillover of Californians who are leaving more heavily urbanized areas in the northern and southern parts of the state, creating opportunities in the constuction and retail fields for small businesses located there.

A boom in exports has been a boon to the state's small businesses, as well. Between 1984 and 1988, states the report, growth in the dollar value of exports passing through California ports grew at an average annual rate of 14 percent, far outpacing the 9 percent rate for the nation as a whole. Some of the strongest exporting industries are lumber, musical instruments, apparel and furniture. Success not that easy

The report points out, however, that success doesn't always come easy. Small business owners work long hours, which can strain relationships with family and friends. Often there is little financial return during the first few years, and any dip in the economy can hurt small business profits. Tightening labor markets, increasing competition, and legislative and environmental issues all contribute to the risky nature of running a small business. Economic growth

The report projects that business activity in California will continue to grow in the next two years, but somewhat below full potential. This will put pressure on existing small businesses and on entrepreneurs who want to start their own companies.

A weakening defense sector, less robust housing markets in the coastal urban areas, softening high-tech production and moderate consumer spending will contribute to the slackening. Small companies in the consumer-sensitive wholesale, service, and retail industries may be particularly affected if the slowdown is led by cutbacks in consumer spending, as some expect, according to the report.

But the state's economy will continue to grow during the next two years, and at a faster rate than most other parts of the country. According to the report, the outlook is strongest in California's inland markets, including Sacramento and the Central Valley, Riverside and San Bernardino, where housing is cheaper and land for development is abundant.

''The resulting surge in population, jobs and housing will keep these areas at the forefront of growth for the next several years'' said the report.

Three industries cited by the report as having continued favorable growth prospects are: apparel and textiles; biotechnology; and temporary employment.

Small companies in the garment industry accounted for almost 11,000 new jobs between 1982 and 1988 in the state, the largest increase within the manufacturers are capitalizing on the movement to offshore production sites by larger manufacturers, designing in-house and localizing production.

This enables them to more quickly respond to fashion changes, a key to success in that fast-paced industry. It also helps to protect them from competitors producing cheap imitations because of the time it takes to copy new styles.

Biotechnology should prosper in the next decade. ''The industry is young, with plenty of room and opportunities for entrepreneurs with new ideas. The need for more biotechnology products will grow as American society strives for higher quality healthcare and as the population ages,'' notes the report.

Temporary employment agencies should continue to expand for several reasons. The further restructuring of corporate America and consequent cost cutting will leave companies with leaner staffs so they will contract out for services formerly handled in-house. More firms are opting for the flexibility and lower costs of employing temporary workers.

Additionally, more people want to be ''temps.'' Changing work values and attitudes enable people to enjoy the independence and more relaxed lifestyle that temporary work affords. And there is a growing class of working mothers who value the flexibility of temporary work. Demographics

''Demographics will have a dramatic impact on the future for small business,'' says Freeman. According to the report, the change in demographics over the next decade will open up new markets and opportunities for small businesses.

Aging baby boomers, short on time while balancing families and careers, will demand time-saving products and services to help with childcare, home improvements, meal preparation and financial investments.

Specialized retailers of household furnishings, home electronic equipment and gourmet and health food stores also should do well, notes the report, as the home becomes the center of life for the growing number of middle-aged Americans.

An increasing number of seniors, more affluent and mobile than ever before will spur a greater need for recreational and travel services as well as for health and biophysical goods and services.

The broad ethnic composition of the population will lead to new markets as well. Minority groups will make up about 47 percent of the state's population by the year 2000, compared to nearly 40 percent today.

In Southern California, for example, 40 percent of the residents will be of Hispanic origin by the year 2010 vs. an estimated 30 percent in 1990.

International trade also will play a larger role for small businesses. The expanding countries on the Pacific Rim will become greater importers of California's goods and services, while simultaneously increasing exports of their products. America's Free Trade Agreement with Canada and the consolidation of the European market also may lead to new business opportunities for small firms.

Although small businesses in California will confront challenges in the coming years -- economic, legislative, environmental -- the report states that they have a better chance of succeeding and growing than in any other state in the United States because of the size and diversity of the California economy.

''Challenges apart,'' noted the report, ''the opportunities are obviously here.''

DALLAS AND CLEVELAND, TN (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Life Care Centers of America and National Heritage Inc. (NYSE:NHR) Wednesday jointly announced the execution of an agreement to merge the two long-term health care management concerns.

The agreement calls for the establishment of a new company to be named Life Care Centers of America Inc. and comprised of the combined assets and operations of privately held Life Care and National Heritage along with selected assets and operations of certain affiliates of the two firms and certain healthcare assets of Southmark Corp. (NYSE:SM).

It is anticipated that securities of the new company will be publicly traded, with Life Care and its affiliates maintaining a controlling interest. Headed by Life Care Chairman Forrest L. Preston, the new company would be one of the nation's leading operators and managers of health care centers for the elderly.

The agreement calls for exchanging one share of the new company's common stock for each of the approximately 17 million outstanding shares of National Heritage stock, and for the issuance of approximately 26 million shares of new company common stock to the shareholders of Life Care and its affiliates in exchange for all the outstanding shares of such corporations.

The agreement of the parties anticipates possible changes in the valuation of their respective assets to be contributed in the transaction and in the amount of shares of common stock to be received by the shareholders of each of the constituent corporations.

Life Care and National Heritage expect to make further announcements on the progress of the transaction as developments occur, including the release of pro forma financial statements of the new company after completion of Life Care's 1989 audit in late April.

The transaction is contingent upon the execution of a separate agreement with Southmark Corp. providing for the contribution of its health care-related assets in exchange for preferred stock of the new company. These assets include three leased properties and mortgages and advances to the healthcare limited partnerships.

National Heritage manages and operates 151 long-term care facilities with approximately 16,000 beds and 30 retirement centers and assisted living facilities with approximately 4,500 units.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - The following is a summary of a presentation Wednesday at the New York Society of Security Analysts by Jack A. MacAllister, chairman and chief executive officer of U S WEST.

U S WEST has sustained short-term earnings growth while making investments to increase long-term shareowner value, Jack A. MacAllister, chairman and chief executive officer, told the New York Society of Security Analysts Wednesday.

MacAllister said the company has taken significant steps in providing value for shareowners by:

-- Reducing telephone employees per 10,000 access lines by one third. ''This will translate into significant cost savings this year and into the future. By this measure, we are among the most efficient telephone companies in America.''

-- Implementing a program to eliminate unnecessary costs and redirect between $250 and $300 million a year toward new initiatives.

-- Investing in the modernization of equipment and systems to facilitate state-of-the-art products and services.

-- Entering into businesses in the global marketplace that allow U S WEST growth opportunities unavailable domestically.

MacAllister said the company expects continued profit and growth from its marketing services and financial services groups.

Howard P. Doerr, executive vice president and chief financial officer, said the company's Hong Kong cable television franchise, under construction this year, will be the largest single cable franchise in the world.

In addition, he said that the company is partnering in the United Kingdom to supply cable television through ten franchises. These franchises include licenses to provide telecommunications service as well.

Doerr also noted that U S WEST will offer cellular telephone service in Hungary a year from now. ''We believe our Hungarian cellular venture has great promise because Hungary's regular telephone network leaves a lot to be desired,'' he said.

U S WEST owns U S WEST Communications and other companies involved in communications, data solutions, marketing services and financial services.

SCOTTSDALE, AZ (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Prime Financial Partners (ASE:PFP) Wednesday announced its fourth quarter 1989 operating revenues of $1,610,117 as compared to $1,333,957 for the fourth quarter of 1988.

The increase in revenues between the periods was primarily due to an increase in commission and administrative fee income associated with the Prime Financial Benefit Trust. As part of the partnership's restructuring plan, the partnership recorded non-cash, non-recurring write-downs of $2,478,000 during the fourth quarter associated primarily with its non-productive real estate assets.

These write-downs contributed to the fourth quarter loss of $2,419,397 as compared to net income of $317,370 for the same period in 1988; a net loss of 54 cents per Class A unit and net income of 6 cents per Class A unit, respectively.

For the 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1989, the partnership had operating revenues of $2,872,244 and a net loss of $3,842,931, representing a net loss per Class A unit of 98 cents. For the comparable period in 1988, the partnership reported operating revenues of $2,997,019 and a net loss of $199,865, representing a net loss per Class A Unit of 12 cents.

Although the partnership reported a decrease in revenues between 1988 and 1989, commission income from Trust contributions increased by $568,000 or 51 percent over that which was reported for 1988 and administrative fee income increased by $328,000.

Prime is extremely pleased with the positive response from the public to the Trust product. The partnership received approximately $31 million in trust contributions for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared to Trust contributions of approximately $17.8 million for 1988.

The partnership has expanded its distribution network from one insurance carier in 1988 to 10 carriers in 1989, and has continued to expand its distribution network in 1990. Prime anticipates ongoing revenues will be generated from the commissionable insuance products of the Trust and from administrative services provided to the Trust.

Additionally, the non-recurring write-downs incurred during 1989 position the partnership for growth opportunities during 1990 and beyond.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Bank of America has been awarded an $865 million project financing mandate by Severn River Crossing Limited which will use the proceeds to construct a second bridge across the Severn River and to refinance current debt on the existing bridge.

The new bridge, linking Avon in the west of England to Gwent in Wales, will become part of Britain's M4 motorway.

Severn River Crossing Limited is a special purpose company established by John Laing PLC and GTM-Entrepose to hold a 30-year concession to design and build the new bridge, and operate it along with the existing bridge.

Bank of America is lead-underwriter for the financing, which involves bank debt jointly underwritten by Lloyds Bank PLC and Caisse Nationale de Credit Agricole. It also includes provisions for European Investment Bank finance participation, as part of EIB's program for infrastructure development within the European Community, and a loan stock structure underwritten and arranged by brokers Barclays de Zoete Wedd.

The financing package was developed on a design, build and operate basis.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - L.A. Cellular Telephone Co., the non-wireline cellular service provider for five counties in Southern California, has received approval from the California Public Utilities Commission to extend its service area into Kern County and to the Arizona and Nevada borders, creating the largest cellular geographic service area (CGSA) in North America.

The extended service area, which increases by 15,000 square miles, will now include 25,000 square miles of coverage, roughly larger in size than the states of Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island combined.

''This expanded coverage area allows us to provide our customers with extended service on the outlying routes,'' said Michael Heil, president, L.A. Cellular. ''Additionally, it gives us the opportunity to demonstrate the benefits of cellular phones to new customers in these areas.''

Throughout Southern California, L.A. Cellular offers state-of-the-art digital technology, translating into the highest quality service in the market.

Additionally, customers on the L.A. Cellular system have the opportunity to utilize three exclusive services; Star Jam, up-to-the-minute, traffic routing and Star Find, a ''cellular yellow pages'' with operator assistance for directions to restaurants, hotels, tourist attractions and other frequented destinations, both provided by Metro Traffic; and Mobile Memo, a cellular answering service that provides a secure 24-hour message and retrieval system.

WATERLOO, ONTARIO (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Vestronix Corp's first quarter results ended January 31, 1990 were released on April 1, 1990.

Vestronix (COATS:VSTX) reported sales in this 90-day period of $1,573,814. This revenue exceeds that of the 1989 fiscal year.

Market acceptance of the Profit Partnerships - service for UNIX- based software developers using PRO-C - has been swift, accounting for a significant proportion of the revenues in the first quarter. In addition to the reported revenue of $1,573,814, we have also signed contracts with large customers in the United States, including the Internal Revenue Service and Martin Marietta. We anticipate that most of this $900,000 order backlog will be recognized as sales in the second quarter of the year.

VAL D'OR, QUEBEC (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Societe miniere Sphinx (MoSE:SYX.A) and Societe miniere Mimiska (MoSE:MMS.A) announced that, through a subsidiary company, Minariel International, they have accepted the offer to buy the assets of Maricalum Mining Corp. from the Asset Privatization Trust.

The Asset Privatization Trust nationalized assets during the Marcos era. Minariel's offer is subject to its acceptance by the Committee on Privatization, which regulates the Asset Privatization Trust.

The total purchase price is $60 million U.S., of which the Asset Privatization Trust will retain a 20 percent equity position. The remaining $48 million U.S. will be financed through a debt-asset swap arrangement. This mechanism permits the purchase, at discount, of Philippine government assets.

Sphinx and Mimiska have retained the services of the National Bank of Paris in Manila to complete the transaction.

If a positive decision is received from the Committee on Privatization, which would take at least one month, the offer stipulates that the transaction must be completed within 90 days. Of the outstanding $48 million, $10 million will come from a Filipino partner for a 15 percent share.

Maricalum Mining Corp. has been operating a copper-gold-silver open pit mine on Negros Island, 400 km southeast of Manila, for more than 10 years. Geological reserves stand at 588 million metric tons at 0.465 percent copper and mineable reserves stand at 200 million metric tons at similar grade. The mine is operating at a mining rate of 26,000 metric tons per day for an annual production of 10 million metric tons.

An on-site flottation mill rated at 40,000 metric tons per day is treating the ore from the mine to produce a concentrate which is shipped to Japan for smelting. A selling contract for up to 90 percent of the production is still good for the next five years.

The 1990 mining program forecasts the mining of 9.5 million tons of ore at a grade of 0.636 percent copper that could yield 114 million pounds of copper after recovery.

The management of Sphinx and Mimiska consider the acquisition of this mine as a major milestone in their development. The acquisition of Maricalum Mining Corp. will provide both companies with an important source of revenues that should contribute to their growth.

LITCHFIELD PARK, AZ (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - SunCor Development Co. has sold the five-star Wigwam Resort and Country Club to Kabuto International Phoenix Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Sapporo, Japan-based Kabuto Decom Inc., SunCor President John Ogden said Wednesday.

The Wigwam, located in Litchfield Park, has long been considered one of the finest destination resorts in the United States. Its three golf courses, including two Robert Trent Jones-designed courses, have made it especially desireable to golfers and vacationers alike. The Wigwam, renowed for its service has held the Mobil five-star rating for 15 years and is also currently a member of Preferred Hotels.

The $70 million transaction, which was completed on April 4, includes the resort, its golf courses, an additional 35 acres and a retail center adjacent to The Wigwam. Ogden said Kabuto International Phoenix Inc. also has an option for joint-venture development with SunCor of properties around The Wigwam West Golf Course.

He said that as a condition of the sale, SunCor and existing resort personnel will continue to manage the resort and the adjacent properties.

Kabuto Decom Inc., founded 20 years ago by Shigeru Sato, is one of Northern Japan's largest, fastest-growing companies with hotels, golf courses and land holdings in Japan and the United States. Sato enjoyed The Wigwam and was personally involved in negotiations with SunCor.

Cecil Ravenswood, vice president and general manager of The Wigwam, said he expects a smooth transition.

SunCor is a wholly owned subsidiary of Phoenix-based Pinnacle West Capital Corp.

PHOENIX (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - The Circle K Corp. (NYSE:CKP) Wednesday announced that it has reached an agreement in principle with its senior lenders which will enable the company to proceed with a financial restructuring.

The agreement is among the company's bank lenders (Banks), the steering committee for the holders of the company's $200 million Senior Secured Notes due Oct. 15, 1993 (Noteholders) and American Financial Corp. (AFC), the company's largest shareholder as well as a creditor.

The agreement contemplates that the parties will enter into a definitive standstill agreement effective through the earlier of Oct. 31, 1990, or the successful completion of the company's financial restructuring. The standstill agreement is subject to final documentation and approval of the remaining Noteholders. During this interim seven month period, the Banks, Noteholders and AFC would defer all principal and interest payments on their respective obligations and waive any existing defaults under their current loan agreements. The company's ability to make interest payments on its subordinated debt will be subject to the approval of the Banks. The parties have also agreed to revise financial covenants for the company during the standstill period. The company believes it will have sufficient cash liquidity for its trade credit obligations during the interim seven month period.

The standstill agreement requires that the company consummate prior to Oct. 31, 1990, the acquisition of not less than 90 percent of the outstanding principal amount of the company's subordinated debt aggregating approximately $510 million consisting of its 7-1/4 percent Convertible Subordinated Debentures due 2006, 8-1/4 percent Convertible Subordinated Debentures due 2005, 12-3/4 percent Senior Subordinated Debentures due 1997 and 13 percent Junior Subordinated Debentures due 1997 and certain private indebtedness.

The terms of the company's offer to acquire its subordinated debt have not been determined. Any offering of the company's securities in exchange for subordinated debt will be made by means of a prospectus. A registration statement is expected to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission prior to May 15, 1990.

Merrill Lynch Capital Markets is acting as the company's financial advisor with respect to the restructuring.

WORCESTER, MA (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - In a move reflecting new vision and direction, Sprague Technologies announced Wednesday that it has organized its Semiconductor Group to operate as a wholly owned subsidiary with its own management team.

The newly organized subsidiary will be managed by senior vice president Richard J. Morrison, who assumes expanded responsibilities. According to Morrison, the Semiconductor Group is positioning itself to compete more effectively as a supplier of system-level solutions using BiCMOS and BCD (combined BiCMOS and DMOS) integrated circuit technologies.

As a part of Sprague's reorganization, the four product divisions of the Semiconductor Group will soon be combined to form a single market-focused entity. While the Power IC and Signal Processing divisions will continue to report to Don Bird and John Kokulis, respectively, until the manufacturing for these lines is transferred from the Concord, N.H. facility to the Far East by year end.

All marketing, customer service, and sales activities for the Group now report to Bob Frostholm who has been promoted to the new position of vice president of sales and marketing. Other promotions to new positions include Dan Ax to worldwide sales manager, and Alan Clark to worldwide marketing manager.

Both Messrs. Ax and Clark, as well as Phil Davies, strategic marketing manager, Terry Campaniello, manager of customer satisfaction, and Steve Bahn, director of marketing communications, now report to Frostholm.

Design, product, and test engineering activities for the Group now report to Steve Miles, recently promoted to the new post of vice president of engineering. Those reporting to Miles include Ron Lutz, design engineering manager, Mark Hazelton, product engineering manager, Mike Zunino, technology development manager, and Ellen Auger, operations engineering manager.

The Sprague Semiconductor Group specializes in developing system-level solutions that integrate proprietary combinations of Bipolar, CMOS and DMOS structures into a single, monolithic integrated circuit.

Operating as a wholly owned subsidiary of Sprague Technologies, the Semiconductor Group serves major automotive, computer peripheral and industrial customers with its growing line of mixed-mode (analog/digital) products.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Carolco Pictures Inc. (NYSE:CRC) Wednesday announced the final results of its exchange offer (the ''Exchange Offer'') for the depositary receipts representing limited partnership interests (''Partnership Units'') in The Vista Organization Partnership, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership(the ''Partnership'').

Carolco anticipates delivery of the Exchange Offer consideration on Monday April 9. For each validly tendered Partnerhsip Unit, Carolco will exchange .00245 Carolco Units. Each Carolco Unit consists of a $1,000 principal amount 14 percent Senior Note of Carolco due 1993 and 30 warrants to purchase Carolco Common Stock, determined in the manner set forth in the Exchange Offer Prospectus. Each warrant entitles the holder thereof to purchase one share of Carolco Common Stock at a price of $11.25 per share until June 1, 1993.

A Partnership Unit holder must tender at least 408.17 Partnership Units to receive a whole Carolco Unit, and for each Partnership Unit tendered by a Partnership Unit holder in excess of zero but less than 408.17 Partnership Units or in excess of a multiple of 408.17 Partnership Units, such Partnership Unit holder will, in lieu of Carolco Units, receive .22273 of a share of Carolco Common Stock. To the extent that any fractional shares of Carolco Common Stock are required to be issued in connection with the Exchange Offer, Carolco will pay cash in lieu of fractional shares.

Carolco will also deposit into escrow .00909 of a share of Carolco Common Stock for each tendered Partnership Unit in connection with the Class Action Lawsuits filed against the Partnership (and others) as described in the Exchange Offer Prospectus. This Carolco Common Stock will be held in th escrow fund established pursuant to the Exchange Offer in connection with the Class Action Lawsuits.

As described in the Exchange Offer Prospectus, Carolco intends to cause the Partnership to transfer all of its assets to Carolco or a subsidiary of Carolco on terms which Carolco anticipates will result, per Partnership Unit, in the same amount and form of consideration as the consideration being issued to tendering Partnership Unti holders and to dissolve the Partnership and distribute such consideration to those holders of Partnership Units who did not tender their Partnership Units pursuant to the Exchange Offer.

Carolco is a diversified entertainment company engaged in the finanacing, production and leasing of motion picture properties worldwide. The Vista Partnership was formed to engage in the production and exploitation of feature-length theatrical motion pictures.

BRANFORD, CT (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Echlin Inc. (NYSE:ECH), in its second quarter ended February 28, 1990, achieved a 9 percent sales increase, from $344.9 million last year to $375.9 million this year.

Net income totaled $6.6 million in the second quarter this year, down 47 percent from $12.5 million in the second quarter last year, while earnings per share dropped 48 percent, from $0.23 last year to $0.12 this year.

The results were announced by Echlin's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Frederick J. Mancheski. For the first six months of fiscal year 1990, sales increased 7 percent, from $700.9 million last year to $746.9 million this year. Net income after tax decreased to $20.1 million this year, down 27 percent, while earnings per share dropped to $0.36 this year off 28 percent.

A general slump in unit sales of comparable operations, caused by slowing economic activity, stiffer competition, and overall softness in our industry, was further impacted negatively by warm weather this past winter. Warehouse distributors built inventories to prepare for a normal winter season increase in demand, only to find the weather uncooperative. Thus Echlin's unit sales suffered and we have had to cut back factory operations, which increases unit costs.

In addition, labor, material and service costs have risen faster than our price increases, causing a cost-price squeeze on profits. All this resulted in a sharp reduction in earnings for the second quarter, which is normally a weak quarter for Echlin otherwise.

''We are diligently working on improvements which should help offset some of the cost-price problems,'' Mancheski said. ''The basic indicators for automotive replacement parts demand portend an increase. When unit sales rebound, which normally occurs in Echlin's third and fourth quarters as motorists prepare their vehicles for higher levels of summer driving, our earnings should improve.''

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, NJ (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Western Union Corp. and IBM Wednesday announced an agreement under which both companies intend to provide a service enabling customers to use their respective electronic mail systems to exchange business messages using X.400 standards.

When implemented, the interconnect service will allow communications between users of the IBM Information Network's Screenmail service, which integrates X.400, and Western Union 400 service, which is fully integrated with Western Union's EasyLink electronic mail (e-mail) service. These messages will be delivered to users of electronic mailboxes or large, private mail systems on the Screenmail or Western Union 400 services.

The new communications capability uses X.400 standards developed by the Consultative Committee for International Telephone and Telegraph (CCITT), the international standards committee.

Western Union Corp. provides a broad range of messaging, financial and other services, both domestically and internationally, to meet the specific needs of business customers and individual consumers. The company is a leading provider of public electronic mail services, which enable its business customers to reach more than seven million electronic mail, fax and telex users worldwide. In addition to packet access or dedicated connections, users can reach Western Union's network via a local call or a 1-800 number.

In addition to Western Union 400 service, Western Union offers OfficeAccess software products, which connect computerized office systems such as DEC, Wang, Data General, IBM Personal System/2 and the IBM Personal Computer with EasyLink. Through NetworkAccess service, users of PROFS, DISOSS and SNADS can access EasyLink services.

Western Union subscribers can send messages throughout the world via facsimile, telex, telegram, cablegram and Mailgram message or any of the company's other Priority Services. EasyLink users also have access to Western Union's InfoMaster and FYI News services.

The IBM Information Network is IBM's commercial, value-added data network. It offers the ability to send messages and data worldwide. PASADENA, CA (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Countrywide Credit Industries Inc. (NYSE:CCR) Wednesday responded to the downgrading by Standard & Poor's of the commercial paper rating of the company's subsidiary, Countrywide Funding Corp.

Countrywide stated that its operations remain strong and that the liquidity provided by its inventory of mortgage loans, its mortgage loan servicing portfolio and other assets, coupled with a $560 million credit facility with six banks and other financing available to the company, is more than adequate to support the company's plans for continued growth.

The company also noted that it currently has no commercial paper outstanding and is funding any cash needs through its bank credit facility. Finally, Countrywide added that the parent's BBB- medium term note rating and its BB+ convertible subordinated debt rating were affirmed by Standard & Poor's.

The company previously reported a 21 percent gain in net earnings for its fiscal year ended Feb. 28, 1990. Unaudited net earnings for the year were $13,085,000, or 74 cents per primary share and 72 cents per fully diluted share. Net earnings for the prior year, before an extraordinary item, were $10,840,000, or 63 cents per primary share and 61 cents fully diluted.

Countrywide Credit Industries is engaged primarily in the mortgage lending business, originating, selling and servicing residential mortgage loans. Countrywide operates through a nationwide network of approximately 100 offices serving real estate brokers and homebuyers, as well as mortgage brokers.

Countrywide also operates through a correspondent loan program serving financial institutions in all 50 states and through a newly formed consumer division serving individual homebuyers and homeowners directly.

MONMOUTH BEACH, NJ (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Drown wild foxes and gas raccoons, just make sure nobody sees you do it -- that's the message in a newsletter distributed by the New Jersey Pest Control Association (NJPCA), which tells its members to kill Garden State wildlife such as foxes, raccoons, skunks, woodchucks and opossums by ''drowning, gassing or shooting'' and leave the dead bodies at the curb ''for normal trash pick-up.''

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), America's largest animal rights organization, has notified the New Jersey Division of Fish, Game and Wildlife of NJPCA's advice, which may violate local firearms codes and state anti-cruelty codes.

Said Mary Healey, PETA investigator, ''New Jersey's remaining wild animals should be protected, not slaughtered and left for the garbage collectors.'' NJPCA's advice may be in violation of the New Jersey Law for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Chapter 22, Article B, 4:22-17, Cruelty in General, which states that it is unlawful to ''needlessly mutilate or kill a living animal or creature.''

The January 1990 NJPCA newsletter tells members that killing wildlife ''could present a problem if an animal is trapped in a suburban area. It might be better from a public relations viewpoint to move the animal to a site where it can be destroyed out of sight of the public. Technically this would be a violation so you must use your own judgement.'' Indeed, state law (N.J. Statute Title 23:4-63:4) prohibits the transport of wild animals.

The newsletter added that NJPCA will keep its members apprised of the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection's recently submitted draft bill proposing certification of pest control workers.

Said Healey, ''Raccoons and foxes are not 'pests' to be exterminated. We should try to live in harmony with other living creatures.'' PETA recommends humane alternatives to calling ''pest'' control companies, such as leaving a radio and a bright light in the fireplace if raccoons are living in the chimney, since they favor quiet, dark places.

NEW CITY, NY (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Cablec Corp., the nation's leading manufacturer of wire and cable products, Wednesday announced the establishment of a five-year $250 million revolving credit arrangement with a syndicate of U.S. and international banks.

Serving as a guarantor of the credit agreement is the London-based BICC Group, an international cables and construction company that now owns 100 percent of Cablec's stock.

''This credit arrangement will provide the capital to enable us to accelerate our growth in the North American cable markets,'' said Harry C. Schell, chairman of BICC North America, and president and chief executive officer of Cablec. ''We will use these funds on an 'as-needed' basis to pursue acquisitions related to our core businesses, modernize and expand our plants, and support working capital requirements.''

Chemical Bank and Barclays Bank PLC will serve as co-agents for a syndicate of 16 U.S. and international banks. The funds will be available to Cablec Corp. and its affiliates and subsidiaries.

The agreement, signed today by representatives of BICC, Cablec, Barclays Bank, Chemical Bank and the syndicate banks, is BICC's first significant U.S.-based credit arrangement. The group has been a major factor in the U.S. wire and cable market since purchasing 45 percent of Cablec's stock in 1987, and the remainder in 1988 and 1989. The revolving credit arrangement will be the primary financing source for BICC's U.S. operations.

Cablec Corp. was founded in 1984 as a management-led buyout of the Phelps Dodge power cable business. Sales were $54 million in 1984 and have grown since then at an average compounded annual rate of 43 percent -- making it one of the fastest growing mid-sized companies in the country.

Sales in 1990 are projected near $500 million. Acquisitions, internal growth, and technology advances have been the key strategies as Cablec successfully assimilated the wire and cable businesses of Phelps, Dodge, Anaconda, Ericsson, Essex, Continental, Collyer, Brand-Rex and the RCA polymer facility. Technology and marketing agreements are in place with Sumitomo Electric, Phillips Cables, and BICC.

Cablec Corp. is one of the nation's largest manufacturers of power, control, instrumentation, data and electronic cables for the utility, industrial, transit, mining, military, construction and export markets. BICC is a London-based cable manufacturer and construction firm with annual sales near $7 billion. Its operations in the U.S. and Canada are managed under BICC North America.

LONG BEACH, CA (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Dr. John Hart-Smith, a senior staff engineer in airframe research and technologies at Douglas Aircraft Co., has been named a McDonnell Douglas Fellow.

An internationally recognized expert in the development of composite structures and the design of metal and composite joints, Hart-Smith has produced research that has set world standards for designing, analyzing and producing metal and composite aircraft parts. For example, an analysis program he developed for sizing titanium to carbon epoxy joints is now used by nearly every U.S. aerospace corporation. Among the programs Hart-Smith has been involved in at McDonnell Douglas are the MD-80, MD-11, C-17 and F/A-18.

Hart-Smith is one of five Fellows named this year. Each will receive a silver medallion and cash award.

The Fellow program is a series of special technical positions reserved for McDonnell Douglas engineers and scientists who have made an extraordinary impact on the advancement of their field of expertise and of the corporation's products. The five Fellows named this year bring the number of active fellows in the program to 33.

Hart-Smith, who has been with McDonnell Douglas for 21 years, has published more than 50 papers on adhesively bonded and mechanically fastened joints. In 1968 he earned his doctorate in engineering from Australia's Monash University, and in 1988 the university awarded him a higher doctorate, doctor of engineering, degree.

Net loss per common share	(1.83)	(1.36)

For the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, American Oil and Gas Corp. reported significant increases in its revenues and operating income as compared to the same quarter of 1988. The increases are primarily a result of AOG's acquisition of the natural gas pipeline business of Cabot Corp., which was effective Nov. 1, 1989, for financial reporting purposes.

The acquisition more than triples the company's assets and capitalization and more than quadruples the company's revenues and gas throughput. Net loss for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, increased over that reported for the same period of 1988 as a result of a $3 million write-down for the excess of net book value over proceeds received from the sale of certain pipeline systems in March 1990.

Effective Sept. 30, 1989, the company's ownership of WellTech Inc. was reduced to 51 percent as a result of the restructuring of WellTech's bank indebtedness.

NEW ORLEANS (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - McDermott Marine Construction, a major operating unit of McDermott International Inc., (NYSE:MDR) and Freeport-McMoRan Resource Partners, Limited Partnership (NYSE:FRP), an affiliate of Freeport-McMoRan Inc. (NYSE:FTX), jointly announced Wednesday that McDermott has received a contract from FRP valued at approximately $250 million for the design, fabrication and installation of a complex of 15 offshore sulphur-mining platforms and related facilities in the Gulf of Mexico.

The platforms will be installed off the coast of Louisiana in Main Pass Block 299 in 220 feet of water, where FRP, as operator, will develop the largest existing frasch sulphur reserve in North America. The main pass block 299 joint venture is owned 58.3 percent by FRP; 25 percent by IMC Fertilizer Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of IMC Fertilizer Group Inc. (NYSE:IFL) and 16.7 percent by Felmont Oil Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Homestake Mining Co. (NYSE:HM).

The total cost of developing the sulphur deposit, prior to initial production in 1992, is estimated to be approximately $554 million, of which approximately $288 million is expected to be incurred in 1990.

The contract calls for the structural design and fabrication of 15 platforms, 13 bridges, a power plant module, and related facilities. Fabrication will be performed at McDermott's Louisiana fabrication yards located at Bayou Boeuf and New Iberia and at its Gulfport, Miss., shipyard.

The offshore installation will be performed in two phases, with the first phase in late 1990 and the second phase in late 1991. It includes the setting of a one-piece 6,000-ton module and a 2,000-ton quarters building. In terms of surface area, the connected production platforms will be the largest offshore complex in the Gulf.

FRP is the largest and one of the lowest-cost integrated U.S. phosphate fertilizer producers. In addition, FRP is currently the second-largest domestic frasch sulphur producer and will become the largest U.S. frasch sulphur producer when the main pass block 299 sulphur deposit reaches full production in 1993. FRP is also the largest U.S. transporter of sulphur produced by others.

HOPKINTON, MA. (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Richard B. Plumber and Paul T. Dacier have joined EMC Corp. as senior vice president, engineering and corporate counsel respectively, according to EMC Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Richard J. Egan.

Plumber had been with Apollo Computer since 1984 and played a key role in the development of the Apollo family of workstations. He was also a part of the management merger team and headed up the technical investigations that determined the direction of the Hewlett-Packard Workstation Group.

Most recently, Plumber was responsible for all PA-RISC based workstation development at the HP/Apollo facilities in Chelmsford, Mass. and Colorado Springs, Colo., with responsiblities in the areas of quality, productivity and design. Prior to joining Apollo, Plumber was the manager of Advanced Development for Digital Equipment Corp.'s Production Group.

Dacier served as senior counsel, corporate operations for Apollo Computer where he was the in-house legal team member that negotiated the merger between HP and Apollo. With Apollo since 1984, Dacier also coordinated the company's antitrust filings relative to the merger and was a member of the defense teams in both the Rule 10b-5 class action, ''token ring'' litigations and in protecting Apollo's intellectual properties.

According to EMC's Egan; ''I am pleased to have both Rick and Paul on board. With our successful entry into the OEM market we have developed a need for a stronger contract capability. As we gear up for the introduction of a number of new products and an expanded role in the marketplace I feel that we have a real need for the experience and expertise that these two individuals bring to the company.''

Plumber is a 1967 graduate of Worcester Polytechnic Institute and presently resides in Bolton, Mass. Dacier is a 1983 graduate of Marquette University Law School and currently resides in Haverhill, Mass.

CHICAGO (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Stephen M. Wolf said today that United Airlines supports the leadership demonstrated by Illinois Gov. James Thompson and U.S. Secretary of Transportation Samuel Skinner in their call yesterday for needed airfield improvements and flight delay reductions at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport while continuing to work for a third airport.

''At the same time, United is sensitive to the concerns of local communities in this process and will work with them to harmonize local concerns with the transportation needs of the country and this region,'' said Wolf, UAL Corp. chairman and president.

''The Chicago area benefits greatly from its position as the nation's premier air transportation center. Relieving congestion at O'Hare will help assure that this area continues to enjoy the economic benefits of its important role in national and international transportation.

''Importantly, we support Mayor Richard Daley's proposal for a third airport to assure that Chicago remains as the nation's premier transportation center in the future.

''To balance these various needs, it is essential that both long term planning for a third airport and short-term improvements at O'Hare occur simultaneously. Under the active leadership of Gov. Thompson, Secretary Skinner and Mayor Daley we are confident that national, regional and local interests can, and will be, resolved fairly,'' Wolf said.

KANATA, Ontario (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Mitel Corp. Wednesday announced that it will supply the first ever digital telephone exchanges for Dar es Salaam in Tanzania, East Africa.

This represents the first Mitel GX5000 central office switch provided to a foreign country through funding from the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

The $1 million contract signed by Mitel and the Tanzania Posts and Telecommunications Corp. (TPTC) involves two GX5000 systems which will provide telephone service to the principal industrial suburbs of Dar es Salaam, areas that are currently experiencing a critical shortage of telephone connections.

The waiting list for telephones in these parts of the city now exceeds 100 percent of the currently installed exchange equipment.

The switches will provide immediate relief to these communications problems, as their compact size and ease of installation enables them to be installed next to existing exchanges with no building modifications.

The sale of these systems to Tanzania is an example of sustainable development. Initially funded by CIDA, it is estimated that the switches will pay for themselves within the first year of operation and will earn revenue to finance future expansion.

According to Ray Brown, Mitel's Vice President of Public Switching, ''With the help of CIDA, this sale of GX5000 equipment to Tanzania illustrates Mitel's unique ability to provide developing countries with cost-effective communications systems.''

Mitel has also recently sold two GX5000 systems to Latin America. As part of a project funded through a CIDA Line of Credit, Mitel won a $600,000 sub-contract from SR Telecom of Montreal. This sale will involve the installation of GX5000 equipment in LaPaz and Cochabamba, two principal Bolivian cities.

Mitel is an international manufacturer of sophisticated, reliable business telecommunications systems and public switching systems, with annual revenues of more than $400 million. More than 120,000 Mitel telecommunications systems have been sold in over 100 countries. Sales of the GX5000 central office switch have been made in North America, Europe and Africa.

CHICAGO (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - LIT America announced Wednesday that Tom Madden has joined the firm as senior vice president of its Commercial, Retail, and Institutional (CRI) Division.

He will also be a member of LIT's executive committee. Madden replaces Bob Siebenmann, who resigned from the firm to pursue other interests.

Prior to joining LIT America, Madden served for five years as vice president of Merrill Lynch Futures, where he was chiefly responsible for the firm's institutional sales division.

Before joining Merrill Lynch, he served as a vice president of E.F. Hutton & Co. During his 12-year career as a Hutton institutional broker on the trading floor of the Chicago Board of Trade, Madden was an active member of the exchange, serving on many of the CBT's committees including Agricultural Legislation and Member Services. Before his tenure with E.F. Hutton, Madden was a cash grain trader of Cargill Inc.

''Tom brings extensive institutional and commercial expertise to our firm '' said David Vogel, chairman and chief executive officer of LIT America. ''He is a well known and highly respected member of the Chicago Board of Trade with an excellent reputation in the futures industry,'' he added.

Madden graduated from Harvard College where he received a bachelor's degree in economics.

Through its various divisions, LIT America provides brokerage and clearing services to a professionally oriented clientele of locals, market-makers, institutions and brokerage firms worldwide.

ROSEMONT, IL (APRIL 4) BUSINESS WIRE - Covia Tuesday announced the establishment of Covia Nihon Co. Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary based in Tokyo to market and support the Apollo travel reservations system in Japan.

Apollo, operated and marketed by Covia, is the most advanced travel reservation system in the industry, serving 10,000 travel industry locations in 40 nations. Apollo serves 600 locations in Japan.

''For the first time, an established computerized reservation system company has formed a subsidiary to address the needs of a particular region or country,'' said John McIntyre, Covia general manager of international business development. ''Covia Nihon allows us to more effictively meet the demands of the Japanese travel market -- demands for enhanced automation products and customer support.

''This is a real example of Covia's globalization philosophy in action -- providing global-oriented products and services while meeting the local needs of the region being served.''

McIntyre has been named president of Covia Nihon. The subsidiary will maintain offices in Tokyo and Osaka.

Covia Nihon plans to introduce several innovations in the next few months, including software enhancements to Dial-up Apollo, the Japanese language laptop computer product available in Japan. The enhancements will provide added flexibility and quicker response times to computer commands.

In another development, Covia Nihon has installed 31 workstations at the Osaka Institute of Tourism to train Japanese travel agents on Apollo. The Osaka region is the second largest travel market in Japan.

Apollo is owned and operated by Covia, a partnership of United Airlines, USAir, British Airways, KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, Swissair, Alitalia and Air Canada.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (APRIL 4) - Security forces shot dead three Moslem militants in a gunfight in Indian Kashmir Wednesday as New Delhi denounced what it called partisan statements by Iran and Pakistan on the situation there.

The hour-long gun battle occurred when militants ambushed two Border Security Forces (BSF) vehicles in the town of Kupwara in a bid to free 23 colleagues who had been arrested earlier while trying to cross the frontier into Pakistan, police said.

Three attackers were killed and 11 people, six of them BSF troopers, were wounded.

The army was later called out and an indefinite curfew was imposed on Kupwara, police said.

Four other towns -- Pulwama, Shopian, Tral and Anantnag -- observed a general strike called by militants to protest a "reign of terror" by security forces in the Moslem-dominated Kashmir valley, residents said.

There were no reports of violence.

Jammu and Kashmir state governor Jagmohan later met with senior army and other security force officials in Srinagar, the state's summer capital, to review the situation in light of the discussions he had earlier in New Delhi.

In New Delhi, a Ministry of External Affairs spokesman on Wednesday again accused Pakistan of aiding militants fighting Indian rule in Kashmir, and warned that this could have serious consequences to Islambad and for peace and stability in the region.

Pakistan has rejected the charge, but he spokesman said: "We suggest that the government of Pakistan stop forthwith its campaign of disinformation and distortions".

He regretted that Teheran had also made statements in recent weeks on Kashmir, which he said amounted to interference in India's internal affairs.

"We have in recent months had occasion to advise Iranian friends not to take sides and reflect a biased attitude," the spokesman said.

"We believe that the development of friendly and cooperative relations between India and Iran would be conducive to regional peace and mutual cooperation. It will also constitute a factor for peace and stability in the region," he said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) - The United States Wednesday said it was surprised but pleased by Libyan leader Colonel Moamer Kadhafi's reported call for the release of all hostages in the Middle East.

"Sometimes you get support from strange quarters, and this is certainly one of those," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

But, he added, "any release of the hostages will be welcome and anyone who urges the release is doing the right thing."

Earlier, the Libyan news agency JANA said Col. Kadhafi had urged Moslems during the holy fasting month of Ramadan to "release all hostages and political prisoners, especially those in the Middle East."

Seventeen Westerners, including eight Americans and three Britons, are missing in Lebanon, most of them believed to be in the hands of pro-Iranian Islamic militants.

Col. Kadhafi's appeal followed recent reports both in Iran and Lebanon of gathering momentum toward their release by the end of the year.

Analysts in Teheran have said the Iranian leadership is anxious to rid itself of the hostage stigma in order to attract international assistance in its reconstruction drive after the Gulf war with Iraq.

LONDON (APRIL 4) - Britain may substantially reduce the number of its troops in Berlin if it becomes the capital of a future united Germany, Foreign Secretary Sir Douglas Hurd said here Wednesday.

Mr. Hurd, addressing the foreign affairs committee of parliament's House of Commons, said it was "conceivable" some of the Western Allied Powers would remain in Berlin after reunification.

But probably the capital would "end up in Berlin", in which case, he did not think "a substantial presence" of British troops would remain.

However it was "crucial" that U.S. and British forces remain in Germany, although the exact level "remains to be discussed.

Mr. Hurd also said he believed it was "hugely important" to maintain a "sensible mix of nuclear and conventional forces" in Europe. It was up to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to determine the proportion.

He reiterated that German membership in NATO was "central" to European security, even if difficult for the Soviet Union to accept.

PARIS (APRIL 4) - Leading South Africans with a range of political views are to meet in June with United Nations representatives, a top U.N. official said here Wednesday as he presented the international body's revised line on ending apartheid.

Sotirios Moussouris, an assistant U.N. secretary-general responsible for the apartheid issue, told reporters that the "United Nations has adopted a less emotional, more strategic" approach in the light of reforms initiated by South African President Frederik de Klerk.

Mr. Missouris said his U.N. apartheid center "will pursue our campaign to retain current sanctions (against Pretoria) so that countries do not lift their pressure", but noted that the U.N. General Assembly for the first time last December called for the eradication of apartheid by peaceful means.

The international community was waiting for the complete lifting of South Africa's three-year-old state of emergency, the withdrawal of troops from black townships and the release of all political prisoners, Mr. Missouris added.

About a dozen South Africans - "perhaps even the brother of the president", former newsweekly editor Wimpie De Klerk, known for his anti-apartheid line - would meet U.N. officials in June, Mr. Missouris disclosed, without giving details. South Africa does not take part in U.N. General Assembly business.

In February, Mr. De Klerk unbanned the African National Congress (ANC), the main guerrilla-backed movement striving for a non-racial South Africa, and freed ANC leading light Nelson Mandela after 27 years in jail, as part of a reform package.

But Mr. Missouris stressed that while the apartheid center wanted peaceful progress and negotiations on a new, non-racial constitution for South Africa, it had reservations on current developments.

"We are wondering whether President De Klerk has the capacity to control the police and extremist groups," he added, speaking nine days after South African police shot dead at least 16 people during a rent protest in a township south of Johannesburg, claiming self-defense.

U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar is to report on progress within South Africa by July 1, the date the United States Congress has also set for a review of American sanctions.

The U.N. apartheid center monitors the implementation of sanctions, including an embargo on arms and oil sales, sports and cultural boycotts and efforts economically to isolate the white minority government and its supporters.

It enacts decisions of the U.N. Special Committee against Apartheid, an 18-nation body set up in 1962 which has no Western members.

Mr. Missouris said that Japan, which has in the past two years been overtaken as South Africa's leading trading partner by West Germany, was now trying "a little bit" to regulate such dealings.

He expressed concern at a recent Norwegian law banning the transport of crude oil on Norway's tankers to South Africa, but not that of petroleum products, which he said left a "legal vacuum".

Despite the oil embargo, experts say that South Africa continues to obtain supplies not only off the free market but from Iran, some Arab Gulf states and Brunei.

Chile, which had like Israel openly bought South African arms, has officially stopped doing so since General Augusto Pinochet handed over to an elected civilian government, Mr. Missouris said.

He added that South Africa did not have a stand at an armaments fair that has just ended in Santiago, but its weaponry was still shown under the trademark of the local Cardoen company.

With regard to changing Eastern Europe, the U.N. anti-apartheid committee called Hungary to order after a recent visit to Budapest by South Africa's foreign minister, Mr. Missouris said. Pretoria announced Friday that South Africa and Hungary were to establish diplomatic relations.

MOSCOW (APRIL 4) - A top official of the self-declared Lithuanian government reported a ''benevolent, constructive dialogue'' Tuesday with Moscow authorities.

Romualdas Ozolas, deputy prime minister of the Vilnius government which has proclaimed its own independence from Moscow, was speaking after a first meeting with Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev.

The result of the meeting, Ozolas said, would be ''the subject of talks within the Lithuanian leadership and its supreme soviet (parliament)''.

The parliament would then begin formulating a reply to last week's demand by President Mikhail Gorbachev that it cancel its ''illegal resolutions'' including the independence declaration.

The Vilnius parliament's press department issued a draft reply to Gorbachev saying it realized ''our helplessness in the face of the military and economic power of the Soviet Union''.

This was especially so at the moment, ''because fear is being spread in the streets of our cities by columns of armored troop transporters''.

Although this was ''only a show of military strength'', if Gorbachev decided to ''use this way to solve political problems, we would have no choice but to give in to this power''.

However, the Lithuanian draft reply also spoke for the first time of an ''interim period'' for the gradual handing over of power from Moscow to Vilnius, adding this could be the subject of dialogue.

In the fellow Baltic republic of Estonia, a T-34 tank standing as a monument marking the 45th anniversary of the liberation of the town Valga from German forces at the end of World War Ii was blown up Monday night, the official Tass news agency said.

''Some Valga residents are indignant about the incident, others rejoice and gloat over it,'' Tass said, inferring that those behind the blast were extremists seeking Lithuania-style independence.

Tass quoted local military authorities as saying the tank's heavy rollers were blown up to 50 meters away in the heavy blast, caused by a shell placed under the vehicle. No casualties were mentioned.

Gorbachev meanwhile warned Arnold Rueuetel, president of the Estonian Supreme Soviet, that there had to be an end to the independence process or face ''what is happening in Lithuania'', Estonian radio reported.

In Brussels, the European Community appealed to the Soviet and the Lithuanian governments to show restraint and enter into a dialogue ''which could lead to a result acceptable to both''.

MANAGUA (APRIL 4) - President Daniel Ortega, a leftist whom President George Bush once belittled as "an unwelcome animal at a garden party," has drawn praise from regional counterparts as a champion of multiparty democracy.

Mr. Ortega emerged from a two-day summit on Nicaragua's Pacific coast with high marks seen as easing the sting of his humiliating defeat at the polls in the country's February 25 elections.

With three weeks to go until he turns over power to president-elect Violeta Chamorro, the presidents of Nicaragua's four main neighbors issued a statement expressing gratitude to Mr. Ortega for his efforts to push "representative and pluralistic democracy" in Nicaragua.

The praise came at the close of the Monday-Tuesday summit in the beach resort town of Montelimar.

Along with Mr. Ortega, the presidents of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras also called on the U.S.-backed contra rebels to demobilize and surrender their weapons immediately.

Mr. Ortega had been branded a Marxist totalitarian by his opponents, especially in Washington, due to Nicaragua's traditionally close ties with the Soviet Union and Cuba.

The United States spent eight years arming the contras in an effort to topple Mr. Ortega and his Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN).

At a hemispheric summit in Costa Rica in October, Mr. Bush called Mr. Ortega a "little man" and an "unwelcome animal at a garden party" after Mr. Ortega used that forum to announce Managua was canceling a unilateral cease-fire with the contras.

Mr. Ortega said at the time the contras were leaving bases in Honduras and returning to Nicaragua to disrupt the elections, but his government has since restored the cease-fire.

Mr. Ortega agreed to hold early elections and implement a series of democratic reforms in the framework of a 1987 regional peace plan authored by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, who won the Nobel peace prize for his efforts.

Analysts say that, even though Mr. Ortega and the Sandinistas took a beating at the polls, the praise he drew at the Montelimar summit will come in handy as the FSLN tries to maintain its influence over Nicaraguans and the national political scene.

With around 41 percent of the votes, t. FSLN is by far the strongest single political force, as Mrs. Chamorro's National Opposition Union is made up of 13 smaller parties spanning the political spectrum.

Mr. Ortega and representatives of Mrs. Chamorro agreed last month to an orderly transfer of power.

The Sandinistas, who had exercised complete control over the army, accepted that the army would not belong to any political force, and the incoming government pledged to respect the army's rank and hierarchy.

After the elections there had been concern that the Sandinistas would refuse to relinquish control of the army.

LONDON (APRIL 4) - The British government Wednesday published its controversial Bill paving the way for up to 50,000 Hong Kong families to be granted British citizenship.

The measure was given a formal First Reading in the Commons but the first major test will come in the Second Reading on April 19.

Details of the scheme were disclosed only hours after Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher spoke of Britain's "solemn duty" towards the colony in the run-up to the Chinese take-over in 1997.

The British Nationality (Hong Kong) Bill enables the Home Secretary "to register as British citizens before June 30, 1997 up to 50,000 Hong Kong residents recommended by the Governor of Hong Kong under a selection scheme to be approved by Parliament".

Citizenship will also be granted to the spouses and young children of the key residents before the colony reverts to Chinese rule.

Under the Bill, Hong Kong governor Sir David Wilson will appoint a committee to advise him on the citizenship issue.

The government maintains that giving key people a safety outlet to Britain if things go wrong under the Chinese will avert a big exodus before 1997.

During a tree-planting exercise, the Prime Minister said Britain had a duty to those people vital in keeping Hong Kong's prosperity going.

"That is our undertaking, to keep the prosperity going, under the agreement. I see it as a matter of solemn duty. Others may not see it like that", she said.

Asked about opposition to the Bill, she replied: "I hope that with a good deal of argument this Bill will get through".

The future of the Bill is in doubt because of a Tory backbench revolt, led by former party chairman Norman Tebbit.

As many as 80 Tory MPs opposed to mass immigration are threatening to vote against the government's plans to allow about 225,000 Hong Kong citizens into Britain.

Robert Adley, Conservative MP for Christchurch and chairman of the British-Chinese Parliamentary Group, said:

"The government are about to do something which I never thought I would live to see -- legalising an activity which was criminal, namely creating a market in passports. The employment market will be distorted by jobs to which British passports are attached. This scheme is going from the bizarre to the bazaar".

Tony Marlow, Conservative MP for Northampton North, added:

"Many people are wondering why the Prime Minister has given precedence to a commitment conned out of her by the elite of Hong Kong over a commitment freely given to the British people at three successive General Elections. Does she have a death wish ? Certainly at the present rate of progress, the political water won't bear her weight much longer".

The Shadow Cabinet was meeting on Wednesday night to consider its position, but Labor is also set to oppose the Bill and join the Tory rebels in a possible defeat of the Government on the issue.

Labor opposes the Bill because it believes the Government has been "elitist" in giving only people in key occupations the right to a passport.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) - The Soviet Union plans to send a new ambassador to Washington in time for a planned June summit between presidents George Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev, U.S. officials said Wednesday.

The new envoy will be Aleksandr Bessmertnykh, a 56-year-old expert on the United States, Canada and the Middle East, and currently first deputy foreign minister, the officials said on condition they not be identified.

Ambassador Yuri Dubinin, here since 1986, is due to become ambassador to France, they added.

Mr. Bessmertnykh is considered particularly close to Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who began three days of talks with Secretary of State James Baker Wednesday.

A date for the superpower summit is expected to be announced during the visit.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) - President George Bush, promising not to forget would-be Soviet Jewish emigres still awaiting permission to leave their homeland, said Wednesday he would continue to pressure Moscow to allow their free emigration.

In a special Passover message, Mr. Bush said he would also press Moscow to agree to direct civil aviation links between the Soviet Union and Israel.

He said Washington acknowledged and applauded "the dramatic changes that have taken place in the Soviet Union, making possible the emigration of many who have long sought to leave."

But he then added: "We must not and, I can assure you, we will not forget those who are left nehind.

"The modern exodus is a great event for all those who delight in human freedom.

"The United States has worked hard to open this lifeline and we will continue to do everything necessary to make it possible for Soviet Jews to go to Israel, including continuing to press for direct and indirect flights (to Israel)."

U.S. officials are likely to raise the issue in talks here with visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Washington has been pressing for direct flights between Moscow and Tel Aviv. The Soviets have so far refused.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) - Middle East experts expressed optimism Wednesday about prospects for Israeli-Palestinian peace, despite uncertainty about the next Israeli leadership.

Two Middle East scholars and a former U.S. ambassador to Israel told the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee that Israel was likely to give up its claim on the occupied territories and agree to a Palestinian state.

Ian Lustick, a professor at Dartmouth College, asserted that the failure of successive peace attempts would eventually lead Israel to an identity crisis solveable only through peace.

Samuel Lewis, a former U.S. ambassador to Israel, said the current immigration of Soviet Jews to Israel would boost the country's sagging morale and give it the courage to compromise.

Optimistic sentiments were also voiced by Rita Hauser, a prominent lawyer and Jewish community leader, who spoke at a Capitol Hill seminar Wednesday on Middle East peace prospects.

Hauser said the end of the cold war, a moderating trend among the Arab states, and Washington's willingness to apply pressure all facilitated moves towards peace.

''We may be moving slowing out of this dark period into something positive '' she said, while conceding the future might be cloudy if Itzhak Shamir and his Likud following return to office.

Michael Sterner, a former U.S. deputy assistant secretary of State for Middle Eastern affairs, said he was ''encouraged if not optimistic about the situation''.

Sterner likened the current turmoil in the Israeli government to the decisions the Palestine Liberation Organization underwent last year, noting that Israel, like the Plo, might finally opt for pragmatism.

SEOUL (APRIL 4) - The South Korean government unveiled Wednesday a set of measures designed to stimulate the economy, saying the currency would be further devalued and new loans would be made to business firms.

It also officially dropped a plan to ban financial transactions conducted under aliases, a practice which reformers here say help corrupt investors.

At a press conference, Deputy Premier and Economic Planning Minister Lee Seung-Yun said the government would double a low-cost Special Equipment Loan to business firms to two trillion won (2.85 billion dollars).

The loans would be "part of efforts to encourage greater investment in plant and equipment, along with stepped-up technological development," he said.

The national Yonhap news agency said the loans would carry an annual eight per cent interest rate. The current prime rate ranges from 11 to 12.5 per cent.

Mr. Lee, flanked by Trade and Industry Minister Park Pil-Su and Finance Minister Chung Yung-Euy, said "the foreign exchange rate will be adjusted to a more realistic level and credit for export facilities will be increased."

The won currency has been steadily declining for the past few months and hovers now around 703 to the dollar. The currency entered last month into a semi-free exchange mechanism after years in which the central Bank of Korea set the exchange rate daily.

Any further devaluation of the won is sure to draw criticism from Washington, which fears the adverse effect it would have on U.S. imports. Washington also accuses Seoul of giving subsidies and tax holidays to support exports.

Mr. Lee said the previous appreciation of the won in 1988 and early 1989 was to blame for the "decreased international competitiveness of our industry." He also blamed "sharp wage hikes brought about by a rash of labor disputes."

The government did not lower interest rates as expected, saying it feared an increase in the inflationary rate.

The ministers also shelved a previously announced plan to enforce "real names" in financial transactions. The plan to outlaw the pervasive use of aliases here had been announced by the economic team which was removed in a cabinet reshuffle last month.

EPERNAY, France (APRIL 4) - The price of champagne is expected to rise sharply in coming years, and to soar in the case of some top varieties, following the abolition this week of a 30-year-old system which regulated the price of champagne grapes.

The contract, which guaranteed each year a fixed price for wine growers selling their grapes for transformation into Champagne wine, will be replaced by a system governed by "market forces", said Jean-Michel Ducellier, chairman of the Champagne producers trade association.

The resulting free market, is expected not only to bring increased prices, but major changes in the structure of the industry, with small growers in danger of being forced out, industry experts say.

Mr. Ducellier said the old system had become unworkable because vineyard owners were increasingly bypassing it, attracted by higher prices on a parallel market.

Only 43 percent of the coming crop, in terms of vineyard area, had been offered through the system, he said. "That was unacceptable."

The ending of the agreement, which was the only one of its kind in the French wine industry, will mean that vineyard owners have the right to charge what the market will bear for their grapes. The rules of supply and demand will inevitably lead to higher prices because grape production has failed to keep pace with a steady increase in sales of champagne.

However officials hope that the owners will heed warnings from the Interprofessional Champagne Wine Committee (CIVC), the body which formerly set prices before each season, not to let things get out of hand.

Under the new regulations, the CIVC will set a "guideline" price for bulk grapes and supervise contractual machinery for buying operations. The industry, recognising that the former system brought it prosperity, wanted to "keep things under control", Mr. Ducellier said.

BANGKOK (APRIL 4) - The trade deficit of the United States with Thailand was 2.1 billion dollars in 1989, 838 million dollars higher than the previous year, a press release circulated Wednesday by the U.S. Embassy here said.

U.S. exports to Thailand were 2.3 billion dollars in 1989, 16.8 percent higher than 1988, the release said, quoting a Washington report from the office U.S. Trade Representative.

Imports from Thailand were 4.4 billion dollars, 36.9 percent higher than the previous year, it said.

The stock of U.S. foreign direct investment in Thailand was 1.1 billion dollars in 1988, 148 million dollars less than in 1987, the release said.

TOKYO (APRIL 4) - Japanese employers offered Wednesday to raise wages by around 5.9 percent in the coming year, up from last year's average increase of 5.2 percent but falling short of the six percent hike sought by most unions.

And as the country's so-called spring labour offensive reached its annual climax, unions in the railway and telecommunications sectors threatened to walk off the job if their pay demands were not met.

The average pay increase of 5.9 percent reflected management offers to metalworkers in sectors such as motor vehicles, electrical appliances, steel and shipbuilding.

The local chapter of the International Metalworkers Federation is traditionally the trend-setter for other unions in Japan.

Seigo Yamada, secretary general of the Japan Trade Union Confederation (Rengo), expressed regret that the offer was less than the six percent wage increase sought by the confederation which groups most of the country's unions and includes about eight million workers.

But Mr. Yamada said, "The increase is insufficient but it is not totally unsatisfactory."

Etsuya Washio, secretary general of the Federation of Steel Workers Unions, also seemed to be satisfied with the offer. "There may be some bargaining in detail over 100 yen or so," he said. "But the level in general seems so so."

Japan Federation of Employers Associations chairman Eiji Suzuki said the offer was lower than sought because of economic uncertainties such as the yen's weakness, higher interest rates and rising oil prices.

FRANKFURT (APRIL 4) - The West German central Bundesbank has completed two repurchase arrangements signifying the net withdrawal of 2.5 billion Deutschemarks from the banking system at rates ranging from 7.75 percent to 8.15 percent, compared with an expiring range of 7.7 percent to 8.1 percent, the bank said on Wednesday.

The first repurchase of commercial paper was for 28 days and the second for 63 days. The amount involved was 29.6 billion marks compared with 32.1 billion marks under the arrangements coming to term.

For the 28-day operation, the bank received bids totalled 43.2 billion marks, and it accepted 19.8 billion at rates of between 7.75 percent and eight percent. Only 20 percent of the bids were accepted at the lowest rate.

For the 63-day operation, the banks bid for 16 billion marks of which the bank accepted 9.8 billion. All bids ranging from 7.85 percent to 8.15 percent were accepted.

The last repurchase arrangement was on March 20 when the bank injected liquidity for a month at rates ranging from 7.85 percent to 8.05 percent.

Tokyo (APRIL 4) - Japanese telecommunication satellite makers Wednesday reacted with shock and dismay to an accord on the opening of Japan's satellite market reached with Washington.

Under the accord signed on Tuesday, Japanese makers will not discriminate against foreign makers in commercial satellite purchases, opening wider the market to American competitors.

Toshiba Corp. executives said they had expected Japan to make some concessions but felt Tokyo's move to liberalise the market came ''too early.''

Nec corp officials meanwhile voiced disapproval of the U.S. demand for Japan to clearly differentiate between research satellites and commercial satellites.

The officials said it would be very difficult to separate the two aspects as research satellites represent a developmental stage of commercial satellites.

Industry sources said the market opening would have a huge impact because Japanese firms would be forced to compete with U.S. manufacturers before they have a time to narrow large gap in aerospace technology.

BERN (APRIL 4) - The Japanese group Aoki-Westin will not take control of the Bellevue Hotel, a spokesman for the Banque Nationale Suisse (BNS) said here on Wednesday.

The Japanese group is taking control of the Swissotel hotel group which has a management contract for the Bellevue, a prestigious hotel used by top people visiting Switzerland.

The BNS, which is the main shareholder in Swissotel, had decided to give its shares to the Swiss state by 1994. The spokesman said that on December 31 1990 it would withdraw the management contract whereby the Bellevue forms part of the Swissotel group, and the Bellevue management would remain in place.

Swissotel, comprising 17 luxury hotels throughout the world, was recently sold by the Swissair airline company to Aoki-Westin which has property interests and owns 76 high-quality hotels worldwide.

AMMAN (APRIL 4) - The Arab Potash Company (APC) is to sell 75 million dollars worth of potash to Southeast Asia, the Jordanian state-owned company said Wednesday.

Jordan signed contracts with China, India, Malaysia, South Korea, Taiwan during a recent tour of the region by an APC delegation headed by the company's director-general, Ali Nsour.

Potash exports totalled 1.25 million tons in 1989 at a value of 127 million dollars, and the company aims to export 1.35 million tons this year for between 135 million and 140 million dollars.

Apart from Southeast Asia, the APC also exports to Western Europe, Africa and North and South America.

The company was founded in 1956 and has a monopoly on the extraction and commercial use of potash, one of Jordan's main sources of income alongside phosphates and cement.

BEIJING (APRIL 4) - China's parliament amended a 10-year-old law on Sino-foreign joint ventures on Wednesday, giving such enterprises legal protection from nationalization for the first time, the New China News Agency reported.

"The state shall not nationalize or requisition any equity joint venture," reads a key paragraph added to the law on the closing day of this year's National People's Congress (parliament).

Other changes end a 30-year limit on the life of each joint venture, and for the first time allow a foreigner to be chairman of a joint venture's board of directors.

Foreign executives have said the changes fail to address other serious problems in doing business in China, such as balancing foreign-exchange shortfalls.

Some 22,000 joint ventures have been established since 1979, involving 30 billion dollars of foreign investment, according to Chinese figures.

BONN (APRIL 4) - Eastern countries that want to make their currencies convertible will have to decontrol prices, Bundesbank senior official Hans Tietmeyer said here on Wednesday.

He was speaking at a meeting on monetary aspects of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Mr. Tietmeyer, who is also a personal advisor to Chancellor Helmut Kohl in connection with inter-German monetary and economic union, also said that Eastern countries will find themselves "inevitably" forced to make price adjustments, and eventually to free prices, if they want convertible currencies.

He said convertibility is not "a partial aspect of economic reforms" now going on in some Eastern countries, but rather is "their central element".

In addition to free prices, convertibility also requires dropping government foreign trade monopolies and granting business autonomous decision-making powers, he added.

SYDNEY (APRIL 4) - Australia's new Labor government fulfilled on Wednesday its election promise to reduce interest rates, but ruled out further cuts in coming months.

The Reserve Bank dropped its cash rate for overnight borrowing by more than one percent and four major banks quickly dropped home loan rates, two of them lowering business rates as well.

Canberra's tight monetary policies, aimed at narrowing the wide current account deficit and slowing growth in foreign debt, were cited as a key factor in the large swing away from Labor in last month's general elections.

Labor had promised to cut rates by one percent within a month of the election. But Treasurer Paul Keating and the Reserve Bank said the third easing in monetary policy this year could be the last for a few months.

The Reserve, or central, bank said it would closely monitor the months ahead, but "during that period the bank does not foresee further adjustments to monetary policy."

News that interest rates would stay up boosted the Australian dollar half a U.S. cent Wednesday and it closed at 76.65 U.S.

The Reserve Bank triggered a round of interest rate cuts by announcing it was cutting cash rates to between 15 and 15.5 percent.

Cash rates, which influence other interest rates, averaged a little under 16.5 percent in recent weeks, the central bank said.

The National Australia Bank Ltd. swiftly said its home loan rate would fall from 17 to 16.5 percent on May 1.

The ANZ Banking Group Ltd. said it would reduce its home loan rate 0.5 per cent to 16.5 percent, from April 23. It will also chop the prime rate charged its best corporate customers from 19.75 to 18.75 percent next Monday.

The Commonwealth Bank announced it would cut its floating home loan rate from 17 to 16.25 percent from April 20.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 4) - Israeli intellectuals Wednesday accused the country's army, police and intelligence services of making systematic use of torture to extract confessions from detainees, particularly Palestinians.

"Its the routine today to deprive suspects of sleep and food for days on end," attorney Lea Zemel told a press conference here organised by the nine-month old Public Committee against torture in Israel.

"It's the routine," Ms. Zemel continued, "to keep them tied up in the most uncomfortable positions, and to beat them on sensitive parts of the body, particularly the genitals."

Jurists, teachers, doctors and aid workers in the committee presented several cases of Palestinians and Israelis who had made complete confessions under torture before being recognized as innocent in court.

Stanley Cohen, criminology professor at the Hebrew University here, said that with the Palestinian uprising in the occupied territories about to enter its 28th month, allegations of torture had become commonplace.

"Any humanitarian group or any lawyer working with Palestinian clients hears torture stories all the time," he said. "This distressing situation requires the opening of an independent judicial investigation."

Psychiatrist Yehoyakim Marton condemned what he said was the involvement of Israeli doctors in brutal interrogations and called for medical associations to refuse any part in such practices.

The committee members said a loophole in Israeli law allowed authorities to apply "moderate pressure to save human lives."

This regulation has been abused by the army, the police and the Shin Bet domestic intelligence agency to commit increasing irregularities over the past two years without being punished, they said.

Ismael El Rul, a 22-year old Palestinian, told the press conference he had been arrested by Shin Bet in January 1989 on charges of having killed an Arab suspected of collaborating with Israeli authorities.

He said he was deprived of food and sleep, beaten with clubs on the bottom of the feet and nearly suffocated underwater before admitting the murder and naming five people and his two brothers as accomplices.

Mr. El Rul even took part in a filmed re-enactment of the murder in which he stuck an axe into the collaborator's forehead and stabbed him in the back.

"At the start, I told the Shin Bet interrogators that I had an alibi but they beat me without listening," he said. "At the end, I was ready to confess anything so that the pain would stop."

Mr. El Rul was released in February this year, after another suspect admitted his guilt in the killing.

Israelis have also suffered at the hands of the security forces, according to 25-year old Ami Ashur, who was arrested by military police in 1986 on charges of having "given documents to the enemy and organised drug smuggling."

He also was deprived of food and sleep and beaten during his four-and-a-half-month interrogation, as well as having his feet and hands tied together behind his back, the Israeli youth told the press conference.

After first refusing to confess, he finally signed "written confessions" that resulted in a military court handing him a four-year prison term.

His conviction was reversed by a civilian court after an appeal, and he served only 25 months. Since his release, he has been unable to find work, has sought treatment in a psychiatric clinic and made two suicide attempts.

PARIS (APRIL 4)- French government-owned aluminum group Pechiney wants to sell off the bulk of the capital of Credit Chimique bank, which it owns 100 percent, a Pechiney source said here on Wednesday.

He said the group "is looking for a majority partner (in the bank), either an institutional or financial investor or an insurance company".

Finance Ministry sources said there was no opposition to the plan, but the problem was choosing a partner. Sources in the entourage of Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy said he would "closely watch" Pechiney's choice of a candidate.

Credit Chimique broke even last year, after previous losses, with a positive operating result of 14 million francs (2.6 million dollars), after minus 35 million francs in 1987 and minus two million in 1988. The bank's net result was put at 7.9 million francs, against a loss of 58 million the year before.

It has focused more recently on financial engineering (in the banking, property and financial sectors), high value-added operations, and an "upscale clientele". The bank has reported that "Financial 1990 looks more favorable, and should confirm the recovery of the bank's business".

LONDON (APRIL 4) - Princess Helen of Romania set off on Wednesday for Romania, a land she has never seen, at the head of a British relief convoy.

Princess Helen, who was born after her father King Michael went into exile in 1947, is married to Englishman Robin Medforth-Mills, a Durham University Fellow. The couple are helping to deliver seven lorry loads of clothing, medical supplies, food, and toys, raised from a relief appeal by the Lord Mayor of Newcastle upon Tyne, Terry Cooney.

Princess Helen said she was hoping for a warm reception like that of her sisters, Princesses Margarita and Sophie who have visited Romania twice since the fall in December of the Ceausescu regime.

Her father King Michael and Queen Anne are also returning with a party to Romania for ten days from April 12 to celebrate Easter. King Michael currently lives near Geneva in Switzerland.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (APRIL 4) - Amidst a wider political crisis, a lone insubordinate soldier has kept Haiti's Port-au-Prince airport closed to international traffic for three days in a row.

The soldier, with an Uzi sub-machine-gun and a few grenades, captured an empty Boeing 727 aircraft belonging to American Airlines as retaliation for a decision by the soldier's superior to transfer him from a security position at the airport to another post.

The young soldier, Pierre Michel, was still holding onlookers at bay Wednesday by shooting in the air, apparently damaging the aircraft, which had been scheduled to take passengers to New York.

There was speculation in Port-au-Prince that commandoes from the United States' Guantanamo base in neighboring Cuba may arrive to storm the plane, but there has been no confirmation of this. Guantanamo is some 320 kilometers from the northwest coast of Haiti.

Central authority in Haiti is lacking because of a stand-off between a de-facto government headed by a Haitian lawyer, Mrs. Herta Pascal Trouillot, and a council of 12 individuals who forced the departure in March of the last president, General Prosper Avril.

The council of 12 is conducting a vendetta against another Haitian political faction known as the Duvalierista. Houses and businesses belonging to reputed Duvalierista figures have been ransacked by thugs and several people have been burned alive.

With the support of Mrs Trouillot, the army has shot several people in a bid to stop the violence.

HANOI (APRIL 4) - A record winter-spring rice harvest is expected in the southern Mekong Delta thanks in part to increasing privatization of farmland, the Vietnamese Communist Party newspaper Nhan Dan said Wednesday.

It said the area under cultivation in the delta had increased by 72,000 hectares (177,840 acres) to more than 755,500 hectares (1,866,085 acres) this season, while the introduction of new rice varieties saw yields increase to over 6,000 kilograms (13,200 pounds) per hectare (2.47 acres) in one area.

Total rice harvests in 1989 reached a record 18.02 million tons, allowing exports of 1.3 million tons, the first in a decade.

The paper noted that this was "the first season involving commercial production," with a growing part of the agricultural sector being privatized in a bid to attract investment.

STRASBOURG, France (APRIL 4) - Colombian President Virgilio Barco appealed for easier access for Colombian goods to European markets at the start of a European tour here Wednesday but met with protests over alleged human rights abuses in his country.

In an address to the European Parliament, Mr. Barco asked the EEC to reduce customs duties on coffee, one of his country's main exports and badly hit by the failure to renew an international agreement on the beverage.

Mr. Barco, who had earlier distributed packets of Colombian coffee to Euro-MPs, also asked the Community to lift tariffs on flowers and quotas on the number of bananas exported to the 12 EEC nations.

Colombia and the Community "shared" what he called "the same culture which it wants to save" from drug traffickers.

However, early in the speech, ecologist MPs held up signs listing victims of Colombian Army "assassinations".

And the president of parliament, Spain's Enrique Baron Crespo, spoke of "concern in the European Parliament over the many instances of political violence which have caused deaths in Colombia".

Mr. Barco admitted "certain groups have managed to contaminate some elements of the state forces", but said "the government had separated itself from suspect officials", or that they were at least under investigation.

He praised the move to scrap EEC trade barriers by 1993 and the democratic revivals sweeping the Eastern bloc, all of which were creating a "new world".

But Mr. Barco warned "one cannot create a fortress protected from under-development and organized crime".

The Colombian president left later for Paris, where he was to hold talks with French President Francois Mitterrand and Prime Minister Michel Rocard.

Strasbourg Mayor Catherine Trautmann earlier presented Mr. Barco and his wife Carolina with a medal of the city and a copy of a report on drugs enforcement which she wrote for the government as head of MILT, the Inter-ministerial Mission Against Drug Addiction.

From Paris, Mr. Barco is to travel to Brussels for talks with Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens and Jacques Delors, president of the European Commission.

He is to wind up his 10-day European tour in England.

HANOI (APRIL 4) - Soviet-Vietnamese oil company Vietsopetro has extracted three million tons of oil from the White Tiger field off the southern Vietnamese coast, the official Nhan Dan daily reported.

"On March 29, Vietsopetro extracted its three millionth ton of crude" from the oil field which was first exploited in 1986, the communist party newspaper said.

"With production of 1.51 million tons in 1989, Vietsopetro has become one of the biggest contributors to the state budget," it said. "The enterprise will soon have its financial autonomy."

Nhan Dan recently said the firm expected oil production of 2.5 million tons this year.

Vietsopetro is the only one of five oil companies in Vietnam which currently has fields in production. The other companies operating in Vietnamese waters are Petrofina-Shell, a Belgian, British and Dutch consortium; the French firm Total; British Petroleum; and French-British venture CEPT-Enterprise Oil.

Most of Vietnam's crude oil is exported, largely to Japan, and a small refinery in Ho Chi Minh City processes the rest.

In anticipation of increased oil production, two petrochemical complexes are planned in southern Vietnam with a total capacity of three million tons a year.

Vietnam now imports nearly three million tons of refined petroleum products a year, nearly 80 percent of it from the Soviet Union.

TOKYO (APRIL 4) - Labor-management negotiations continued late Wednesday to avert a 24-hour railway strike due to start early Thursday morning, labor sources said.

Trade unionists of 11 railway companies in Tokyo and other major Japanese cities started talks with management Wednesday morning for a wage hike of at least 9.6 percent.

Some 21.6 million passengers will be affected if the planned 24-hour strike goes ahead, the Transport Ministry said.

No compromise had been reached by 11:00 p.m. (1400 GMT) Wednesday in working-level negotiations, the sources said.

The presidents of the 11 railway firms were to meet later to coordinate a wage hike to be offered to the labor side, management sources said, adding that last-ditch efforts to avert the strike might continue into Thursday.

Details of the labor-management negotiations were not immediately available.

JOHANNESBURG (APRIL 4) - The death toll from faction fighting in South Africa's Natal Province rose to an estimated 100 since fresh clashes broke out last week, reports here said on Wednesday, following the discovery of nine more bodies.

Troops have been moved into the black areas surrounding the provincial capital of Pietermaritzburg, but the atmosphere in the townships remained tense as fighting flared again and opposing parties accused each other of fuelling the violence.

The civil war in the province between supporters of Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Inkatha movement and supporters of the African National Congress (Anc) has claimed the lives of nearly 3,000 people in three years.

It started as an ideological power struggle between Inkatha and Anc-affiliated bodies but has since degenerated into a cycle of revenge attacks.

Anc deputy President Nelson Mandela said in Johannesburg that one of the factors complicating the situation was the attitude of the police ''because they see the differences in Natal as a means of conducting a vendetta against what they consider to be progressive organizations whose policies are a threat to the white minority''.

Mandela, who spent two days in Natal this week assessing the situation, said the Anc did not consider the police a proper agency to bring about peace.

''One of the frequent complaints raised by the people is the involvement of the police in the violence. People in the area would even prefer the army to be used for stopping violence but certainly not the police.''

Mandela said there would never be a satisfactory resolution of the conflict as long as apartheid remained in place.

Inkatha leader Buthelezi called on Mandela Wednesday to ''rise above politicking about life and death''. According to Radio South Africa he was reacting to statements by Mandela about the cancellation of a joint meeting that was to be held Monday by Inkatha and the Anc.

Buthelezi was quoted as saying he thought Mandela was caught between warring factions within the Anc. He said: ''When people are dying and being maimed, black leaders should have the courage to go to the troublespot and to mediate between the warring factions.''

Mandela is scheduled to hold an urgent meeting with State President Frederik de Klerk in Cape Town Thursday on the future of ''preliminary'' peace talks between the government and the Anc.

Denying a split in the Anc, he said there had been a unanimous decision by the Anc leadership to cancel a ''talks about talks'' meeting with the government which had been scheduled for April 11.

He cited the police shooting of 13 black demonstrators in Sebokeng, south of Johannesburg, which had been given as the reason for the Anc's withdrawing from the talks.

BEIRUT (APRIL 4) - Lebanese Forces (LF) militia chief Samir Geagea Wednesday called on Syrian-backed President Elias Hrawi to take control of the country's battle-torn Christian region.

Mr. Geagea, locked in a two-month old battle with the army of rival Christian leader General Michel Aoun, said Mr. Hrawi, based in Syrian-controlled west Beirut, should order his troops to "take control of army barracks" in Christian areas.

"This is the only way to resolve the military aspect of the (inter-Christian) conflict," Mr. Geagea said on pro-LF Voice of Lebanon radio.

"The only way to finish with the demarcation lines and the fighting is that the legal forces, represented by President Elias Hrawi, take control" of the Christian region, he added.

At least 911 people have been killed and 2,509 wounded since the fighting between the LF and Gen. Aoun's army began January 31 in Christian east Beirut and areas to the north and east.

HELSINKI (APRIL 4) - Finland has granted transit visas to some 100 Soviet Jews from in and around Leningrad planning to go to Israel, in spite of protests by the Palestinians, an official source said here Wednesday.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman confirmed that the Finnish consulate in Leningrad had granted the transit visas to the Jews, who already had visas for Israel.

A spokesman of the Israeli Embassy said they have been informed about the Finnish decision, but had no information on when the Jews concerned will arrive in Finland.

According to informed sources, the Jews will be arriving by train soon and travel on immediatedly to Israel.

Israel says half a million Soviet Jews have asked for emigration visas. In and around Leningrad and in Estonia there live over 100,000 Jews, and the 100 who will be travelling by way of Finland are thought to be an advance group.

Informed sources said tens or hundreds of Soviet Jews have been travelling to Israel this year from Finland after having reached this country on a tourist visa to Finland.

But this is the first time that transit visas have been granted to a large group of Jews.

Meanwhile, the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) said it had sent Finland "an urgent and important" message about the transit. The chief of the PLO office in Finland, Zuheir Al-Wazir, said he handed the message to the Foreign Ministry.

The content of the message was not disclosed, but Mr. Al-Wazir said he had asked for an urgent meeting with Foreign Minister Pertti Paasio and Interior Minister Jarmo Rantanen.

He described the mass emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel as an "unfriendly and provocative action against a Palestine nation suffering from occupation".

Last week Mr. Paasio met in Helsinki withe Simcha Dinitiz, the leader of the World Zionist Organization, who came to Finland for talks about the emigration of Soviet Jews.

The Finnish Foreign Ministry has emphasized that Finland strongly condemns any settlement of Soviet Jews in the Israeli-occupied territories of West Bank and Gaza.

But Finland also supports the right of the people to emigrate if the countries concerned agree to such a movement of people.

BEIRUT (APRIL 4) - The Israeli airforce sent helicopters Wednesday afternoon to bomb Palestinian positions in a refugee camp in southern Lebanon, wounding seven people, police said here.

They added that three helicopter gunships rocketed a base of the Palestinian Communist Party in Rashidiyeh refugee camp near the port of Tyre, 76 kilometers south of Beirut.

According to sources in the camp, the two-story Palestinian base was completely destroyed. The raiding choppers managed to escape anti-aircraft fire from batteries in Tyre and the camp.

Among the victims who were trasported to hospitals in Tyre and Sidon, 30 kilometers to the north, were a three-year-old child and a 70-year-old man.

It was the eighth Israeli air raid on Lebanon this year. On March 11, two people were killed and 11 wounded in an Israeli air strike on Palestinian rebel positions in northern Lebanon.

LONDON (APRIL 4) - Copper prices moved a touch lower on the London Metal Exchange (LME) here Wednesday, following unconfirmed reports that Southern Peru Copper workers, whose strike has entered its fourth week, have been offered a new pay formula.

Three-months copper was quoted on the kerb at 1,602 pounds per ton against 1,591 on the ring and 1,612 on Tuesday. Traders said the pound's strength on foreign exchange markets also contributed to losses for the sterling-quoted metal.

Dollar-quoted zinc was supported by currency factors, and by reports that the metal, like copper, is suffering production problems in Peru.

Three-months zinc was quoted at 1,610 dollars per ton on the kerb against 1,615 on the ring and 1,605 on Tuesday.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 4) - A syrian airliner with 55 persons on board made an emergency landing on a carpet of foam at East Berlin's Schoenefeld Airport Wednesday.

Emergency services were called out after the plane's crew radioed on a flight from Damascus that they were unable to lower the nose wheel and feared they would have to make a partial belly landing.

The Soviet-built Tupolev 154 circled Berlin and dumped its remaining fuel while fire-fighting foam was spread on the runway. At the last minute the crew managed to unjam the nose wheel and the Tu-154 landed and rolled safely to a halt, air traffic control said.

MONTELIMAR, Nicaragua (APRIL 4) EFE - Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has urged his Central American colleagues to combat arms stockpiling and has called on the superpowers to use their defense budgets to finance social projects.

Speaking Tuesday at the end of a Central American presidential summit in the Pacific coastal resort of Montelimar, Ortega asked his regional counterparts to "fix limits on the introduction of arms so foreign (troop) presence can disappear in the region and Central America can become a neutral and peaceful area".

"We would like all arms to be destroyed once and for all," said Ortega, adding nations should "throw weapons into the sea and all those resources spent on arms should be invested in health, housing and education programs".

The Sandinista leader is to hand over power April 25 to his democratically-elected successor Violeta Chamorro.

At the Montelimar meeecurity meeting in Costa Rica.

Civil wars in Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala have claimed more than 200,000 lives over the past thirty years, while regional economies have been battered by the effects of the fighting.

During his speech Ortega called on the superpowers to set an example to other nations and instead of "nourishing the prospects of war which can bring no hope they should invest those millonaire sums in projects favoring the people".

SAO PAULO (APRIL 4) EFE - Brazilian ecologists are working on a plan to plant 10 million trees on 20.1 million hectares of land suffering from erosion, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

The plan is intended to preserve already existing forests and recover state-owned land stripped by the lumber industry, at an estimated cost of dlrs 20 billion over 30 years, according to Saly "Gazeta Mercantil".

Thirteen leading Brazilian forestry engineers and ecologists have been working on the plan for five months, including two of President Fernando Collor de Mello's advisors, Jose Goldemberg and Werner Zulaf.

Goldemberg said the reforestation program would help combat the "greenhouse effect", the increase of carbon monoxide in the atmosphere leading to rising temperatures worldwide, by providing more trees to absorb the gas.

However, Goldemburg said to resolve the greenhouse problem large industries would have to reform their use of energy which he aknowledged was unlikely.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Almanac:

Today is Saturday, April 14th, the 104th day of 1990 with 261 to follow.

The moon is waning, moving toward its last quarter.

The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries. They include Dutch physicist Christian Huygens, founder of the wave theory of light, in 1629... congressional leader Justin Morrill of Vermont in 1810... English historian Arnold Toynbee in 1889... British actor Sir John Gielgud in 1904... Haitian dictator Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier in 1907... actor Rod Steiger in 1925 (age 65)... country singer Loretta Lynn in 1935 (age 55)... former New York City police detective Frank Serpico in 1936 (age 54)... and actress Julie Christie and Cincinnati Reds player-manager Pete Rose in 1941 (age 49).

On this date in history:

In 1861, the flag of the Confederacy was raised over Fort Sumter, South Carolina, as Union troops there surrendered in the early days of the Civil War.

In 1865, John Wilkes Booth shot President Abraham Lincoln in a box at Ford's Theater in Washington D-C. Lincoln died the next morning.

In 1983, President Reagan denied he was trying to overthrow the leftist Nicaraguan government.

In 1986, U-S warplanes struck Libya in the biggest U-S air strike since the Vietnam War. Libya claimed 40 of its people were killed.

A thought for the day: President Abraham Lincoln once said that "the ballot is stronger than the bullet."

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Dreyfus Corporation (NYSE: DRY) announced today the introduction of Peoples Index Fund, a no-load fund designed to enable individual investors to closely match the performance of the stock market.

Peoples Index Fund is keyed to the Standard & Poor's 500 Composite Stock Price Index. It will be managed by Wells Fargo Nikko Investment Advisors, the largest manager of index funds in the U.S., with more than $75 billion of indexed assets under current management. Dreyfus will serve as the fund's administrator.

Minimum investment in Peoples Index Fund is $2,500 or $750 for IRA and Keogh plans. There is no sales charge but, to discourage short term trading and to offset operating expenses, there is a transaction fee at redemption of 1 percent which is paid to the fund. Continuation of this charge upon future redemptions will be subject to review.

Dreyfus and Wells Fargo have agreed to absorb all remaining fund expenses until the funds's asset level reaches $100 million or Dec. 31, 1990, at which time the policy will be reviewed.

"Index funds were once for the few, predominantly institutions, Peoples Index Fund is now for the many," said Howard Stein, Dreyfus chairman and CEO. "This fund should prove attractive to investors who wish to invest in the market without the burden of deciding on specific stocks or market sectors."

Dreyfus noted that for the 10-year period ended Dec. 31, 1989, the total return for the S&P 500 was 403.88 percent, with an average annual total return of 17.55 percent.

Investors who are interested in Peoples Index Fund should obtain a prospectus containing more information and should read it carefully before they invest.

PEABODY, MA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Webster Industries, a leading manufacturer of plastic trash bags, is introducing Renew, the first branded trash bag made with 80-90 percent recycled plastic content -- by far the highest recycled content of any branded trash bag currently on the market.

Renew's emphasis on recycling is one example of how Webster offers options to environmentally conscious consumers.

"Webster believes in an integrated approach to waste management, incorporating recycling, source reduction and degradable technology. Renew combines all three features in one product, with a strong emphasis on recycling," said Rajeev Bal, president, Webster Industries. "For example, a 60-count package of 30-gallon Renew trash bags contains at least 3.3 pounds of recycled plastic that otherwise would have been landfilled or incinerated."

Renew also contains a photodegradable additive that will help the bag decompose if it is misused and littered.

Renew will be available in May in mass merchandiser outlets, hardware/home centers, drug stores and variety outlets. Future plans call for distribution in grocery stores as well. Sizes range from 13-gallon tall kitchen to 33-gallon trash and yard bags. Renew will be priced significantly lower than other leading national brands.

Webster Industries is one of the nation's largest plastics recyclers, reclaiming over 50 million pounds of plastic scrap each year. The company's other branded trash bags, Good Sense and Handi-Bags, are made with a minimum of 50 percent recycled plastic.

Webster has been a pioneer in pro-environment technologies for over two decades. The company has been on the leading edge of degradable technology since introducing Good Sense photodegradable trash bags in 1978. When waste management priorities shifted from the litter problem, for which photodegradable bags had been developed, to America's rapidly diminishing landfills, Webster became the first major manufacturer to produce a biodegradable bag. Introduced in 1989, Good Sense Biodegradable bags contain a proprietary additive that enables the bag to degrade even in anaerobic landfills.

Renew and Webster's other trash bags are made with the latest in source reduction technology.

Headquarterd in Peabody, Mass., Webster is a leading national manufacturer of disposable consumer plastic products.

CLEVELAND (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - First National Supermarkets, Inc. is pleased to announce the opening of a new 8 million dollar Perishable Distribution Center in Maple Heights, Ohio. The 92,000 square foot facility is adjacent to the regular distribution center and will serve 47 Finast, Pick-N-Pay and Edwards supermarkets in Northeastern Ohio.

Noted William C. Holsworth, president of the Ohio Division of First National Supermarkets, "We've clearly outgrown our former facility. The new Produce Distribution Center will enable us to continue managing the high level of growth in Northeastern Ohio we are committed to. The technology and the equipment in this facility will allow us to support our stores and serve our customers in a way which has not been possible before. This facility will enable us to carry the kind of quality products that are unsurpassed in Ohio. Increasing our perishable sales is a significant part of our business strategy for the 90s."

In the new perishable facility, state-of-the-art refrigeration and air handling systems provide the ideal environment for produce, flowers and plants. The air is cooled by forcing it through a waterfall of cold water to maintain 95 percent humidity throughout the facility. Four separate temperature zones further ensure that perishable products reach stores in peak condition.

In further remarks, Holsworth noted that two new 70,000 square foot superstores were opened in 1989 with two additional superstores scheduled for 1990 in Elyria and Cleveland. Numerous store remodels have taken place in both years.

First National Supermarkets operates 30 Finast, 16 Pick-N-Pay and one Edwards supermarket in Northeastern Ohio. The Perishable Distribution Center is located at 17000 Rockside Rd., Maple Hts., Ohio.

FREMONT, CA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Logitech is now shipping ScanMan Model 32, a hand-held scanner for the Macintosh that features new hardware powerful editing software and an enhanced user interface. Featured at Logitech's booth (56, Moscone Center) at MacWorld Exposition in San Francisco, and available through Logitech's dealer channel, the product carries a suggested retail price of $499. The new ScanMan software, including the 32 gray scale editing feature, will be mailed free to registered users of the original ScanMan for the Macintosh.

"With the Scanman Model 32 product, hand-held scanning has come of age," says Logitech president, Pierluigi Zappacosta. "Although we refer to this scanner as an upgrade, it is really a new product -- a desktop tool that brings extraordinary graphics power to the ordinary user through a feature set usually found only in high-end flat-bed models."

In addition to 32 gray-scale capability achieved through software, ScanMan offers advanced halftoning for use with a black and white monitor and the ImageWriter(R) or other non-PostScript(R) printers. Completely redesigned image editing software features real-time brightness and contrast controls a tear-off tool palette and image manipulation capabilities, including resize, rotate, flip and invert. Accessible as a stand-alone application or desk accessory, the editing software enables users to save in all popular file formats, in standard or custom resolutions for printer optimization and use with HyperCard.

The ScanMan Model 32 hardware offers adjustable scanning resolution (from 100 to 400 dpi true hardware resolution), photo and line art settings, and initial brightness control. A scanning speed indicator light warns the user of potential data loss due to excessive scanning speed. Logitech's new ergonomic case design includes a straight-edge for scanning control, dual rollers for added stability, and a larger viewing window.

Logitech designs, manufactures and markets desktop tools -- a line of hardware and software products that enhance individual productivity and creativity. With manufacturing facilities in Fremont, Calif.; Cork, Ireland; and Hsinchu, Taiwan; and sales offices in major U.S. and European cities, the company is an international market leader in input technology.

ASHLAND, KY (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Ashland Oil Inc. (NYSE: ASH) and Deutsche Babcock Aktiengesellschaft of Oberhausen, Federal Republic of Germany, announced today that they had signed a letter of intent for the sale of a portion of the shares of Ashland's Riley Consolidated engineering unit to Deutsche Babcock.

Under the terms of the letter of intent, Deutsche Babcock will acquire 20 percent of Riley Consolidated on or before June 30, 1990. On or before Sept. 25, 1991, Deutsche Babcock will have the obligation to acquire the remaining 80 percent from Riley Consolidated if certain operating results are achieved. If such results are not achieved, under certain circumstances, Ashland would be required to repurchase the initial 20 percent at a nominal price. The letter of intent also contemplates that Riley Consolidated will obtain boiler technology from Deutsche Babcock. Closing of the transaction is subject to execution of a definitive agreement and obtaining all required governmental approvals.

The value of the transaction was not disclosed. Ashland's earnings in fiscal 1990 will not be affected by the transaction as the transaction results will be deferred until September 1991.

Riley Consolidated is a designer, manufacturer, constructor, and service supplier of steam generating and fuel burning equipment with headquarters in Worcester, Mass.

H. Kerner Smith, president and chief executive officer of Riley Consolidated, in commenting on the transaction said, "Ashland and Deutsche Babcock believe merging Riley Consolidated's 75 years of resources, facilities and U.S. experience as a major boiler equipment, construction, and service supplier, along with Deutsche Babcock's worldwide power engineering and environmental control state-of-the art technology, is a solid strategic fit.

Deutsche Babcock presently participates in the U.S. market with its fluid bed system technology, refuse incineration plants, pollution control technology, air-cooled heat exchangers and cooling towers, and heavy-duty fans and ash handling equipment for power plants.

Ashland Oil Inc. is engaged in petroleum refining, transportation and marketing; retail gasoline marketing; motor oil marketing; chemicals; coal; highway construction; and oil and gas exploration and production.

PHILADELPHIA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) said today that Unit No. 2 at its Limerick Generating Station in Montgomery County has returned to service.

PE said the unit, which was taken off line on March 27 to repair a leaking steam condenser tube in the non-nuclear portion of the plant, was restarted early Tuesday morning, April 3, and reconnected to the regional power grid at 6:43 p.m. Tuesday.

The company said that during the outage the leak was repaired, all other tubes in the condenser were inspected and modifications were made to prevent a similar leak in the future.

Prior to being taken off line last week, Unit 2, which was started for the first time in August 1989, had been in continuous operation since Dec. 24, 1989, a run of 93 days.

Limerick Unit 1, which is operating at full power, has been in continuous operation for more than 320 days.

The two Limerick units together generate 2100 megawatts of electricity, and are expected to produce one-third of PE's electrical generation in 1990.

HARRISBURG, PA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The operator of a former Westmoreland County vehicle parts and repair business will pay nearly $12,000 in restitution, penalties and costs under a court agreement with Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr.'s Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The agreement settles a suit filed in Westmoreland County Common Pleas Court last September by the bureau's Pittsburgh regional office against Glen E. Mowry Jr. and his former business, Assured Auto Parts, Herminie-Lowber Road, Irwin RD 2.

The suit alleged, among other things, that Mowry sold defective parts, performed repairs in an unskilled manner and refused to refund deposits on work that he never completed.

"Under terms of the agreement, Mowry forfeits his right to do business in Pennsylvania as a seller and installer of used and rebuilt vehicle parts and as a seller of automotive repair services," Preate said today.

"Mowry is required to pay a total of $5,849 in restitution to 18 consumers a $5,000 civil penalty and $1,050 in investigation and court costs."

The agreement establishes a payment schedule for Mowry to repay the restitution.

Preate said the agreement was negotiated by Deputy Attorney General Caren L. Mariani, attorney-in-charge of the bureau's Pittsburgh office. The agreement was filed Tuesday (April 3) in Westmoreland County Court.

Mariani said the bureau's investigation was prompted by consumer complaints.

DORIS, available for the IBM AS/400, has a companion product, "PC/DORIS," available for the IBM PC, PS/2 and compatibles.

Both products are targeted for the growing image technology market, expected to reach three billion dollars in the next two years and growing at 40 to 70 percent per year.

DORIS uses a low cost IBM scanner to record clear, detailed images, which are then indexed and filed on available disk storage. Users can then recall, view, transmit, re-file, and even print the unaltered document.

"DORIS and PC/DORIS will make using microfilm and microfiche a thing of the past," says Kenneth M. Fischer, USSI president. "DORIS and PC/DORIS will be distributed directly and through USSI authorized resellers," Fischer said.

USSI is an authorized IBM Industry Application Specialist and Business Partner. The 11-year-old company develops computer software and provides related services to clients -- primarily insurance companies -- nationally and in foreign countries.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corp.'s 'AA' rated collateral trust bonds, series A, E-2, F, G, I, and J, are placed on FitchAlert with negative implications. The action follows a voluntary bankruptcy filing Friday by Colorado-Ute Electric Association for reorganization under Chapter 11. CFC has about $3.3 billion in total debt outstanding, of which approximately $337 million is rated by Fitch.

The filing could place added financial pressure on CFC's margins and cash flow. Fitch's concern lies in the timeliness of a workout for Ute and the ability of CFC to sustain cash flow to cover its own obligations while funding the obligations of Ute, if necessary. CFC's position could worsen if existing problems with Deseret Generation and Transmission Cooperative and other borrowers increase. However, a strong positive factor is that CFC is fully secured on a first lien basis for all of Ute's assets and future revenues.

CFC's current exposure of $404 million to Ute represents 5.57 percent of total loans and guarantees outstanding as of Nov. 31, 1989, and 28.2 percent of total capital funds, which includes net margins, equity, and members' subordinate certificates. Of the $404 million, $102 million represents PCRB guarantees. CFC has the ability to borrow funds from the market should it need to honor its guarantees to make semi-annual payments to bondholders. The bonds are not subject to acceleration or cross-default. CFC's ultimate exposure under the guarantees would account for approximately $6 million annually in interest costs, which would hurt current margins. CFC is secured on a first lien basis with public bondholders for Craig Station Unit 3.

The bulk of the remaining exposure is in the form of direct loans made by CFC to Ute. As funds have already been advanced for the loans ($289 million), CFC's exposure is limited to its funding costs, which are approximately $27 million annually. Ute currently has sufficient cash flow to meet its debt service obligations in the next quarter only. Thereafter, because of adverse rate regulation, Ute would experience a shortfall of approximately $28-$30 million annually. If Ute stops paying interest to CFC and the bankruptcy court does not approve a plan allowing secured creditors to continue receiving interest payments, CFC would be obligated to fund the $27 million shortfall. CFC is fully secured on a first lien basis pari passu with the REA for all of Ute's assets and future revenues with the exception of a $1.2 million unsecured loan. However, CFC is holding $682,000 in patronage capital dividends which partially offset that exposure.

KALAMAZOO, MI (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Department of Health in the United Kingdom has given Upjohn UK, Ltd., a subsidiary of The Upjohn Company (NYSE: UPJ), approval to market Regaine Topical Solution in the United Kingdom for women with androgenetic alopecia (hereditary hair thinning). Regaine, Upjohn's 2 percent solution of minoxidil, is the only product which has scientifically proved effectiveness in the treatment of hair loss; it is called Rogaine in the United States and Canada.

U.K. approval was based on data from clinical trials conducted in the United States and Europe from April through December 1988. In 11 medical centers in the U.S. and 10 sites in Europe, nearly 600 women with androgenetic alopecia were evaluated; the studies compared patients' response to topical minoxidil and to placebo.

Results showed that topical minoxidil was significantly more effective than placebo in the treatment of female hair loss. No serious or unexpected side effects attributed to the drug were reported during the study.

Upjohn's product is now available for the treatment of male pattern baldness in 63 countries worldwide. It is already available for use by women in more than 20 of those nations, including Brazil, Spain, Italy and Belgium. Upjohn submitted data from both the U.S. and the European trials to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in September 1989. The FDA is currently reviewing the data.

Hair loss in women as a result of androgenetic alopecia is similar to the condition that affects many men. In women, as in men, this type of hair loss is caused by a combination of three factors: age, heredity and the presence of the hormone testosterone. Many men with male pattern baldness are eventually left with only a horseshoe-shaped fringe of hair. In women however, hair loss is more likely to be seen as a generalized thinning over the top of the head.

The Upjohn Company is a worldwide, research-based provider of human health-care products and services, animal health products, agronomic and vegetable seeds and specialty chemicals.

Headquartered in Kalamazoo, the company has been dedicated to improving health and nutrition for more than a century.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD, NJ (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Enzon, Inc. (NASDAQ: ENZN) and Schering Corporation, a subsidiary of Schering-Plough Corporation (NYSE: SGP), today signed a letter of intent to enter into a full product development and license agreement to apply Enzon's proprietary drug delivery technology to an undisclosed drug developed and marketed by Schering.

Based on a completed research program, Enzon will manufacture and Schering will further develop, clinically test, and market this compound.

"We are pleased to expand our relationship with Schering and take the next step in the development of this product, which has enormous market potential," said Glenn M. Kazo, Enzon's vice president of corporate development. "With this collaboration, we continue our strategy of combining Enzon's drug delivery technology with important therapeutic compounds developed by leading pharmaceutical companies."

Under the proposed agreement, Schering will conduct human clinical trials, obtain regulatory approvals, and have worldwide exclusive marketing rights for this product. Enzon will receive a license fee and significant milestone payments throughout the product development program. Additionally, Enzon will have exclusive manufacturing rights, and receive escalating royalties on Schering's worldwide sales of this product.

Enzon is a leading biopharmaceutical company developing improved therapies for life-threatening diseases through the application of its proprietary technology, PEGNOLOGY(SM), to enhance the delivery of protein based drugs. In March 1990, Enzon received its first marketing approval from the Food and Drug Administration for ADAGEN(TM), a treatment for a form of Severe Combined Immunodeficiency Disease (SCID). Three other Enzon products are currently undergoing human clinical trials.

SOMERS, NY (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Pepsi-Cola Company launches the first summer of the 90's today in true Pepsi style by introducing dramatic, special package designs called "Cool Cans" for its flagship brand Pepsi. "Cool Cans" are a limited edition, collector's series of four compelling graphic designs created exclusively for Pepsi.

"Never before in the history of Pepsi-Cola, or the entire U.S. soft drink industry, has a company integrated such distinctive artistry into its flagship product's package while maintaining the integrity of its original trademark," said Michael D. Simpson, executive vice president of marketing and national sales at Pepsi-Cola Company. "Cooling off with a cold Pepsi this summer means consumers get the same great Pepsi in a very cool package."

"Cool Cans" are teamed with an exciting consumer sweepstakes featuring millions of dollars in prizes and the cool talent of Grammy Award-winning rap artist Young MC showcased in a special Pepsi television commercial.

The first of the Pepsi "Cool Cans" are now landing on store shelves

throughout the Pacific Northwest and will be rolled-out nationally by May 1. The debut edition, titled "Surfer," features a surfing action scene in a bold array of red, yellow and blue hues along with the famous Pepsi logo. The other three "Cool Cans" editions, "Pepsi Sunglasses," "Neon" and "Party" (in order of introduction), will be introduced on a staggered basis approximately every two weeks beginning in mid-May. More than 1.2 billion "Cool Cans" will be distributed by Pepsi before the campaign concludes.

"What's really cool is that Pepsi has given consumers and chroniclers of the American pop scene something new to document, and it proves you can successfully sustain the Pepsi image from generation to generation," said John K. Grace, executive vice president of Lippincott & Marguiles Inc., a leading New York-based consulting firm specializing in identity and image management. "Consumers think of Pepsi as a product strongly synonymous with contemporary images of fun and excitement, and these perceptions will enable the brand to successfully execute this bold and imaginative summertime identity."

In addition to the limited edition cans, the distinctive artwork will also be incorporated into colorful 12 and 24 multi-pack wrappers for Pepsi, and special point-of-purchase display items. "Cool Cans" will be available in supermarkets and convenience stores nationwide, as well as select Pepsi vending machines. A 32-ounce "Cool Cup" will also be simultaneously available at participating local restaurants.

"'Cool Cans' have a broad-reaching appeal with exciting, colorful graphics destined to make them a favorite among adolescents and teens," said Christopher D. Geist, Ph.D in American culture, and professor of popular culture at Bowling Green State University in Ohio. "'Cool Cans' also speak to the 'Baby Boomer' segment of the Pepsi Generation who may find visual shades of Peter Max apparent in the bold designs."

"Cool Cans/Cool Cash" is the sweepstakes component to the national promotion and features a printed number on the inside bottom of specially-marked cans that instantly alerts winners of prizes ranging form $25 to $20,000. More than four million dollars in "Cool Cans/Cool Cash" prize monies are available.

Grammy- and American Music Award-winning rap artist Young MC, who is currently featured in Pepsi radio spots, will bring his special rap talents to television advertising in a new Pepsi "Cool Cans" ad slated to debut on network television in May. Young MC's musical credits to- date include his smash hit "Bust a Move" and a 1989 collaboration with fellow rapper Tone-Loc on his chart-topping rendition of "Wild Thing."

PASADENA, CA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Countrywide Credit Industries Inc. (NYSE: CCR) today responded to the downgrading by Standard & Poor's of the commercial paper rating of the company's subsidiary, Countrywide Funding Corp.

Countrywide stated that its operations remain strong and that the liquidity provided by its inventory of mortgage loans, its mortgage loan servicing portfolio and other assets, coupled with a $560 million credit facility with six banks and other financing available to the company, is more than adequate to support the company's plans for continued growth.

The company also noted that it currently has no commercial paper outstanding and is funding any cash needs through its bank credit facility. Finally, Countrywide added that the parent's BBB- medium term note rating and its BB+ convertible subordinated debt rating were affirmed by Standard & Poor's.

The company previously reported a 21 percent gain in net earnings for its fiscal year ended Feb. 28, 1990. Unaudited net earnings for the year were $13,085,000, or $.74 per primary share and $.72 per fully diluted share. Net earnings for the prior year, before an extraordinary item, were $10,840,000, or $.63 per primary share and $.61 fully diluted.

Countrywide Credit Industries Inc. is engaged primarily in the mortgage lending business, originating, selling and servicing residential mortgage loans. Countrywide operates through a nationwide network of approximately 100 offices serving real estate brokers and homebuyers, as well as mortgage brokers.

Countrywide also operates through a correspondent loan program serving financial institutions in all 50 states and through a newly formed consumer division serving individual homebuyers and homeowners directly.

TROY, MI (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Sachs Automotive Corporation will break ground in May on a facility in Florence, Ky., to manufacture McPherson struts for the Taurus and Sable car lines of Ford Motor Company. Production is expected to begin in the fall of 1991 and the first deliveries are scheduled for the first quarter of 1992.

The new plant will incorporate leading-edge manufacturing and quality technology that has been a hallmark of Fichtel & Sachs in Europe for years. Once the plant is fully operational in the fall of 1993, it will employ more than 180 people.

"Putting up this plant is another important milestone for Sachs Automotive " Robert T. Chrysler, president, said. "It is our first strut manufacturing facility in the United States and a vital element in our strategic plan to become a leading, top-quality supplier to vehicle makers in North America.

"It builds on our recent investments here, including a state-of-the- art Automotive Technical Center in Troy and our acquisition last year of the Borg & Beck Clutch Division of Borg Warner.

"Secretary Gene Royalty of the Economic Development Cabinet for the Commonwealth of Kentucky and representatives of the Tri-County Economic Development Corporation of Northern Kentucky have been very helpful and supportive of our program," he added. "We believe our decision in choosing Kentucky best represents the economic and quality working environment necessary for our U.S. expansion."

The firm's parent company, Fichtel & Sachs AG, a West German corporation, has been a leading supplier of struts, shock absorbers, clutches, torque converters and other components to European vehicle manufacturers for more than 50 years.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Florida division, Jacksonville branch of Commercial Metals Co. (NYSE: CMC), is leading a trend for scrap dealers across the nation through the purchase of steel food and beverage cans and other post-consumer recyclables.

The division reports current collections of approximately 2.5 million post-consumer steel cans per month.

Cans are received from municipal recycling programs in St. Augustine, Gainesville and Jacksonville, as well as through direct purchase from consumers and recyclers. This dual service provides recycling opportunities for those who live in areas where no municipal recycling programs exist, and it has become so successful that the company is developing additional parking and loading space to serve consumers.

Ron Bradley, branch manager, speaks enthusiastically about this new program. "Our company operates nationwide, and we've been very successful in the traditional metals processing business. But recycling is becoming integrated into the American way of life. By collecting recyclables, such as steel food and beverage cans, we are offering a valuable public service while developing a viable new business opportunity."

The Jacksonville branch has been located in the city for approximately 30 years, serving as a metals processor for industrial applications. In 1989, with the upswing of municipal and voluntary recycling, the company initiated its recycling business to serve municipalities and consumers, as well as the U.S. Navy. Traditional scrap metal dealer application, still remain a strong factor of its business.

William Heenan, chairman of the Steel Can Recycling Institute, views programs such as these with admiration. "Here's a company that is conducting a highly successful business through its standard operations. But it's willingness to reach out and embrace the recycling needs of our country shows why it is successful. Our future depends on these operations to serve municipalities and the public by collecting, processing and marketing recyclables such as steel food and beverage cans."

The Commercial Metals Co., headquartered in Dallas, is a diversified leader in manufacturing, processing, fabrication, trading and distribution of steel, primary and secondary metals, and numerous raw materials.

The Steel Can Recycling Institute is an industry association with the mission of promoting and sustaining steel can recycling. It is the primary information and technical resource for legislators, municipalities, recyclers, businesses and other entities interested in steel can recycling.

MIDDLETOWN, PA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Three Mile Island Unit 1 has filed a request with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) for a change in the plant's operating license to recover the nearly six years spent constructing the facility in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

The NRC in recent years has granted 22 such license changes to nuclear power plants.

Federal regulations permit an operating license to be issued to a nuclear power plant for a 40 year period. The term of TMI-1's license began May 18 1968, the date the construction permit was issued, and it is to expire May 18, 2008.

The five-year, 11-month construction period would reduce the plant's operating time from the 40 years granted in the license, to just more than 34 years. GPU Nuclear is requesting a change to allow the plant to operate through April 19, 2014, for a full 40 years of operation.

CLEVELAND (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Tranzonic Companies (AMEX: TNZ) today reported record sales and earnings for the fiscal year ended Feb. 28 despite a fourth quarter decline in earnings.

Full-year net income amounted to $4,869,900, or $1.34 per share, up from $4,639,400, or $1.29 per share, last year, the previous record. Sales of the Cleveland-based manufacturer/distributor of paper, cloth and vinyl products were $96,705,800 versus $79,539,700 last year.

Net income for the final quarter this year was $676,100, or 19 cents per share, down from the record fourth quarter earnings of $971,800, or 27 cents per share, a year ago. Fourth quarter sales were $24,243,100 compared to $19,553,500 a year ago.

Robert S. Reitman, chairman and chief executive officer, said that full year earnings gains reflected the sales increase and generally effective expense containment. He noted, however, that fourth quarter results principally were impacted adversely by flat sales and price competition in the Industrial Textiles Division and by a company-wide reduction in gross profit margins reflecting a change in sales mix. Increased operating costs resulted from expanded staffing and training to support future sales.

Reitman said that the Industrial Textiles Division, which processes, packages and markets a wide variety of industrial wiping and related products, is susceptible to slow-downs in business/industrial activity and to competition. "Both appear to have affected the division's sales in fiscal 1990," he said.

Reitman reported that the company's other major division, the Personal Care Division, which manufactures and distributes feminine napkins, children's disposable elastic-leg diapers, adult incontinent briefs, obstetrical pads and related products, had a very strong year. He said increased production capacity created the opportunity for the division's gains.

He said that the full-year contribution of the Housewares Division, created with a June 1, 1988 acquisition, and the nine-months sales and earnings of the Industrial Packaging Division, established last June with an acquisition, had a positive effect upon current year sales and earnings. The Housewares Division produces and markets laundry accessories, personal travel organizers, cedar storage and closet organization products. The Industrial Packaging Division manufactures paper tubes and cores for industry.

The company said that results for both fiscal years were positively affected by reduction in the income tax provisions in each year's first quarter. In the current year's first quarter, Tranzonic implemented the Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 96 (Accounting for Income Taxes) which resulted in a cumulative adjustment of $701,500, or 19 cents per share. Last year, Tranzonic realized a $606,000, or 17 cents per share, credit to income taxes from a change in an accounting estimate.

CHICAGO (ARPIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - In an attempt to avoid bankruptcy proceedings, William Farley is reportedly proposing a restructuring of the privately placed subordinated debt which would put the bondholders at risk says an analyst with Duff & Phelps Inc., the investment research and financial consulting firm headquartered here.

"In this proposal, Farley would exchange equity in the operating company for deferment of cash interest payments during the next three years," said Kenneth F. Karwowski, an analyst in the High Yield Research Group at Duff & Phelps. "The bondholders stand to lose the most. Based on a very rough estimate of liquidation valuations, subordinate debt claims would appear to be severely impaired in the event of a bankruptcy."

This will be an important consideration in the debt restructuring. Proceeds from asset sales are to be used to repay the bridge and term loan facilities.

West Point Acquisition, the holding company of West Point Pepperell, defaulted on a $733 million term loan facility due March 31, 1990 and on interest payments on subordinated notes. Farley's inability to renegotiate the term loan stems from West Point Acquisition's failure to purchase 100 percent of West Point-Pepperell stock, while the bridge loan is backed by the operating profits of West Point-Pepperell.

"The key points to watch are when and if Farley can get his hands on West Point's cash flow, the banks' demands, and the subordinated noteholders' willingness to accept an exchange," said Karwowski. "West Point will continue to operate. The bridge loan is immune from any of the financial transactions at the acquisition level. A default at West Point Acquisition would not cause a default at West Point."

Duff & Phelps is an investment research, money management, credit rating and financial consulting firm headquartered in Chicago. BALTIMORE (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Baltimore Gas and Electric Co. (NYSE: BGE) has filed testimony with the Maryland Public Service Commission in support of its applications for increases in the electric fuel rate.

The increases principally result from the higher costs of fuels used to generate electricity and increased power purchases resulting mainly from the extended equipment repair outages at the Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant.

In prepared testimony accompanying the filing, BG&E Vice Chairman Christian H. Poindexter said that the Calvert Cliffs outages have been unavoidable. Their long duration, he said, has been solely determined by the large number of equipment problems corrected, and the implementation of the highly documented, more conservative approach to operations that today's nuclear practices entail.

Calvert Cliffs Unit Two was in the midst of a routine refueling outage in May 1989 when minute cracks were found in the unit's pressurizer. The company immediately ordered Unit One shut down to inspect for similar cracking. No such cracking was found.

An exhaustive investigation commenced to determine the cause of the Unit Two cracking. Ultimately, BG&E and other industry experts concluded that the cracking resulted from metallurgic conditions dating to the Unit Two pressurizer's fabrication, conditions which were not present in the Unit One pressurizer manufacture.

The utility's conclusions were reviewed with the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), which officially concurred with the conclusions in January 1990. Among those conclusions was that Unit One could operate safely, though a stepped up inspection schedule of that Unit's pressurizer is planned.

On Unit Two, work is underway to replace all 120 of that unit's pressurizer heater sleeves.

Poindexter explained that the company used the extended outages as an opportunity to critically assess the plant's design and methods of operation and measure them against current nuclear industry standards.

"With the plant shut down for such an extended period," he said, "our staff spent many hours looking for ways to improve our operation. Essentially, we began critically assessing a plant that was built and designed in the mid-seventies against today's standards. Problems were uncovered which required additional outage time to correct."

Poindexter said that these upgrades are part of the utility's on- going improvement process, underway since the mid-1980s. These improvements were necessary to meet changing, and more stringent, NRC requirements. These requirements, in many cases reflecting designs and techniques employed in later-vintage nuclear power plants, dictated new approaches at older plants such as Calvert Cliffs.

Poindexter underscored that the many upgrades and improvements accomplished will result in Calvert Cliffs continuing its role as a vital and cost-effective part of Central Maryland's energy supply.

He pointed out that the plant is the primary reason BG&E has been one of the cheapest energy producers in the mid-Atlantic region. "The plant," said Poindexter, "cost $778 million to build; but has saved customers more than $4.7 billion in fuel savings since the plant began operation in 1975. In 1988 alone, the plant saved customers about $236 million."

It is to ensure nuclear safety, and a continuation of supply and price advantages for BG&E's one million electric customers, that the utility is devoting so much time and attention to the plant's improvements.

"Management's top priority," Poindexter stated, "is to achieve safety performance which ranks among the nation's best plants and to operate at capacity factors well above industry average."

The twin-unit, 1,650,000 Kilowatt Calvert Cliffs plant is located on the western shore of the Chesapeake Bay in Southern Maryland's Calvert County.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Emission control products for coal-burning electric power plants that are designed to curb such problems as "acid rain" have been developed by researchers at W.R. Grace & Co. The products can help utilities meet new requirements that will become necessary under the amended provisions of the Clean Air Act.

The new Clean Air Act will work to reduce emissions of sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides which combine with water to form "acid rain." The act also mandates stricter emission requirements for the automotive and other industries and for coal-fired utilities.

The new products are based on the company's catalyst technology in which Grace is a recognized world leader. They were developed by Grace's Davison Chemical Division and its Corporate Research Center. One product is a solid sorbent material that captures sulfur and nitrogen oxides from coal-fired power plant stack emissions. The product is utilized in the NOXSO advanced flue gas treatment process that is currently under study in a pilot-scale (5 megawatts) demonstration.

On Dec. 21, 1989, the U.S. Department of Energy announced a $66 million, 115 megawatt full-scale demonstration of the NOXSO Process under the Clean Coal Technology Program. This project will be conducted by a W.R. Grace & Co. subsidiary, MK-Ferguson Company and NOXSO Corporation at Ohio Edison's Niles Power Plant.

The three companies will build and operate the first large-scale version of the NOXSO Flue Gas Treatment Process, which simultaneously removes from flue gas generated by coal-fired boilers up to 90 percent of the two pollutants which cause acid rain. Sulfur and nitrogen oxides are simultaneously removed without creating any sludge or other disposable waste product.

Construction of the four-year demonstration project is expected to begin in late 1991. On completion of the project in 1995, the NOXSO Flue Gas Treatment Process would be available to the U.S. utility industry to meet the emissions reduction requirements expected under the new Clean Air Act.

W.R. Grace & Co. is an international specialty chemical company with interests in energy, manufacturing and service businesses with sales exceeding $6 billion.

SHREVEPORT, LA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Arkla Exploration Company (NYSE: ARK) announced today that it has successfully tested another new field discovery in the southwestern Mississippi and east-central Louisiana region.

The Neyland Heirs No. 1 well, located just north of the Louisiana state line in Amite County, Miss., marks the tenth new field discovery by Arkla Exploration in the Mississippi-Louisiana area since late 1987, and the company's third successful rank wildcat in this region in 1990.

The well flowed at a rate of 360 barrels of oil and 458,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day at a flowing tubing pressure of 2,024 pounds per square inch on a 10/64-inch choke.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 12,300 feet and completed with select perforations in the Lower Tuscaloosa formation between 12,041 and 12,051 feet.

"We are extremely pleased with this, our tenth Mississippi- Louisiana-area discovery, in that it provides us with additional information which we will utilize as we continue to build upon the success of our ongoing exploration and development program in this region," said Carl S. Quinn, chairman and chief executive officer of Arkla Exploration.

The new wildcat was drilled about three miles northwest of the 1987 Thanksgiving Field find, which also hit pay in the Lower Tuscaloosa, and is nine miles northwest of the company's Berwick Field discovery, which was completed earlier this year and is currently being developed.

Quinn noted, "As a result of these discoveries, we anticipate having three to five drilling rigs working on development projects in the Mississippi-Louisiana area for the remainder of the year."

Arkla Exploration has a 92.5 percent working interest in the well and a 2,250 net acre lease block on the prospect. The company will have an 85 to 90 percent working interest in the new field.

Arkla Exploration is one of the nation's largest independent producers in terms of proved natural gas reserves, with more than 800 billion cubic feet of gas and gas equivalent reserves in approximately 1,500 producing wells in five states.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Mortgage & Realty Trust announced on Friday that it has reached a preliminary agreement with a group of lenders for a $425 million revolving debt facility. While the agreement has not been finalized, Fitch is confident that a suitable financing package will be arranged.

However, due to uncertainty regarding the timing of the deal's completion, Fitch is not changing its current ratings on the trust.

Mortgage and Realty Trust's commercial paper remains on FitchAlert with negative implications at 'F-2' and its medium term notes remain at 'D' due to their default in March. It is Fitch's understanding that the new debt agreement would allow MRT to cure all past defaults and pay off upcoming debt maturities of commercial paper and medium term notes as they come due.

If the financing is finalized under these conditions, the commercial paper rating would be removed from FitchAlert at 'F-2', and the medium term notes would be raised from 'D' to 'BBB/BB', depending on the terms and conditions of the agreement.

CHICAGO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - United Airlines today reported that its total scheduled revenue passenger miles (RPMs) increased 4.5 percent in March compared with March of 1989.

The airline's total scheduled RPMs were 6,305,966,000, compared with 6,037,043,000 in March of 1989. The passenger load factor was 67.7 percent, a decrease of 1.1 points from 68.8 percent a year ago.

Stephen M. Wolf, chairman and president, said, "Our Pacific traffic continued to show double-digit strength in March as it has for the last 15 months. Domestic traffic was down largely as a result of Easter occurring in April this year rather than March and weather problems early in the month. We can expect growth in our domestic capacity and traffic as we move through the year adding, on average, one new aircraft to our fleet every week."

For March, domestic revenue passenger miles totaled 4,724,097,000, a decrease of 1.4 percent from 4,790,179,000 accumulated in March a year ago. Pacific revenue passenger miles totaled 1,581,869,000, an increase of 26.9 percent from 1,246,864,000 a year ago.

Total scheduled available seat miles (ASMs) were 9,321,070,000, up 6.2 percent from 8,778,956,000 a year ago.

Domestic ASMs were 7,256,421,000, an increase of 2.0 percent from 7,113,541,000 a year ago. Pacific ASMs totaled 2,064,649,000, up 24.0 percent from 1,665,415,000 a year ago.

The airline flew 4,909,000 passengers in scheduled service in March, an increase of 0.1 percent from 4,903,000 flown a year earlier.

Total cargo ton miles for March were 115,099,000, up 2.4 percent from 112,357,000 a year ago.

Total RPMs including charter flights for March were 6,310,178,000, up 4.5 percent from 6,041,251,000 a year ago.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Anheuser-Busch, Inc. is rushing 8,000 cases of canned water from its Columbus, Ohio, brewery to the Pittsburgh area in an effort to alleviate the water shortage caused by a fuel spill in the Allegheny River.

The spill, caused by an earthslide which split open a pipeline, dumped thousands of gallons of diesel fuel, gasoline and kerosene into the river, the source of drinking water for many residents in the Pittsburgh area.

The drinking water, packaged in cases of 12-ounce plain white cans, is scheduled to arrive in the Pittsburgh area late this morning. La Russe Distributing Company, Inc., a local Anheuser-Busch wholesaler, transported the water last night from the Columbus brewery to its warehouse at 100 La Russe Boulevard, Tarentum, Pa. Members of the volunteer fire department and La Russe employees will begin distribution of the water this afternoon.

Anheuser-Busch has donated more than 175,000 cases of canned water to crisis areas since 1983, including their most recent donations of 2,200 cases to Daleville, Ala., and 5,000 cases to Danville, Ill., in an effort to aid flood victims in those areas.

HARRISBURG, PA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Department of Environmental Resources (DER) today ordered CNG Transmission Corp., Clarksburg, W.Va., to provide information on potential chemical contamination along the company's natural gas pipeline in western and north central Pennsylvania.

Following the discovery in 1987 that Texas Eastern had contaminated points along its pipeline with polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), Gov. Robert P. Casey directed DER to assess possible hazardous substance contamination associated with other major natural gas pipeline companies.

CNG is the only pipeline company that has not cooperated fully with DER in its investigation.

"We will not tolerate this company's continued disregard for our request for information," DER Secretary Arthur A. Davis said.

CNG operates 23 compressor stations and nine natural gas storage fields in Pennsylvania.

Tennessee Gas Pipeline, Transcontinental Gas, Columbia Gas and People's Natural Gas all have cooperated with DER in the pipeline assessment program.

Davis said that in April 1989, the department asked CNG to provide information on its compressor stations, storage fields, disposal pits, liquids and waste generation, previous PCB sampling results, groundwater impact and a schedule for submission of the data.

"To date, DER has not received any of the requested information, only a handful of useless progress reports," Davis said. "DER's numerous attempts to find out when CNG would provide the information have also been ignored."

In addition to requesting information from CNG, the department conducted preliminary assessments at nine of the company's compressor stations in Pennsylvania, including Jeannette, Oakford and South Oakford, Westmoreland County; Greenlick and Harrison Valley, Potter County; Leidy, Clinton County; Sabinsville, Tioga County; and Home Camp and Luther, Clearfield County.

A total of 99 soil samples were taken from the sites, with five samples showing levels of PCBs between five and 38 parts per million. PCB contamination was not detected in the remaining 61 samples.

"While the results of our initial investigation are not alarming and we have not determined the existence of any immediate threat to human health or the environment, it is clear that additional work is needed to fully characterize the situation along this pipeline," Davis said.

Under today's order, CNG must provide DER by May 1 with detailed descriptions of each of the company's compressor stations and other facilities, including information on past and present pits or other disposal areas, the presence of storage tanks and the generation, management and disposal of liquid and solid wastes.

Also, CNG must supply DER with results of any environmental sampling conducted by the company in Pennsylvania and any information provided by CNG to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regarding pipeline operations.

Davis said if CNG fails to provide the information as required, the department could petition Commonwealth Court to enforce the order.

CHICAGO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Duff & Phelps today lowered the senior debt rating for Barnett Banks, Inc. (NYSE: BBI) to 'AA-' (double- A-minus) from 'AA' (double-A), and the subordinated debt rating to 'A+' (single-A-plus) from 'AA-.' Approximately $360 million of securities are affected by the rating downgrade.

"The rating downgrade reflects Barnett's sizable Florida real estate loan exposure and the inherent risk on operating fundamentals, given the cyclical nature of the Florida real estate market. While Barnett's portfolio is well-diversified by product type, the aggregate exposure of permanent commercial real estate mortgage loans and construction loans totaled $5.3 billion at Dec. 31, 1989, or 3.1 times its equity base. This concentration makes Barnett particularly vulnerable to the local real estate environment which is currently experiencing weakness. This vulnerability was reflected by a recent announcement by management that first-quarter results will be adversely affected by a substantial increase in the loan loss provision which will reduce earnings to $15- $18 million " stated a D&P spokesman.

"Positively, effective loan controls, including conservative underwriting standards, diligent loan monitoring and aggressive loan workout, should aid in limiting portfolio problems. While non- performing assets are expected to increase in the first quarter, the relative level of non-performers will remain low at about 2 percent of loans and other real estate. Balance sheet strengths, such as a conservative capital structure large core deposit base and enhanced loan loss reserves provide significant support during periods of regional market weakness," he continued.

Barnett Banks, Inc. is a two-state holding company operating in Florida and Georgia. With $29 billion in assets, Barnett is the largest financial institution in Florida and the eighth largest in Georgia. The company has 35 banks and non-banking affiliates which operate 563 offices, 521 in Florida and 42 in Georgia. LOS ANGELES (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Los Angeles Dodgers president Peter O'Malley today announced from the team's spring training camp in Vero Beach, Fla., that Delta Air Lines (NYSE: DAL) has been named the Official Carrier of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Delta Vice President - Marketing Development, Bob Coggin, who was present for the announcement said: "We are particularly proud to serve as the Official Carrier for the Los Angeles Dodgers in this, the club's 100th anniversary year. The Dodgers are a legend in baseball history, winning 21 National League pennants since 1890 and six world's championships in the last 35 years. We, at Delta, are excited about the role we will play during this milestone year for the Dodgers."

"Delta Air Lines enjoys a first-class reputation throughout the world," said O'Malley. "We are delighted that the Dodgers will be flying with Delta throughout our 100th Anniversary season."

Delta is one of the largest carriers serving Los Angeles. The airline today serves more nonstop destinations from the city than any other carrier, and as the Official Airline, Delta will provide transportation for the Dodgers' entire season and participate in various promotional programs.

Vince Durocher, Delta's district director - marketing for Southern California said, "The Dodgers' organization in its 100 years has contributed much to the great game of baseball. This is truly a premier baseball club, and Delta is looking forward to its new association with the Dodgers."

Durocher said, "On June 1, Delta will begin service between Los Angeles and the New York area's Newark Airport, with three convenient nonstop flights daily. Delta will begin hourly nonstop service between Los Angeles and San Francisco during the hours of 6:00 a.m. and 9:00 p.m. With the expanded June 1 schedule, Delta will operate 105 flights daily from Los Angeles providing more service to points in California than any other airline."

ATLANTA (APRIL 4,) PR NEWSWIRE - Delta Air Lines (NYSE: DAL) reported today that its revenue passenger miles (RPMs), decreased 4.7 percent during March, while capacity, or available seat miles (ASMs), increased 6.5 percent.

"Last year, our March traffic was extraordinarily strong due to a work stoppage at a major competitor and because of the busy Easter holiday travel period, which falls in April this year," said Whit Hawkins, Delta's senior vice president - marketing. "These factors, combined with a softer demand for leisure travel resulted in the March traffic decline."

During the month, RPMs totaled 5.049 billion, down from the 5.300 billion recorded during the same month a year ago. Capacity in March grew to 8.210 billion ASMs, compared with 7.710 billion ASMs flown during March, 1989.

For the first three months of 1990, Delta's traffic totaled 13.605 billion RPMs, up less than one percent from the 13.573 billion RPMs recorded in the same period a year ago. Capacity rose 6.3 percent from 22.247 billion ASMs in 1989 to 23.657 billion ASMs for the 1990 period.

Delta flew 5.90 million passengers during March, down 5.1 percent from the 6.22 million passengers who flew Delta during the same month a year ago. For the first three months, Delta has carried 15.84 million passengers, up one-half percent from the 15.76 million passengers carried during the same period a year ago.

Delta's load factor for the month was 61.5 percent, down from the 68.7 percent load factor of March, 1989. For the first three months, load factor was 57.5 percent, down from 61.0 percent for the first three months of last year.

EAST HARTFORD, CT (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Chinese government has placed a firm order for 20 Pratt & Whitney JT8D-200 engines, with an option for 20 more, to power McDonnell Douglas MD-80 twinjets it will co-produce. The engine order is potentially worth $118 million to Pratt & Whitney.

The JT8D buy is the result of an agreement that Shanghai Aviation Industrial Corporation (SAIC) of Shanghai, Chinam and China National Aero-Technology Import & Export Corporation (CATIC) have with McDonnell Douglas to co-produce 10 MD-80s, with an option for 10 more.

The MD-80 order is in addition to a 1985 contract for SAIC to co-produce 25 of the aircraft through 1991, plus an earlier purchase of five of the twinjets ordered directly from McDonnell Douglas. It brings the number of MD-80s and JT8D-200s in service or on order by Chinese airlines to 50 aircraft, and 100 engines.

Pratt & Whitney's JT8D-200 engine is the exclusive powerplant for McDonnell Douglas MD-80 series jets. Since its introduction into revenue service 11 years ago, the JT8D-200 has flown more than 13 million hours on the various aircraft it powers. There are approximately 3,500 JT8D-200s in operation worldwide, logging more than four million hours each year.

CHICAGO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Amoco Oil Company today announced a motor oil recycling pilot program in four central Illinois cities geared to consumers who change their own motor oil.

Beginning today, participating Amoco service stations in Springfield, Champaign, Urbana and Decatur will accept used motor oil from consumers who change their own oil.

"Many consumers do not realize that improperly disposed used motor oil can cause environmental problems," said Gordon H. Hankey, Amoco district manager. "Through our pilot program we hope to increase public awareness of the need to recycle oil and of the Amoco stations that accept used oil."

Hankey said this marks the first time that Amoco and Amoco dealers have established their service stations as formal community motor oil recycling centers.

"This country is faced with a number of environmental challenges," said Hankey. "Recycling used motor oil is a way that Amoco and Amoco dealers can help solve an environmental concern."

The public can bring its used motor oil to any of the 32 participating Amoco stations. All of the locations are full-facility outlets that offer auto repairs and have the equipment necessary to store the used oil. Each facility will have a "used motor oil recycling center" sign posted on the building.

The used motor oil will be transported to and recycled at Amoco's Whiting, Ind., refinery for use as fuel for the refinery or for reprocessing.

Hankey estimated that about 600 million gallons of used oil are generated each year in the United States -- enough to produce electricity for 900,000 homes for a year. About two-thirds of the used oil is generated by do-it-yourself oil changers.

Hankey also said that some of the oil is disposed of improperly by do-it-yourselfers. "Many people put oil in their garbage or pour it into drains and sewers, and some even pour it directly on the ground," he said.

To increase public awareness of the recycling effort, Amoco will begin an advertising campaign tomorrow. The company will run 30- and 10-second commercials for a six-week period on local television stations and will place two full-page ads in local newspapers. The company also has developed a brochure that will be available at participating Amoco service stations and from local government agencies.

"This pilot project will allow us to evaluate the public's reaction to the concept," Hankey said. "We'll also examine the logistics of handling the used oil and the economics for shipping, using the oil as fuel and reprocessing it."

Based on the results, Hankey said Amoco will consider expanding the program to other markets in the company's 30-state marketing territory.

The central Illinois markets were chosen for the recycling program because of the anticipated volume of used motor oil, the proximity of the cities to the Whiting refinery, and to supplement any used motor oil recycling program in the area, he said.

No purchase is required to drop off used motor oil at participating stations, Hankey said. Motorists should drop off no more than five gallons per visit and bring the used oil to the stations in capped containers.

"We believe this pilot program offers us a valuable real-life look at how the public reacts to used motor oil recycling," said Hankey. "This program is part of Amoco's ongoing effort to examine its products and processes as they relate to the environment."

EAST PROVIDENCE, RI (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Brake failure is the leading fear of motorists today, yet statistics show lack of awareness and vehicle neglect may be contributing to unsafe roads in the United States, according to a report released today by Allied-Signal Inc. (NYSE: ALD) Aftermarket Brake Division, marketers of Bendix brakes.

The study, "STOP AMERICA! Brake Safety in the 90's," reports on the condition of vehicles on the road today and what the American motorists knows about the importance of frequent, thorough brake system inspections. The report also contains recommendations on steps the brake industry, government and the American motorist should take to correct the problem.

In national consumer surveys commissioned by Bendix in 1987 and, again, in 1990, most motorists ranked brake failure as their number one fear (43 percent in 1987 and 48.4 percent in 1990). Only 22.4 percent of those surveyed in 1987 identified brakes as an important system to have checked regularly. This number dropped in 1990 to 19.6 percent. Less than half of those surveyed said they have their brakes inspected by a certified mechanic. This percentage also declined from 42.9 percent in 1987 to 40 percent in 1990.

In addition, Bendix examined the number of brake jobs being performed annually on vehicles that had experienced total brake failure. A survey of high volume brake repair facilities supplied by a leading national trade publication showed that of the 31.4 million brake jobs performed annually, 14.4 percent were the result of "total brake failure." Conservatively, Bendix estimates that there are 4.5 million vehicles on the road today with dangerously unsafe brakes.

In a study performed by the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration in 1977, representing 125,000 safety and emissions checks over a 15 month period, 36 percent of the vehicles failed initial inspection because of brake deficiencies.

Ayers noted that motorists, the brake industry and federal and state governments can play a vital role in addressing the brake safety issue. In its study, Bendix recommends:

-- Motorists familiarize themselves with their brake systems and bring their vehicles to a certified mechanic for a thorough annual brake safety inspection as part of a good preventive maintenance program. Motorists should ask for quality brake parts when repairs are needed. The brake system is the last place a motorist should try to economize for obvious reasons.

-- More industry involvement in providing technical training for the professional mechanic; conducting research on the brake safety issue; and funding public information campaigns to encourage inspections and to educate the motorist on the basic design and function of a car's brake system.

-- Comprehensive review on the state and federal levels to determine the effectiveness of periodic motor vehicle inspection programs and to examine the need for tougher, more uniform inspection standards backed by random highway checks.

ALLENTOWN, PA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Air Products and Chemicals Inc. (NYSE: APD) has announced that one of its subsidiaries has acquired options which, when exercised, would give Air Products an additional 5.9 percent stake in Carburos Metalicos and raise its equity position to approximately 30 percent.

The options are exercisable within the next four years. The cost and exercise price of the options would involve a total transaction value of approximately $75 million at current exchange rates.

Under the options agreement, Air Products receives immediate voting rights associated with the shares it could acquire under the options. It is expected that two more Air Products representatives will be elected to the Carburos Metalicos Board, raising its representation to four members. In addition, Ron Sullam, Air Products Europe's vice president of marketing and business development, has been elected senior vice chairman of the board.

Air Products acquired the options from Banesto, a Spanish bank, which remains a major shareholder in Carburos Metalicos.

Air Products has operations in eleven countries throughout Europe. In 1989 gases, chemicals, and equipment businesses in Europe contributed $532 million in revenues and $73 million in operating income, representing approximately 20 percent of Air Products' consolidated results.

Carburos Metalicos, one of the largest industrial companies in Spain, has revenues in excess of $300 million and is headquartered in Barcelona. Its major businesses include industrial gases, ferro alloy metals, and hydroelectric power generation. Industrial gases represent approximately 60 percent of Carburos Metalicos' revenues. Air Products acquired its original equity position in 1982.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Pittsburg & Midway Coal Mining Co. (P&M) of Englewood, Colo., and Black Beauty Resources, Inc. (BBR) of Evansville, Ind., have signed a letter of intent to form a 50/50 partnership company to be known as Black Beauty Coal Company.

Core assets of the proposed new company are BBR's one underground and three surface mines in Indiana, its surface mine in Illinois, and an underground mine being developed in BBR's extensive low-sulfur reserves in Indiana. The partnership will be the sole coal mining venture for P&M and BBR in Indiana and their primary venture throughout the Illinois Basin.

In a joint statement, Richard M. Holsten, president of P&M, and Steven E. Chancellor, chairman of BBR, expressed mutual satisfaction with the transaction.

''Black Beauty Resources has proven its leadership in all phases of coal mining in the Illinois Basin,'' Holsten said. ''This association with Black Beauty's excellent management and employees, coupled with the low-sulfur reserves involved, is the type of growth venture P&M has been seeking and continues to seek.''

Chancellor cited P&M's century-long experience and leadership in all types of mining operations and its commitment to customer service as key reasons for agreeing to the partnership. ''No company has a better sustained record in the industry, by virtually any measurement, than P&M, and we in Black Beauty are delighted with the partnership,'' he said.

''Our joint commitment to excellence is our common thread and will make Black Beauty Coal Company truly unique,'' Chancellor added.

Black Beauty in 1989 produced 4.2 million tons of coal at its five mines, all operated by contractors. It recently announced an agreement with Public Service Indiana giving the utility an option to purchase up to 1.5 million tons of coal annually for 10 years from the new underground mining complex near Monroe City, Ind.

BBR has also been actively negotiating sales agreements for other portions of the recoverable low-sulfur coal in the 50,000-acre reserve.

P&M, a 105-year-old Chevron company, operates nine mines in six states and is part owner of a mine in Utah. The company produced 15.1 million tons of coal in 1989, led by production at its McKinley Mine in New Mexico, the Kemmerer Mine in southwest Wyoming, and the North River Mines in Alabama.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Seymour S. Greenfield, chairman emeritus of Parsons Brinckerhoff Inc. and Robert A. Goodings, president of Gore & Storrie Limited have announced the formation of Parsons Brinckerhoff Gore & Storrie, Inc. (PBG&S), a new full-service consulting engineering company specializing in the water and wastewater treatment fields.

PBG&S, headquartered in New York City, is owned equally by the two groups. It will provide complete water and wastewater treatment, planning, engineering, and management services to both government and private sector clients throughout the United States.

Joseph T. McGough, a vice president of Parsons Brinckerhoff Quade & Douglas, Inc., has been elected president of PBG&S. A former commissioner of New York City's Department of Environmental Protection, McGough joined Parsons Brinckerhoff in 1986, where he has had a number of administrative, marketing and project management responsibilities, including that of manager of the firm's water resources department.

Peter C. Steele, P.Eng. and a senior manager of Gore & Storrie, is a vice president of the new company. Steele has more than 20 years of engineering and management experience with Gore & Storrie, where he served most recently as manager of the water design division.

Directors of the new firm include Henry L. Michel, chairman of Parsons Brinckerhoff Inc.; Paul H. Gilbert, chairman of Parsons Brinckerhoff Quade & Douglas, Inc.; Robert A. Goodings, and George G. Powell, vice president of Gore & Storrie Limited.

Although PBG&S will operate independently, it will combine and utilize the extensive resources of its shareholders' companies. Parsons Brinckerhoff, with 2,500 employees and 53 offices worldwide, has 105 years of experience in the design and construction management of large, multidisciplinary projects, including transportation systems, tunnels, bridges, air and marine ports, utility and industrial power systems, and water resources.

The 70-year-old, Toronto-based Gore & Storrie Limited, with 400 employees, has specialized exclusively in environmental projects, including planning, engineering, and management services for all aspects of water and wastewater treatment, industrial waste management, combined sewer overflow control, and sludge management. This experience includes the design of more than 100 water and wastewater treatment plants in Canada, as well as storm water and industrial waste management systems.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - General Instrument Corporation (NYSE: GRL) announced today financial results for its fiscal year ended Feb. 28, 1990.

Net income from continuing operations was $88,402,000, or $2.93 per share, compared to $85,547,000, or $2.55 per share, in the prior year.

Net income for the year, including a gain on disposal of discontinued operations, was $98,690,000, or $3.27 per share. Revenue for fiscal 1990 was $1,377,344,000 compared to $1,304,733,000 in the prior period. Average shares outstanding in fiscal 1990 were 30.2 million vs. 33.6

In the fourth quarter, net income was $21,462,000, or $0.78 per share, compared to $20,639,000, or $0.61 per share in the prior year. Revenue was $351,202,000 compared to $328,774,000 in the prior period. In the quarter there were 27.4 million average shares outstanding vs. 33.7 million in the prior year quarter.

Backlog at fiscal year-end was $961,500,000 compared to a backlog of $890.6 million at the end of fiscal 1989. Broadband segment backlog included in the above was $401 million as compared to $187.2 million at the end of the prior year.

In the fourth quarter, Broadband revenue and operating income were well ahead of the prior year. Jerrold Subscriber, Jerrold Distribution, Comm/Scope and VideoCipher all contributed to this improvement. Data Systems revenue and operating income also were ahead of the prior year period.

Component Products revenue and operating income were down, however, primarily due to lower margins in the Power Semiconductor Division and the sale of the Clare Division in the prior year. Corporate expense in the quarter was up from the prior year, primarily because the prior year's corporate expense was partially offset by a gain from the sale of the Clare Division.

"Results for the year just ended reflect continuing improvement in General Instrument's financial performance," Frank G. Hickey, chairman and chief executive officer, said in making the announcement. "Earnings per share improvement also reflects the reduced number of shares as a result of our repurchase of 20 percent of the common shares outstanding in July 1989. Our financial position is excellent, with cash at year- end of $181 million and total debt of $240 million.

"In the fiscal year, revenue in the Broadband segment was up 4 percent over the prior year, while operating profit was up 26 percent. Jerrold Subscriber and VideoCipher revenues were down from the prior year although operating earnings were up in both businesses. Jerrold Distribution reported improvement in both revenue and operating income. Revenue and operating income of Comm/Scope increased significantly from fiscal 1989 reflecting improved pricing and strong demand for coaxial cable. The provision for minority interest of Comm/Scope is reflected in our income statement.

"In the current year, we continue to see an excellent market for cable television equipment and cable. At present, however, the threat of re-regulation of the cable television industry is creating uncertainty causing delays in one of our important customer's capital spending plans.

Partially offsetting this factor is a strong foreign market for cable television equipment and for our VideoCipher Division's products.

"In the Data Systems segment, revenue and operating earnings were up significantly compared to the prior year. The Worldwide Wagering business reported an operating profit on increased revenue, compared to an operating loss in fiscal 1989, due primarily to international sales of lottery equipment. Results from the Missouri and Connecticut lotteries were improved. Additionally, structural changes made in this business in fiscal 1989 sharply reduced break-even operation and contributed to the improved performance. Revenue and operating earnings for the Defense Systems Group were up from the prior year. Operating margins were adversely affected, however, by increased research and development expense and lower margins on certain production programs.

"In the Components segment, sales of power semiconductors were approximately equal to the prior year. Margins were adversely affected, however, by reduced factory performance, increased operating cost, and foreign currency exchange. Installation of new equipment and increased capacity in the Taiwan plant resulted in start-up problems which impacted margins. Some of these problems remain at year end but progress in improving margins is being made.

"Overall we believe we are well positioned in our core businesses and that our financial performance in fiscal 1991 should be improved over the year just ended," Hickey concluded.

General Instrument is the industry leader in cable TV electronics, coaxial cable and satellite encryption systems. The company's primary strategies are directed toward communications systems. The common stock of the company is listed on the New York, Midwest, Pacific and London stock exchanges.

SAN ANTONIO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - A mechanical failure at the Diamond Shamrock Three Rivers refinery last night has shut down the plant's catalytic cracking unit. Company officials estimate that the unit will be back in operation in less than two weeks.

The failure occurred in a gas compressor for the 20,000 barrel per day cat cracker. A small fire that resulted was extinguished without incident. There were no injuries.

The cat cracker produces gasoline, which is supplied to San Antonio and the South Texas area. Diamond Shamrock officials anticipate no supply problems resulting from the shut down unit.

Diamond Shamrock, with annual sales of approximately $2.1 billion, is a regional refiner and marketer of petroleum products. The San Antonio-based corporation has two Texas refineries with a throughput capacity of 160,000 barrels per day, markets gasoline through about 2,000 Diamond Shamrock branded outlets, processes natural gas, and stores and markets natural gas liquids.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - American Savings Bank (NYSE: ASB) today announced that in late March 1990 it reacquired unsold shares covering apartments in four residential cooperative conversion projects in Queens, New York City. These unsold shares secured the outstanding $26.2 million balance of a financing. For the period March 1988 to March 1990, this financing had been classified as an "acquisition, development, and construction arrangement" on American's balance sheet and income thereon had not been recognized. As of March 31, 1990, the unsold shares were classified as "real estate owned," thereby increasing the level of non-performing assets.

As part of this reacquisition, American incurred costs of approximately $4.0 million which will be charged against earnings in the quarter ended March 31, 1990.

In connection with its regular quarterly reporting process, American is currently reviewing this and other assets in its portfolio and will determine an appropriate provision for loan losses accordingly. Management continues to monitor and evaluate the upward trend in the Bank's level of non-performing assets and the adverse conditions in the real estate market.

American expects to report a net loss for the first quarter of 1990. The Bank also announced the resignation of H.L. Van Varick, American's executive vice president in charge of real estate lending. William G. Lillis, American's president and chief executive officer, noted with appreciation Van Varick's 17 years of loyal and dedicated service to the Bank.

Lillis added that no successor had been appointed for Van Varick, but that Philip M. Blumenfeld, a consultant retained by the Bank earlier in the year in connection with real estate loan workouts and management of owned real estate, had agreed to expand the scope of his work for the Bank. Blumenfeld, 58, is a lawyer with extensive real estate workout experience.

American Savings Bank is a New York state-chartered savings bank with executive and administrative offices in White Plains, N.Y. Together with its wholly-owned subsidiary, Riverhead Savings Bank, FSB, American operates 39 branch offices in New York City and in Westchester, Nassau and Suffolk Counties. With consolidated assets of $4.4 billion, the FDIC-insured American is one of the largest savings banks in New York. NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Lomas Financial Corp. (NYSE: LFC) today announced an agreement in principle to sell its Equitable Lomas Leasing Co. (ELLCO) to General Electric Capital Corp., a unit of General Electric (NYSE: GE). Fitch Investors Service said it does not believe the pact will have an immediate effect on the ratings of either Lomas Financial or ELLCO.

The purchase price of $161 million is below the company's stated book value, even after a large write-down of goodwill taken by ELLCO in preparation for the sale. The discount to recently stated book value probably reflects continued operating losses at the leasing company, caused primarily by high funding costs. GE Capital will, however, assume roughly $1 billion in debt and preferred stock obligations as part of the transaction. Due to the Chapter 11 bankruptcy status of Lomas Financial, the sale must be approved by the bankruptcy court. The company said this approval could be received by the end of April.

ELLCO's 'B' rated notes and cumulative preferred stock, as well as its 'F-4' rated commercial paper, remain on FitchAlert with evolving implications pending completion of the sale. ELLCO had received extensions from bank lenders pending the sale agreement. If the sale is finalized, the outlook would be decidedly positive for ELLCO. However, if the deal is not completed, there is a possibility that bank creditors could force ELLCO into bankruptcy. While the banks were constructive in awaiting the sale, the diminution in ELLCO's value (from a stated figure in excess of $300 million on June 30, 1989, to the current $161 million purchase offer) could force them to be more active if ELLCO is not sold at this time.

Lomas Financial's senior notes are rated 'DDD' and its subordinated debt is rated 'DD.' Fitch said it believes the ELLCO sale, while helping to reduce Lomas Financial's consolidated debt position, will not generate sufficient proceeds to meaningfully affect the company at this time. Lomas Financial remains in Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

LENEXA, KS (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Pack America Corp. today officially opened its first U.S. manufacturing facility by performing the traditional Japanese "kagami biraki," the hammering open of a sake barrel, as about 100 guest looked on.

The Pack America Corp. is the American subsidiary of The Pack Corp., of Osaka, Japan, a top maker of upscale, decorator shopping bags. The company manufactures bags at two plants in Japan and now at its Kansas City Plant for a variety of nationally-known customers including cosmetics companies, hotels, and department and specialty stores. Pack also makes bags for Kansas City-based Hallmark Cards, Helzberg Diamonds and the Kansas City Trolley Corp.

Pack officials planted a Japanese cherry tree in front of the plant, and presented a tree to Gov. Mike Hayden as a gift to the state of Kansas. Visitors also took part in a "chanoyu," a very formal tea ceremony. Women in kimonos served the tea in special ceremonial cups that were sent for the occasion from Japan.

Officials from Pack's headquarters in Japan and U.S. headquarters in New York joined local guests and officials on a tour of the Kansas City Plant where they saw Pack's state of the art bag making and laminating machines in action.

Pack officials participating in the plant's opening included Mr. Y. Nakagawa, chairman of Pack America; Mr. S. Yoshikawa, executive vice president of Pack Japan; Mr. T. Muramatsu, president of Pack America; and from the Kansas City Plant, Mr. K. Kishida, senior vice president and general plant manager, and Mr. John Harter, vice president.

Pack's 48,000-square-foot Kansas City Plant sits on 5.5 acres of land in the Lenexa Industrial Park. The company's U.S. headquarters are in New York.

Founded in 1952, The Pack Corp. employs 40 people in the United States and 1,350 people in Japan, where it has more than 30 offices, and two plants in Osaka and Nara. Its 1989 sales were $380 million. Pack formed its subsidiary, The Pack America Corp., in November 1987.

DALLAS (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Life Care Centers of America and National Heritage Inc. (NYSE: NHR) today jointly announced the execution of an agreement to merge the two long-term health care management concerns.

The agreement calls for the establishment of a new company to be named Life Care Centers of America Inc. and comprised of the combined assets and operations of privately held Life Care and National Heritage along with selected assets and operations of certain affiliates of the two firms and certain healthcare assets of Southmark Corp. (NYSE: SM). It is anticipated that securities of the new company will be publicly traded, with Life Care and its affiliates maintaining a controlling interest. Headed by Life Care Chairman Forrest L. Preston, the new company would be one of the nation's leading operators and managers of health care centers for the elderly.

"Over the last several months we have spent a great deal of time learning more about the operations of National Heritage," Preston commented. "This process has confirmed my belief that the two companies can perform more effectively together than either party could achieve independently. The new company will be committed to providing quality care to the elderly while discharging our obligations to the owners of the properties we manage. The new Life Care Centers of America, with the contributed assets and operations of National Heritage and Southmark, will have the financial strength and human resources to be a leading provider in the long-term care marketplace."

National Heritage Chairman Hugh C. Shurtleff commented, "I am encouraged by the progress we've made working with LifeCare since negotiations began. We continue to believe the combination with Life Care could bring benefits that will inure to the best interests of our shareholders."

The agreement calls for exchanging one share of the new company's common stock for each of the approximately 17 million outstanding shares of National Heritage stock, and for the issuance of approximately 26 million shares of new company common stock to the shareholders of Life Care and its affiliates in exchange for all the outstanding shares of such corporations. The agreement of the parties anticipates possible changes in the valuation of their respective assets to be contributed in the transaction and in the amount of shares of common stock to be received by the shareholders of each of the constituent corporations. Life Care and National Heritage expect to make further announcements on the progress of the transaction as developments occur, including the release of pro forma financial statements of the new company after completion of Life Care's 1989 audit in late April.

The transaction is contingent upon the execution of a separate agreement with Southmark Corporation providing for the contribution of its health care-related assets in exchange for preferred stock of the new company. These assets include three leased properties and mortgages and advances to the healthcare limited partnerships. It is contemplated that Southmark will also contribute managing general partner interests in affiliated health care limited partnerships to the new company.

National Heritage manages and operates 151 long-term care facilities with approximately 16,000 beds and 30 retirement centers and assisted living facilities with approximately 4,500 units.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Exxon Corporation (NYSE: XON) officials met today with representatives of three public employee pension funds to discuss a variety of issues related to financial and environmental matters.

Elizabeth Holtzman, comptroller of the City of New York, Gray Davis, comptroller of the State of California, and Paul Quirk, executive director of the Massachusetts Pension Reserves Investment Management Board, met with Exxon officials Lawrence Rawl, chairman and chief executive officer, Lee Raymond, president and chief operating officer and Edwin Hess, vice president of environment and safety. In addition, three New York City trustees and staff members from both the pension funds and Exxon also attended.

Exxon's operating and financial strengths were reviewed. It was pointed out by Rawl that shareholder returns have been excellent in the recent past despite 1989.

On environmental matters, company officials reviewed policies, practices and commitments that have been in effect for at least the last 20 years at Exxon locations. Environmental technology developments by the company and examples of Exxon's environmental protection programs were also outlined.

In addition, numerous steps taken by Exxon to emphasize environmental and safety issues since the Exxon Valdez accident last year were also discussed. These include intensified reviews of the company's worldwide operations, policies and practices; the creation of a public issues committee of the board of directors; the election of a new director with a background in marine environmental science, and the establishment of a corporate vice president for environment and safety.

ATLANTA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Delta Air Lines, Inc., (NYSE: DAL) expects to report a profit for the March, 1990 quarter, though net income will be much lower when compared to the same quarter last year and other recent quarters, Thomas J. Roeck, Delta Air Lines' senior vice president - finance and chief financial officer, said today.

Addressing a group from the Society of Airline Analysts in New York, Roeck said "...Delta's passenger traffic growth has been slowed by softer demand for leisure travel, the reaction to recent industry fare increases, and by the difficulty in matching the very high load factors of the March, 1989 quarter, when a major Delta competitor experienced a work stoppage.

"Delta expects the average revenue per passenger to be up modestly over last year as a result of the fare increases taking effect in the March quarter," Roeck added.

"Sharply higher fuel prices outstripped the anticipated modest growth in revenues for the quarter," Roeck said. Fuel prices, which peaked early in the quarter, have started to decline but are still expected to drive up fuel expenses by $85 to $90 million for the first three months of this year. Roeck noted that Delta's profit expectations are not based on the debt repayment agreement announced this week with Eastern Airlines.

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, NJ (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Federal Aviation Administration has approved Allied-Signal Aerospace Company as the first manufacturer authorized to ship Traffic Alert and Collision Avoidance Systems (TCAS) to U.S. airlines.

The FAA authorization permits Allied-Signal's Bendix/King Air Transport Avionics Division in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., to manufacture and ship the TCAS system to its U.S. customers.

TCAS informs airline pilots of the location of other aircraft in their vicinity and, if the situation warrants, advises them to either climb or descend to avoid possible mid-air collisions. The federal government has ordered that all aircraft carrying more than 30 passengers in U.S. airspace be equipped with TCAS by the end of 1993.

"We already have commitments for more than 3,300 shipsets of TCAS from a total of 20 airlines," said Robert M. Handley, marketing director for Bendix/King. "That is nearly 60 percent of the announced world TCAS market. These airlines include Delta, American, Lufthansa, USAir, All Nippon Airways, Southwest, Eastern, Continental, Sabena, Iberia and Finnair."

Allied-Signal had previously received FAA approval for the components of its TCAS system. Granting of FAA approval for the total system follows submittal of substantiating data that includes the results of test flights over the Los Angeles basin, a high-density air traffic area.

Allied-Signal Aerospace Company is a unit of Allied-Signal Inc. (NYSE: ALD), an advanced technology company with businesses in aerospace, automotive products and engineered materials.

BOSTON (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Bank of New England Corporation (NYSE: NEB) announced today that as part of a plan to stabilize its operations for the future it would begin immediately to reduce its total work force by about one third by eliminating some 5,600 jobs by the end of the year.

Approximately 1,700 employees will be notified over the next several days. The remaining jobs will be eliminated mostly through attrition, consolidations, or the continued planned sale of assets.

The action is being taken as part of a strategic plan outlining new directions for the corporation. Details of the plan will be available next week. Elimination of the jobs will reduce operating expenses significantly, bring costs in line with revenues, and reflect the company's smaller size.

Personnel reductions, asset dispositions, and other measures are expected to reduce annual operating expenses by approximately $300 million when they are fully implemented.

The corporation's new strategic plan will include an effort to reduce significantly operating costs while concentrating on its primary franchise businesses of consumer banking, trust and private banking, and middle-market, small commercial, and real estate lending. Certain business lines which do not fit into these primary business franchises are being reduced or eliminated, including processing services, large corporate banking outside of New England, leasing, discount brokerage, and other low-margin, high-labor or high-technology businesses.

Additional policy changes to lower noninterest expenses and save jobs in the future will be completed shortly, and will include significant cuts in other personnel-related costs, travel and entertainment, occupancy, and capital spending.

Outside hiring has been virtually eliminated, consideration of raises for bank officers has been suspended until fall, and performance bonuses for 1989 and all bonuses for senior officers have been eliminated. However, salary increases for non-officers will continue.

The bulk of the lay-offs will occur in the corporation's two largest affiliate banks, Bank of New England, N.A., and The Connecticut Bank and Trust Company, N.A., which will eliminate about 800 and 450 positions respectively.

There will be 90 jobs eliminated at Bank of New England-West, 160 in Rhode Island at Bank of New Englnad-Old Colony and BancNewEngland Mortgage Company, 10 at Maine National Bank, and some 200 others at various locations.

"These decisions were difficult and they are painful for all of us," BNEC Chairman Lawrence K. Fish said in a letter to employees. "But difficult as these steps are, it is essential that we take them now to assure our future viability and our ability to rebuild as a stronger, though smaller, Bank of New England.

"In making these decisions, we have done so with an eye to the future and with a great deal of thought and deliberation, mindful of the impact these decisions have on people's lives and mindful, too of the jobs to be saved through our recovery," Fish said. "At the same time, our primary concern as we rebuild is customer service and maintenance of the highest possible credit quality."

An earlier staff reduction plan was cancelled by Fish when he joined the company March 9 and ordered a thorough review of the organization's direction, structure, and personnel needs. Employees were told of the pending reductions in a March 23 corporate-wide letter from Fish.

Bank of New England Corporation is a Boston-based interstate bank holding company with assets of $25 billion and banking offices in four New England states. Its common stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Interferon Sciences, Inc. (NASDAQ: IFSC), an 82 percent-controlled subsidiary of National Patent Development Corp. (AMEX: NPD), today announced it obtained co- exclusive rights from privately held Amarillo Cell Culture, Inc., Amarillo, Texas, for the therapeutic use of low doses of interferon by oral administration for the treatment of human diseases.

Results of an initial study with the technology at the Kenyan Medical Research Institute, which showed that the typical symptoms of AIDS sufferers (fatigue, mouth sores and loss of appetite) were alleviated, were reported in McGraw-Hill's Biotechnology Newswatch and today's issue of the New York Times and will be published in June in an American scientific journal, Molecular Biotherapy.

Interferon Sciences (ISI) said it plans to conduct a controlled clinical study using oral low doses of natural alpha interferon on patients suffering from AIDS Related Complex (ARC) at a major medical center in the United States.

The Kenyan studies were conducted with a natural source alpha interferon. ISI produces the only FDA-approved product using natural source alpha interferon, ALFERON N Injection.

ALFERON N Injection is currently approved for intralesional treatment of refractory or recurring external genital warts in patients 18 years or older.

The license agreement gives ISI worldwide market rights to all human applications of the technology with the exception of Japan, where Hayashibara Biochemical Laboratories, Inc. of Japan, which owns 24 percent of Amarillo's equity, has obtained exclusive rights.

Under the terms of the license agreement, ISI acquired 3 percent of Amarillo's equity and agreed to pay royalties to ACC on oral interferon product sales. ISI will manufacture the finished product and conduct human clinical trials in the United States. In addition, ISI will supply natural alpha interferon to ACC for the animal health market and ACC will pay royalties to ISI.

PHILADELPHIA, (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Leading energy project developer O'Brien Energy Systems (AMEX: OBS), today announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary, O'Brien Fuels, Inc., has acquired 76 percent of United Kingdom-based Enercol Energy, Ltd. The balance of the company is owned by Lancashire Enterprise, Ltd., a British Government venture capital fund.

Enercol Energy is active in two interrelated businesses: landfill gas project development and compressed natural gas for vehicle fuel. The company is specially licensed by the British Department of Transport to commercially develop compressed natural gas conversions, and has been awarded two substantial European Economic Community (EEC) grants to develop compressed natural gas conversions, and has been awarded two substantial European Economic Community (EEC) grants to develop landfill gas extraction projects as well as projects using landfill gas as vehicle fuel.

"The EEC Regulations 49, which is a series of very tough new standards on emissions, has created a growth opportunity for natural gas and landfill gas for use in commercial, truck, taxi, and bus fleets," said O'Brien vice president, Bruce Levy. "Our acquisition of the leading U.K. company in this new field enhances our position in the U.K. market," he noted.

Comment by J.I. Stark, executive director - Worldwide Vehicle Operations for the General Motors Marketing and Product Planning Staff:

During the first quarter of the 1990 calendar year, General Motors total vehicle sales increased despite a year-to-year industry decline. In the three-month period ending March 31, 1990, total GM vehicle sales were up 1.4 percent; truck sales were up 4.8 percent; and passenger car sales were virtually unchanged. Furthermore, when all industry sales are reported, we expect our market share for cars, trucks, and total vehicles to be up in the quarter compared with the same period in 1989.

Through the end of the quarter, Chevrolet car sales were up almost 11 percent, and for the first time in two years, Chevrolet is the industry leader in U.S. passenger car sales. Also in the quarter, Buick and Cadillac sales were up 5.2 percent and 6.4 percent, respectively. As for the truck market, General Motors sales in the quarter were second only to 1988's record first-quarter performance. GM increased its truck sales leadership with the largest gains occurring in the compact van and full-size pick-up truck segments. During the period, compact van sales increased 41 percent due in large part to GM's newly introduced APVs. Sales of GM's redesigned C/K pick-up trucks have continued to increase since their introduction in April 1987. For the calendar year, the sales of GM's full-size C/K pick-up trucks increased 14 percent, which was more than any other major manufacturer in the largest segment of the truck market.

As the public becomes more and more aware of the dramatically improving quality and dependability of General Motors cars and trucks, we are optimistic that our market share will continue to increase. We recognize that the remainder of the calendar year is going to be extremely competitive, but we are committed to increasing our market share profitability.

From our perspective, we are getting the message out that GM is offering more new and higher quality products than ever before in its history. In recent years, GM has made significant gains in quality and our challenge is to convince customers that GM cars and trucks do compete with the best in the world.

DENVER (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - M.D.C. Holdings Inc. (NYSE: MDC), national home builder and mortgage banking company, announced today that it lost $31.6 million, or $1.99 per share, for 1989, as compared to a loss of $31.4 million, or $1.81 per share, for 1988. Results for 1989 and 1988 are net of $58.5 million and $55.3 million, respectively, of extraordinary after-tax gains from the repurchase of $151.6 million and $232.7 million, respectively, principal amount of MDC subordinated notes.

The company's net loss for the fourth quarter of 1989 was $32.3 million, or $2.03 per share, as compared to a loss of $18.1 million, or $1.11 per share, during the fourth quarter of 1988. The losses in the fourth quarter of 1989 and 1988 are net of $22 million and $12.9 million, respectively, of extraordinary after-tax gains from the repurchase of $25.9 million and $49.4 million, respectively, principal amount of MDC subordinated notes.

MDC's operations during 1989 and the fourth quarter were affected adversely by, among other things, continuing weakness in the Denver and Phoenix economies, $69 million and $43 million, respectively, in net realizable valuation adjustments to reduce the carrying value of its land, and to a substantially lesser extent, its housing inventories to their estimated net realizable value, and valuation adjustments in connection with other assets including the carrying value of certain ownership interests in issuances of collateralized mortgage obligations.

During 1989, MDC closed 3,004 residential units as compared to 4,703 closings during 1988. Closings for the fourth quarter of 1989 totalled 610 as compared to 1,282 for the like period in 1988. At Dec. 31, 1989, the company's backlog consisted of 816 residential units having an approximate sales value of $150.9 million, compared with a backlog of 1,157 units having an approximate sales value of $188.8 million at Dec. 31 1988.

Revenues for 1989 were $728.1 million, as compared to $840.6 million for the like period in 1988. Revenues for the last three months of 1989 were $160.8 million as compared to $223.5 million during the comparable period in 1988. Revenues, homes closed and backlog for 1989 and 1988 as well as for the fourth quarter of each of these years were lower primarily due, among other things, to the 1988 and 1989 restructuring of MDC's home building and mortgage operations which included the sale or liquidation of its Austin, San Antonio, Dallas, Tampa, Orlando, Atlanta, Tucson and Colorado Springs operations and the downsizing of its Phoenix and Denver operations.

The company's net loss per share for the fourth quarter of 1989 and 1988 was based on 16 million and 16.4 million weighted average shares outstanding, respectively. The net loss per share for all of 1989 was based on 15.9 million weighted average shares outstanding as compared to 17.3 million weighted average shares outstanding for 1988.

CHESTERFIELD, MO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Comprehensive Care Corp. (NYSE: CMP) today announced that the CareUnit Hospital of St. Louis, a 144-bed chemical dependency treatment facility located in St. Louis, Mo., will be closed on Apr. 13, 1990. Patients who are currently undergoing inpatient treatment at the facility will be transferred to other treatment programs expeditiously to ensure continuity of their care, although day and outpatient treatment services will continue to be provided. The closure of the facility will not impair the company's three CareUnit contract programs located within the St. Louis metropolitan area.

W. James Nicol, CompCare's president and chief executive officer, said, "The facility has a psychiatric license which we had presumed would generate some interest by potential buyers while it remained open. However we reached the point at which we could no long absorb the significant financial losses of the facility." The company intends to sell the facility as a hospital or other commercial property.

FORT WORTH, TX (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - A U.S. Air Force F-16 fighter powered by a new Pratt & Whitney high-performance F100-PW-229 production configuration engine flew at the General Dynamics facility for the first time on April 2. The new 29,000-pound thrust PW-229 is the most powerful engine to power a General Dynamics F-16. The PW-229 offers added thrust with the lightest weight in its thrust class to greatly improve F-16 performance.

"This is a great milestone for the F100 family of engines," said Ed Ford, P&W's vice president for F100 programs. "We have taken the F100-PW-220, the safetest, most reliable and most durable fighter engine ever operated by the Air Force, and upgraded it into the PW-229 configuration which offers performance to keep the F-15 and F-16 highly competitive well into the next century. We expect great things from the PW-229."

The aircraft and engine will continue flight testing at the Air Force Flight Test Center, Edwards Air Force Base, California, until mid-1990. PW-229 engines also will begin flight tests in a McDonnell Douglas F-15 later this month. Other PW-229 engines will then undergo a 12- to 18-month field service evaluation in both the F-15 and F-16 at Nellis AFB, Nevada, before entering operational service with Tactical Air Command.

Pratt & Whitney's Government Engine Business, based in West Palm Beach, Fla., designs, develops and supports military jet engines. Pratt & Whitney is a unit of United Technologies Corporation (NYSE: UTX) of Hartford, Conn.

GREENWICH, CT (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The following statement was issued by the Pechiney Group in Paris, April 3, 1990:

The Pechiney Group has reported consolidated income for 1989 of 3,542 million French francs (FF), equal to FF 70 per share, before amortization of goodwill generated by acquisitions. After amortization of goodwill, net income amounted to FF 3,337 million, of FF 66 per share. Net income included an exceptional profit of FF 575 million, which resulted from the public offering of 25 percent of the shares of Pechiney International.

The consolidated financial results for the first time include American National Can Company (ANC) and other businesses acquired in 1988 and 1989.

Sales, with these acquisitions included, were FF 88,472 million, a 72 percent increase from 1988. Not including these acquisitions, manufacturing sales would have shown an increase of 12.6 percent when compared with 1988. Sales of the International Trade sector increased 31 percent.

ST. LOUIS, (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD), a pioneer developer of computer-aided software engineering (CASE) products, introduced "STRADIS for the PC" this week at CASExpo in Washington, D.C. All the power and flexibility of STRADIS will be available for personal computers in June 1990.

STRADIS, which is marketed by McDonnell Douglas Systems Integration Co., is a complete systems life cycle methodology that provides a framework for systems development. The methodology integrates the intelligent use of technology with proven project management techniques for a balanced approach to systems development.

STRADIS for the PC enables project managers to tailor and adapt the guidelines of STRADIS to meet specific project needs. The new automated PC version increases project control through customization -- project managers can design a custom methodology for their business yet still tap the proven tools and techniques of STRADIS.

"Now we can offer our customers and prospects a powerful methodology with fingertip convenience," said Linda Lea Larson, STRADIS product manager. "They get the all-encompassing benefits of STRADIS with the maximum flexibility available in a PC environment."

Some of the unique features found in STRADIS for the PC include the ability to add, change or delete deliverables, activities, steps and roles; standardized and ad hoc reporting capabilities to help with project coordination; and rapid cross reference between methodology components -- from any point in any volume of STRADIS all details are accessible.

STRADIS for the PC runs on all IBM-compatible PCs and has desktop publishing capabilities through Ventura Publisher (a).

McDonnell Douglas Systems Integration Co. is recognized worldwide as a leading systems integrator at the forefront of CASE technology and information systems. Headquartered in St. Louis, the company is a division of McDonnell Douglas Corp. and sells information systems and services to a variety of markets, including government agencies and the manufacturing, telecommunications and insurance industries. Its 1989 revenue was $300 million.

SOUTHFIELD, MI (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - In its April 1990 issue, Michigan Business Magazine announces that Dow Chemical Co. President and CEO Frank Popoff is the 1990 Michigan Industrialist of the Year.

This prestigious award is presented annually by the Impression 5 Science Museum, in cooperation with Michigan Business Magazine and the Michigan Manufacturers Association, to an individual who has demonstrated outstanding entrepreneurial instinct while leading his or her company to industry recognition.

Additionally, announcement is made of Michigan's Scientist of the Year, A. Barry Kunz, professor and dean of the Physics Department at Michigan Technological University in Houghton, and the recipient of the Greater Lansing Community Service Award, the Rev. J.B. Graves, president of the Pastor's Conference in Lansing.

Elsewhere in the April issue, writer Eric Whisenhunt examines Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s furniture division. The Grand Rapids entity has been enjoying a "fair-haired child status" of late within the restructured corporation. Flush with a strong cash position as a result of recent divestitures, Westinghouse is investing more in some of its smaller divisions with promising growth potential. Are other acquisitions on the horizon?

Despite its possible sale, Foremost Corp. of America expects to dominate the insurable mobile home market from its new headquarters in Caledonia Township. Whisenhunt checks out its strategies in his article, "The Quantum Leap."

Managing Editor Caroline Price finds local experts uneasy about the shortage of engineers in her article, "Plugging the Gap." If something isn't done about it, the U.S. faces a significant problem after the year 2000.

Popular monthly columns and departments include "Lansing Hotline," "Made in Michigan" and "Skylines & Cityscapes," this month reporting on office space availabilities in Southfield.

Michigan Business Magazine is a statewide monthly publication, reaching a controlled circulation of 36,500 top business executives. The April issue will be mailed to readers this week.

WILMINGTON, DE (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The Columbia Gas System Inc. (NYSE: CG) announced today that it has elected to call for a mandatory sinking fund redemption on June 1, 1990, $1,261,000 principal amount of its 9-7/8 percent debentures, series due June 1, 1999.

The 9-7/8 percent debentures were issued in 1974 under the indenture of the corporation to Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., trustee, dated as of June 1, 1961, as amended and supplemented by 36 supplemental indentures, including the 22nd supplemental indenture dated as of June 1, 1974, which provides for the issuance of the 9-7/8 percent debentures.

The 9-7/8 percent debentures will be redeemed at the office of Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., Corporate Trust Administration, 30 W. Broadway, New York, 10015. The redemption is being made in accordance with the provisions of the indenture as amended and supplemented.

The debentures to be redeemed will be selected by lot from the holders of record on April 14, 1990. Upon surrender of the debentures to the trustee, there will be paid in cash a redemption price equal to 100 percent of the principal amount of the debentures, plus accrued interest to the redemption date. On the redemption date, the debentures selected for redemption will cease to bear interest. Following the sinking fund redemption on June 1, 1990, $23.2 million of the 9-7/8 percent debentures will be outstanding.

HOUSTON (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Wyoming-California Pipeline Company (WyCal) said today it was pleased with a recent order by a federal appeals court that affirms the company's authorization to build a pipeline to transport competitively priced natural gas supplies from Wyoming to California.

The April 3 opinion (3-0) issued by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit affirmed the issuance by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) of an optional certificate authorizing WyCal, a subsidiary of the Coastal Corporation (NYSE: CGP), to build and operate an open-access interstate pipeline system.

The FERC's decision to grant the optional certificate to WyCal had been challenged by the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) and two competitive pipeline projects, Kern River Gas Transmission Company and Mojave Pipeline Company.

The order also dismissed petitions filed by the two competing pipeline projects that claimed the FERC had unfairly favored WyCal over their projects and that the FERC should have taken action on claims that WyCal misappropriated a portion of its planned route.

"This circuit court order represents a very favorable additional development for the WyCal project and our plans to transport economical and reliable natural gas supplies from Wyoming to California," said Charles M. Oglesby, president of WyCal. "We plan to begin pipeline construction later this year and expect the WyCal system will be in service in late 1991."

Oglesby said WyCal's previously announced settlement with the CPUC would not be affected by the circuit court's decision, and "We continue to view WyCal's settlement with the CPUC as the most efficient means for delivering new natural gas supplies to California at the earliest possible date."

The Coastal Corporation is a Houston-based energy holding company. It has consolidated assets of $8 billion and subsidiary operations in natural gas transmission and storage, oil and gas exploration and production, refining and marketing, coal and chemicals, and independent power production.

CYPRESS, CA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Mitsubishi Motors Sales of America Inc. posted a 90 percent gain in total vehicle sales during the first quarter of 1990 and today marked the company's second highest monthly sales ever.

The U.S.-built Eclipse contributed to strong passenger car sales for the month of March with 4,719 units, in comparison to last January's record high of 6,416 units.

"Following an astonishing sales month in January we were able to replenish our Eclipse inventory and continue our sales momentum with increased product availability," said Rick Lepley, vice president of sales.

Lepley noted strong Mirage 4-door sales and said the company sold 30 percent over its objective. Mitsubishi Motors anticipates further Mirage growth when the company begins U.S. production of the 4-door subcompact later this year.

Total passenger car sales for the month of March reached 14,474 units, representing a 47 percent increase over the same period last year, with year-to-date passenger car sales reaching 49,020 units.

The company also reported a 12 percent increase in year-to-date total truck sales.

WARRENTON, OR (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - A.B. Holding Group, Inc. announced today results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. In making the announcement, Sohail Masood, president, said, "It should be noted that the acquisition by Vinsor Corp. of A.B. Holding Group, Inc. and the simultaneous name change to A.B. Holding Group, Inc. occurred in January 1990.

"Results are therefore presented on a pro forma basis for the combined company."

On a pro forma basis, the company reported net sales of $11,119,310 versus $8,592,084 for the short (ten month) year ended Dec. 31, 1988. Net income after taxes was $976,373 or $.15 per share versus $557,877 or $.10 per share in the ten months ended Dec. 31, 1988.

In commenting on the results, Masood said, "We believe the rapid growth experienced by the company in 1989 is sustainable because bagging of silage is becoming more accepted in the industry. The farmer who uses our system is becoming more competitive as feed losses are minimized and cuttings are maximized."

During 1989, bag sales totalled approximately $7,750,000 while machines sales totalled approximately $2,800,000. Each purchaser of a machine becomes a bag customer, generally for bags manufactured by the company.

Management intends to continue their focus on machine sales and the resulting sales of bags. Additionally, the company's joint venture in Europe, which began operations in mid-1989, resulted in sales of approximately $200,000 for A.B. Holding in 1989 with further increases expected in 1990.

A.B. Holding Group, Inc. manufactures and sells bagging machinery and large ((up to 250 feet long) disposable plastic storage bags to the agricultural industry for the storage of feed.

KANSAS CITY, MO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - David B. Sharrock, executive vice president of Marion Merrell Dow Inc., has been named chief operating officer of the Kansas City-based pharmaceutical firm. The announcement was made by Fred W. Lyons Jr., president of Marion Merrell Dow.

Sharrock, who also serves on the board of directors of Marion Merrell Dow, was formerly the president and chief operating officer of Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. A native of Ashland, Ohio, he began his career with the Merrell division of Richardson-Merrell in 1958. Over the years he held a number of positions of increasing responsibility in Richardson-Merrell, its subsidiaries and successor companies. In 1982, he was named vice president of Merrell Dow, and in 1988 was named president and chief operating officer of the company.

Sharrock has a bachelor's degree in economics from Dartmouth College. He has served as a board member of the Proprietary Association, as chairman of the National Wholesale Druggists Association/Associate Member Advisory Council, and as a member of the board of directors of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association and the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association Foundation. He is a member of the Cincinnati Business Committee and is a director of Fifth Third Bancorp, Cincinnati Bell Inc., and the Ohio State University Foundation.

In making the announcement, Lyons said, "Dave Sharrock has been an important leader at Merrell Dow for the past 10 years. His industry knowledge and expertise, plus a management philosophy which places primary emphasis on the patients we serve, combine to ensure excellence in the operation of our new company."

Sharrock and his wife, Barbara, will move to Kansas City in the fall of 1990.

Marion Merrell Dow Inc. was formed in December 1989 through the combination of Marion Laboratories, Inc. and Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. LONG BEACH, CA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The 60th and final KC-10 advanced tanker/cargo aircraft built by McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) was delivered to the Strategic Air Command in ceremonies today at Douglas Aircraft Co. The airplane will be based at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C.

General John T. Chain Jr., commander-in-chief of the Strategic Air Command accepted the airplane, which was being delivered to SAC after extensive flight testing of a wing mounted air refueling pod system. The underwing hose-and-drogue pods will allow the KC-10 to refuel two to three aircraft simultaneously. The Air Force plans to modify additional KC-10s to incorporate the wing pod system.

The United States Air Force-McDonnell Douglas KC-10A is a version of the intercontinental-range commercial DC-10 Series 30 convertible freighter. To adapt the commercial DC-10 to the KC-10 mission, McDonnell Douglas installed additional fuel tanks in the lower fuselage compartments, an advanced air refueling boom, and independent hose reel/drogue system, an air refueling operator station, an air refueling receptacle, an improved cargo handling system, and flexible passenger accommodations.

The KC-10 can refuel fighter aircraft while simultaneously carrying the fighter's support personnel and equipment on overseas deployments. The aircraft also increases payload and range of cargo airlifters with aerial refueling and augments the airlift fleet by carrying cargo and personnel.

"The KC-10, in meeting or exceeding all performance requirements, has proven to be an extremely reliable weapons system," said Jack Crosthwait, general manager-KC-10 and special products at Douglas Aircraft. "The unique achievements of the KC-10 program are the result of innovative government and industry team efforts."

WALTHAM, MA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Cabot Corporation (NYSE: CBT) announced today revised plans which will enable the company to acquire 100 percent of AO Safety, the safety products division of American Optical Corporation. AO Safety will be merged with Cabot's E-A-R noise control and hearing protection business in a wholly owned subsidiary, Cabot Safety Corporation. The transaction should be completed later this month.

In January, Cabot had announced it would participate in a merger of E-A-R and AO Safety through a partially owned deconsolidated joint venture. Commenting on the change in structure of the transaction Cabot Chairman Samuel W. Bodman said, "The merits of a merger of E-A-R and AO Safety are quite compelling. As a result of certain strategic and financial developments, we decided it was in the best interest of Cabot to structure the transaction as an outright purchase. This will have a positive impact on earings and provide more flexibility for financing in the future."

Bodman emphasized the compatibility of the two businesses adding, "E-A-R and AO Safety are both clear market leaders, have complementary product lines and use the same distributor network. E-A-R's broad European market presence will benefit AO Safety, and the domestic retail market presence of AO Safety will benefit E-A-R."

E-A-R has a preeminent world-wide position in the hearing protection market supported by a full line of products including its well-known patented polymer foam ear plugs. Using its extensive knowledge in energy absorption and hearing measurement, E-A-R has successfully expanded into other health and safety markets with new products and by acquisition. AO Safety is the leading manufacturer and distributor of safety prescription and non-prescription eyewear in the United States and Canada. AO Safety also manufactures respirators and face and head protective products. Annual revenues from the combined businesses are expected to approach $200 million.

Cabot Corporation is a Waltham, Mass. based Fortune 300 company with operations in Specialty Chemicals and Materials and Energy.

DALLAS (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Whitehall Corporation (NYSE: WHT) announced today that its board of directors will vigorously oppose the last-minute attempt by Cambridge Capital Fund, L.P., a New York City risk arbitrage and LBO-fund firm, to seize control of Whitehall through a proxy contest.

Lee D. Webster, chairman of the board of Whitehall, stated, "Our board is fully committed to making certain that all shareholders -- including those who have weathered the redirection of our core businesses -- reap the rewards of their investment in a tremendously sound company. At the end of 1989, Whitehall had no short- or long-term borrowings and more than $10 per share in cash and cash equivalents.

"It is our duty to see that all shareholders -- not just Cambridge Capital Fund, L.P. -- be able to realize the full value of our strategies and programs that have positioned Whitehall at the forefront of the maintenance and repair business for commercial aircraft."

Webster also said, "The aging aircraft maintenance market is one which both the FAA and industry experts agree faces a severe capacity shortage now and in the years ahead. The latest industry statistics show that 45.6 percent of the U.S. airline fleet is 15 or more years old and 31.5 percent of the fleet is 20 or more years old."

Webster added, "In 1989, Whitehall completed the restructuring of its military aerospace operation into what we believe is one of the industry's most cost-effective and highest-quality providers of maintenance and modification services to the worldwide aging commercial aircraft fleet. It took an investment of million of dollars to retool and equip our operations in Lake City, Florida, and to retain, qualify and certify our employees there for the commercial market. We are convinced that the two major new customers we signed last year -- and another two potential major customers with whom we are presently negotiating -- are just the tip of the iceberg for Whitehall."

Webster continued, "Our shareholders should benefit greatly from the earnings we anticipated in this multibillion-dollar market. Now is not the time to turn Whitehall over to a group of opportunistic speculators.

Furthermore, we have successfully converted from the commercial to the military side of the geophysical underwater acoustic technology market. Though the defense industry is in an uncertain period generally, we have developed superior commercial technology in underwater acoustics and have successfully adapted it for the special needs of the U.S. Navy.

Webster also announced that the Whitehall board, in conjunction with its advisors, would in due course consider yesterday's announcement of Cambridge Capital Fund, L.P.'s highly conditional merger proposal.

The Whitehall annual meeting is scheduled for Monday, April 23, in Dallas.

Whitehall Corporation, based in Dallas, designs and manufactures marine sensor systems and frequency-controlling quartz crystals, adapts commercial geophysical technology to underwater threat detection systems for the military, offers land and marine geophysical exploration services and rebuilds, modifies and maintains aircraft.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - For the first time, a major U.S. bank is offering one combined monthly statement that links a customer's primary checking account to other accounts of his or her choosing -- and waives regular monthly checking charges for customers whose combined deposits and loans meet a required minimum.

First Interstate Bank of California has announced statewide introduction of the new program, called "Pacesetter: The Next Step In Banking"(sm) effective today.

Pacesetter is the first program to be offered by a commercial bank in California that provides a single unified statement of a customer's checking, savings, credit card, credit line, loan, certificate of deposit and IRA activity -- complete with a one-page, at-a-glance overview of a customer's various financial relationships with the bank.(a)

It is the first time a commercial bank has allowed customers to choose for themselves which of their eligible bank accounts are to be reported on a single monthly statement.

It is also the first time that outstanding loan, credit line and credit card balances, in addition to checking, savings and most other deposit accounts, can be linked together to create a combined balance used to waive the regualr monthly service charge on a designated checking account.

According to William E.B. Siart, First Interstate's chairman and chief executive officer, Pacesetter represents the bank's commitment to focusing on the individual customer's total relationship with First Interstate.

"In the past, banks have typically viewed customers' checking accounts, for instance, as completely distinct and unrelated to their loans or certificates of deposit," Siart said. "However, customers do not view their financial relationships as distinct and unrelated.

"Our new Pacesetter program reflects that customer perspective," Siart explained. "With Pacesetter, we can now report the balance and interest data on a customer's various deposit and loan accounts in one very easy-to-read, unified statement. And we can then give the customer credit for his total financial relationship with First Interstate Bank."

Pacesetter allows a customer to link any number of eligible accounts to his or her primary checking account. Signing up for Pacesetter costs customers nothing and takes just minutes by phone or through any First Interstate branch. And statement accuracy is assured through First Interstate's unique Service Guarantee: Any customer finding an error on a consumer account statement is promptly paid $5 for the inconvenience.

Siart explained that First Interstate Bank's introduction of Pacesetter is a response to the results of extensive research into what customers most want from a bank: choice, convenience, control, service, value and accuracy.

Pacesetter is the latest in a series of innovations designed to firmly establish First Interstate Bank as California's leading financial institution in customer service and responsiveness to customer expectations. Last fall, First Interstate introduced its comprehensive Service Guarantee program, insuring account statement accuracy, waits of no more than five minutes for a teller, access to working Day & Night Tellers(R) (ATMs) at all times, 24-hour responses to account customer questions or problems, and conditional responses to consumer loan applications.

And First Interstate backs its Service Guarantee with a $5 cash payment if the service if the service is not delivered as guaranteed.

All this attention to service is paying off. A recent independent survey of all major California banks statewide ranked First Interstate as number one in overall customer service.

First Interstate Bank of California is the principal subsidiary of First Interstate Bancorp (NYSE: I), the nation's largest retail and business banking organization with 28 wholly owned banks in 14 states and 1,180 offices. First Interstate Bank of California serves customers statewide through 329 offices.

MIAMI (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - After 33 months of negotiating with its pilots union, and faced with the need to emerge from year-long bankruptcy, Eastern Airlines today filed with the Bankruptcy Court for permission to change the pilots contract to achieve essential cost reductions.

"We are reluctantly forced to resort to the established bankruptcy process to resolve an otherwise intractable problem," said Thomas J. Matthews, senior vice president-human resources and the company's chief labor negotiator. "We have an obligation to be fair to creditors, working employees and others who are dependent upon our resolving successfully the Chapter 11 issue."

Eastern said continuing negotiations with the Air Line Pilots Association have failed to result in a contract agreement and that the parties are still far apart on many major issues.

As the price of a new agreement, the union is insisting that Eastern hire up to 700 pilots for whom there is no work. Cost to the airline would be more than $250 million over the term of the proposed 44-month agreement.

The company last week said the Section 1113 application under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code was one of several steps it planned because of the level of continuing losses.

Other moves include developing a new reorganization plan, trimming operations later this year, reducing the fleet size and "de-hubbing" Miami which has been the source of heavy losses.

A four-month interim pact ratified over the weekend "falls woefully short and leaves unresolved our post-reorganization cost structure," according to Matthews. He noted that the agreement does, however, provide some temporary pay reductions.

Matthews said there is a clear need for permanent productivity chages in the contract which expired July 2, 1988. Those adjustments are not provided in the interim agreement.

Eastern said the proposals, if approved by the court, would create internal equity with other employees -- union and non-union -- who are providing temporary economic concessions.

Since Section 1113 was enacted in 1984, several bankruptcy courts have followed its provisions to allow contract changes after full hearings.

The Bankruptcy Code allows the court 14 to 21 days to schedule a hearing and another 30 days to rule on the application. In contrast, negotiations have been dragging for 33 months, including the past several months under supervision of the National Mediation Board. No deadline has yet been set by the NMB.

Eastern said it prefers to reach a negotiated contract with the pilots, but that ALPA apparently is unwilling to enter into a realistic agreement unless a firm deadline is established.

IRVINE, CA (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Hadson Power Systems, a subsidiary of Hadson Corp. (NYSE: HAD), and Westmoreland Energy Inc., a subsidiary of Westmoreland Coal Co. (NASDAQ: WMOR), announced today that their jointly owned partnership commenced funding in March of $200 million non-recourse construction loans for two of four cogeneration projects in Virginia, after receiving required environmental permits. These funds, as previously announced, are being provided by a group of three banks, Credit Suisse, Barclays Bank PLC and Banque de la Societe Financiere Europeenne (BSFE) under a $400 million construction and term debt project financing. Funds for the remaining two projects will be released by the banks upon the receipt of required environmental permits.

The projects will each be 70 MW gross coal cogeneration units supplying reliable electrical power to Virginia Electric and Power Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Dominion Resources Corp., and steam to existing industrial hosts. Hadson Power Systems will engineer, construct and operate the plants. Westmoreland will provide a portion of the coal supply required by the projects.

Hadson Corp. is an independent producer and supplier of energy products and a defense technology firm as well as an electric power services firm. Hadson has operations in natural gas and gas liquids; the development, construction, operation and ownership of electric power generation facilities; international oil and gas exploration; and defense and space technology.

Westmoreland Energy, a developer and owner of cogeneration and unregulated power plants, is a wholly owned subsidiary of Westmoreland Coal Co., a major low sulfur coal producer and marketer headquartered in Philadelphia, and serving customers worldwide with coal for electric power generation, steel making and other industrial applications. In 1989 the company sold 19.6 million tons of coal and had total revenues of $600 million.

NEW YORK, N.Y. (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - LJ Hooker Corporation, Inc. (Hooker) today received U.S. Bankruptcy Court approval to sell certain assets of its Bonwit Teller specialty retail unit.

A consortium consisting of The Pyramid Companies, Donald Trump, Alfred Taubman and Phil Palevsky has purchased five of the 16 Bonwit Teller stores, along with rights to the Bonwit Teller name. The consortium has said it will continue to operate stores under the Bonwit Teller name in Boston and Buffalo. It stated that the other three Bonwit Teller stores it purchased will be closed. They are located in Trump Tower in New York City, Manhasset, N.Y. and Short Hills, N.J.

Hooker will continue to operate the Bonwit Teller stores located in Hooker-owned malls in Cincinnati, Ohio and Columbia, S.C.

Leases for four of the remaining nine stores to be closed were also sold. They include Bonwit Teller stores in Palm Beach, Fla., which was sold to Frances Brewster; Oakbrook, Ill., which was sold to JMB Properties; Troy, Mich., which was sold to Somerset Realty; and Chicago, which was sold to John Hancock Companies.

Other Bonwit stores to be closed include those located in Scarsdale, N.Y.; Bal Harbour, Fla.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Jenkintown, Pa.; and Kansas City, Mo.

BCS Inc. was awarded the contract to conduct the going-out-of- business sales at the nine stores to be closed. The stores are to be "broom clean" and turned over to their new owners by June 30, 1990.

Sanford C. Sigoloff, chief executive officer of LJ Hooker, said despite the fact that more than 125 Bonwit Teller sales books were sent to prospective buyers, not a single purchaser for more than two of the stores as an ongoing business emerged.

Sigoloff said that outplacement programs would be available to workers affected by the store closings and that letters would be written to local chambers of commerce.

DFW AIRPORT, TX (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - The people of American Airlines are mourning a legend today.

C.R. Smith, the native Texan who helped build American into one of the largest and most successful airlines in the world, died today, Apr. 4, after a lengthy illness. He was 90.

Except for military service during World War II, Smith was chief executive of American from 1934 until his appointment by President Johnson as Secretary of Commerce in 1968.

Smith truly was an aviation pioneer, entering the airline business in the days of open-cockpit bi-planes and later building American from a small and unprofitable carrier into one of the largest and most successful airlines in the world.

So prodigious were Smith's accomplishments that he eventually won membership into two halls of fame -- one for travel and one for business.

In 1934 Smith became president of American Airlines. He served in that capacity until he resigned to enter military service. He returned as head of American in 1945 and served as chief executive until January 1968, when he was appointed Secretary of Commerce by President Lyndon B. Johnson. He served in the Cabinet in the last year of Johnson's administration.

GLOUCESTER, ONTARIO, CANADA (APRIL 4) UPI - A teacher that served worms to his young students has drawn both fierce support and fire from parents.

Teacher Norman Roy used the unusual meal to teach a class of 5-year-olds at Ecole Seraphin-Marion about nutrition. He then sent them home with certificates congratulating them for their new knowledge.

But Nancy Tetreault was not amused when she discovered her daughter's experiment in diet. She called other parents, who angrily contacted the board of education.

About 40 other parents attended a school-board meeting Monday night to support Roy. Some of them called the lesson ''innovative'' and said they hoped for more of the same.

School-board director Norman Collette said such experiments will continue to get the board's blessing. And Denis Chartrand, president of the school's parents' association, said, ''the preparation of the worms was acceptable to the ministry (of education) standards.''

The recipe for baked worms, taken from a book called Foodworks, says the crispy critters can be served with soy or chocolate sauce. However, the recipe warns that worms should not be microwaved because they may explode.

There are NO reports yet of injuries or damages from a severe earthquake that rocked Nicaragua Tuesday afternoon. Radio Sandino says the quake was felt in Managua, where people ran into the streets for fear of buildings collapsing. The radio did NOT report the location of the epicenter, but said the quake measured six-point-six on the open-ended Richter scale. Earthquakes of that magnitude are capable of causing severe damage.

A summit by five Central American presidents at a resort outside Managua was briefly interrupted by the quake. However, the leaders resumed their places and later issued a joint communique. Among other things, the statement calls for the Nicaraguan rebels to disband by April 25th... the day Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro is to take office. The Contras agreed last month to disarm and disband before Chamorro takes power.

NEW YORK POST

The State Department would have us believe that the members of the Palestinian Liberation Organization have honored the commitment made by their chairman, Yasser Arafat, in December 1988 to abandon terrorism.

Would that this were true: But during the past 14 months, PLO constituent groups have publicly taken credit for at least 18 terrorist attacks in Israel.

There is, moreover, abundant documentary evidence that the PLO and Fatah - the largest armed grouping within the PLO (Arafat himself commands Fatah) - have ordered the murder of many West Bank and Gaza Palestinians deemed to have collaborated with the Israelis.

Despite all this, the State Department - in a report submitted to Congress under the provisions of last months's PLO Commmitments Compliance Act - has given the PLO a clean bill of health. ...

The State Department is sadly mistaken if it imagines that such transparent efforts at dissimulation will further the cause of peace in the Middle East. Condoning the PLO's terrorist activities makes virtually no sense at any level. And accepting Arafat's half-hearted claim that the PLO no longer practices terrorism - in the face of overwhelming evidence to the contrary - is the same thing as condoning PLO terror.

The United States and Mexico have had preliminary talks about establishing a free-trade agreement. In the long run - the very long run - such an accord would probably be a good idea.

Free movement of people and goods across borders tends to expand economic activity for all countries in a free-trade zone. With each country using its comparative advantage in certain industries for trade in an open, multinational market, the greatest economic strength can be achieved for all.

But such a pact shouldn't be rushed. Nations in free-trade zones - such as the European Community - need to have many similarities in their economic and cultural structures and traditions. But unlike the talks leading to, say, the recent U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement, U.S. negotiations with Mexico involve two very dissimilar countries: One First World, the other Third. Their economic gears don't yet mesh enough to enable them to unite their economies without causing grave problems for both.

... Mexico should press ahead with opening its economy, with U.S. encouragement by word and deed. Then, perhaps in a few years, the two nations will have enough similarities to make a free-trade agreement workable.

The USA and Soviet Union are unloading their nuclear guns. But look out for whose hand is now on the trigger.

Last week, a U.S.-British sting operation nabbed some illegal buyers of high-voltage capacitators, the type needed to triger a nuclear bomb. The triggers' destination was Iraq. ...

Iraq has been marching down the road to militarism, not industrial production. It used illegal chemical weapons against Iran and allegedly against its own Kurdish people. This week, it threatened to use binary chemical weapons on Israel if Israel interfered with Iraq's military programs. Missiles Iraq has developed are now aimed at Israel.

Experts say Iraq could tip those missiles with nuclear devices in five years. And they might not be alone. By the year 2000, North Korea, Pakistan, Iran, Libya, Brazil, Argentina, and Taiwan may join the exclusive nuclear club that now includes the United States, Soviet Union, Great Britain, France, China, India, and probably Israel and South Africa.

That's a nightmarish possibility - Libya's Moammar Gadhafi with his hands on a nuclear bomb. But it is one some people say we just have to live with. They argue that all nations have a right to nuclear technology, and no effort should be made to control its spread.

That argument is madness, the road to nuclear suicide. .... No nation has the right to point a nuclear gun at the world's head. No one can win that arms race.

Nearly 18 million U.S. taxpayers, confused by the bewildering federal income tax law and intimidated by Internal Revenue Services letters erroneously demanding additional taxes and penalties, last year paid out more than $7 billion they did not owe, Money magazine has estimated.

The IRS disputed the estimate. The magazine blamed the alleged error rate on poorly trained, low-paid IRS clerks and examiners. IRS officials have been saying the tax-collecting system could collapse unless its work force is stabilized and its computers are modernized. Maybe they aren't crying wolf.

At any rate, it is fairly safe to say that unless Uncle Sam spends some of those ill-gotten gains on straightening out matters at the IRS, the taxpayers who got stung will be harder to scare next time.

... Next week the Senate is expected to vote to spend an extra $45 billion a year on a Clean Air Act that is as riddled by bad science as the global warming hoax.

In every element of this bill the likely costs infinitely outweigh minimal benefits, or even do positive harm. That is because it has been written largely by the same people who sold us on global warming.

The Bush administration and Congress are so intimidated by this elitist, wealthy environmental lobby that they are going to pass it regardless of the evidence. The legal costs alone of the Clean Air Act are expected to reach $15 billion - a bonanza for Washington's lawyers but no gain for the environment.

Pesticides that are banned in the United States for health reasons are often returned to supermarkets in this country on imported fruit and vegetables. The net result is that American consumers end up being exposed to dangerous pesticides anyway.

The fact that companies are permitted to export pesticides that are banned in the United States raises a number of questions. The most obvious: If they are considered unsafe for use in the United States, why should they not be considered unsafe for use in other countries?

Indeed, why should they not be considered even less safe, since some other countries are less equipped than the United States to monitor and control their use?

Cleaning up the air isn't cheap. The federal clean air bill being debated in Congress will cost business about $21.5 billion a year. Already, U.S. industry spends about $33 billion a year on air pollution control.

Dirty air isn't cheap either. Estimates vary wildly, but among the lower ones are $10 billion a year for health care and $1 billion in crop losses. A Univesity of Southern California study estimated the cost of air pollution in the Los Angeles area alone as $7 billion yearly, mostly for health care and missed work.

Cost becomes an ever more pertinent consideration as regulations aim at ever smaller improvements in air pollution. New automobiles already are 96 percent cleaner than before pollution controls. The next percentage point of improvement could cost $7.5 billion.

Cost-benefit analyses are often suspect. Industry has a history of crying wolf. Environmentalists can be equally unhelpful. The American Lung Association estimated the cost of vehicle pollution at "between $4 billion and $93 billion."

Further, what price tag can be put on the loss when air pollution turns a pleasant valley with a mountain view into a valley with a view of a brown cloud?

THE ARIZONA REPUBLIC, PHOENIX

Frightening, truly frightening, is about the only description that fits what happened the other day in the U.S. Senate. By a vote of 50 to 49, members of what is reputed to be the "world's greatest deliberative body" turned down legislation that would have handed every coal miner in West Virginia a government check for $100,000.

Good grief. By one vote - one! - senators mustered the necessary courage, not to mention the wisdom, to reject the preposterous $500 million giveway. Yet even more preposterous - and equally spooky - was the motoviation behind the amendment sponsored by Sen. Robert Byrd of - where else? - West Virginia. It was designed to compensate miners for the economic damage that the Senate was about to inflict upon them with its passage of an all-new-and-improved Clean Air Act.

Measured by that score, the taxpayers only have slightly better than a 50-50 chance of being sold down the river by just about any crackpot idea that comes along these days in Congress.

No, it's time for something far greater than the deformed turtles' derring-do. It's time the hardshells' signature interjection "Cowabunga" had its day.

COWABUNGA! What an exquisite expression. What a bully phrase. What a like-totally-radical word. What the heck does it mean?

Gadzooks, the word's not even in Webster's Dudes, it should be, and if the new Ninja Turtle movie does nothing (other than drive parents mad), it should win cowabunga some dictionary dignity.

According to one deformed source, the word first showed up on the old Howdy Doody show. Clarabell the Clown, played by Bob (Capt. Kangaroo) Keeshan, carried a seltzer bottle around zapping people. Chief Thunderthud used to say "Cowabunga" whenever the situation called for it. ...

The word lashes the post-World War II generations together. And with their kids hunkering down with these weird teen turtles, shellshocked baby-boomer parents probably could use all the binding-ties they can get. Cowabunga - a lovely word, punchy and rhythmic as the generations that have uttered it. COWABUNGA, Noah Webster.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 4) UPI - Kaiser Permanente and striking workers agreed to return to the bargaining table with a federal mediator in an effort to end a walkout that has curtailed medical care at the nation's largest health maintenance organization.

Negotiators for Kaiser and Local 399 of the Hospital and Service Employees Union said they would meet Wednesday afternoon with Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service Commissioner Phyllis Cayse. Talks broke off Saturday night and more than 11,000 maintenance and clerical workers and licensed vocational nurses walked off their jobs just after midnight Sunday.

Kaiser said Tuesday the strike had caused the nation's oldest HMO to reduce patient load at the seven affected Southern California hospitals by 50 percent. About three-quarters of the hospitals' beds are normally in use, but as a result of the strike, only 35 percent of the beds were occupied, Kaiser spokeswoman Janice Seib said.

Supervisors and substitute workers were filling in for some of the striking employees, and there have been no serious disruptions in medical care, Seib said. Elective surgery and most non-critical care have been postponed, she said.

The effect on outpatients has not been determined, Seib said, but some disgruntled walk-in patients complained at being turned away.

The strike began at 12:01 a.m. Monday, when most of the 11,200 service, clerical and technical members of Local 399 set up picket lines one minute after their three-year contract expired.

Members of unions representing nurses, food workers and other Kaiser employees supported the walkout and promised they would not perform any work normally done by the strikers, according to Local 399 President Jim Zellers.

Seven hospitals and 45 clinics in Los Angeles, Orange and Ventura counties were affected by the strike. Employees at Kaiser facilities in San Diego, San Bernardino and Riverside counties and in Northern California were not involved in the walkout, nor were registered nurses at any of the facilities.

Five of the company's clinics in Whittier, West Anaheim, Irvine, Fountain Valley and Simi Valley were closed at the onset of the strike, Seib said.

''Closing some of the medical offices to consolidate is part of the (strike) contingency plan,'' she said. ''It is not a reaction to the strike.''

Seib said Kaiser believes it is weathering the strike.

''We seem to be managing quite well. Things are going as planned,'' she said. ''It's a labor-intensive organization. We've had years of practice in these labor disputes, so we had planned for it.''

Kaiser Permanente serves 6.2 million members nationwide and 2.2 million in Southern California. About 90 percent of its members are enrolled through group plans or through their employers.

A tentative contract agreement was reached Thursday, with union officials unanimously endorsing the proposal, Seib said, but the union's rank-and-file rejected the pact Friday by a ratio of more than 2-1.

That $44 million offer called for salary increases of 5 to 6 percent in the first year and 3 to 5 percent in each of the following years of the three-year pact.

The union contends its members have had no meaningful wage increases since the early 1980s, when the number of companies belonging to Kaiser's medical plan fell and employees were told they would have to live with small or no wage increases until the hospitals regained a stable membership.

(APRIL 4) UPI - If Tuesday night's date with the Indiana Pacers and Chicago Bulls was a playoff preview, then both sides gave it a thumbs-up.

The Bulls used a rare balanced attack to score their fifth straight victory, 109-102, but the Pacers limited Michael Jordan to 29 points, including 12 of 12 from the free-throw line.

The Pacers made a statement themselves: Expect them to pound the ball inside on one end of the floor and Jordan on the other.

Although Indiana failed in its bid to tie Milwaukee for the Eastern Conference's sixth playoff berth, it trails the Bucks by only one game with 10 games left for each team in the regular season. The Bulls, who have all but clinched the No. 3 spot, are likely to open against the sixth-seed in the East.

--- AROUND THE NBA ---

Elsewhere, Golden State edged Orlando 127-126, Philadelphia beat Houston 133-112, Detroit defeated Boston 93-82, New York topped Cleveland 106-97, Minnesota edged San Antonio 92-90, Utah routed Charlotte 127-104, the LA Clippers beat Sacramento 114-105, Seattle defeated Portland 136-134, and Phoenix beat Dallas 117-111.

Warriors 127, Magic 126

At Orlando, Fla., Chris Mullin and Mitch Richmond combined for 60 points and Golden State withstood a furious fourth-quarter rally. Trailing 112-87 after three periods, the Magic outscored the Warriors 23-4 to trail 116-108 on Otis Smith's 3-pointer with 7:12 left in the game.

Sixers 133, Rockets 112

At Philadelphia, Charles Barkley scored 26 points and Rick Mahorn added 23 to enable the Philadelphia 76ers to extend their winning streak to eight games. Hersey Hawkins scored 21 points and Mike Gminski had 16 for the 76ers, who defeated the Rockets for the 23rd straight time in the regular season.

Pistons 93, Celtics 82

At Auburn Hills, Mich., James Edwards scored 28 points and Isiah Thomas added 24 to power Detroit. The victory was only the second in the last six games for Detroit, but the Pistons' 15th straight at home.

Knicks 106, Cavaliers 97

At New York, Gerald Wilkins scored 25 points to help the New York Knicks snap a three-game losing streak. Patrick Ewing had 24 points for New York and added 11 rebounds. Johnny Newman had 18 points, Mark Jackson 11 and Ken Walker 10 points and 10 rebounds.

Timberwolves 92, Spurs 90

At San Antonio, Tony Campbell scored 27 points to lead Minnesota past San Antonio. Minnesota, which scored itsr first win over the Spurs, had five players in double figures. Joining Campbell were Tyrone Corbin with 17 points, while Jerome ''Pooh'' Richardson with 16 points and had a career-high 15 assists, and Sam Mitchell and Tod Murphy had 12 apiece.

Jazz 127, Hornets 104

At Salt Lake City, Karl Malone scored 36 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to help Utah snap a two-game losing streak. Utah, which leads the NBA in shooting accuracy at 51 percent, converted 57 percent from the field.

LA Clippers 114, Kings 105

At Sacramento, Los Angeles routed Sacramento, snapping their four-game road losing streak. Charles Smith scored 12 of his team-high 24 points in the fourth quarter.

Sonics 136, Trail Blazers 134

At Seattle, Derrick McKey's 3-point play started a 7-0 run to open overtime, and Seattle then held off Portland. Seattle leads Houston by one game in the battle for the Western Conference's eighth and final playoff spot. The Sonics trail seventh-place Denver by one game.

Suns 117, Mavericks 111

At Phoenix, Kevin Johnson scored eight points, had two assists and one steal in the last four and-a-half minutes to lead Phoenix. Johnson, who finished with 23 points and 20 assists, took over after the Mavericks had rallied from a 13-point deficit at halftime to move within 103-101.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Gunshots hit a Greyhound bus headed to Miami and a Trailways bus running a Kentucky route for Greyhound on Tuesday, placing the resumption of contract talks between striking drivers and the company in further jeopardy.

Greyhound Chairman Fred Currey has vowed that the company, the nation's largest inter-city bus line, will not resume talks with the drivers' union until seven consecutive days pass without reports of ''life-threatening'' violence directed toward Greyhound buses or terminals.

The nationwide walkout, now in its second month, has been marred by at least 28 reported shootings.

The most recent shooting was reported late Tuesday when a Greyhound supervisor in Miami found several dozen indentations from an apparent shotgun blast above a passenger door window, said company spokesman Steve Mead.

A few pellets hit the glass but did not break or crack it, Mead said.

The driver and passengers, who traveled from Los Angeles to Miami, said they did not see or hear gunshots. Mead said the shooting apparently occured after the passengers changed buses in San Antonio.

Another shooting was reported in Upland, Ky., Tuesday morning, when a Trailways bus headed from Nashville, Tenn., to Louisville, Ky., was hit by five shots on the driver's side. Authorities said none of the shots penetrated the bus and neither the Greyhound replacement driver nor the lone passenger were injured.

The company has blamed union leadership for failing to quell the strike-related violence.

Greyhound and the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions were to have met with mediators Monday, but Greyhound executive vice president P. Anthony Lannie backed out of the talks, citing repeated incidents of violence.

Union spokesman Nick Nichols has called the company's accusations a ''smokescreen'' to avoid returning to the bargaining table.

''We continue to believe that the company is using violence as a smokescreen,'' he said. ''If there is some way the union can help law enforcement in their investigations, we're at their call.''

The strike began March 2 after negotiations broke down on a proposed three-year contract for about 9,000 Greyhound union employees, including some 6,300 drivers.

Greyhound, based in Dallas, has accused its drivers, who now average $24,700 a year, of demanding wage increases that could be financed only through fare increases. The drivers accepted wage cuts of 8 percent and 23 percent in their 1983 and 1987 contracts, respectively. The company carried 22 million passengers last year.

#90094u0440 04/04/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - After 13 years of legislative paralysis, the Senate adopted a landmark clean air bill to slice acid rain emissions in half, cut cancer-causing industrial pollution and dissipate smog choking 101 cities.

Senators approved the bill 89-11 Tuesday night and sent it to the House, ending more than two months of floor debate and back-room negotiations with the Bush administration on a bipartisan compromise.

The Senate vote was the first major step by Congress since 1977 to strengthen the Clean Air Act, an effort that repeatedly stalled on Capitol Hill in the 1980s due to strong opposition from the Reagan administration.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said the failure to act had allowed air pollution to worsen substantially over the past decade.

''We've had 13 years of statements, and the air in some places has gotten dirty,'' he said. ''Now we need a law to make the air cleaner everywhere. This bill will do that. It dramatically expands and strengthens the clean air law and does it in the most cost-efficient manner possible.''

While praising the bill, Mitchell also told reporters he would seek to toughen the bill in negotiations with the House. That could provoke a showdown later this year with President Bush, who has threatened to veto any bill that costs industry too much.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said the ''landmark'' bill would probably rank as the Senate's most important accomplishment in 1990. ''I don't think anything else we will do this year will surpass this legislation,'' he said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, returning from a two-day domestic trip with the president, said after the vote, ''We're pleased. We'll work for passage in the House.''

Senate sponsors estimated stricter emission limits on cars, factories and coal-burning power plants will cost the economy $21 billion a year, on top of $32 billion now spent by industry on pollution control. Industry groups said the bill actually will cost $46 million more.

Some Senate opponents said the bill would take a dramatic economic toll. Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he could not support it because its acid rain provisions would devastate his home-state coal industry.

''Clean air need not be bought with reduced economic growth, job losses and human suffering,'' he said.

Environmental activists were unhappy the bill did not go farther to clear the air.

''Without major improvements, this bill will not deliver on the promise of clean air for our children and grandchildren,'' said Blake Early, a spokesman for the Sierra Club, which along with other environmental groups vowed to seek stronger legislation in the House.

In the House, action continued on parallel legislation with members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee voting 43-0 to adopt an important compromise on curbing toxic industrial emissions.

The House is expected to act on its bill by early summer, leading to a House-Senate conference to set the shape of final legislation.

The final legislation will touch every American's pocketbook through higher utility bills, increased auto and gasoline costs and other effects rippling from pollution controls affecting industries ranging from coal mining to petrochemicals to the neighborhood dry cleaner.

Industry officials warned the changes could cost hundreds of thousands of jobs, but agree with environmentalists that the nation must address its gargantuan - and growing - air pollution problems, including:

-An estimated 23 million tons of acid rain emissions belched from coal-burning power plants each year, damaging lakes, streams and forests in the Northeast and Canada.

-About 2.7 billion pounds of nerve-damaging and cancer-causing pollution released by factories each year. The Environmental Protection Agency has regulated only seven of the hundreds of toxic chemicals routinely spewed into the environment.

-Smog-causing emissions from cars and industry that have put 101 cities in violation of federal health standards.

Congress was stymied for years by disputes over acid rain control and the opposition of President Ronald Reagan, but the gridlock was broken last summer when Bush, keeping a 1988 campaign pledge, proposed comprehensive clean air legislation.

The Senate bill incorporates important elements of the president's program most notably, his plan to achieve a 10 million ton reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions from coal-burning power plants by 2000. Sulfur dioxide is a primary cause of acid rain.

The Senate bill also requires the EPA to set limits within 20 years for 191 of the most hazardous toxic air pollutants emitted by industries.

On smog, it sets cleanup measures and schedules to bring most cities into compliance with health standards by 2000. Dirtier cities would have until 2005 or 2010.

The bill also would require the oil and auto industries to start developing and selling cleaner-burning fuels and cars that can use them.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Legislation aimed at encouraging installation of air bags in small cars, which backers said could save more than a thousand lives annually, was approved by the Senate Transportation Committee.

The measure was approved by the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation Tuesday as an amendment to legislation requiring auto makers to meet higher fuel economy levels by the year 2000. The entire bill was sent to the full Senate for consideration.

The amendment would allow auto makers credits toward the federal fuel-economy requirements for installing front-seat air bags in small cars.

''This provision gives auto makers a powerful incentive to put life-saving air bags in small cars,'' said the bill's sponsor, Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo.

Danforth noted the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety has estimated the air-bag provision ''could save up to 1,400 lives a year.'' The measure has the backing of several consumer and insurance trade groups.

Danforth said very few small cars currently come equipped with air bags.

Auto makers currently have a choice between installing air bags or automatic safety belts in new cars.

Under the Danforth amendment, auto makers installing air bags for both driver and passenger front seats in cars with less than a 100-inch wheelbase would receive a 10 percent fuel-economy credit. Installation of driver-side only air bags would warrant a 5 percent credit.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos and her late husband bought U.S. real estate on the advice of then-Vice President George Bush as a hedge against communism, a defense lawyer argued at her fraud trial.

But prosecutors contended in opening statements Tuesday that Marcos ''had a voracious appetite'' for real estate, artwork and jewelry and had ''plundered her people,'' using the Philippines national bank as her ''personal piggy bank.''

''She cracked open that piggy bank and had bundles and bundles of cash delivered to her suite at the Waldorf (hotel) in New York,'' said Assistant U.S. Attorney Debra Livingston.

Marcos is charged with conspiring to hide millions of dollars plundered from the Philippines during the rule of her late husband, ousted President Ferdinand Marcos. The trial before U.S. District Judge John Keenan was expected to last until July.

Livingston called Mrs. Marcos and her co-defendant, arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi, ''partners in crime. ... This is a case about theft, fraud and deceit on an incredible scale.''

Khashoggi's lawyer was expected to make his opening statements Wednesday morning in the trial in U.S. District Court. He is charged with obstruction of justice and fraud for allegedly assisting the Marcoses in their transactions.

Marcos defense lawyer Jerry Spence said during his 3 1/2-hour opening statement Tuesday that Bush, during a 1981 visit to the Philippines, was disturbed when he learned the Philippines first family planned to invest money in Libya.

''Why don't you invest in American properties?'' Spence quoted Bush as asking the couple.

Spence told the jury of seven women and five men that other top U.S. officials, including the head of the CIA, were aware that ''dollars were fleeing out of the country in trainloads.''

Spence described the real estate purchases as part of a plan to stockpile assets out of the reach of communist rebels, to be used in the event of a communist takeover of the impoverished island nation.

''(The monies) were being secreted ... in accordance with the then-Vice President Bush, who we will ask to come to testify ... with a very elaborate, intentional plan,'' Spence said.

''If Mr. Marcos was engaged in racketeering ... so was every president of the United States who knew about it.''

White House spokesman Stephen Hart, asked about a possible subpoena of President Bush, said in Washington, ''We won't comment on a court case in progress.''

Marcos is charged with racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice for allegedly plotting with her husband to divert money stolen from the Philippine treasury into real estate investments around the world including several properties in Manhattan.

Spence has said his defense of Marcos will focus on establishing that she is being wrongfully prosecuted for her late husband's crimes.

In her opening statement, Livingston said that when the Marcoses were forbidden by the courts to dispose of their New York property, they arranged a deal with Khashoggi.

''Enter Adnan Khashoggi, Imelda Marcos's newest partner in crime. ... They devised a scheme to obstruct justice and commit fraud,'' she said, adding that the defendants made up documents ''false from corner to corner and from top to bottom to show Khashoggi owned the buildings.''

Lithuania tops the U-S agenda for pre-summit talks that begin today between Secretary of State Baker and his Soviet counterpart. Soviet foreign minister Shevardnadze arrived in the nation's capital yesterday, saying that ''honest dialogue'' is the best way to address tensions in the rebellious Baltic state.

Teenaged AIDS victim Ryan White has international support as he fights for his life. White is in critical, but stable condition in an Indianapolis hospital with an AIDS-related respiratory ailment. President Bush yesterday dedicated a newly planted tree to White as a ''symbol of new life.''

Republican National Committee boss Lee Atwater is recovering from surgery in a New York hospital where doctors drilled a hole in his skull to implant a radioactive substance to attack a brain tumor. Party officials issued a statement describing the operation yesterday as ''uneventful.''

The start-up of talks between Greyhound and striking workers may be threatened after a Greyhound bus headed to Miami was apparently hit by gunfire late yesterday. Greyhound chairman Fred Currey has vowed that the company will NOT resume contract talks until seven consecutive days pass with NO reports of ''life-threatening'' violence.

The House O-K'd a two-point-four-BILLION-dollar emergency spending bill, with 720-Million dollars of the total for the U-S backed governments of Nicaragua and Panama. The battle now moves to the Senate, where Democratic leader George Mitchell vows to try to cut the aid request unless President Bush comes up with an overall foreign aid package.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Negotiators for Kaiser Permanente hospitals and striking employees agreed to return to the bargaining table as early as this afternoon with a federal mediator in an effort to end the strike. Kaiser says the strike has forced it to cut in half the patient load at seven affected Southern Californian hospitals.

Federal prison officials say convicted insider trader Ivan Boesky gains his freedom today from a Brooklyn, New York, halfway house. Boesky was one of Wall Street's richest stock speculators before pleading guilty in 1987 to violating securities law. He was sentenced to a three-year prison term.

The lead singer in the rock group called Red Hot Chili Peppers has been convicted of sexual battery and indecent exposure after a concert in suburban Washington last year. Jurors recommended that Anthony Kiedis of Los Angeles be fined one-thousand dollars on each charge. A judge set sentencing for Friday.

U-S Trade Representative Carla Hills says the United States and Japan reached a deal that will provide open access to the Japanese public satellite market for American companies. One officials says the Japanese market is worth BILLIONS of dollars in sales to U-S satellite-makers, who have NO real competitors in the world.

Paul Newman may be the next actor to go into politics. Connecticut lawmaker Benjamin DeZinno Junior says he plans to talk with the Oscar-winning actor about running for governor. DeZinno says that Newman has been ''very much involved in Democratic party politics on the national level.'' Newman lives in Westport.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Convicted inside-trader Ivan Boesky, one of Wall Street's richest stock speculators before he pleaded guilty to securities law violations, was released Wednesday from a Brooklyn halfway house, officials said.

Boesky, 53, once a leading Wall Street wheeler-dealer who came to symbolize greed in the 1980s, was released about 5 a.m. from the Brooklyn Community Corrections Center in Brooklyn's Bedord-Stuyvesant section, officials said.

Since Feb. 5, Boesky has been permitted to live at his home on a home confinement program that requires him to report to the halfway house twice a week, said Richard Luna, a spokesman for the Bureau of Prisons.

He came to came into the halfway house and signed the papers that made him a free man and left, said a shift supervisor at the halfway house who answered the telephone but declined to give his name.

''He came in and signed out and left,'' said the supervisor, one of two men on duty at the time.

Boesky will report once a month to a parole officer, said Merle Reams, case manager for the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

''He will be on mandatory release supervision and will be reporting to a parole officer until September 22,'' Reams said.

Boesky was sent to the halfway house Dec. 6, 1989, following his Nov. 6, 1988, release from the minimum security Lompoc Federal Prison Camp in California.

Boesky had been photographed during his incarceration and month-long furlough wearing a flowing beard but, since entering the halfway house, has been seen with trimmer hair and wearing natty business suits.

''A person is allowed to be released to home confinement up to 60 days prior to the release date,'' Luna said. ''He is required to stay at home from 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. and would have to report to the corrections center. He would also be visited by the facility staff at his place of employment.''

Boesky was one of Wall Street's richest stock speculators before he pleaded guilty to violating securities law, paid the government $100 million and agreed to cooperate with a federal investigation as part of a settlement of insider trading charges.

Harvey Pitt, Boesky's lawyer, maintained the record fine would ruin his client financially, but others said he had enough to withstand the payments. Estimates of his fortune started at $150 million.

Boesky was sentenced Dec. 18, 1987, to a three-year prison term and was given 90 days to report to the Lompoc prison. He arrived there one day before the deadline, on March 24, 1988. He applied successfully for a sentence reduction April 15, 1988.

Boesky has reportedly spent some of his prison term trying to raise money for a new investment venture to start upon his release.

Business Week magazine reported in February that Boesky was planning to base his investment group in a country with lenient tax laws for foreign investors, such as the Netherlands Antilles.

Although Boesky was barred for life from the securities industry by the federal Securities and Exchange Commission, a 1940 statute on investment advisers allows anyone to invest for up to 14 clients without having to register.

OCEANSIDE, Calif. (APRIL 4) UPI - A moderate aftershock rocked the Oceanside area early Wednesday, more than three years after the initial quake shook the area, but no injuries or damage were reported, authorities said.

The aftershock, which measured 4.7 on the Richter scale, hit the area at 1:54 a.m., said Robert Finn, a Caltech Seismology Laboratory spokesman.

The epicenter was in the Pacific Ocean, 28 miles southwest of Oceanside, Finn said.

Seismologists said the temblor was an aftershock of the 5.3 quake that hit the area July 13, 1986.

''This is an aftershock even at this late date because the aftershock sequence has never decayed to the area's normal background level,'' Finn said.

There were no reports of damage or injuries, Finn said.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Snow fell in portions of the Middle Atlantic states early Wednesday, blanketing some areas with up to 3 inches, while New England was battered by driving rains and Vermont faced the threat of flooding caused by melting snow.

The National Weather Service said spring snow showered parts of West Virginia, Maryland and western Pennsylvania, where overnight temperatures dipped into the 20s and 30s. Light rain prevailed over most of eastern Pennsyvania and southern New Jersey, where readings reached into the low 40s.

The force behind New England's extended rains, a low off the Atlantic coast, began drifting north of Maine, forecasters said.

Heavy rains brought a flood watch to Vermont, where more than 30 inches of snow fell in the past two weeks. The combination of melting snow and the steady rains contributed to fears of flooding in poor drainage areas.

Wind whipped heavy rain across the region, while temperatures topped out at about 45.

Frost warnings were posted for Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and western North Carolina. Temperatures early Wednesday fell to 39 in Atlanta and Knoxville, Tenn.

Midwestern states were generally above freezing, but a cold front from Canada began pushing colder weather into the region. The states were dry except for light rains showering Iowa, Illinois and Indiana.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms continued across much of New Mexico and western Oklahoma as an upper-level disturbance moved in from Arizona.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms developing in the Texas Panhandle began moving through parts of northern Texas. Dense fog and isolated light rain developed along the Texas-Louisiana Gulf Coast.

Californians experienced a warm evening after the hottest day of the year Tuesday. High temperatures broke into the 80s over most of the interior of the state and in parts of the San Francisco Bay area.

Oregon posted temperatures in the lower 60s along the coast and in the upper 70s inland, continuing a period of warm days 10 to 20 degrees above normal.

Washington basked in more fair weather. A heat trough forming along the West Coast is starting to raise temperatures toward the 70s.

Idaho enjoyed continued warm weather in the 60s and lower 70s, while Montana was partly cloudy and cooler on both sides of the Divide. A warm air mass over Nevada brought above-normal temperatures to much of the Silver State.

Utah experienced a few thunderstorms at higher elevations. Temperatures continue in the 70s, warmer than normal.

Typical spring weather prevailed in Wyoming, where a few showers and thundershowers late Tuesday dissipated and gave way to partly cloudy skies.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (APRIL 4) UPI - Thirteen Vietnamese boat people who fled their homeland seeking a better life in the West returned voluntarily Wednesday after receiving financial incentives under a U.N. repatriation program, officials said.

The departure of the 13 brought to 53 the number of boat people who have voluntarily returned to Vietnam from Malaysia but still left the Third World country struggling to find a solution to the 20,000 others packed in holding camps.

Under the terms of the repatriation program, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, or UNHCR, has agreed to pay Vietnam a monthly cash allowance of $30 per returnee for a one-year period.

Those repatriated also receive help in finding housing and employment as well as other material items to facilitate their reintegration.

Another 108 Vietnamese boat people in Malaysia have submitted repatriation applications, a UNHCR spokesman said.

Despite adopting a screening program aimed at discouraging boat people from seeking refuge here, the exodus from Vietnam continues.

According to figures from relief officials, Hong Kong has 57,000 refugees who fled communist Vietnam by boat, the Philippines 25,000, Thailand 14,000 and Japan, Singapore and South Korea have several thousand among them.

SEOUL, South Korea (APRIL 4) UPI - The ruling Democratic Liberal Party, born through the merger of three political groups led by President Roh Tae-woo and two former opposition leaders, suffered a defeat in one of two parliamentary by-elections, returns showed Wednesday.

The setback was humiliating to the ruling party, which had hoped to sweep both by-elections to confirm popular confidence in the new political alignment.

The final ballot count in the Chinchon constituency 55 miles southeast of Seoul, the scene of one of the two by-elections Tuesday, favored opposition politician Huh Tak over government candidate Min Tae-ku by more than 6,000 votes.

Huh Tak represents a group of opposition politicians seeking to inaugurate what is tentatively called the Democratic Party, which refused to join the new ruling party.

In the Taegu electoral district, 150 miles southeast of Seoul, government candidate Moon Hee-gab, a former top economics aide to Roh, won election by an 8,500-vote margin.

The main opposition Party for Peace and Democracy led by Kim Dae Jung did not put up candidates for the two by-elections. Kim wants the present National Assembly to be dissolved so new elections may be called to seek a popular verdict on the recent political change.

The government party now controls 217 of the 299 parliamentary seats against 70 held by Kim's party and 12 by independents, eight of whom will soon be identified as Democrats.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Secretary of State Baker and his Soviet counterpart meet today... the Senate has approved clean air legislation... more buses hit by gunfire... and a winged rocket makes its first flight today. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

The two men are scheduled to use three days of meetings to lay the groundwork for the June summit between Presidents Bush and Gorbachev .

But it is also expected that Baker and Shevardnadze will bide their time discussing the situation in Lithuania.

Shevardnadze recognized the U-S concern for a peaceful resolution of tensions between Moscow and the rebellious Baltic republic when he arrived in the United States yesterday. Shevardnadze said the Soviet Union plans to extinguish the problem through what he called ''an honest dialogue.''

His statement came as Soviet and Lithuanian officials met in Moscow to discuss the situation for the first time since Lithuania's nationalist parliament declared independence last month.

The State Department says Baker and Shevardnadze will discuss a possible summit date, arms control, trade and the environment.

The Senate has ended more than one-decade of environmental legislative inaction.

Last night, senators passed a landmark clean air bill aimed at reducing pollution in the United States.

The bi-partisan measure follows two months of debate and closed-door sessions over how to resolve the nation's ever-increasing problem with issues such as acid rain and toxic industrial pollution.

Senate Majority leader George Mitchell praised the bill for strengthening the 1977 Clean Air Act in the most cost-efficient manner possible.

But the bill has critics from both sides of the issue.

West Virginia Democrat Robert Byrd opposed the legislation because he views it as potentially destructive to his state's coal-based economy.

Environmentalists criticized the secrecy with which the bill was hammered out and contend it does NOT go far enough to protect future generations.

A Sierra Club spokesman says his group will press the House to adopt more stringent standards when it considers the Senate bill.

(APRIL 4) UPI - The strike against Greyhound bus lines shows NO signs of ending as company officials report new violence against buses.

Greyhound boss Fred Currey says the nation's largest intercity bus line will NOT resume contract talks until seven consecutive days pass with NO reports of ''life-threatening'' violence.

But the resumption of talks may be in further jeopardy after reports of new violence. Greyhound spokesman Steve Meade says a bus supervisor in Miami found several dozen indentations from an apparent gunshot blast.

The driver and passengers who traveled the Los Angeles-to-Miami run say they did NOT see or hear gunshots. Mead says the shooting apparently occurred after the passengers changed buses in San Antonio.

Earlier yesterday, gunshots hit a Trailways bus running a Kentucky route for Greyhound. NO one was injured in either shooting.

The nationwide strike is in its second month and has been marred by at least 28 reported shootings. Greyhound blames union leadership for failing to stop the strike-related violence.

The fraud and conspiracy trial of former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos is underway in New York.

The U-S government contends that Marcos spirited hundreds-of-Millions of dollars from the Philippines and deposited the money in real estate investments around the world, including several properties in Manhattan.

The attorney for Marcos did NOT deny that Marcos and her dead husband, Ferdinand, drew upon money from the Philippine treasury and invested the money around the world.

But lawyer Jerry Spence said the Marcos and his wife used the money in an ''intentional, deliberate'' fashion to stockpile a reserve of assets if their government was overrun by communists. He offered to call President Bush to the stand to reveal U-S knowledge of Philippine investments in America.

Government attorneys dismissed Spence's argument, arguing that Marcos and her co-defendant Adnan Khashoggi were motivated by greed and NOT patriotism.

(APRIL 4) UPI - As AIDS victim Ryan White continues his fight for life, he is receiving the support of hundreds of people.

Hundreds of phone calls have poured into Riley Hospital for Children in Indianapolis where the 18-year-old AIDS victim faces what his doctor calls ''clearly the most critical infection he has had.''

Singer Elton John visited White's bedside yesterday, but the two were NOT able to talk because the youth is heavily sedated. Doctors say White is in critical, but stable condition with an AIDS-related respiratory ailment.

Singers Michael Jackson, Johnny Cash, and the Statler Brothers have called to express their concern and support. Former President Reagan and his wife Nancy, say they are keeping White in their prayers.

President Bush yesterday dedicated a tree to White during a planting ceremony yesterday in Indianapolis.

White is a hemophiliac who contracted AIDS in 1984 when he received a tainted blood-clotting agent during a transfusion.

A unique winged rocket named Pegasus is scheduled to be launched for the first time from a B-52 jet today in a commercial venture to develop low-cost access to space.

The idea is to put small military, scientific and commercial satellites into orbit without using larger and more expensive boosters.

Plans call for the Pegasus rocket to be dropped from the right wing of a NASA Bm, e-d-t as the plane travels over the Pacific Ocean southwest of Monteray, California.

The rocket is the brainchild of Orbital Sciences Corporation of Fairfax, Virginia, and Hercules Aerospace of Wilmington, Delaware. If all goes as planned, the solid-fuel rocket's first stage will ignite seconds after release from the jet at 40-thousand feet.

Officials say the rocket is capable of putting satellites weighting up to 900 pounds into low-Earth orbits. For the flight today, Pegasus has a 450-pound satellite scheduled to be fired at a 370-mile high orbit around Earth's poles.

Orbital Sciences reportedly spent close to 50-Million dollars developing the UNusual rocket.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed lower Wednesday in moderate trading as investors failed to sustain a morning rally amid some late profit taking.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which advanced 757.65 points Tuesday in the wake of the second-worst tumble the previous day, lost 316.78 points, or 1.1 percent, of its value to close at 28,442.94.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Index of all listed major shares fell 35.15 points to 2,075.96.

Trading was moderate with a turnover estimated at 560 million shares, compared with 647 million shares Tuesday.

Declines hammered advances 742 to 180 with 100 issues unchanged.

Elsewhere in Asia, prices closed slightly lower in light trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange as large institutional investors stepped to the sidelines ahead of a national holiday.

The key Hang Seng Index, which climbed 27.75 points Tuesday, slipped 1.57 points to 2,960.88. Financials edged up 4.00 points, utilities fell 13.38, industrials gained 3.84 and properties slipped 8.58 points.

Turnover amounted to 1.18 billion shares, compared with 1.14 billion shares Tuesday.

In Australia, stock prices rebounded in moderate trading on the Sydney Sharemarket boosted by the decision of the Reserve Bank of Australia to ease monetary policy.

The blue-chip All Ordinaries Index, which eased 1.7 points Tuesday, climbed 11.4 points to 1,516.8.

OGRODNIKI, Poland (APRIL 4) UPI - Traffic ground to a halt Wednesday at the only Polish-Lithuanian crossing point after the Soviet Union closed the border and declared it will prevent all trips by foreigners into the rebellious republic.

''Now the people have learned that the traffic has been suspended so they do not come here,'' said one Polish customs officer at the deserted crossing point in the northeastern Poland.

The officer said the Soviet Union sent reinforcements to the border area and the beefed-up staff is chiefly made of people brought in from Moscow. Previously, Lithuanians handled customs procedures at the crossing.

In Warsaw, Poland, Soviet Embassy spokesman Nikolai Trucuk confirmed all trips to Lithuania by foreigners were suspended and said future trips will be permitted only with valid visas. Previously, visas were not needed by Poles for travel to the Soviet Union.

Trucuk also said foreigners will be prohibited from entering Lithuania through any other republic, including Belorussia through which Poles often travel by train or car.

''If foreigners entering Lithuania from Belorussia are stopped, they will face legal consequences. It is not allowed,'' he said.

Other checkpoints between Poland and the Soviet Union remained open.

In a steady drizzle Wednesday, there were no cars at the only crossing point from Poland into the Baltic republic of Lithuania, which on average had been cleared by 3,000 Poles a day.

The move to close the border was the latest step taken by Moscow in the escalating battle with Lithuania, which on March 11 declared its independence from the Soviet Union.

In a surprise move, Soviet authorities suspended traffic near the northeastern Polish village of Ogrodniki Monday morning, bringing protests from the Polish government, which called for immediate talks with Moscow.

Visiting Lithuanians and Poles were allowed back into their homeland but warned now they would need visas for a return visit.

Lithuania, with 3.8 million people, has a large Polish population of more than 400,000. About one-third of the republic is former Polish territory which was ceded to the Soviet Union as part of the post World War II settlement in which Poland took over parts of Germany, and many ethnic Poles in Lithuania retain close ties with relatives in Poland.

''It looks like the Iron Curtain is being built again in this area,'' said a Lithuanian in his 40s whose Soviet Samara vehicle was loaded with goods after a visit with relatives.

A gray-haired Polish engineer in his 50s who lives in nearby Suwalki and works in the Soviet town of Klaipeda, about 50 miles from the border, was told he would have to go via Brest - a 430-mile detour.

''Idiocy!'' he spat.

A busload of Armenians - most of them wearing bluejeans bought in Poland - pulled up to the border crossing at dusk, heading for Minsk to meet flights home Wednesday. But the guide and the bus were Polish, and Soviet border guards refused to let them proceed.

''You can walk to Minsk,'' said one Soviet soldier when the Armenians complained they had little food or money.

One passenger replied, ''So this is the new policy of (Soviet President Mikhail) Gorbachev?''

Another said, ''They talk a lot about friendship, and now we see it at the border.''

Polish border guards said it appeared the Soviet Union would allow Poles to cross into Lithuania to transport goods or conduct business. They said Poles could obtain Soviet visas in Gdansk and Warsaw.

COLUMBIA, SC (APRIL 4) UPI - Imprisoned soul singer James Brown, the self-professed "hardest working man in show business," is getting back into the job market through a Department of Corrections work release program.

But Brown, 56, has been assigned a job with the Aiken and Barnwell Counties Community Action Commission, headquartered in Aiken, S.C. "Mr. Brown's duties will involve community appearances, talking with young people and raising the consciousness of the public with regard to those who are poor, hungry, and homeless," said Corrections Department spokesman Francis Archibald.

The prison spokesman said Brown, who is serving concurrent six-year prison terms for trying to run down police officers during a 1988 car chase along the South Carolina-Georgia border, will spend nights and weekends at the Lower Savannah Work Center, a minimum-security prison in Aiken County. Brown is expected to begin his job in about two weeks when bed space at the work release center becomes available.

The Grammy-winning entertainer had several job offers, ranging from disc jockey to singing trolley car conductor. Archibald declined to reveal the salary Brown will receive from the Action Commission, saying only that "it meets the federal minimum wage guidelines and is between the employer and employee."

The job in Aiken was approved by Corrections Commissioner Parker Evatt, whose selection was influenced by the fact that Aiken is near Brown's home in Beech Island, S.C.

"The possibility exists that he may qualify for extended work release later in the summer," Archibald said. "With that in mind, Commissioner Evatt approved a job that is consistent with work release and extended work release in an area nearest to Brown's home."

In extended work release, Brown would be allowed to live in an approved residence under the supervision of the Department of Probation, Parole, and Pardon Services. Approval for that program will hinge on his conduct while on regular work release, Archibald said.

The "Godfather of Soul" currently is serving his sentences at a state prison in Columbia. Brown was convicted and sentenced in both Georgia and South Carolina for an incident that began Sept. 24, 1988, at a building in Augusta, Ga., owned by the singer.

Police said Brown stormed into the building, waving a shotgun at people attending an insurance seminar. Authorities said the singer apparently was angry that someone had used his private bathroom.

Officers chased Brown across the state line into South Carolina, where they said he tried to run over them with his pickup truck. The officers shot out the tires on the vehicle, and Brown limped back into Georgia on the rims.

He tested positive for the drug PCP, also known as angel dust, after that incident and pleaded no contest to possession of the drug after an earlier run-in with authorities in Aiken County.

Before his convictions in connection with the car chase, Brown had a series of confrontations with area authorities, including two highly publicized domestic disputes at his Beech Island home. In one of the cases Brown's wife claimed the singer shot at her as she drove away in a car.

Brown's high-energy style has won him countless fans across the United States and abroad. His best-known tunes include "Papa's Got a Brand New Bag," "It's a Man's World" and the 1987 Grammy winner "Living in America."

Analysis By: Helen Thomas

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - For years American presidents have been trying to persuade the Japanese to make trade a two-way street. The effort has been unsuccessful, to put it mildly. Meanwhile, the trade imbalance has grown to a point where threats of retaliation from Congress are real and the voices are becoming louder.

For the last several decades, presidents have traveled to Tokyo, each time with the trade issue at the top of the agenda. Each time, the meetings are concluded with grandiose announcements to set up a new commission to study the problem. And each time the commission has failed to produce a solution.

In the past, the Japanese government has been able to stay ahead of the trade controversy because the State Department has usually intervened, urging a cautious non-confrontational approach on security grounds. With memories still vivid of World War II, the United States would not like to see Japan build up again into an independent military power.

Hence concessions are made by the United States and it continues to tread lightly. So Japanese cars, television sets and tape recorders have cornered the U.S. market, but U.S. timber and other products can't make a dent among Japanese buyers.

Most of all California rice is shunned in Japan although it is sold by ton loads in other parts of Asia. Not one rice grain will the Japanese buy on grounds that rice is their staple and they cannot afford to have a foreign supplier compete in their market.

Industrially speaking, Japan remains a closed society. At the time of the onslaught of Vietnamese boat people fleeing the communist takeover, Japan gave money, but would not take in one refugee.

Now comes a mouthful called the "structural impediment initiative," which is the U.S. way of telling Japan to "shape up," said one U.S. official.

The Japanese have their side of the story, which is that the United States has to change its ways of doing business, that it should try to reduce its overwhelming budget deficit, increase savings, and do a lot more to get its own industries back on track.

Each side has valid arguments and while the United States is trying to tell Japan to open up its markets to U.S. goods, Japan is telling the Americans they are going to become a third class power unless changes are made.

While there have been many impasses, the changes in global politics are having an impact in terms of Asian security and international economies. The winds of change are affecting both countries, and each side seems to be preparing for the end of the 20th century and the beginning of the 21st.

The problems are not new but they seem to be more pressing these days, and there is more pressure from Capitol Hill. The official involvement is at the highest-level in both governments, with President Bush and Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu playing a strong hand in negotiations and calling the shots.

Bush and Kaifu met in Palm Springs last month, but failed to come up with specific measures that would narrow the U.S. trade deficit. The Japanese stock market has suffered a sharp drop since then and the dollar has climbed in strength and stability against the Japanese yen. Both developments could increase Japanese opposition to opening markets to U.S. goods.

As of January, the montly U.S. trade deficit with Japan stood at about $2.9 billion. The annual trade deficit between the two countries has been running steadily at about $49 billion.

Most of all, both countries are hoping to head off an open-ended trade war between the world's two largest trading nations. Neither side wants a showdown, but it may come to that.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Diplomats say that Middle East peace is the focus of a Paris meeting today involving former President Carter and P-L-0 chief Yasser Arafat. Carter helped draft the 1978 Camp David peace accord and the 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty. Diplomatic sources say Carter UNofficially will act as an emissary of Secretary of State Baker.

Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze hopes to engage in ''honest dialogue'' during pre-summit talks that begin today in Washington. Shevardnadze meets with Secretary of State Baker this afternoon to discuss the trouble in Lithuania. Shevardnadze's visit is a prelude to a Washington summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev which is scheduled for June.

The Senate is the next battlefield for a two-point-four BILLION-dollar emergency spending bill that includes aid for the governments of Panama and Nicaragua. The House passed the measure yesterday. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell vows to lead attempts to slash the 720-Million-dollar aid request in the bill... unless the Bush administration sends Congress an overall foreign aid package.

Pop singer Gloria Estefan plans to hold a news conference today, then walk out of a New York hospital, less than two weeks after she underwent delicate back surgery. The lead singer of the Miami Sound Machine is expected to be released today from the Hospital for Joint Diseases in Manhattan. Estefan had spinal surgery after being injured when her tour bus collided with a truck on a snowy Pennsylvania highway.

Lithuanian lawmakers tell of a possible breakthrough in the crisis over the Baltic republic's bid for independence. A close associate of Soviet leader Gorbachev met with Lithuania's deputy prime minister. One Lithuanian lawmaker characterized the meeting as ''consultations and conversations,'' NOT negotiations. It comes after Lithuania's president earlier this week said the Baltic state is willing to delay independence.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley has begun a program to fight rodents in the city. Daley took his fight against rats to an alley on the city's West Side, where he used a garbage can as a podium to declare his rat-fighting program. The city now has a hotline that residents can call to report areas troubled by rats. City officials vow strict enforcement of sanitation codes.

Michigan officials report that moose passion apparently has NO limit. State Natural Resources department officials say female moose from Canada have been swimming the icy St. Mary's River from Canada to get to the male moose in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. Biologist Rob Aho says he suspects that Michigan's bull moose may be younger and more virile than their Canadian counterparts.

Teeth-chattering cold hit the central Eastern states, where snow fell this morning, leaving behind as much as three inches in some areas. Snow blanketed parts of West Virginia, Maryland and western Pennsylvania, where temperatures were in the mid-20's to the low 30's. Most of New England was drenched by rain, while frost warnings were posted for Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and western North Carolina.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Standard & Poors Corp. has affirmed the credit ratings of Shearson Lehman Hutton Holdings Inc., prompted by the firm's announcement that it will take a $630 million restructuring charge in the first quarter.

S&P Tuesday affirmed its ratings on Shearson's commercial paper, senior debt, subordinated debt and preferred stock as well as the ratings on the commercial paper and subordinated debt of Shearson's broker-dealer arm, Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

S&P also affirmed its ratings on certificates of deposit at Shearson's Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. and the senior debt rating of E.F. Hutton Group Inc.

Shearson announced Monday it will take a $630 million restructuring charge for its efforts to boost profitability, the largest one-time charge in Wall Street history.

A combination of the restructuring charge, operating losses estimated at $110 million to $130 million and another one-time accounting charge of $157 million is expected to result in a first-quarter loss of $897 million to $917 million, the securities firm said.

S&P said it based its ratings on the ongoing liquidity and capital support of Shearson's parent, American Express Co.

''S&P views Shearson's reserve action as a positive step toward reducing operating costs and asset risk,'' the rating agency said. ''This move is expected to better position Shearson to restore its profitability, refocus on its profitable business lines and contain its modest real estate and bridge loan exposure.''

S&P added that Shearson's capital levels ''remain low relative to the company's asset mix.''

''Shearson's capital levels could further weaken if first quarter operating losses and modest junk bond markdowns continue,'' S&P said.

Shearson said its restructuring charge reflected recent cost-cutting efforts that included laying off 2,000 employees, withdrawing from some businesses and scaling back in others.

Shearson has been trying in recent months to complete a recapitalization program to stave off a downgrading of its credit rating.

As a result of the charge and cost-cutting efforts, Shearson said it expects to realize improved annual profits of more than $400 million.

The benefits, along with a $1.15 billion capital boost from American Express and outside investors, should begin to be realized in the second quarter, the company said.

On Monday, Moody's Investors Service Inc. confirmed the ratings of Shearson's senior debt and commercial paper and the ratings of the subordinated debt and commercial paper of the broker-dealer subsidiary.

The $1.15 billion in additional capital included an infusion from American Express of $750 million in equity and $250 million in money market preferred and $150 million in senior capital notes placed with outside institutional investors.

Last week, Shearson and American Express also reached a definitive agreement on American Express' plan to buy all the outstanding shares of Shearson in a deal estimated at $370 million.

BEIJING (APRIL 4) UPI - Some delegates ignored warnings to toe the Communist Party line and unexpectedly rejected or refused to vote on key government reports Wednesday at the close of the annual session of parliament, which passed laws on Hong Kong and foreign investment.

The dissent did not jeopardize any of the government's proposals or reports during the two-week session of the National Peoples' Congress, a rubber-stamp body that ratifies decisions approved in advance by the Communist Party leadership.

Opposing votes have been cast in parliament in the past, as during the 1988 and 1989 sessions of parliament, which were marked by freer debate in a public relations campaign to show greater openness.

But this year, officials had privately warned delegates to toe the party line amid fallout from the crackdown on last year's pro-democracy movement and during a climate of repression to prevent a recurrence as the anniversary of the movement neared.

As a result, this year's session, which began March 20, was substantially more sedate, with open dissent confined to balky delegates from Hong Kong.

Along with the key reports, the congress also approved the Basic Law, the mini-constitution under which Hong Kong will be ruled after it reverts to Chinese sovereignty from Britain in 1997. The law has met with sharp criticism in Hong Kong as inadequate.

The legislature also approved amendments to China's Sino-foreign joint venture law to improve the climate for foreign investment. Foreign business executives have welcomed the changes but said they do not go far enough to resolve their problems.

However, several hundred of the 2,713 delegates present at the closing meeting, in the huge main auditorium of the Great Hall of the People, took the opportunity of the perfunctory voting on the government reports to voice disapproval.

A total of 442 delegates voted no, abstained or did not vote on the annual report on crime submitted by China's attorney general's office. The report warned authorities would keep a tight grip on security.

On a report by the president of China's supreme court, who railed against ''hostile foreign forces'' for trying to subvert the country, 254 delegates did not approve.

A total of 232 delegates voted no, abstained or did not vote on Premier LI Peng's government ''work report,'' the major document of the session, which promised continued economic austerity, tighter political control and renewed mass ideological campaigns.

The annual budget report, which warned of a ''grim'' financial situation but gave its biggest increase to the military, prompted 163 delegates to vote no, abstain or not vote.

An NPC official at the Great Hall during the voting told an American reporter that despite a new electronic voting system, the government did not keep track of which delegates voted no.

''Since the large majority support the resolutions, we don't need to know who opposed them,'' the official said.

The approval of the Basic Law sets in motion the legal basis under which Hong Kong will operate until it becomes a ''special administrative region'' of China in 1997, when Britain hands the territory back to Beijing.

China has pledged to allow Hong Kong to retain its capitalist system for 50 years beyond 1997 but last years crackdown on the pro-democracy movement heightened fears among the territory's 6 million people and speeded an exodus of the middle-class overseas.

Hong Kong opponents have criticized the law as inadequate in its human rights guarantees and in its provisions on the pace of democracy in the territory's administration.

Most of the territorial legislature, which is now appointed by the British-dominated government, will be appointed by Chinese authorities after 1997.

At a news conference following the closing session Wednesday, Vice Premier Wu Xueqian warned that during the transition, ''all preparations should be done in accordance with the principles stipulated in the Basic Law.''

He also called on Britain and Hong Kong authorities to help ''ensure a steady transition period and also smooth transfer of power.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - About 40 percent of people with a family history of heart disease have not had their cholesterol tested, even though most think they should, a poll showed Tuesday.

A Gallup Organization survey, commissioned by Merck Sharp & Dohme of West Point, Pa., which makes cholesterol-lowering drugs, found 54 percent of 1,000 respondents and their spouses had ever undergone cholesterol testing.

Of the 647 people with a family history of heart disease, 58 percent had their cholesterol checked at least once, while 42 percent had not. About 96 percent of respondents said they think people who have a family history of heart disease should have their cholesterol levels tested.

About 85 percent said they have started cooking more low-fat meals in the past year or two, and 74 percent said they read food labels for cholesterol and fat content.

Studies have linked high levels of cholesterol in the blood with increased risk of coronary heart disease.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - The jury considering John Poindexter's guilt or innocence in the Iran-Contra scandal deliberated for a third day Wednesday after spending the night at an undisclosed hotel.

Accompanied by U.S. marshals, the jurors returned to the federal courthouse and resumed deliberations shortly before 10 a.m. EDT.

Poindexter, 53, the last of the original Iran-Contra defendants, is the highest Reagan administration official to stand trial in the Iran-Contra scandal.

The retired Navy rear admiral is accused of five felonies involving obstruction of Congress, conspiracy and the destruction of official government documents.

The panel of eight women and four men was ordered sequestered Tuesday by an angry U.S. District Judge Harold Greene after two members of the panel were contacted by the press, nearly causing a mistrial.

Because the jurors hung up their telephones before discussing the case, Greene ruled that the panel had not been tainted. But he sequestered the jury as a precaution, citing the ''irresponsible behavior of the press.''

Also, at a second hearing late Tuesday, the judge denied a request by the jury for copies of more than 5,000 electronic messages deleted from Poindexter's White House computer files as the Iran-Contra scandal became unglued in late November 1986.

The messages, which were recreated from backup tapes, form part of the Iran-Contra special prosecutor's case against Poindexter.

In his denial, Greene told the jurors that the bulk of the messages did not become evidence during the trial.

During the brief hearing, the judge said, ''Because they're not in evidence, you can't have them.''

Prosecutors have charged that Poindexter masterminded a White House coverup to protect Ronald Reagan from extreme political embarrassment during his final term as president.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 4) UPI - Nelson Mandela dismissed suggestions Wednesday of a split in the African National Congress and said the resumption of peace talks would depend on his meeting with President Frederik de Klerk.

Mandela, accompanied by three aides, including Lusaka-based ANC intelligence chief Jacob Zuma, will meet de Klerk in Cape Town Thursday on the decision to suspend talks with the goverment to protest the deaths of 11 demonstrators in police gunfire last week.

The talks scheduled for April 11 and called off Friday were to address remaining obstacles to formal power-sharing negotiations between the black majority and the white government, including de Klerk's refusal to end a 4-year-old state of emergency.

''We cannot state now any possible date for dissussions between the ANC and the government,'' Mandela told a news conference in Johannesburg after a two-day visit to the strife-torn province of Natal.

''That will depend on the result of the discussions that we are going to have tomorrow.''

''The meeting was suggested by President de Klerk and I don't know what he is going to put to me,'' he said. ''I can only give Mr. de Klerk the opportunity to make any suggestions.

Mandela declined to discuss what he would raise with de Klerk, but lashed out for a second day at Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok for the perceived support by the police of the rival Zulu Inkatha movement in fighting against ANC-linked movements in Natal.

Mandela faulted de Klerk for failing to consult local black leaders before announcing the deployment of additional army units in Natal to quell fighting that has left 58 dead in a week, but said the army ''will certainly play a better role than the police.''

''There are very grave allegations from the people in the area,'' Mandela said. ''People in the area would even prefer the army to be used for the purpose of stopping the violence but certainly not the police.''

The English-language daily Citizen quoted security sources Wednesday as saying an initial contingent of 2,000 troops would be deployed in Natal in support of a police force led by a Zulu speaking police brigadier, Jaap Burger.

The suspension of the April 11 talks prompted speculation of a rupture within the leadership of the ANC - with the moderate old guard led by Mandela giving way to more radical leaders worried about losing support among the country's militant youth.

Mandela dismissed the reports as containing ''not the slightest grain of truth.''

''There are no substantial differences at all on the question of tactics and strategies of the ANC,'' he said. ''The suspension of the meeting is a unanimous decision of the National Executive (Committee in Lusaka) supported by the leadership inside the country.''

''Unity in the ANC has never been greater,'' he added.

''The fact that I've accepted the invitation by the state president to discuss the suspension of the meeting between the ANC and the government refutes that perception,'' he said. ''It shows we are keen to find a solution.

''But of course we are not going to allow the government to preach peace on one side and conduct a war against us on the other.''

Talks are scheduled to begin this afternoon between Kaiser Permanente and union leaders representing more than 11-thousand medical employees. Workers walked out two days ago after rejecting a contract proposal from the health care giant.

A Connecticut state representative says he plans to meet with Academy Award-winning actor Paul Newman next week to determine if Newman is interested in pursuing the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

A decade-long study of American men shows that lifestyle changes like eating low-fat foods and stopping smoking can slash the death rate of men at high risk of developing heart disease. The study involved more than 12-thousand men.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 4) UPI - Sarah Vaughan, a legendary entertainer whose operatic range and horn-like effects changed the art of jazz singing, died of lung cancer at age 66.

Vaughan died at 9:20 p.m. Tuesday at her home in the exclusive community of Hidden Hills in the San Fernando Valley, said Los Angeles Times jazz critic Leonard Feather, who said he has known Vaughan her entire professional life.

Vaughan, who got her break at age 16 at the Apollo Theater in Harlem, was nicknamed "Sassy" for her onstage demeanor and "The Divine One" for her voice.

What she did with her voice, a dark contralto made huskier through the years from smoking, made it made it easy for listeners to exaggerate her range. "They say four octaves but it's not true. Two octaves and a fifth maybe," Vaughan said in a 1986 interview. "Maybe a little more."

She darted and swooped up and down the register, embellishing on the way. Her lower register richened and deepened over the years but her falseto remained effortless and pure. She was a popular performer - in jazz clubs, at jazz festivals worldwide, and with symphonies, where her material favored George Gershwin.

Her concept of the vocal art was tied closely to the improvisational ideas of the bop and post-bop musicians with whom she played early in her career. Vaughan sometimes forgot the lyrics of a particular song because she was thinking of the notes and the phrasings, like a horn player.

She was a stickler for the right tempo on each song, for breathing, for comfort, for expression. She reworked melodies and built on them. Her voice would jump an octave, then slide back down smoothly, like a trombone's portamento.

In spite of more than four decades as a performer, she was always nervous before going on stage, wringing her hands and mopping her brow in the wings and on stage.

Vaughan was born March 27, 1924, into a musical family in Newark, N.J. Her father, Asbury, was a carpenter who played guitar and sang folk songs. Sarah joined her mother, Ada, in the church choir and continued her education in piano and voice at a high school for the arts.

Her big break came at age 16 when she entered an amateur show at the Apollo. She sang "Body and Soul" in such a way that she stunned singers Billy Eckstine and Ella Fitzgerald, who were in the audience.

Before the day was out, Fitzgerald warned her about agents and managers and Eckstine recommeneded that Earl "Fatha" Hines hire her. She joined as vocalist and second pianist and when the Hines band broke up a year later, Eckstine formed his own band, hiring Vaughan as his co-vocalist.

Vaughan, recorded her share of jazz classics, including "Don't Blame Me" and "I Cover The Waterfront." Her first hit, "It's Magic," sold more than two million records.

Her most popular songs, staples of her 1980s concert repertoire, included "Misty," "Perdido" and "Send In the Clowns," which served as her usual concert-closing encore.

Though she won countless awards over the years as best jazz vocalist, Vaughan said she believed there was no such thing as a jazz singer. "That's a title. They give us all titles," she said. "They've got so many titles I don't know which music is which. People tend to categorize. I just sing. I sing whatever I can."

Bob James, her accompanist for four years in the late 1960s, disagreed with her viewpoint. "When I first started working with her, I discovered that she really was, in the best sense of the word, a jazz musician. She is an improvisor, she can respond in the most subtle and fantastic way to anything that goes on around her.

"That made it tremendously inspiring to play for her, because you knew that anytime you might come up with an inspired chord or a rhythm or a treatment of an arrangenent for her, that it would change immediately the way she sang. She'd respond to it. She was a terrific pianist, too, so I had the intimidating experience of knowing that if I didn't get it right, Sarah would sit down and say, 'Bob, this is the way it should go."'

In 1985, Vaughan was featured on the album "The Planet is Alive ... Let It Live!" Its foundation was six poems written by Pope John Paul II when he was a young Polish priest named Karol Wojtyla.

In 1986, she joined opera diva Dame Kiri Te Kanawa, Jose Carreras and Mandy Patinkin in a studio recording of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific," in which she sang the role of Bloody Mary.

In her later years, Vaughan remained fussy about her repertoire. Her most recent top-selling recording was a Latin album, "Brazilian Romances," recorded in 1988.

Vaughan married trumpeter George Treadwell in 1946. During their ten-year marriage, he served as her manager. Her marriage to former pro football player Clyde Atkins ended in 1966. In 1971, Vaughan married Las Vegas restaurateur Marshall Fisher, divorcing him in 1977. Her fourth marriage, in 1978, to musician Waymon Reed, was her briefest. Vaughan is survived by an adopted daughter, Deborah.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Pop star Gloria Estefan checked out of a hospital Wednesday and stood triumphantly to tell cheering fans that she was "thankful for the miracle of being alive" after surgery to repair her broken back.

"I've been overwhelmed with the love and concern that you've all shown me " Estefan, 32, the lead singer of the Miami Sound Machine, told the crowd of reporters and photographers. "I want to thank the 'Conga' fans, the people who sent flowers, gifts, cards, words of encouragement and prayers."

The spunky Estefan, dressed in a white turtleneck shirt, a black blazer, black leggings and boots, stood up from her wheelchair for a few moments. "I can do it," she said proudly. "And hopefully in a few months I'll be back as good as new - I'll see you on the road."

Estefan left the hospital about 10:30 a.m. and was being flown to Miami in singer Julio Iglesias' private jet. As she was wheeled from the Hospital for Joint Diseases and helped into a waiting auto, about 50 fans outside the hospital cheered and waved.

The singer, known for the Latin-flavored tune "Conga" and several other pop singles, underwent delicate spinal surgery following a March 20 collision between her tour bus and a tractor-trailer rig on a snowy Pennsylvania highway that also injured her husband, Emilio, 36, and son, Nayab, 9.

"This has been one, if not the most, difficult thing I've had to go through in my life," she said. "But I'm thankful for the miracle of being alive." She said she planned to "just rest and work out a little bit" at her Miami home. Did she think she would never walk again? "Yes," she replied.

Estefan was up and walking two days after surgeons implanted two metal rods near her spinal cord March 22. A full recovery will take three to six months, said hospital spokesman Mary Costello.

Two weeks later, she had begun strolling about the hospital - sometimes without a special plastic back brace that resembles a corset - to meet other patients and sign hundreds of autographs, Costello said. "She's signing hundreds of autographs a day," Costello said. "She's actually walking into patients' rooms and holding their hands."

While many patients walk after the type of back surgery Estefan underwent, she bounced back quickly because she was in "perfect" physical condition, Costello said.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (APRIL 4) UPI - Belgium's king was relieved of his powers for two days Wednesday under a historic deal allowing a law liberalizing abortion to take effect despite his moral objections.

''Constitutional crisis,'' proclaimed banner headlines after an obscure constitutional provision was invoked following an all-night session of the prime minister's Cabinet.

The government took over King Baudouin's constitutional powers for two days, allowing the abortion bill to become law, under the quirky clause referring to ''the impossibility of the king to reign.''

The constitutional provision, intended for cases of a monarch's mental deficiency or serious illness, was invoked on moral grounds for the first time in Belgium's 160-year history.

The unorthodox episode prompted some calls for Baudouin's abdication, while others said the time had come to abolish Belgium's constitutional monarchy in favor of a republic.

The king, who is devoutly Roman Catholic, ''felt his conscience did not permit him to sign the law concerning the interruption of pregnancy,'' said a communique issued by Prime Minister Wilfried Martens.

Baudouin asked the government to reconcile the ''good functioning of democratic institutions'' and the king's right ''not to be forced to act against his conscience,'' the communique said.

The king was therefore relieved of all his powers, to be restored late Thursday when Parliament will approve a resolution stating the period of ''impossibility to reign has come to an end.''

A bill normally becomes law only after it is signed by the king and published in an official gazette, so the unprecedented deal allows the abortion law to take effect over the king's objections.

The new abortion law, recently approved by both houses of Parliament, enables a woman to have an abortion in the first 12 weeks of pregnancy if she is in a condition of ''serious distress,'' as determined by her doctor.

Most European countries liberalized abortion many years ago, but Belgium and Ireland had remained the holdouts.

The abortion liberalization was approved despite fierce opposition by the prime minister's party, the Christian Democrats.

Baudouin took the throne in 1950, at age 20, following another constitutional crisis involving the same dusty provision of the Belgian constitution used to resolve the abortion impasse.

When Belgium was liberated by Allied armies in 1944, King Leopold III was in captivity in Germany, so his younger brother Charles was appointed ''regent of Belgium'' by Parliament.

Leopold's attitude toward Hitler's regime was questioned after the war, and violent demonstrations forced him to abdicate in favor of his elder son Baudouin despite winning the support of 57 percent of voters in a popular referendum.

The latest constitutional crisis has already prompted some soul-searching over whether a monarchy is still necessary.

''It is time we had a republic in Belgium,'' said Raymonde Dury, a Socialist member of the European Parliament. ''By withdrawing from his role as king, he has removed all relevance of the monarchy to Belgium.''

A constitutional law et, Francois Perin of the University of Liege, termed the abortion agreement between the government and the king ''scandalous, a pure fiction, a lie.''

Earlier this year, a man was charged under an 1847 law for ''offense to the person of the king'' for writing a letter urging Baudouin to organize a referendum to determine whether Belgian citizens still wanted a monarchy.

''Sir, your reign is slowly nearing its end,'' the letter said. ''You could recover a certain honor by actively preparing for a republic, considering that the Belgian people are intelligent enough to decide on their pastor.''

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 4) UPI - Leaders of the seven East German political parties consulted behind the scenes Wednesday in their quest for a broad-based coalition government.

The negotiations, which started Tuesday night, proceeded smoothly among the Alliance of Conservative parties, which won almost 50 percent of the popular vote in last month's election, the Liberals and Democrats, party spokesmen said Wednesday.

Richard Schroeder, chairman of the Social Democratic Party's parliamentary floor group, said in an interview with West German television he was very optimistic after the first round of talks.

''We are getting along well with the Christian Democratic Union,'' he said. ''We have the impression that (CDU leader) Lothar de Maiziere wants to conduct policies in East Germany which are positive and for the people. That is the key issue for the SPD.''

De Maiziere, whose CDU headed the victorious three-party Conservative alliance, is expected to be prime minister in a new East German government.

Schroeder remained wary about the inclusion of the arch-conservative German Social Union in a coalition government. But the Social Democrats and the German Social Union, which have vastly different ideological outlooks, agreed to settle their differences away from the main coalition talks to avoid disrupting the proceedings.

The Social Democrats had vowed during the recent election campaign to never enter a coalition with the arch-conservatives.

Leaders of the Social Democrats have been hurt by recent conservative allegations that many of them are closet communists and are the natural successors to the Stalinist-style leaders who ruled East Germany for 40 years until their ouster in last fall's popular uprising.

But in recent days, a conciliatory German Social Union chairman Hans-Wilhelm Ebeling has said he regreted the mud-slinging that preceeded the March 18 elections.

The second round of coalition negotiations were scheduled to begin Wednesday eveing.

The seven parties have already agreed that when the Parliament convenes for the first time Thursday it will immediately propose constitutional changes to abolish the post of chairman of state and replace it with the office of president.

The parties are trying to form a new government as soon as possible, said Martin Kirchner, general secretary of the Christian Democrats.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Forbes business magazine Wednesday introduced a new ''Super 50'' list ranking the U.S. corporations best positioned to compete on international markets this year.

''The Forbes 'Super 50' ranks the biggest companies in America based on their across-the-board strength, as measured by their combined rankings on the four 'Forbes 500' lists,'' the magazine said in its April 30 issue.

The Super 50 list is based on the companies' performance on the four Forbes 500 lists ranking corporations by revenues, profits, assets and market value.

General Motors Corp., with sales of $126.97 billion in 1989, is the best-ranked U.S. corporation among the 'Super 50' and also headed the Fortune 500 list of the top industrial corporations by revenues.

''General Motors which ranked No. 1 in sales and profits, No. 2 in assets and No. 6 in market value, earned the top spot on the Forbes Super 50,'' the magazine said.

''GM sold the most goods last year and made the biggest profits... of $4.2

billion last year,'' Forbes said.

Eight companies in the top 10 on the Forbes list are also in the first tier on the Fortune ranking.

General Electric Co. comes in second among the corporations Forbes evaluates as best positioned to withstand competition on international markets. GE ranks fifth on the Fortune list.

Exxon Corp. and International Business Machines Corp. are ranked respectively third and fourth, the same spot they hold on the Fortune list.

Ford Motor Co., a strong second on the Fortune list, based on 1989 revenues of $96.32 billion, ranks only fifth with Forbes because of weak profits.

''Three of the top five firms on the 'Forbes Profits 500' suffered declines in net profits of more than 25 percent,'' the magazine said. ''Exxon, whose profits plunged 43 percent to about $3 billion, in part because of the Valdez tanker spill, fell two ranks.''

Forbes' 10 leading corporations include two companies which are not listed by Fortune because they are not in the industrial sector - American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and Sears, Roebuck and Co.

AT&T ranks No. 7 and the parent company of the giant retailer ranks 10 on the Forbes list.

''Unlike the one-dimensional rankings by Fortune, based on sales, and Business Week, (based on) market value, the Forbes Super 50 companies must achieve high rankings on all four of the key measures of corporate strength,'' Forbes said.

Forbes ranks Philip Morris Cos. No. 6, one notch above the tobacco company's Fortune ranking; Mobil Corp. No. 8, two ranks lower than on the Fortune list; and E.I. Du Pont de Nemours Co. No. 9, the same ranking as with Fortune.

''In an era of increasing global competition, only companies with broad-based financial strength will have the capital, the resources, and the financial stamina to compete in world markets,'' the magazine added.

Citicorp whose assets amounted to $230.6 billion in 1989 topped the 'Forbes Assets 500' list, while IBM, whose stock market value was $60.3 billion as of March 23, topped the 'Forbes Market Value 500' list.

Among the winners in terms of record profits are Philip Morris, Texaco Inc., Coca Cola Co., and Paramount Communications Inc. which climbed 111 places to 18th.

A record 78 corporations on the four Forbes lists are headquartered in New York, which remains the capital of corporate America, followed by Chicago with 55 companies and Los Angeles with 39. New York state leads the nation as home to 103 of the Forbes 500 companies.

TOKYO (APRIL 4) UPI - Victor Co. of Japan Ltd. said Wednesday it has designed the world's smallest and lightest super-VHS video system.

The new system, called the VHS Movie Compo includes a video cassette recorded and a video camera to be introduced on the Japanese market under the company's JVC brand name by mid-May.

The Tokyo-based company said the new system has multiple functions and applications to meet users' needs, including recording, shooting, broadcast receiving and playback.

The company said the system is compatible with its existing line of VHS video cassette recorders.

The palm-sized Super VHS VCR is the world's smallest and lightest weighing only 1.2 pounds, and the camera is the world's smallest, weighing 5.6 ounces, the company said.

The VCR measures 5-by-2.3 inch and is 4.6 inches high, while the size of the video camera, excluding the view finder, is 1.5-by-2.7-by-4.8 inches.

The system also is equipped with a liquid crystal display monitor screen, measuring 5.2 inch by 4 inch by 1.2 incg, a TV tuner and the power unit.

''The system is the most fully-developed active audio-visual system to be unveiled to date,'' the company said. ''The concept of live video recording will take on new aspects since the camera and recorder can be separately placed almost anywhere to allow hands-free exciting new shooting possibilities.''

The new system, which will come in three versions, will be marketed in Japan May 16.

The full system consisting of all five units will be priced at 288,000 yen or about $1,860). The system, including the VCR, the power unit and the deck holder, will sell for 208,000 yen or about $1,300 and the player system with VCR, liquid crystal display monitor and power unit will be priced at 193,000 yen or about $1,250.

TOKYO (APRIL 4) UPI - Iraqi Oil Minister Isam Abdul Raheem al-Chalab asked Japan Wednesday to help his country's efforts to promote industrial development and expand oil production capacity, Foreign Ministry officials said.

The officials said Chalab made the request during a meeting with Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama.

Chalab, who arrived Tuesday on a six-day visit as guest of the Foreign Ministry, told Nakayama that Iraq looks forward to Japanese cooperation for its industrial development and oil projects, the officials said.

He assured Nakayama that Iraq will remain a reliable oil supplier for Japan in the 1990s and expansion of its oil production capacity will benefit both sides, the officials said.

Iraq, with the world's second largest oil reserves after Saudi Arabia, accounts for about 5-6 percent of Japan's total oil imports.

Nakayama noted with satisfaction that progress has been made toward solving problems concerning Iraq's repayment of official and private debt to Japan, estimated at about $3 billion.

Chalab expressed hope that Japan will release $2.6 billion worth of export credits and official development aid to Iraq, suspended since the Middle East country suspended debt repayments in 1985, the officials said.

Japan has offered to help in economic reconstruction of both Iraq and Iran after the two adversaries signed a United Nations mediated ceasefire in August 1988, ending their eight-year war.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Federal Mediator Kenneth Kowalski was to enter negotiations Thursday between the Daily News, the nation's largest metropolitan newspaper, and the drivers' union in the first sign of movement toward a settlement with a key union in contract talks.

Daily News negotiator Robert Ballow asked to bring a mediator into the talks Monday and Mike Alvino, president of the Newspaper and Mail Deliverers' Union, agreed, John Sloan, a spokesman for the 1.2 million circulation Daily News, said Wednesday. Sloan described the development as a definite break in the stalled talks.

''The drivers' union has made overtures that they are willing to work out a contract and we believe them,'' Sloan said. ''We think it in the best interests of both parties that a federal mediator be brought in to facilitate a settlement.''

The Daily News's contracts with 10 unions represented by the Allied Printing Trades Council expired at midnight last Friday but negotiations have continued.

Theodore Kheel, legal adviser to the council, said he also saw the Daily News request for a mediator as a hopeful sign.

''The implication when you say 'let's mediate' is that you are prepared to make concessions,'' Kheel said.

The council represents 2,800 employes at the 71-year-old tabloid, which has been trying to negotiate cutbacks in the number of employes, overtime pay and other benefits on the grounds that the paper is being financially drained by overmanning and featherbedding.

Management negotiators and the Newspaper Guild, which represents 800 Daily News reporters and commercial employees, continued talks Wednesday after the union presented a counter-proposal to a Daily News contract offer made Monday.

Guild President Barry Lipton said the Daily News' offer of 30 percent pay raises over the next three years would be accepted, but only if the newspaper dropped its demands for a no-strike clause and elimination of all severance pay. Lipton described the demands as ''retrogressive.''

The Guild offered to reduce its demands for more paid holidays and bigger contributions to health and pension funds.

There was no immediate response from management negotiators. The Daily News is owned by the Tribune Co. of Chicago.

BANGKOK, Thailand (APRIL 4) UPI - Thailand's economic boom may not be sustainable unless the government upgrades technological abilities, promotes research, and lowers barriers to the import of new technology, a World Bank study warned.

''Thailand is not developing competitiveness in the more technologically sophisticated, higher value-added, differentiated products that are becoming increasingly important in world trade,'' said the report made available to United Press International Wednesday.

Thailand's double digit economic growth of the past two years is based on natural resources and cheap labor which account for more than 75 percent of manufactured exports, said the 49-page report prepared for the World Bank Industry Development Division.

The paper titled ''Technology Strategy and Policy for International Competitiveness: A Case Study of Thailand,'' said Thailand was facing increased competition from countries such as China, India and Indonesia with far greater supplies of cheap labor.

''As a result, to diversify and expand its export base and thus increase its competitiveness, a coherent and well articulated strategy to improve the technologgical level and increase technological capabilities of Thai industry is needed,'' it said.

But, it said, ''government policy has not been very effective to date.''

''The S and T (Science and Technology) system in Thailand is characterized by no clear determination of responsibilities, resulting in duplication of effort and low effectiveness in implementation,'' it said.

The paper said use of technology in Thailand was hampered by high import duties on technology imports, insufficient domestic research and development, inadequate protection for foreign intellectual property, and a low level of education.

It said 86 percent of the work force had only elementary level education or less. Only 3 percent of the work force has a university education and two-thirds of that is from low-quality open universities which offer very few science and engineering courses.

Universities and vocational schools are suffering a ''brain drain'' of technically trained teachers to the better-paying private sector, it said.

It said the government should try to induce highly trained Thais working abroad to return home, ease restrictions on foreign technicians, increase enrollment in secondary schools, and emphasize math and science.

The level of research and development expenditures in Thailand has averaged only 0.22 percent ''which is low compared with (South) Korea or Taiwan when they were at a comparable level of development,'' it said.

The report's overall assessment was that most Thai companies ''are weak in searching for, acquiring and adapting foreign technology. They are even weaker in developing their own technology.''

It warned against financial and fiscal incentives for private research but said the government can help by improving research in public universities and institutes.

The government should also remove protectionist policies that dampen incentives for companies to improve their performance and reduce barriers to importing new technology, it said.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - A defense lawyer for the accused triggerman in the slaying of a black teenager in white neighborhood last year agreed Wednesday to let prosecution psychiatrists examine his client, paving the way for a possible insanity defense.

David DePetris, the lawyer for suspected triggerman Joseph Fama, agreed in a meeting with prosecutors in state Supreme Court that one of their psychiatrists could examine Fama next Tuesday.

Fama, 19, is charged with shooting Yusuf Hawkins, 16, in the predominantly white Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn last Aug. 23 while he and his friends were shopping for a used car. The killing inflamed racial tensions citywide and sparked a series of protests, some of them violent.

Examinations of Fama by defense and prosecution psychiatrists could allow lawyers to submit evidence about Fama's mental state at the time of the shooting. Insanity can be used as a defense against second-degree murder, which Fama is charged with. Mondello and Fama face murder, riot, and assault charges. Five other young white men are expected to be tried later.

Hawkins and three black friends went to Bensonhurst to look at a used car and were attacked by as many as 30 whites, many with baseball bats and at least one carrying a gun. The attack apparently was sparked by false reports that Hawkins had gone to the neighborhood to visit a white girl.

On Tuesday, two whites and two blacks were the first jurors chosen to hear the case against codefendant Keith Mondello, the suspected leader of a gang of white youths charged with killing Hawkins. A second jury will be chosen to hear the case against Fama.

Justice Thaddeus Owens ruled both men were to be tried together but that separate juries would hear the case because Mondello made statements to police identifying Fama as the one who pulled the trigger.

The questioning Tuesday of prospective jurors often focused on black candidates and dealt with their feelings about whites from Bensonhurst, as well as their ability to be fair.

The black jurors chosen Tuesday were a letter carrier from East Flatbush and a transit worker from Bedford-Stuyvesant. The white panelists included a laid-off worker in an import-export firm and a public relations worker from Marine Park.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (APRIL 4) UPI - As Hungary goes into runoff elections Sunday, there is general agreement that only a coalition of the two major political parties can give the country a strong government. But the parties are bitter rivals.

In the first round of parliamentary elections March 25 - the first free elections in 43 years - the Democratic Forum took a narrow lead over the Alliance of Free Democrats, 24.71 percent to 21.38.

Its vote margin was even smaller - 23.43 percent to 22.45 - in the vote on individual candidates.

The idea of forming a coalition with the Demoratic Forum does not sit well with Free Democrat President Janos Kis, who wryly described such a partnership as ''a marriage of inconvenience.''

''If there is no other way (to get) a firm government, then we are willing to form a coalition government with the Democratic Forum,'' he conceded Monday.

Forum President Jozef Antall is even less thrilled by the possibility, calling a pact with the Free Democrats a ''last resort.''

A total of 152 of the 386 seats in Parliament were allocated according to the percentage of votes the parties - rather than the individuals - received. In the first vote, the Smallholders received 11.76 percent, the Communist-turned-Socialist Party 10.89 percent, the Alliance of Young Democrats or FIDESZ 8.94 percent and the Christian Democratic Peoples Party, 6.46 percent.

No other party received the minimum 4 percent needed to gain a seat in parliament.

The Free Democrats say the runoff will be a much tighter race and that they still have a chance of winning the elections.

The Democratic Forum, which describes itself as center-right, was established in September 1987 as the first formal opposition movement in Hungary.

The more liberal Free Democrats are thought of as a group of intellectuals who have been leading members of the opposition for years and who fought for basic political changes in the country once ruled by Moscow.

The party chalked up its first major political victory last autumn by initiating a national referendum to make the Communist Party give up its last strongholds of power. It also prevented the nearly automatic election of popular communist leader, Imre Pozsgay, as state president.

Both parties are refraining from real political bargaining before the results of the second round are known. But neither talks about a possible coalition with the Socialist Party, which will be part of the opposition.

The Smallholders were initially believed able to tip the balance in favor of one of the two major parties, but there is internal disagreement over which party to support.

This makes a coalition still more likely between the two major parties, which gain their support from two strong but not always compatible groups. The Democratic Forum draws its greatest strength from the rural populists, while the Free Democrats are more popular with the urban middle class.

The question Sunday will be whether the gap between those interests can be bridged for the good of a country that must face the difficult political and economic choices democracy will bring.

Analysis By: Jim Lewis

NASHVILLE, TN (APRIL 4) UPI - A couple of years ago, when their first album came out, you couldn't have found three more tentative and scared would-be country music singers than The McCarters.

What a difference in the passage of time. Now, they're called Jennifer McCarter and The McCarters and there is no doubt about who the driving force behind the group is.

Twins Teresa and Lisa have retained their natural shyness, but it is obvious that Jennifer has taken control and become charmingly confident in her role which she relishes.

"I've learned a lot over the past couple of years. I now know that everything that we ever said or did, someone was either going to critique it or say something about it. It's like no matter what your opinions are, you have to keep them to yourself," McCarter said.

"I also learned that the music business is more business than music. You can go and do a 35-minute show but the time spent before that all week long on the phones or at the office - that's business and you sing 30-40 minutes and that's all the singing there is. Recording? You are in there two or three weeks or whatever recording the album, but you spent the whole year just looking for the songs.

"But I love the business side of it. I love to make all the phone calls and to know how things work and what's going on," McCarter said. She said doing the business side correctly enables the group to do what they enjoy doing most - singing for a living.

"I like getting up and calling radio stations and thanking them for playing our music. I'd much rather be doing that than sitting around at home and them not playing our records."

As for her younger sisters, McCarter said they never have to be prodded to sing or rehearse. "From the business side of it - I don't think it would be a bad thing to say - they are not as interested in the business side of it. There are some things that they do that I don't like to do. Like for one, they are better after the show with fans. I'm the kind of a person that will go, 'How are you doing?' Then sign my name and go on to the next person.

"But the twins say, 'High Darlin.' And they just go on and on with the fans. They're taking the time to ask how they are doing and spend more time. That's what they like to do. I want to go ahead and meet everybody but get back to the business and say what do we have to do next."

McCarter says Teresa and Lisa are still shy with the media. "They are afraid they will say something wrong. I tell them to say what's in their heart it can't be wrong. But it still scares them. That's why I do most of the interviews. I love it. They feel like I can relate what we feel as a group better than they can."

Their first album, "The Gift," was a success for the young trio. "I was surprised at the success of 'The Gift.' I knew we were new. I thought there was no way the first single would get in the top 40. Then every week we'd get a call and it kept going until it reached No. 5. Then I felt the next one wouldn't go and it went to No. 4. I never dreamed we'd do that because we're so new, young and a girls group."

The three sisters, who have been performing for about 17 years, first as a clogging group in their native Sevierville, Tenn., home, have released their second Warner Bros. album, titled "Better Be Home Soon."

McCarter revealed that she is engaged to marry her drummer, Kevin Crampton, who hails from Michigan. Asked if she anticipated problems because her husband is, in effect, her employee, McCarter replied:

"We've already discussed that. He's been with me for almost a year. I've heard so much about problems when you marry someone in your own band from people thinking it wouldn't work. Men seem to think women are bossy anyway, but he doesn't mind if I say would you do this or that because that is the way it was from the beginning. It's like nothing has changed. When we go in and do shows or rehearse, he does his job and I do mine. It's not like I personally hand over his check. He gets that from the office.

"Why am I getting married? Because I thought I was young enough to get the first one over with," she joked.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (APRIL 4) UPI - Authorities said Wednesday that cocaine cartel hitmen killed 13 law enforcement officers in two days and President Virgilio Barco said drug lords who surrender would face impartial Colombian justice.

A senator who opposed dialogue with drug kingpins was kidnapped by gunmen Tuesday.

Medellin police said men with submachine guns attacked a public place in a poor neighborhood of Medellin about midnight Tuesday, killing eight people and wounding seven. No one immediately took responsibility for the attack, about which police would not elaborate.

News reports and authorities said the number of policemen killed since Monday in Antioquia state, where Medellin is located, roser to 13.

Barco told reporters Wednesday if the drug lords surrendered they would be tried by Colombian judges. He did not rule out, however, eventual extradition to the United States.

''If Mr. Escobar Gaviria hands himself in, I guarantee the judges will try him with impartiality,'' Barco said.

Pablo Escobar Gaviria is the reputed leader of the powerful Medellin cocaine cartel and leads the U.S. Justice Department's list of the 12 most wanted Colombian drug traffickers.

Barco, who made the comments in Strasbourg, France, is scheduled to return from a European tour April 11.

When asked if Colombian judges would try the kingpins, Barco responded, ''Could it be any other way?''

Barco has stuck by his decision of last fall to extradite wanted druck traffickers to the United States, a decison that sparked the drug war. The drug lords have offered to surrender their arms if given immunity from extradition.

Police said the cartel, based in Medellin, had launched a new offensive offered more than $4,000 for each officers murdered.

Fernando Gutierrez Perez, a suspected member of the Medellin cartel, was turned over last week to U.S. authorities to face drug charges in Arizona, bringing to 15 the number of Colombians extradited since Barco re-established the policy Aug. 18.

The drug lords led a four-month bombing and assassination campaign that killed more than 200 people last year to force the government to question the extraditions.

Both the bombings and extraditions stopped last January after the Medellin cartel handed over its hostages, including the son of a close presidential aide, and offered to surrender in return for a no extradition pledge from the government.

Barco promised a ''flexible'' legal treatment for the drug lords but made no concrete concessions.

The apparent cease-fire fell through last week amid allegations the government had secretly negotiated a peace pact with the Medellin cartel.

Otalora Ayendano also blamed the Tuesday kidnapping of Liberal Party Sen. Federico Estrada Velez, 64, on drug traffickers ''because of his statements Sunday against having a dialogue with the narcotics dealers.''

Liberal Party officials later pleaded with the kidnappers to release

Estrada, a former Supreme Court magistrate who was re-elected to the Senate March 11. He was intercepted by armed men while driving to his office Tuesday in Medellin, the spokesman said.

The gunmen apparently seized the car and drove off with the senator inside he said.

The spokesman predicted Estrada may be set free soon to carry a message from the Extraditables, a group of armed assassins believed to do the bidding of the Medellin cartel.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Rep. William Dickinson, R-Ala., told the Pentagon's ''Star Wars'' director Wednesday that the anti-missile defense program is ''under the gun'' and President Bush must ''get involved'' to avoid deep budget cuts.

Dickinson, the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, issued the warning to Air Force Gen. George Monahan, director of the Strategic Defense Initiative Office.

During a research and development subcommittee hearing, Dickinson told Monahan that SDI, popularly known as ''Star Wars,'' is already being studied by Congress for possible spending cuts to help finance military personnel accounts.

''We're at a very tenuous juncture,'' Dickinson said. ''If we are going to discontinue the pr'cxice of the past of always taking big chunks of money (out of SDI), the president's going to have to get involved, in my opinion. ...

''He's going to have to draw lines, or however you care to phrase it.''

''It's more important now than ever,'' Dickinson added, ''to make a strong and forceful case for whatever funding level he feels is required, because this account is certainly under the gun.''

Bush asked Congress in his fiscal 1991 budget for $4.47 billion for SDI, about the same as requested last year, even though Congress routinely has cut up to $1 billion from proposed SDI spending every year.

''I think all of us here know we're going to make cuts in this program,'' Rep. Robert Davis, R-Mich., remarked to other members of the subcommittee.

Panel Chairman Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., asked Monahan to provide the subcommittee with estimates of how the program would fare under various funding levels, particularly from $3 billion to $3.5 billion.

Monahan, while not addressing Dickinson's warnings directly, said the program is ''significant'' for future U.S. protection and that ''cost trends are coming down.''

He said the first phase of SDI, which would involve both ground-based and space-based ''Brilliant Pebbles'' interceptors to destroy attacking missiles, could begin full-scale development in three years and cost $55.3 billion.

''We're going to get (the cost) down lower than that,'' said Monahan, who later agreed under questioning that ''there's a potential'' for cutting an additional $16 billion off that price.

Monahan said the first phase of SDI is ''aimed at blunting the first wave of a Soviet attack.'' He declined to state the number of warheads envisioned under that scenario, saying such figures are classified.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze will begin three days of meetings this afternoon in Washington. Among the topics the two will discuss are a possible date for the upcoming U-S-Soviet summit, global environmental issues, human rights and arms control. The pair will also concentrate on the situation in Lithuania.

Shevardnadze kicked off his visit to the United States yesterday by announcing that Moscow plans to resolve its troubles with independence-minded Lithuania through an ''honest dialogue.'' The two sides began that process yesterday when a senior official close to President Gorbachev met with the Baltic republic's deputy prime minister.

Despite the apparent thaw in relations between Lithuania and Moscow, the Kremlin has completely sealed the Baltic republic's border with Poland. The closure of the crossing into Lithuania affects people without visas. Previously, such documentation was NOT needed.

Hong Kong T-V has confirmed the escape of dissident student leader Chai Ling from China. Chai appeared on T-V in a videotape in which she said the Chinese will succeed someday in toppling the authoritarian government. A published report says Chai and her husband are in France. There are unconfirmed reports that the couple plans to apply for visas to travel the United States.

Chinese Premier Li Peng describes as ''unavoidable'' the escape from China of two of its ''most wanted'' anti-establishment student leaders. Li told reporters today that Beijing will take ''all necessary measures'' to prevent a repeat of last June's anti-government demonstrations. Li also warned France to NOT allow the fugitive couple to engage in politics.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (APRIL 4) UPI - NASA engineers scrambled Wednesday to complete testing of the Hubble Space Telescope, working around the clock to ready the revolutionary instrument for blastoff Tuesday aboard the shuttle Discovery.

"The only threat (to the launch date) in my mind is if something goes wrong with the telescope testing," NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said. "We're not tracking any problems."

Discovery's countdown is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. EDT Saturday, about an hour after the ship's four-man, one-woman crew arrives at the Kennedy Space Center from Houston.

If all goes well, commander Loren Shriver, 45, co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43 Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38, will blast off on the 35th shuttle mission at 8:47 a.m. Tuesday, two days earlier than originally planned.

"We're going on the tenth," a NASA engineer said. "Trust me." The date had been in question Monday and Tuesday after an air conditioner cooling water pipe ruptured and sprayed water on critical electrical gear in a utility building near the launch control center. The resulting short circuit triggered widespread power outages and disrupted launch processing.

Electricity was quickly restored to most areas, but a lack of cooling water disabled air conditioners and NASA was forced to shut down heat-sensitive launch control center computer gear needed to monitor testing at pad 39B.

As a result, critical work to charge the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope's batteries was interrupted, as was a 52-hour test of the telescope's sensitive instruments and electronic gear. The test and battery charging resumed late Tuesday.

"They're hoping to get it done by midnight (Wednesday)," Malone said of the telescope testing. With work on track at the Kennedy Space Center, Discovery's crew spent the afternoon boning up on malfunction procedures inside a shuttle simulator at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

"They're ... doing on-orbit walk-throughs," NASA spokesman Jeff Carr said.

"It's what they call a proficiency lesson. They get them in there and they run a bunch of orbiter maintenance-kind of issues at them and see how they respond."

The astronauts plan to release the 25,500-pound Hubble Space Telescope into a record 380-mile orbit, high above Earth's turbulent atmosphere, on the second day of the flight.

Able to detect a single firefly 10,000 miles away, the telescope's sensitive instruments will allow astronomers to study the universe in greater detail than ever before, revolutionizing humanity's knowledge of the cosmos and the "big bang" explosion thought to have created it some 15 billion years ago.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Colombian officials say they believe that drug cartels are behind a recent wave of violence that left eight people dead overnight. The attack in Medellin by bandits using sub-machineguns also left seven people injured and came hours after an anti-drug senator was kidnapped. Police in the state where the capital is located say 13 police officers have been killed since Monday.

Engineers from two East Coast high-tech firms will find out today if their computer-aided rocket design can withstand launch velocity experienced previously only by NASA shuttles. The Pegasus rocket is scheduled to be fired into orbit this afternoon from the wing of a B-52 jet flying at 40-thousand feet. The commercial booster will be subjected to 100-thousand pounds of aerodynamic force within 15 seconds of ignition.

Jury selection is scheduled to resume this morning in the New York trial of two suspects from the August slaying of a black teen-ager by a white mob in Brooklyn. So far, four members of the panel have been picked, including two African Americans. The selection of the four came after hours of grueling questions and focused on perceptions of whites in Brooklyn.

The House is expected to come up with its version of a Clean Air bill sometime this summer. Senate majority leader George Mitchell says he plans to stump for House legislation with more bite than the measure approved last night by the Senate. Such a move could result in a showdown with the White House. President Bush has said he'll veto any legislation that costs industry too much.

SEOUL (APRIL 4) UPI - The government said Wednesday it will shelve a plan that would have required that persons' real names be used in all financial transactions.

Previously, South Korea planned to start enforcing the so-called real-name account systems next year as part of efforts against illegitimate earnings enjoying tax loopholes.

Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Lee Seung-yun and 11 other cabinet members with responsibilities for economic affairs held a joint press conference and announced a package of measures they hoped will help reinvigorate the economy.

The new team of economic ministers, installed in a large-scale cabinet shakeup carried out Mar. 17, said the government now will manage the economy in a realistic manner, foregoing idealistic policies that could have serious side effects.

The real-name system has been a controversial issue and some economic experts have said enforcement would lead to an exodus of money from financial institutions for speculation in real estate.

Instead, Lee said, the government, while shelving implementation of the system, will have the maximum income tax rate applied to earnings from false-name money dealings.

The new government policy package represented a partial accommodation of what large businesses have been asking for to revitalize the slowing economy. There were mixed reactions to the package.

The Federation of Korean Industries, an organization of leading businessmen, welcomed the package, but the Federation of Korean Trade Unions opposed it, saying the measures amounted to additional favors for big businesses.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - The administration does not object to Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher's wife, Georgette, writing to the chief of the Food and Drug Administration on behalf of a cosmetics company she leads, a spokesman said Wednesday.

''She's a president of a company and free to seek meetings at any time,'' White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters. ''Everybody has a right to talk to agencies of the government.''

Georgette Mosbacher, who is chief executive officer of La Prairie cosmetics, wrote on March 22 to James Benson, acting FDA commissioner, seeking a private meeting to discuss his agency's regulations on cosmetics The Washington Post reported Wednesday.

Mrs. Mosbacher, who recently publicized a fragrance costing $1,500 an ounce in limited edition Boehn flacons, expressed concern about FDA policies and said she would like to meet with Benson.

''I will be in Washington on April 5 and 6 and would be available to meet with you anytime on those days at your convenience. I will come alone to meet with you and would be happy to meet with you alone,'' she wrote.

The Post obtained a copy of the letter in which Mrs. Mosbacher pointed out that her company imports all of its products and said that the FDA's policies ''are placing companies that import their products at a serious commercial disadvantage.''

''I assume it's not FDA's intention to promote unfairness,'' she said.

The newspaper said that FDA officials confirmed the receipt of her letter but that no meeting has been scheduled or planned between Benson and Mrs. Mosbacher.

The newspaper also reported that officials were puzzled abott,what policies are bothering Mrs. Mosbacher since there is no difference between FDA cosmetics regulations on foreign and domestic products.

BELFAST, NORTHERN IRELAND (APRIL 4) UPI - Masked gunmen shot dead a Catholic plumber working in a housing estate Wednesday and police said they believed the killers were Protestant radicals trying to frighten Catholics away from their area.

Officials did not identify the victim, the 15th person to die this year in bloodshed linked to the fight waged by extremist groups trying to either extend or end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary said an unspecified number of assailants sprayed their victim in a hail of automatic weapons fire as he ate his lunch at Rathcoole housing estate, a Protestant area in Belfast.

Residents who heard the shots tried to revive the man but he was dead on arrival at hospital, they said.

Police said the victim was 38 years old and lived 60 miles away at Swatragh village. He was married with two children.

They said several months ago the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force, a Protestant radical group, warned Catholics they would be killed if they tried to work in Rathcoole distrct.

A police spokesman said detectives were treating the attack as a ''blatant sectarian murder.''

PARIS (APRIL 4) UPI - Chadian government army forces recaptured the towns of Bahai and Tina on the border with Sudan from Libyan-backed rebel troops the Chadian Embassy in Paris said Wednesday.

A statement said Chadian troops had inflicted heavy casualties on ''Islamic Legion'' rebels led by former Chadian Army Commander Idriss Deby killing 320 rebel soldiers and capturing 46 others. The rebels had overrun the two towns 12 days ago.

Diplomatic sources in Paris said Wednesday that regular Chadian troops had also repelled a rebel attempt to overrun the town of Guereda about 25 miles from the Sudanese border.

The Chadian Embassy statement said the army troops had captured or destroyed large amounts of materiel belonging to rebels during the battle to retake Bahai and Tina, including jeeps armed with 106mm canons and ground-to-ground missiles, troop transport vehicules, and supply trucks.

If the Chadian reports are confirmed, the recapture of Bahai and Tina and the successful defense of Guereda will provide a needed psychological boost to the government of Hissere Habre, which insists that the rebels are being supported by the Sudan and Libya.

The Sudanese government categorically denied Wednesday that is is involved in the fighting or that it supports the Chadian rebels.

France sent 15 combat aircraft and a number of armored vehicles to eastern Chad last Friday and flew an additional 146 paratroopers to the West African nation in what diplomatic sources described as an ''implicit warning'' to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi not to challenge the Habre government.

Chadian troops have fought intermittently against Libyan forces since 1973 for control of the mineral-rich Aouzon Strip in the country's north.

Paris sent a military contingent to Chad, a former French colony, on Feb. 15, 1986, in response to a Libyan offensive. Before the latest reinforcement, France had reduced its presence to 1,000 men, with only 100 soldiers at Abeche, just 120 miles from the site of the latest fighting.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Despite remarks interpreted to mean that the New York Mercantile Exchange would remain in New York, the chairman of the world's largest oil trading exchange said Wednesday a decision is still months away.

''It will be late spring or early summer before we'll be able to put together a final analysis of the numbers and make a recommendation to the (Merc) board,'' exchange chairman Lou Guttman said in a telephone interview.

The Merc and four other commodity exchanges, which share a crowded trading floor in the World Trade Center, last year had narrowed down the choice for larger quarters to two primary sites - one in Manhattan and one in less costly New Jersey.

In a Tuesday dedication of a new natural gas contract, Guttman was quoted as telling New York mayor David Dinkins, ''I look forward to working with your administration over the next few months to build new exchange facilities.''

Guttman said the statement only meant the Merc would be working with the new Dinkins administration as it puts together its financial ''numbers'' for keeping the exchanges in New York. About 20,000 jobs could be affected.

Dinkins has appointed his top aides in the last two months and only recently has his administration begun to put together its ''numbers,'' Guttman said.

A source close to the Merc selection process said the proposed New Jersey site is in the Harborside office complex across the Hudson river in Jersey City.

Jersey City mayor Gerald McCann, in a telephone interview, professed ignorance of any proposal to move to his city. ''We'd love to have them,'' McCann said.

In October, Guttman said the Merc would be willing to pay a premium to stay in New York City, but added, ''It's not a big premium.''

At that time he said the Merc hoped to make a move decision by the end of 1989.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 4) UPI - Christian militia chief Samir Geagea said Wednesday he is ready to hand over army barracks he captured during two months of fighting with rival Christian Gen. Michel Aoun to Syrian-backed President Elias Hrawi.

''The delivery of army barracks to Gen. Emile Lahoud (Hrawi's pro-Syrian army commander) is a practical gateway to normalize the situation, restore peace and put the country on the track of peace,'' Geagea said in an interview with the Christian militia-run Voice of Lebanon radio station.

Geagea said the Lebanese Forces militia is ready to hand over all army barracks under its control to troops loyal to Hrawi.

''I wish that General Aoun will do the same. This would relieve people,'' Geagea said.

''Out of mercy for people, the crisis should end, and especially the military confrontation. The only step to end the current military situation is to hand over army barracks on all Lebanese territories to General Lahoud,'' Geagea said.

The militia chief expressed hopes that Lahoud will take such a step before Easter so that ''people can celebrate and regain their peace of mind.''

Geagea, whose 10,000 militiamen have been engaged in ferocious warfare with Aoun's 15,000-strong army since Jan. 31, said Lahoud would be able to reunite the disintegrated 35,000-strong Lebanese army.

Lahoud is in command of some 20,000 troops stationed in Syrian-patrolled territory, while Aoun controls 15,000 regular soldiers in the 310 square-mile Christian enclave in Lebanon.

Geagea' militiamen patrol two thirds of the Christian region badly damaged during the artillery and rocket fighting.

The 39-year-old militia leader defended his group's presence, saying it was founded to defend the Christian region.

Geagea said the Lebanese Forces will be the first militia to be dissolved when an overall settlement ensuring the withdrawal of all foreign troops and disbanding all militias is achieved.

Lebanese territory has been controlled by Syrian, Israeli, Palestinian and Iranian forces.

Geagea's move consituted a further rapprochement to President Hrawi. On Tuesday, he openly recognized Hrawi as the country's legitimate president, and expressed readiness to negotiate a peace accord that was worked out in Taif, Saudi Arabia, last October by the Parliament.

Aoun has rebuffed the Taif agreement on grounds that it failed to ensure a speedy and complete withdrawal of Syria's estimated 35,000 troops in Lebanon, sent to stop the sectarian wars that have torn the country apart since 1975.

More than 900 people have been killed and 2,820 have been wounded since fighting over control of the Christian region started.

In another development Wednesday, Israeli helicopters blasted a Palestinian base near the southern Lebanon city of Tyre, wounding seven people.

Police said three Israeli helicopter gunships dropped three rockets on a base for the Palestinian Communist Party in the refugee camp of Rashidiyeh 46 miles south of Beirut.

Police said seven people, including two children and an elderly, were wounded in the raid.

The base was destroyed and 10 neighboring houses were badly damaged, they added.

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO (APRIL 4) UPI - A Colombian detained when customs agents became suspicious of his gait was recovering in a Puerto Rico hospital Wednesday after having more than a pound of cocaine removed from both legs.

Federal magistrate Justo Arenas visited the Colombian, Roberto O'Neill Lever, to inform him of drug trafficking charges filed by the U.S. Customs Service.

District Director of Customs Mamie E. Pollack said it was the first time her office had been presented with such a case.

''It is the most bizarre way of trafficking narcotics that I have seen,'' she said.

O'Neill Lever arrived in Puerto Rico Saturday from Bogota, Colombia, on Iberia Flight 928 en route to Madrid, Spain. He was detained and searched by customs agents who noticed he was having difficulty walking.

The agents discovered long, fresh scars on O'Neill's legs and the traveler admitted to having the drug under his skin.

O'Neill agreed to be taken to San Juan's Medical Center to have the cocaine removed. The drug, weighing about 1.1 lbs, was implanted in four separate containers.

A court spokesman said O'Neill will remain in hospital until he is in condition to be transferred to jail.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Margaux Hemingway, Ernest Hemingway's model-actress granddaughter,said Wednesday she doffed her clothes for Playboy magazine "to show off my new body."

Hemingway, facing a battery of photographers at the magazine's Manhattan offices, said the revealing photo spread - and cover photo - in this month's issue is evidence her life is now on an upswing. "There's nothing like putting my bottom dollar on this, so to speak," she said with a husky laugh.

The former million-dollar model and sometime actress said in text accompanying the photos that she put on about 75 pounds while recuperating from a 1985 skiing accident, and shed the weight only after a 28-day stay in the Betty Ford Clinic two years later.

"This is probably the most positive thing I ever did," said Hemingway, who declined to reveal her age. "The pictures are very positive." She told reporters her famous grandfather, writer Ernest Hemingway, would have approved of the photographs, shot in Central America.

"I would hope he would have been thrilled," she said, adding that her own father, Jack, had not yet seen them. Her younger sister, actress Mariel Hemingway, thought the photographs were wonderful, she said.

By the time she was 20, in 1975, Hemingway had parlayed her healthy good looks and glamorous name into a million-dollar four-year contract with Faberge Inc.

That same year, she landed a movie contract for the lead role in "Lipstick " which was panned by the critics but launched the career of her younger sister.

In text accompanying the Playboy pictures, she admitted that her own fast living caught up with her and helped account for the failure of two marriages. She spent most of her six-month recuperation after the skiing accident "watching videos and drinking to ease the pain."

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - President Bush has an even handed approach to members of the media and does not play favorites with reporters, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Wednesday.

Fitzwater made the remarks while describing as ''unfortunate'' and ''wrong'' a report in the latest edition of Newsweek Magazine that Bush has a list of favorite anchormen, columnists and White House reporters.

''I hate to see them (Newsweek) engage in that kind of gossip. First of all most of it was wrong; secondly it's unfair to all of you individually and collectively.

''The president and I go to some lengths not to personalize any of our press relations,'' he declared. ''I don't think it's healthy and he doesn't either. We try to get along with everybody who writes bad stories and good stories alike.''

''He loves everybody,'' said Fitzwater with a grin.

Newsweek said that NBC's Tom Brokaw impresses Bush the least as an anchorman. ''He loves Brokaw,'' said Fitzwater.

The magazine, quoting an unnamed White House source, also reported that ABC's Britt Hume, a friend and tennis partner, is among his favorite reporters, a list that included John Mashek of The Boston Globe; Tom DeFrank of Newsweek; Tom Pettit of NBC News; Rita Beamish of the Associated Press and Gerald Seib of The Wall Street Journal.

Washington Post White House correspondent David Hoffman was described as Bush's ''least favorite'' reporter.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - The House called on the Soviet Union Wednesday to negotiate with Lithuania on its bid for independence and to refrain from military or economic intimidation of the Baltic republic.

Sponsors of the non-binding resolution said it expresses congressional support for Lithuanian independence while acknowledging the potential implications for U.S.-Soviet relations. The measure was passed on a 416-3 vote.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Europe, said the State Department does not support the resolution, but prefers it to other resolutions offered in both the House and Senate.

The administration has resisted pressure from members of Congress to strongly back Lithuania's effort to break away from the Soviet Union.

The Senate, responding to administration urging, March 21 rejected a resolution calling for President Bush to immediately recognize Lithuania as an independent nation. That was followed the next day by unanimous approval of a more muted resolution that ''urges the president to consider'' such a step.

The House resolution calls on the Soviets to refrain from ''acts of political, military and economic intimidation'' against Lithuania, and warns that the use of force to suppress ''the democratic aspirations'' of Lithuania would cause ''a serious and tragic setback'' in U.S.-Soviet relations.

The measure also ''urges the president to reaffirm his commitment to an independent and democratic Lithuania and to seek ways to actively demonstrate that commitment.''

It further urges Bush ''to plan for and take those steps, at the earliest possible time, that would normalize diplomatic relations'' with Lithuania.

MENLO PARK, CA (APRIL 4) UPI - Raychem Corp., suffering from defense cutbacks, said Wednesday it would lay off 900 workers and take a $75 million to $90 million charge in its current quarter.

The layoffs, to be largely completed by June 30, account for about 8 percent of the industrial materials and electronics company's work force of 11,400 people.

The third-quarter charge will result in a substantial loss for the quarter and a loss for the fiscal year, Raychem said. The moves represent dramatic cost cutting by the company's new chief executive, Robert Saldich, named in January to replace founder Paul Cook.

''Raychem's profitability has been unsatisfactory, and slippage in our defense business is placing increased pressure on the company's electronics sector,'' Saldich said. ''It is essential that we take strong measures.''

The company's stock, which tends to swing wildly because of earnings surprises, fell 25 cents after the news to $27.75 in midday trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Raychem, a maker of a variety of high-performance plastic, metal and electronics products, has spent millions over the last few years on its Raynet subsidiary, which is developing a system for replacing telephone lines into homes and businesses with fiber optic cables.

The subsidiary reported a pre-tax loss of $14 million in the second quarter and is expected to reduce the company's pre-tax income for the fiscal year by about $60 million.

But despite the losses and the company's deteriorating performance, ''Raychem remains fully committed to its Raynet subsidiary, where technology trials are underway with encouraging results,'' the company said in a release.

To reduce expenses in other parts of its business, Raychem will sell off its advanced packaging systems division and large parts of its shape memory alloy business, the company said. The company also will sell undeveloped land near its Menlo Park, Calif., headquarters and acquire manufacturing sites in other parts of the country, it said.

It wil take two to three years to recover the costs of the restructuring, Raychem said.

In the first six months of its fiscal yearm Raychem's earnings fell 51.9 percent to $10.1 million, or 29 cents a share, from $21 million, or 60 cents a share, in the year-earlier period.

PARIS (APRIL 4) UPI - Escaped Chinese dissident Chai Ling, a key leader of the pro-democracy protest at Beijing's Tiananmen Square last year, was staying at a secret location in the suburbs of Paris, diplomatic sources confirmed Wednesday.

Word on Chai's location came a day after distribution of a videotape in which the 24-year-old Chai appeared accompanied by her husband, Feng Congde, 23, and said the two had escaped from China where they were on the government's most wanted list.

Hong Kong's largest English-language daily, the South China Morning Post, reported earlier Wednesday that Chai and her husband fled China on March 24 and within 48 hours were in France, where several Chinese dissident leaders took refuge after escaping from China.

Unconfirmed reports said the couple hoped to go to the United States and had applied for visas in the French capital.

A spokesman for the Paris-based Federation for Democracy in China declined to confirm or deny reports Chai and her husband had been in Paris, saying, ''For security reasons I can not say anthing else. Madame Chai Ling is somewhere in Europe.''

But diplomatic sources later confirmed Chai, a key leader of the pro-democracy student movement, was in the outskirts of the French capital.

In Beijing, Chinese Premier Li Peng made the first official acknowledgement of the escape at a news conference Wednesday and said, ''China is such a big country, it's unavoidable that one or two could flee.''

Li also pointed to a French government assurance it would not allow dissidents from nations with which France has relations to engage in political activity on French soil, and said he hoped the ''statement can be honored.''

Chai's escape was first revealed Tuesday by the China Times newspaper in Taiwan, which reported she and her husband arrived in Europe Sunday after hiding in China for 10 months. It said she had been hospitalized at an undisclosed location after a grueling journey.

Tuesday night, Hong Kong television station TVB aired the videotape, which sources said had been received by satellite.

In it, the frail-looking Chai said she would continue the struggle for freedom in China and paid tribute to her compatriots who had died, been jailed or gone into exile for the pro-democracy movement, which was crushed by Chinese troops June 3-4.

At least hundreds of people died in the crackdown and Chinese authorities executed others convicted of crimes linked to the pro-democracy protests. Chai and her husband were placed on a list of 21 ''most wanted'' students issued by police.

''Wherever you are, friends, please accept our heartfelt blessing,'' Chai said. ''Please believe us: Wherever we are ... we shall always fight for our belief and work.''

The Post said Chai and her husband did not pass through Hong Kong, an escape route used by other dissidents. Escaped student leader Wuerkaixi and prominent Chinese social scientist Yan Jiaqi used the ''underground railroad'' through Hong Kong and the nearby Portuguese enclave of Macao.

VIENNA (APRIL 4) UPI - Vienna is apparently being jilted for Geneva as the setting for OPEC's mid-year ministerial meeting but the oil cartel is refusing comment on reports the change was prompted by a diplomatic row between Austria and Iraq.

James Audu, spokesman for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said Wednesday it is "very probable" the May 25 meeting will be held in Geneva instead of Vienna, OPEC's world headquarters.

The spokesman refused to give a reason for the move but said OPEC has held ministerial meetings in Geneva in the past. He declined comment on Austrian news reports that OPEC member Iraq insisted on the change after its oil minister was reportedly snubbed by Austrian officials during OPEC's March 17-18 meeting in Vienna.

The reports said Iraqi Oil Minister Issam Abdul Raheem al-Chalabi was infuriated when Austrian Economics Minister Wolfgang Schuessel canceled a meeting with him to protest Iraq's execution of London-based journalist Farzad Bazoft. Bazoft was hanged for spying March 15 despite worldwide appeals for clemency.

The Austrian Foreign Ministry confirmed that Schuessel canceled a meeting with al-Chalabi to protest Bazoft's execution, but said the government has not been formally notified of plans to move the May 25 OPEC meeting to Geneva.

The mid-year conference is expected to set target prices and oil production quotas for the second half of the year. Members of the 13-nation cartel supply more than a third of the world's crude oil.

SAN DIEGO (APRIL 4) UPI - Ford Motor Co. agreed to pay $6 million to a Carlsbad, Calif., couple in the largest product-liability settlement of its kind in the nation, the plaintiffs' attorney said Wednesday.

The payment settled a lawsuit filed in March 1989 by Jim and Patricia Miller. One of their sons died and another was paralyzed in a Nov. 13, 1988, collision near their home.

The settlement reached in Vista Superior Court was the largest ever paid by a manufacturer for failing to install rear-seat shoulder harnesses even though it knew safety would be greatly improved, lawyer Craig McClellan said.

''The main thing for the Millers is getting the word out,'' said McClellan. ''That is why they would not agree to confidentiality about the size of the settlement.''

The Millers' suit demanded $23 million on the grounds Ford had elected not to install shoulder restraints on the rear seats of pre-1990 Escorts sold in the United States even though a 1971 company study indicated that lap belts were not nearly as effective as shoulder belts in protecting passengers from serious injury.

''Some auto manufacturers, such as Ford, have performed the minimum of what is required for passenger safety,'' said McClellan.

''This landmark settlement clearly demonstrates that manufacturers will be responsible for failing to install the shoulder restraints in pre-1990 models.''

Shoulder restraints were credited with sparing the couple serious injury when they struck an oncoming car head-on at 32 miles per hour.

Their twin boys, riding in the back seat, were not so lucky. James Miller was killed and his brother, Richard, now 12, was paralyzed although both had lap belts buckled.

McClellan said American car makers have been required to install anchorages for rear-seat harnesses in their cars since 1972 and have installed the belts in models sold in Europe, but Ford elected not to install them or offer them as an option in order to save $12 per belt.

''It's a lot of money that they felt they could not recover from the consumer,'' McClellan said.

''The Miller family tragedy is a result of that conduct,'' McClellan said.

The settlement came together Tuesday when the city of Carlsbad agreed to pay a separate $550,000 settlement to the Millers. The city had been accused in the suit of not doing anything to fix a curve known to be dangerous.

DETROIT (APRIL 4) UPI - The director of the Detroit Institute of Arts, expressing delight Wednesday that four 17th century paintings have been returned from the clutches of drug dealers, said he does not think rising art values and the burgeoning wealth of drug lords are a special security threat to museums.

Sam Sachs II said the paintings from the museum's Dutch and Flemish collections, stolen in 1982, actually have been back in Detroit since early this year. But museum officials were asked not to announce the return pending the completion of related criminal proceedings.

The paintings were recovered in December 1989 and January 1990 in connection with an undercover drug investigation in Miami, said FBI spokesman John Anthony.

Anna Barnes, who earlier pleaded guilty to conspiracy to sell cocaine, testified during a Wilmington, N.C., drug trial that she took the paintings as payment from Michigan drug dealers. No arrests have been made the in theft of the paintings itself, however.

The works - "Laughing Boy," in the style of Frans Hals; "A Woman Weeping," by a follower of Rembrandt; "River Scene at Dordrecht" by a follower of Aelbert Cuyp and "St. Michael in Combat with the Rebel Angels," by Lucas Franchoys the Younger - were insured for $310,000.

The paintings were taken, apparently during the museum's regular business hours, from a locked storage room that was entered through a grate, Sachs said.

"There is no indication it is an inside job," Sachs said. He said it appeared the paintings were selected more because they are small enough to easily conceal than for their value. Sachs said the paintings apparently did not suffer any serious damage while they were gone.

Last month, paintings valued in the millions of dollars, some of the same style and age as those taken from the DIA, were stolen from the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston. There has been unconfirmed speculation linking that much more dramatic theft to the drug trade. But a DIA spokeswoman said it would be farfetched to suggest a link between the two crimes.

"I don't think art has become particularly at risk to the drug business," Sachs said. Spectacular auction prices have increased public awareness of the monetary value of art, Sachs said.

But "art is not a very good commodity (for thieves) when it is published as part of the permanent collection of a museum" because it cannot readily be converted into cash, Sachs said. He said the return of the DIA paintings helps demonstrate the futility of art thefts.

The stolen paintings "are not the greatest treasures of the museum's collection," Sachs acknowledged. But he called "Laughing Boy" one of the "better-known images of the museum" and said the "fondness in which it is held remains unchanged" by questions over who painted it.

Sachs said it would be speculation to suggest that such questions, some of which have arisen since the paintings were stolen, could make them worth less than the insurance payoff, which the museum had to return to order to get them back. "I would encourage you to speculate that we wouldn't have bought them back if we felt they were not worth what we paid for them."

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - The United States and the Soviet Union appeared anxious Wednesday to avoid a collision on Lithuania during pre-summit talks intended to set a date for a meeting of President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev.

The three days of talks involving Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze are to prepare for a long-anticipated June summit in Washington.

Shevardnadze, as he arrived in Washington, said that so many agreements are near completion that a third prepatory conference probably will be needed before Bush and the Soviet president meet.

The Soviet diplomat said the accords could include an agreement on destruction of chemical weapons, a framework for reducing troop levels in Europe, and a treaty calling for reducing strategic nuclear arsenals by 50 percent.

In the first session Wednesday, Baker and Shevardnadze are scheduled to meet one-on-one for two to three hours, setting the stage for detailed talks Thursday and Friday by high-level officials on specific subjects.

The five areas to be covered by the ''working groups'' are arms control, regional issues such as the Middle East, transnational issues such as cross-border pollution or narcotics trafficking, human rights and such bilateral concerns as trade.

Both sides took public steps to avoid a confrontation over the situation in rebellious Lithuanian that could jeopardize the summit.

After a Wednesday morning meeting with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Baker said, ''We are anxious that these developments (concerning Lithuania) proceed peacefully.''

He said Lithuania would be the top subject of discussion with the Soviets, but added the Bush administration was encouraged by the beginning of a dialogue between the Kremlin and Lithuanian leaders.

He said he was also encouraged that both Lithuanians and the Soviets have made reference to a referendum in Lithuania over the Baltic republic's attempt to secede from the Soviet Union.

On his arrival Tuesday, Shevardnaze said he could simply declare Lithuania to be an internal affair of the Soviet Union, ''but that would not be appropriate.''

Instead, he said, Moscow recognizes the interest that the United States has in the controversy and said he hoped it could be resolved by ''an honest dialogue.''

While the United States never has recognized the forced incorporation of Lithuania into Stalin's Soviet Union, the Bush administration reacted cautiously to the small state's bid for independence.

Bush and Gorbachev held their first summit - a short-notice get-acquainted affair that yielded no major agreements - at Malta in the Mediterranean last December.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said Wednesday that the United States will continue to play a key role in Europe as postwar divisions give way to greater political and economic integration.

Seeking to allay any concerns about where the United States might be left by the change now under way in Europe, Genscher said German unification ''will attribute a new quality'' to relations between the United States and its allies.

With German unification proceeding in tandem with the creation of a single European market by 1992, Genscher urged a restatement of ''the common objectives, the common tasks and challenges'' linking the United States and Western Europe.

''In doing so,'' he said, ''we could express our conviction that a strengthening of the European Community does not automatically make the Atlantic Ocean into a border ocean, but rather brings us closer.''

Genscher spoke to reporters after meeting with President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker to discuss future security arrangements for a Europe transformed by the repudiation of communism in Eastern Europe, the reunification of Germany and the emergence of a stronger European economic community.

While Genscher insisted the United States and West Germany were ''in complete agreement'' on the basic issues, there were clear signs of different visions of how those processes should be managed and where they might be headed.

For example, Genscher promoted a lead role for the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which includes NATO, the Warsaw Pact and non-aligned nations. Bush has instead suggested an expanded role for NATO.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush told Genscher that the United States views CSCE as a ''good framework'' for discussions but ''emphasized that we see a strong and continuing role for NATO.''

''CSCE would not replace that,'' Fitzwater said.

Genscher asserted that U.S. influence would not be diluted by the broader CSCE framework and said NATO will play ''a very important role.

''The stability of Europe cannot be safeguarded without the participation of the United States,'' he said.

To that end, Genscher said American troops would be needed in Europe for the foreseeable future to ensure U.S. and European security. At the same time, he underscored the need for disarmament to continue beyond the targets set by the current!Emst-West talks on conventional force reductions, which could produce an agreement by this fall.

Though U.S. officials have been reluctant to publicly discuss what lies beyond the current negotiations, Genscher underscored the need for concluding that agreement and moving on, warning that disarmament ''cannot be left behind the political developments'' in Europe.

In the process, he all but declared as dead the scheduled modernization by NATO of its short-range nuclear missiles in Europe. Sidestepping a disruptive debate, NATO last year put off a final decision on that move until 1992. Genscher, however, said that in the face of reduced tensions that issue has become ''a topic of the past.''

(APRIL 4) UPI - Today's People:

HEMINGWAY DISPLAY: What would Ernest Hemingway have thought of his granddaughter posing nude for Playboy? "I would hope he would have been thrilled," said actress-model Margaux Hemingway.

At an appearance in New York Wednesday to promote the issue, she said the pictorial is a chance "to show off my new body." It's also something of a rebirth for Hemingway, who has gone through the Betty Ford Clinic to quit drinking and lost 75 pounds.

"There's nothing like putting my bottom dollar on this, so to speak," she said. "This is probably the most positive thing I ever did. The pictures are very positive." Hemingway says her sister, Mariel, thought the photos were great but her father, Jack, hasn't seen them yet.

OFF-COURT WIN FOR LENDL: Tennis star Ivan Lendl is suffering through the chicken pox at home in Greenwich, Conn., but there was news from London to cheer him up. A court has awarded him libel damages because the Today newspaper printed allegations saying he had an affair with high-class call girl Pamella Bordes.

Lendl's attorney had told the court that he never met the woman and that the report "gravely affected and hurt him both personally and professionally." Lendl, whose damage award was described as "substantial," is the third person to sue for libel involving reports of links with Bordes, a former Indian beauty queen and Parliament researcher.

His case marks the second time in a week that Today, which is owned by Rupert Murdoch, had to fork over for libeling someone. Viscount Lindley recently was awarded $56,700 for a story that wrongly claimed he had been banned from a pub for throwing beer.

FORD GETS A BETTER KNEE: Old football players like Gerald Ford never die. They just undergo knee surgery. Doctors in Rancho Mirage, Calif., operated Wednesday to correct problems that started during Ford's career as a center in high school in Grand Rapids, Mich., and the University of Michigan, where he was an All-American. Ford, 76, agreed to the elective surgery because of continuing problems with his left knee, but otherwise he's in good health, a spokesman said.

CALL THE RAT HOTLINE: Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley is a rat-buster. Using a garbage can in a West Side alley as a podium, Daley declared war on rats Tuesday by saying, "Rats are a menace to the clean and healthy environment we want for ourselves and our families. Rats are tough opponents. You have to break off their food supply. With garbage containers, an efficient poison baiting program and an education program, City Hall is providing the tools needed to tackle our rat problem." He even set up a rat hotline (312-744-RATS) for citizens to call to report problems.

GLIMPSES: Actor John Cusack says he's innocent of two misdemeanor drunken driving charges. Cusack's attorney went to court in Beverly Hills, Calif., Tuesday to enter the pleas in advance of a May 4 hearing. Cusack, 23, was driving a rented jeep that hit another vehicle on Feb. 23, but no one was hurt.

Bernadette Peters spent two hours a day in a makeup chair getting slathered with pancake makeup and fitted with false eyelashes so she could play Tammy Faye Bakker in the upcoming TV movie "Fall From Grace." AMRITSAR, INDIA (APRIL 4) UPI - The death toll rose to 40 Wednesday from a bomb blast and communal clashes in the northern Punjab town of Betala, and a right-wing Hindu party called for a strike in New Delhi to protest the violence.

Four people died Wednesday, raising the toll to 40 in Tuesday's bomb explosion and in Hindu-Sikh clashes in the industrial town of Batala, 30 miles northeast of Amritsar, police said. At least 56 were injured.

The clashes occurred Tuesday, just after a bomb planted by Sikh extremists exploded as a Hindu religious procession passed by.

Authorities opened fire to disperse the clashing crowds and later imposed an indefinite curfew.

Officials blamed the blast on Babbar Khalsa, a hard-core Sikh separatist group fighting to create in the predominantly Sikh state the independent nation of ''Khalistan,'' or ''Land of the Pure.''

Authorities maintained a tight curfew across Batala, deployed additional forces and stepped-up foot and mobile patrol to maintain law and order in the strif-torn town, police said.

In New Delhi, the right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party called for a strike in the Indian capital on Thursday to protest the bloody events in Batala.

Madan Lal Khurana, the president of the Delhi unit of the party and member of Parliament, said that essential services like electricity, water, transport and medical services would be exempt from the protest strike.

The separatist-related violence has disrupted normal life in much of Punjab. More than 7,000 people have died in the violence since 1983.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - A Senate Committee approved Wednesday legislation to overturn Supreme Court decisions that civil rights advocates said made it harder for minorities and women to prove employment discrimination.

The Labor and Human Resources Committee voted 11-5 for the civil rights bill, despite the threat of a veto in a letter from Attorney General Dick Thornburgh. Sens. James Jeffords, R-Vt., and David Durenberger, R-Minn., voted with the committee's Democrats for the measure.

The legislation would overturn six Supreme Court decisions last year that, combined, were considered a major setback to civil rights by making it more difficult to prove discrimination, makes it easier to for those opposed to civil rights consent decrees to challenge them after the fact, narrows the coverage of civil rights statutes and limits attorney's fees.

The bill also would allow the same monetary damages for discrimination on the basis of sex and religion as is provided to racial and ethnic minorities under an post-Civil War 1866 law.

In addition, the bill adopts a general rule directing the courts to interpret civil rights law generously to carry out the intent of Congress.

Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, said, ''The strong vote reflects the bipartisan congressional consensus that supports this vital and historic measure.

''Without question, the Civil Rights Act of 1990 will be enacted this year thus overturning a series of Supreme Court decisions that have made it more difficult for victims of discrimination to get into court, to prove discrimination and to obtain effective remedies,'' Neas said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the committee, noted that the Bush administration supported legislation to overturn two of the court decisions but added that ''additional action is needed to fill other gaps in the civil rights laws left by other court decisions.''

Neas, however, charged that ''rather than stand up in support of civil rights, the Bush administration decided to bow to the right wing of the Republican party.''

''We hope that President Bush will reject the recommendation of Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and other senior officers and refuse to join the ranks of Andrew Johnson and Ronald Reagan as the only presidents in American history to veto a civil rights bill,'' Neas said.

AIN EL HELWEH, LEBANON (APRIL 4) UPI - A ranking Palestine Liberation Organizationofficial said Wednesday that the number of Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon has sharply increased since the ouster of the PLO from the nation eight years ago.

Zeid Wehbeh, the PLO representative in Lebanon, also warned that violence against Israel will be escalated in the event that U.S.-spearheaded efforts to settle the Palestinian question fail.

The bulk of the PLO fighting force fled to several Arab countries during the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

''The number of our fighters is much larger than what the Western media mentioned,'' Wehbeh told United Press International at his residence in the shanty town of Ain El Helweh on the outskirts of the port city of Sidon in southern Lebanon.

Wehbeh did not disclose any figures, but his remarks followed a report in The New York Times that the number of Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon has increased from 8,000 to 12,000.

But the PLO official argued with the numbers mentioned in the Times report saying, ''Here and in the Israeli-occupied territories, we don't classify our people as civilians and fighters.''

''Every Palestinian child is a fighter,'' said the clean-shaven Wehbeh, sitting on a sofa and smoking a hubble-bubble, a type of hookah.

Sources close to the PLO in the city of Sidon said the organization has been graduating 300 fighters each month. On mud-swept alleways of the camp children play happily as they return home, mingling with young guerrillas toting Kalashnikov rifles. No anti-aircraft batteries were visible.

In exercises aimed at strengthening the fighting capability of the guerrillas, 300 PLO fighters carried out a mock battle last month with live ammunition east of Sidon. At the end of the maneuver, medals were distributed to field commanders. PLO officials said that the maneuver was the sixth conducted in Lebanon since 1985.

''We will have to boost our military capabilities on grounds that our forces in southern Lebanon are based in the face of enemy positions,'' Wehbeh said, indicating the PLO will maintain and develop its military strength as long as diplomacy fails to resolve the conflict with Israel.

''We will keep the military option, because Israel has remained intransigent, and the United States supported the Jews' migration,'' Wehbeh said, referring to the controversial Jewish imigration from the Soviet Union. ''And I warn that this situation will eventually lead to the escalation of our armed struggle.''

Analysts say that followers of PLO leader Yasser Arafat have been practicing restraint to make room for the PLO chief's diplomatic efforts, refraining from launching hit-and-run attacks against Israeli targets.

Arafat was in Paris Wednesday for talks on the stalled Middle East peace process with former U.S. President Jimmy Carter and French President Francois Mitterrand.

''We will have to give Arafat a chance to maneuver in a dynamic fashion,'' said Abu Wisam, an official of the Iraqi-financed Arab Liberation Front.

In an apparent attempt to enlarge the PLO political role in Lebanon, Arafat has recently dispatched a delegation into the Christian enclave to try mend fences between warring Christian forces.

The PLO has experienced harsh blows by its staunch Arab foe, Syria, whose president Hafez Assad has been efforting to gain a larger role in the Middle East. In 1983, Syrian-backed Palestianian factions wiped out the military presence of Arafat's followers in eastern and northern Lebanon.

A three-year war with pro-Syrian Shiite Moslem Amal movement ended in 1986 with the crushing of the PLO military infrastructure in southern Beirut.

But in the strongest military show by the PLO since its 1982 defeat, hundreds of guerrillas from the organization's mainstream Fatah movement last December fanned out of camps in southern Lebanon and took control of hilly terrain to the east, disengaging battling rival Shiite groups.

The move came after Iran-backed Hezbollah fundamentalists gained the upper hand in fighting against Amal and appeared poised to occupy territory around the Palestinian shanty towns.

Since then, pro-Syrian Moslem officials have accused the PLO of intending to widen its presence on Lebanese territory.

UNITED NATIONS (APRIL 4) UPI - Israel protested Wednesday what it called ''U.N. silence'' on the deaths of hundreds of Palestinians allegedly at the hands of the Palestine Liberation Organization and terrorist groups.

Israel's U.N. mission said a total of 205 Palestinians were murdered by the ''PLO and other terrorist death squads'' from December 1987 to March 1990. Itsaid the latest incident occured March 28, when an employee of the U.N. agency assisting Palestinian refugees was killed along with his father.

U.N. spokesmen refused last week to confirm the death of the U.N. agency worker after Israeli authorities reported it.

Clashes between Israeli soldiers and rock-throwing Palestinian demonstrators since the Dec. 9, 1987, popular uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories have resulted in the deaths of more than 600 Palestinians.

Israeli acting U.N. permanent representative Johanan Bein said in a protest note to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar that among the 205 Palestinians allegedly killed by other Palestinians were 23 women who were raped and tortured before being killed.

He said others were burned alive, strangled or hacked to death. He said another 573 Palestinians ve7/8e seriously wounded in the widely reported executions of Palestinians charged with collaborating with Israeli authorities in the occupied territories of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

''The long silence and passivity of the United Nations in regard to this untenable situation as well as the constant complacency shown towards all

PLO murderous activities has been construed as tacit encouragement to amplify and accelerate their campaign of terror against the Arab population'' in the territories, Bein said.

He asked Perez de Cuellar to make a ''personal, forceful condemnation'' of the executions.

Bein said 44 Palestinians were killed in the first two months of 1990 and 138 in 1989. He sent a list of the names of the 205 dead to Perez de Cuellar, warning him that the assassination attempts have ''substantially increased.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - There was a trace of nostaglia Wednesday as some of the movers and shakers of "the wonder years" revisited the 1960s and drew out their meaning for the 1990s at the annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

At the same time, a panel consisting of feminist leader Gloria Steinem, civil rights organizer Robert Moses, Watergate figure John Ehrlichman, the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh and retired Gen. William Westmoreland nearly agreed there is unfinished business from what moderator Walter Cronkite called "the most turbulent (decade) of them all."

But there were few verbal fireworks and little rancor - chief attributes of the tumultuous decade so politely discussed - among the panelists, some of whom were archenemies during the period.

For Moses and Steinem, the unfinished business remains the projects on which they cut their political teeth - the civil rights and feminist movements.

Steinem said the current feminist movement - the so-called second wave - is entering "a second stage ... to change the institutions that govern our lives."

In the 1960s and 1970s, she said, the movement "named the problems." She said that "now we have words for them but we have not changed" the structures that create the problems.

Moses, who deliberately shunned publicity during his organizing days in the South during the 1960s but was a legendary figure among activists, stressed that while the terms of organizing have changed, the goals - education for citizenship, for participation, for access to power - have not.

Currently working in the Boston area with The Algebra Project, an effort to aid inner city students become literate in mathematics and computers, Moses said those languages will "have an impact on who is and who is not a citizen."

Without that literacy, he said, "people will not be able to participate in the economic and political arrangements that are evolving" and like the illiterate of the Industrial Revolution, be left a class "that functions as serfs." "We are nurturing in our inner cities a new society of serfs," he said.

Westmoreland, who led U.S. combat forces during the divisive war in Vietnam, called for an end to the "distortion of the Vietnam war" by the current crop of movies.

"No war in history has been as distorted in the public mind as the war in Vietnam," Westmoreland said, arguing the United States achieved virtually all of its objectives in the conflict.

Hesburgh, who was president of the University of Notre Dame during the period, lamented how many educators fell victim to the student movement, mourned the "ultra-conservative" student generation of the late 1970s and 1980s, but said he has new hope in the current students who have rediscovered a concept of public service.

Ehrlichman, once a top aide to President Richard Nixon who spent 18 months in prison for his role in the Watergate scandal, said that during the 1970s "there was a drying up of those expectations" that Washington could solve problems and people now turn less to Washington than they did in the 60s.

But both Moses and Steinem disagreed, saying that both the civil rights and the feminist movement organized locally first and turned to Washington when necessary.

(APRIL 4) UPI - The crossing point between Poland and Lithuania is a lonely place now that Moscow has closed the border. A Polish customs officer says people have heard that traffic has been suspended, so they DON'T come to the crossing point in northeast Poland. Relations between the Kremlin and Lithuania have been tense since the Baltic republic declared its independence last month.

A possible break-through in El Salvador's civil war. The Salvadoran

A siege at an overcrowded jail in Manchester, England, is now in its fourth day... with negotiators pushing for talks with rebellious inmates. Officials say 39 prisoners have refused to surrender. The standoff began on Sunday at the Strangeways Prison when hundreds of inmates rebelled in a protest against living conditions. At least one inmate has died and 60 were hurt in the violence at the jail, which was built in 1868 for 970 inmates but now houses 16-hundred.

KALAPANA, HI (APRIL 4) UPI - Searing lava from Kilauea Volcano burned through a three-foot-high rock wall Wednesday and destroyed a house in the remote Kalapana Gardens housing area on the island of Hawaii.

The residence was the 76th consumed since Kilauea began its present eruption in January 1983. Damage to homes, property and roads in the area downslope from the volcano has been set at about $20 million. The partially evacuated housing area had been under threat for three days.

Civil Defense officials evacuated seven homes Tuesday and 25 or 30 homes Monday. All residents of the 82-home housing area were put on alert and could be ordered out with 72 hours' notice.

"A house that had been threatened began to burn about 6:20 a.m.," said Hawaii County Civil Defense Assistant Administrator Bruce Butts. Another home 30 or 40 feet away would be the next to come under direct threat, he said.

"Overnight, lava passed two houses in Kalapana Gardens, coming within two feet of one of them," Butts said. He noted the lava was pooling near that home and could threaten it later.

Those who have been ordered out packed up their belongings and found other quarters. But several dozen returned to watch the advance of the hissing flow of lava toward their homes.

The 30- to 40-foot-wide front of the river of molten rock continued to move slowly through the southwest portion of the housing area, which lies on the southeast coast of the island of Hawaii, some 200 miles from Honolulu.

The molten rock was moving parallel to Lokelani Street and had crossed the road at one point, Butts said. He termed the crossing more of a spillover, rather than a flow. Most of the lava continued to move parallel to the street, he said.

CHICAGO (APRIL 4) UPI - Soybeans closed strongly higher and grains ended higher Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybean futures finished strongly higher, helped by a firm tone in grains and uncertainty over whether Brazil would be able to meet its early export commitmments. Reports of progress in the Brazilian harvest had weighed on bean prices this week.

Traders noted strong professional interest in the nearby months of soymeal which contributed to the firm tone in the soy complex. Ideas of trade with the East also bolstered soybean oil futures.

Corn prices closed higher, boosted by fund and professional buying. The pit saw very active trading during the first hour, then the market became subdued.

Aggressive commission house interest pushed May wheat futures to a two-month high. Wheat closed higher but profit-taking and commercial sales pared gains.

Commission and local buying combined with active bull spreading in the May contract led the rally. New-crop months also attracted buying based on weather concerns in hard-red wheat areas.

Interest focused on May wheat following a report one buyer held a large position.

At the close, corn was up 1 1/2 to 2, soybeans up 2 to 5 1/4, wheat up 2 3/4 to 8 1/4 and oats unchanged to up 1/2.

Pennsylvania's Allegheny River. The F-B-I and U-S Attorney's Office joined the probe into the 200-thousand-gallon spill that was now moving down the Ohio River west of Pittsburgh. Authorities also are looking into why the Buckeye Pipe Line Company waited four hours before notifying officials about the leak.

Convicted Wall Street inside-trader Ivan Boesky is now a free man. Boesky was released this morning from a Brooklyn halfway house where he was had been reporting since December of last year. MONTREAL (UPI) - The Inter-American Development Bank, in the midst of a two-year trial period for structural-adjustment loans to Latin America and the Caribbean, said Wednesday it will consider participating in debt-reduction plans for the region.

IDB President Enrique Iglesias told reporters after the final session of the IDB's annual meeting that a number of countries providing funds to the IDB believe the organization should be part of debt refinancing negotiations launched by U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

Under the so-called Brady Plan the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and commercial banks would negotiate debt repayment packages for countries unable to meet payments on bank loans.

The IDB had not been part of the process because it provided only project financing in Latin America and the Caribbean. However, that changed last year when about one-quarter of the IDB's funds were earmarked for structural adjustment type loans carrying conditions similar to those of the IMF and World Bank. The loans are provided to sp5cific sectors of a country's economy on condition that policies affecting those sectors are reformed.

Iglesias said he has not been given an official mandate to participate in Brady plan negotiations.

''What we have is an interest on the part of some governors of the IDB to participate in debt restructuring. This is the beginning of a process that will probably lead to something,'' he said.

The IDB annual meeting was overshadowed by concern among Latin American and Caribbean nations that recent moves in Central and Eastern Europe toward market economies will divert development assistance and private investment funds away from their region.

Non-regional members of the IDB, led by the United States as the largest contributor to the bank, have repeatedly stated that the Latin American and Carfibbean region will be able to recapture private investment only if individual countries continue to overhaul their economies and reduce external debt.

Some non-regional nations have also voiced concern that the IDB has more than $400 million in loan arrears and must tighten its lending policy.

Iglesias indicated, however, that while the bank should improve the quality of projects it finances, it should also play a larger role in improving the transportation and energy infrastructure throughout the region and try to reverse deteriorating health and education systems.

Iglesias said that one-third of Latin Americans live in ''dire poverty'' and some countries face a desperate financial situation.

''This has to be a key issue for the bank and we are committed to solving it,'' he said.

Joaquin Chamorro, president of the Central Bank in Nicaragua, told the final IDB session that he understood the need to enforce a strict arrears policy so the bank could protect its credit rating on capital markets. But he said, too rigid a policy would aggravate the problem since many countries have a genuine inability to repay their loans.

PARIS (APRIL 4) UPI - PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and former President Jimmy Carter met with President Francois Mitterrand Wednesday in an effort to break the stalemate in the Middle East peace process, French officials said. Carter and Arafat arrived separately at the Elysee Palace for the talks shortly after 8 p.m. There were no other details available on the talks.

Foreign Minister Roland Dumas told reporters before the meeting that the three-way session "could be useful and happy" and that France hopes "to unblock the Middle East peace process."

Abu Iyad, Arafat's No. 2 Man, told Radio France Internationale the Palestine Liberation Organization chose Paris for the meeting because of "the courageous position" of Mitterrand's government on the Palestinian question.

Originally the meeting was to involve only Arafat and Carter, but Mitterrrand announced he was taking part in the unprecedented meeting shortly after the arrival of the two leaders in the French capital.

Police stepped up security at Orly Airport for Arafat, who landed aboard a special Iraqi executive jet shorly after 4 p.m. More than 200 gendarmes and anti-explosives experts ringed the airport's Honor Pavilion normally reserved for heads of state where French officials met Arafat for security reasons. Carter arrived from Brussels, Belgium, a short time later.

Arafat was to meet with Dumas before his talks with Mitterrand and Carter, but that session was postponed until Thursday morning, PLO sources said. Diplomatic sources said Carter, architect of the 1978 Camp David peace accords and the 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty, unofficially is acting as an emissary of Secretary of State James Baker, who is anxious to crank up talks between the Palestinians and the Israelis.

Informal talks between the two men, originally set for March 20 in Tunis, Tunisia, were postponed because Arafat went to Windhoek for Namibian independence ceremonies.

A Jewish group, the Representative Council of Jewish Institutions in France, protested the Carter-Arafat meeting, saying it "has demanded to be received by Jimmy Carter to obtain clarifications" about why he agreed to meet Arafat.

"Arafat demonstrates today to France and our fellow citizens that he only presents a facade of being a messenger of peace and conciliation. In reality he remains partisan of a murderous conflict," the group claimed in a statement.

Last month, Carter made a private tour of Egypt, Syria, Jordan, and Israel and denounced human rights violations in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank. Carter criticized Israel last month for its methods of suppressing the two-year-old Palestinian uprising and called for an international peace conference.

The meeting also comes amid an Israeli government crisis in which the Labor Party is trying to form an administration that would make peace with the Palestinians.

The United States started official talks with the PLO in December 1988, after the organization recognized Israel and agreed to renounce terrorism. In an interview with the Italian news agency ANSA, Arafat, who will travel to Rome and the Vatican after meeting with Carter, asserted that Israel was stockpiling nuclear weapons and stalling the peace process.

"The Israelis are preparing for war," he said. "They have refused all the peace initiatives, U.N. Resolution 161, the Palestinian initiative, the Franco-Soviet initiative, the ten-point Egyptian plan and even the Baker plan.

Arafat said he will make it clear that in his talks with Italian leaders and in an audience with Pope John Paul II, his main aim will be to press for international action to coerce Israeli leaders into resuming peace negotiations. In particular, he hopes to win support for curbing the influx of Soviet Jews into Israel and their settlement in the Israeli-occupied lands.

Israel formally protested to the Italian government against Arafat's visit. Israeli Ambassador to Italy Mordechai Drory said the Israeli government protested not only the invitation extended to the PLO leader by Italian authorities, but also the fact the visit was being placed "on the same level as a state visit."

It will be Arafat's fourth visit to Italy, but the first given the character of an "official" visit. He has also had two previous audiences with the pope, in September 1982 and December 1988.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Janis Gabay, honored Wednesday as national teacher of the year at a White House ceremony, is a San Diego high school English instructor trying to prepare her students for a high-tech world by helping them learn to love Shakespeare.

Gabay, 39, was chosen from among 2.5 million public school teachers for the award, which was sponsored by the Council of State School Officers and Encylopaedia Britannica, and was presented for the 39th year.

At the White House, President Bush, accompanied by Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, presented Gabay with a crystal apple, symbolic of learning, saying, "God bless you for all you are doing for those kids."

"Jan always tells her students that she has succeeded because of them. In that spirit, it is always true that our schools will succeed because of people like her," Bush said.

Gabay, seemingly fighting back tears, praised the president for making clear the importance of education and pledged to represent her colleagues "by giving a credible and assertive voice to this nation's concerns about education." At an earlier news conference, Gabay said her message would be one of optimism - that schools can be improved classroom by classroom.

"I think I was selected mainly because I am the prototypical teacher of the 1990s, which means a teacher must have the commitment and the enthusiasm, the requisite academic and interpersonal skills, to make education of a very high quality accessible to students of all backgrounds," she said in an interview.

"We are looking at our students' performance in terms of the economy, in terms of technology ... not simply teaching them to be able to read English, but to use that English to function in a technologically advanced society."

Gabay has won praise for encouraging her students at Junipero Serra High School to participate in their community. In 1983, she helped organize a program at the San Diego Union newspaper, in which students submit book reviews for pay.

Gabay said her strategy for her tenth and 12th grade students, a culturally diverse lot drawn mainly from Navy families, is to identify something in their backgrounds that will turn them on to learning and help them appreciate the works of such authors as Conrad, Joyce and - her favorite - Shakespeare.

"That means tapping whatever they bring to the classroom first. If we're reading a piece of literature, we may begin with a personal reaction. ... What preconceptions do you have? What experiences do you have?" Gabay said.

"One of the things I tell my high school students is to hold in abeyance any judgment, even dislike for the text. Let's work through it. Stay open to it and you can make a judgment when we finish," she said. "I tell them my experience. I hated Shakespeare in high school."

Gabay was accompanied to appearances in Washington by four of her students, including Purvee Parikh, a senior who will attend college next year. "She did great," Parikh said. "Her speech was so awesome. I almost cried."

Born in Honolulu, Gabay received her bachelor's and masters degrees from San Diego State University and has taught for 17 years, the last ten at Serra.

The other 1990 finalists were Rachel Moreno, Flowing Wells High School, Tucson, Ariz.; Billy Dean Nave Jr., River Valley Alternative School, Winthrop, Maine; and Maria McAlister Pyles, Greenwood High School, Greenwood, S.C.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Senate opponents of the stealth bomber said Wednesday a new study of cost options on the batwing warplane strengthen their arugment the ''flying Fort Knox'' must be killed.

At the request of several senators and House members, the Congressional Budget Office studied a variety of options for reducing the number of planes built from the projected 132 to 66 and 33, and the costs of slowing production at the various levels. It also forecast savings of nearly $34 billion if the plane is killed this year.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who got 32 votes against the plane last year said the strength of the movement is on the rise and the report is ''a very strong added argument'' against the plane.

The CBO report, said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., shows that ''the stealth is a budgetary black hole - it attracts and devours funds like a condensed star attracts and devours light.''

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., called the plane a ''flying Fort Knox'' because it's per-ounce price is about the cost of an ounce of gold and the price per plane could hit $1.9 billion under one production plan.

The report forecast the overall cost of the program at about $75.4 billion some $30.4 billion of which has already been invested for the development and production of 15 planes. While killing it would save $34 billion, there would be a small amount of spending in the next several years.

The administration wants to build five planes next year, followed by an annual rate of 10, 21, 24 and 30 planes to 1995, with another 27 built after that.

Overall B-2 costs would rise to $78.8 billion with a 1991 purchase of just two planes, the CBO reported, and to nearly $85 billion if production were deliberatey slowed in the mid 1990s. The per-plane cost, now estimated by the CBO at $570 million, would go to $600 million with a slight delay and to $640 million with further stretching out.

It said that the overall cost for 66 planes, bought on the administration's schedule, would be nearly $57 billion, with per-unit costs of $860 million.

If 66 planes were bought at the rate of three per year, the CBO said, the total cost would be $96 billion - well above the current price for 132 planes - and the per-plane cost would be $1.4 billion.

Producing 66 planes at the rate of two per year, it said, would drive up overall costs to $118 billion and make the unit cost almost $1.9 billion each.

With a program of 33 planes, the CBO said, buying three planes a year would produce overall program costs of about $57 billion and unit costs of $1.7 billion.

Buying 33 planes at two per year would produce an overall cost of just over $64 billion and a unit cost of $1.95 billion each.

Air Force Secretary Donald Rice told the Senate Defense Appropriations Subcommittee Tuesday that one of several options under review for the B-2 is to slow the annual production rate down to about two-thirds to three-quarters of what was planned. That, he said, would not drive up the per-unit costs of the planes too much.

But Lieberman, at a press conference called by the anti-stealth faction, countered, ''I don't think an economy of scale argument is valid when the sale is so large and the economy is so weak. When you're in danger of going on welfare, you don't contemplate buying a fleet of yachts, even if each one is cheaper when you buy them by the dozen.''

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (APRIL 4) UPI - Contra rebels will abide by a demobilization agreement with Nicaragua's incoming government but will ignore a call by Central American presidents to begin disarming immediately, a rebel spokesman said Wednesday.

Under the Toncontin Declaration, signed March 23 by Contra leaders and a team of negotiators representing President-elect Violeta Chamorro, the force will start demobilizing by April 20, but the presidents issued a joint communique at the end of a two-day summit Tuesday calling for immediate demobilization.

The communique, released by the presidents of Nicaragua, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras at the summit in Montelimar, Nicaragua, called for the United Nations and the Organization of American States to support the ''disarming and demobilizing of members of the Nicaraguan Resistance (Contras) inside or outside Nicaragua, which must begin immediately and conclude at the latest April 25.''

Chamorro, who won Feb. 25 elections, is scheduled to take office from Nicaragua's Sandinista government on that date.

Contra spokesman Alejandro Acevedo told United Press International Wednesday the Contras would stick by their agreement with the Chamorro government and rebuff the declaration submitted by the five presidents, including outgoing Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

''The agreement that the resistance will comply with is with the incoming government, not with the Sandinista Front,'' he said.

''The Toncontin agreement was signed with the incoming government. It is the one the resistance recognizes,'' Acevedo said in a telephone interview from Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

Several diplomats said Tuesday that the April 25 deadline was more of a symbolic gesture than a realistic goal for disbanding the rebels, thousands of whom have entered Nicaragua from camps in southern Honduras in recent weeks.

Acevedo said the declaration made by the five presidents ''does not bind us to an immediate demobilization, because it is not established in the Toncontin agreement.''

''Besides, it is an impossible task to talk of demobilization when the conditions have not been created,'' Acevedo said.

He said the Contras had agreed to start handing over their weapons to U.N. supervisors on April 18 in Yamales, Honduras.

Honduran authorities said Saturday that 80 rebels had already surrendered their weapons to Honduran armed forces at Yamales, near the Nicaraguan border, and estimated there were some 5,000 Contras left at the camps.

An estimated 5,000 others have moved across the border since the elections and there are now between 8,000 and 10,000 Contras inside Nicaragua.

''Regarding the people inside Nicaragua, first security zones have to be defined, then a cease-fire must be observed, then the separation of forces - while the Sandinista Popular Army must be confined to barracks to proceed with the disarming - and then the demilitarization,'' Acevedo said.

Maj. Gen. Joaquin Cuadra, Nicaragua's deputy defense minister, said the Nicaraguan government proposed at the summit that Contras gather in five cease-fire zones inside of Nicaragua to await a U.N.-supervised demobilization.

MOSCOW (APRIL 4) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev warned Estonia to annul a declaration that it is breaking away from the Soviet Union or face a response similar to Moscow's tough stand in Lithuania, Estonian President Arnold Ruutel said Wednesday.

Ruutel told the Estonian Parliament that Gorbachev issued the warning during a ''long telephone conversation'' with him late Tuesday, the Estonian news agency ETA said.

Gorbachev called Ruutel hours after the Estonian legislature chose Popular Front leader Edgar Savisaar as prime minister in another sign of nationalists' increasing control of the Baltic republic.

''At the beginning, it was a polite and calm conversation,'' Ruutel later told Estonia Radio. ''He congratulated me on my election as chairman of the (Estonian) Supreme Soviet.''

Gorbachev then used ''harsh words,'' Ruutel said, to protest the Estonian Parliament's declaration Friday that the republic was entering ''the beginning of a period of transition'' to full independence and that ''the restoration of the Republic of Estonia has begun.''

Though the Estonian resolution Friday was milder than a Lithuanian measure three weeks earlier, which declared immediate independence in Lithuania, Gorbachev gave Ruutel the same demand for annulment he gave Lithuania last weekend.

''Gorbachev said that if the Estonian Supreme Soviet does not rescind the document in question, the same sort of regime will be introduced in Estonia as in Lithuania,'' ETA said.

''Gorbachev called into doubt a number of principal questions in the document adopted by our Supreme Soviet,'' ETA quoted Ruutel as having said. ''He does not consider this resolution legally sound.''

The Soviet leader ''suggested to Ruutel that he present today or tomorrow a detailed explanation to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.,'' ETA said in a dispatch dictated by phone from Tallinn.

Gorbachev's call to Ruutel indicated he is wary of Estonian leaders' assurances that they will not follow Lithuania's abrupt path to independence, and that he is intent on stopping any repetition in Estonia of the nearly four-week showdown between Moscow and Vilnius.

In a show of Baltic solidarity, the Estonian legislature Tuesday approved a measure supporting the Lithuanian Parliament's March 11 declaration of independence.

Moscow's war of nerves with Lithuania, including the seizure of several buildings by Soviet troops in Vilnius and the dispatch of tank columns through the city, appeared to ease Tuesday when Presidential Council member Alexander Yakovlev met with three Lithuanian officials.

Ruutel said the Estonian parliament's executive presidium would discuss Gorbachev's demand and send him a formal response.

''There is no cause for alarm,'' Ruutel said.

In his conversation with Ruutel, Gorbachev also expressed anger with a letter he received last week from Estonian members of the Soviet Parliament, ETA said.

The Estonian lawmakers told Gorbachev that they could not participate in the Soviet Parliament's current debate on a law that would provide the country's 15 republics a legal mechanism for secession under tough restrictions, it said.

''If we took part in the discussion of this law, it would be tantamount to recognizing the (1940) annexation'' of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania by the Soviet Union, the news agency quoted the legislators as having written to Gorbachev.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Communications companies were the best stock group to invest in last year, while health care and computers securities had little to offer to shareholders, a survey of ''the Good, the Bad and the Ugly'' on Wall Street said Wednesday.

Retailer Wal-Mart Stores Inc., based in Bentonville, Ark., topped the list as the best stock of 1989 for overall performance, according to the annual survey compiled by the Washington-based United Shareholders Association.

The association, which groups about 60,000 investors nationwide, released its ranking of the top 1,000 publicly traded U.S. corporations based on their stock market performance, respect of shareholders rights, and management compensation and stock ownership.

''The Shareholder 1,000 rating system differs from traditional corporate lists ... because it concentrates on stock performance instead of size,'' said Ralph Whitworth, president of the association. ''None of the other corporate rankings say anything about how well the companies perform for shareholders - the owners.''

None of the major corporations topping the list of the Fortune 500 ranked among the first 40 companies on Shareholders 1,000.

The companies surveyed trade on the New York Stock Exchange and the American Stock Exchange as well as over the counter. It was the second annual ranking compiled by the association, founded in 1986 by investor T. Boone Pickens.

''For shareholders, size is meaningless, results are everything,'' Whitworth said. ''The Shareholders 1,000 reflects the Good, the Bad and the Ugly of corporate America.''

In overall performance, Loews Corp., a diversified holding company with hotel, tobacco and entertainment businesses ranked No. 2, followed by Berkshire Hathaway Inc., another holding company; Premier Industrial Corp. an electronic components manufacturer; and Nordstrom Inc., a retailer.

At the bottom of the list, steel manufacturer LTV Inc., operating in bankruptcy since July 1986, ranked last, preceeded by Integrated Resources Inc., a real estate investor; Western Union Corp., a communications company; and Allegheny International Inc., an electric appliances manufacturer.

In terms of best economic performance, Lin Broadcasting Corp. topped the list, followed by MCI Comminucations Inc. and Bershire Hathaway.

The worst economic performers were led by Gibraltar Financial Corp., a California holding company, and included Western Union, and Munsingwear Inc., a retailer.

''1989 was a good year for communications and building products firms, but health care and computer companies fared poorly,'' the survey said.

''The largest improvement for an industry group came among communications firms,'' the survey also said. ''Health care companies lost the most ground ... The ranking show computer companies with an off year as well.''

Stressing that the methods of evaluation for the Shareholders 1,000 widely diverged from the usual parameters for corporate ranking, Whitworth said the list should be a ''manual for shareholders to take a more active role in overseeing management.''

Among the shareholders' favored traded companies, the survey singled out

''L.A. Gear, the fast-growing, trend-setting sportswear merchants, which led all companies on shareholder rights ... with no provision shielding management from shareholder accountability, such as poison pill, golden parachutes or staggered board terms.''

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, CA (APRIL 4) UPI - The maiden flight of a unique winged rocket built for launch from a B-52 bomber was postponed 24 hours Wednesday because of bad weather on the way to the Pacific Ocean drop zone, officials said.

The Pegasus rocket, a joint venture between Orbital Sciences Corp. of Fairfax, Va., and Hercules Aerospace Co. of Wilmington, Del., had been scheduled to be dropped from the right wing of a NASA B-52 jet at 12:09 p.m. PDT over the Pacific Ocean about 60 miles southwest of Monterey, Calif.

But shortly before the jet was to take off from Edwards Air Force Base, officials decided to postpone the launch for the day because of unacceptable cloud cover on the way to the drop zone.

"They're just taking a real conservative approach, making sure they didn't make the armed Pegasus susceptible to an electrostatic discharge flying through clouds," said NASA spokesman James Elliot. "It's going to be rescheduled for Thursday."

Pegasus was built as a private venture to develop a low-cost means of putting small military, scientific and commercial satellites into orbit that do not require the services of larger, more expensive ground-launched boosters.

The rocket is capable of putting satellites weighing up to 900 pounds into low-Earth orbits. Payloads weighing up to 1,500 pounds can be launched on brief, sub-orbital flights.

David Thompson, chairman of Orbital Sciences Corp., told Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine last year "there is absolute growth in demand for launching satellites in the half-ton size range into low orbit."

For the program's maiden flight, a 450-pound satellite built for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency - DARPA - was on board, along with a modest NASA scientific experiment.

Equipped with a broad 22-foot-wide 600-pound delta wing made of lightweight "composite" materials, the Pegasus first stage motor was scheduled to ignite about five seconds after release from its B-52 carrier plane at an altitude of 40,000 feet.

With the slender rocket flying due south over the Pacific Ocean, the Pegasus flight plan called for small steering fins to guide the missile sharply upward, exposing the wing to some 100,000 pounds of aerodynamic force within 15 seconds of first stage ignition.

The wing is bolted to the first stage of the 49.2-foot rocket, which was built to boost the spacecraft to a speed of about Mach 8 - eight times the speed of sound - before falling away.

Only the space shuttle flies at such extreme velocities, and Orbital Sciences engineers had to rely on extensive computer modeling to design the first stage wing and maneuvering fins. The rocket's second and third stages are more conventional, using moveable nozzles and maneuvering thrusters for flight control.

Orbital Sciences Corp., responsible for overall program management, has spent close to $50 million developing the exotic rocket, according to Aviation Week.

"While Orbital Sciences ... expects to recover total program development costs within the first 20 Pegasus launches, there are currently only two firm launches scheduled, both for (DARPA)," the magazine reported. "DARPA has agreed to pay $6 million for each launch."

Pegasus No. 1 was to be dropped from the same B-52 bomber used to launch manned X-15 rocket planes in the 1950s and 1960s. The B-52's pilot is former space shuttle commander Gordon Fullerton.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Scientists reported Wednesday they have tracked down a genetic defect underlying an inherited muscle disease that strikes thousands of children worldwide.

After a three-year search, a research team from Boston and New York said it has located the approximate site of the gene responsible for chronic spinal muscular atrophy. The finding paves the way for therapies for the currently untreatable disease, which causes progressive weakness and wasting of muscles.

The disorder and similar childhood spinal muscular atrophies constitute the leading cause of infant death to an inherited defect, and rank second only to cystic fibrosis as the most common type of inherited disorder.

The chronic form of the disease, which usually appears between the ages of 6 months and 17, has symptoms ranging from mild muscle weakness to inability to walk to premature death. It affects about 1 in 24,000 children worldwide.

A more severe type of the disorder, which is about as common as the chronic form, is usually fatal before age 2.

In a study published in the journal Nature, researchers from Tufts University medical school in Boston, New England Medical Center and Columbia University in New York said the genetic defect that causes chronic spinal muscular atrophy is apparently located on the ''long arm'' of chromosome 5.

The findings were based on a study of 13 families with a history of the disease. Most of those families live in the Middle East, where the disease is 40 times more prevalent than in Western countries.

Although the study only presented findings for the chronic form of the disorder, researchers said their preliminary data indicate the gene underlying severe form is located ''in the same or a closely linked'' region of chromosome 5.

''This discovery represents an extremely important advance in our understanding of spinal muscular atrophy,'' said Dr. Theodore Munsat, a Tufts professor who co-authored the study. ''It is our expectation that further research will yield, in the next several years, the first effective treatment for this disease.''

Also taking part in the research were scientists from the University of Utah Medical Center, England's John Radcliffe Hospital and Royal Postgraduate Medical School and Germany's University of Bonn.

LONDON (APRIL 4) UPI - More hard-core prisoners surrendered to authorities, leaving only a few to carry on an inmate takeover of their overcrowded jail that has left at least 60 people injured and one dead, officials said Wednesday.

A prisoner who sustained head injuries in the initial uprising died in an intensive care unit Tuesday, authorities said. Derek White, 46, was a prisoner facing charges of indecent assault and sodomy.

The father of an inmate who emerged since the riot began Sunday morning reported at least six deaths inside the Victorian-era facility. Others inmates put the figure at 12.

Prison governor Brendan O'Friel said no corpses had been found as guards advanced into the various wings of Strangeways Prison, in Manchester, 200 miles northwest of London, but he suspected there were fatalities.

''What we know of the injuries that prisoners inflicted on each other is another example of the extent of the violence, and what I would actually describe as an explosion of evil,'' O'Friel said.

Officials said a further 13 prisoners had surrendered, and the British Broadcasting Corp. said another nine had also left the building.

Their departure would leave less than 20 inmates defying calls that they end their occupation of upper floors of five wings of the looming red-brick complex.

A group of diehard inmates who had been huddled on a snow-covered roof went inside, raising speculation that the siege was drawing to a close.

A Prison Officers Association representative said negotiators, including O'Friel and other prison staff, were optimistic that the protest would end soon. Remaining inmates were now ''calm and reasonable,'' he said.

Prisoners had been assured that their surrenders would be witnessed by photographers, church officials and magistrates, and they would not be beaten, he said.

Authorities are reported to have cut off all food, water and power to the besieged areas.

O'Friel said the jailhouse had been ravaged by ''an orgy of destruction,'' unequaled in Britain's prison history.

''It has been quite terrible in many ways to see the destruction, damage and injuries that have been enforced,'' O'Friel said, estimating millions of dollars would have to be spent to repair the buildings.

The siege began Sunday, when hundreds of prisoners rebelled, expelling guards and torching buildings in a protest against living conditions in the facility, which was built in 1868 for 970 inmates, but now houses about 1,600.

At least 60 people - 35 prisoners and 25 prison employees - have been injured in clashes, the most recent Tuesday, when 13 guards were hurt in a barrage of missiles unleashed when they tried to reoccupy one wing.

The father of one prisoner said in an anonymous interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. that his son reported seeing six inmates, all sex offenders, executed after being sentenced by a ''kangaroo court.''

The prisoner said he saw the six inmates hanged from knotted sheets, and claimed in another incident a man aged 64 was thrown off a balcony and became impaled on the leg of an upturned table.

The man tried to wriggle away, but was bombarded with iron bars and scaffolding, and was last seen lying ''limp,'' the man quoted his son as saying.

Officials said ringleaders were holding some men who wished to give up. Masked prisoners Tuesday dragged onto the roof a man who was stripped to the waist and had bound hands. A noose was dangled behind him.

They threatened to throw their captive to the ground if police did not retreat, but the man was later led back inside.

Tomorrow is a major Chinese festival honoring the dead, and officials are taking steps to prevent it from becoming a memorial for those killed last June in Tiananmen Square. Premier Li Peng says Beijing police will take ''all necessary measures'' to secure the square.

As fans cheered, pop singer Gloria Estefan walked out of a New York hospital today... less than two weeks after undergoing delicate spinal surgery. Estefan had the surgery to repair a broken back suffered in a bus crash. A nurse from the hospital will accompany the singer on a flight to her home in Miami.

This year's national teacher of the year is Janis Gabay. She's a San Diego high school English teacher who has won praise for her attempts to encourage her students to participate in their community. She's the 39th winner of the annual award sponsored by the Council of State School Officers and Encyclopaedia Britannica.

A Connecticut state representative says he plans to meet with Paul Newman this week to see if the Academy Award winning actor would be interested in running for governor. Democrat Benjamin DeZinno says Newman has been very much involved in Democratic politics on the national level and he believes the actor is saleable to people in Connecticut. Newman lives in Westport, Connecticut.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Rep. Joseph Kennedy II, D-Mass., and Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., proposed legislation Wednesday requiring that all television, radio and print advertisements for alcohol include warnings about its dangers.

Congress last year required alcohol warning labels on bottles and cans, but Gore and Kennedy said more action is needed, particularly to inform pregnant women about the dangers of liquor and to prevent young people from viewing drinking as glamorous and sexy.

''Each year, more than 5,000 infants are born suffering from fetal alcohol syndrome and another 50,000 babies experience milder but still serious birth defects known as fetal alcohol effects,'' Gore told a news conference.

''Maternal alcohol abuse is the leading recognizable cause of mental retardation in children,'' he said. ''Our country has to figure out a way to deal with the consequences of our relationship with alcohol.''

Advertising groups attacked the bill as a ''prohibition'' against many alcohol ads, saying the proposed warnings are too long to be included in 15- or 30-second spots and would virtually eliminate such commercials.

Alcohol advertisers and producers said they already are spending hundreds of millions of dollars for public service ads on the dangers of liquor and denied that ads for their products cause alcohol abuse.

''Warning labels are unnecessary,'' said Janet Flynn of the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States. ''Consumer awareness is extraordinarily high.''

But health, consumer and education groups, including the American Academy of Pediatrics and the National PTA, hailed the legislation as a way to counter the $2 billion poured each year into alcohol ads.

''Relentless print ads and television commercials continue to glamorize alcohol, associating its use with everything from material success to physical and sexual prowess,'' said Dr. Lillian Beard of the pediatrics group.

''Despite their protestations, the industry sales pitch is hardly about changing brands - it is about adopting brands; it is about luring our children to drink,'' Beard said.

Gore, whose state is home to many leading liquor producers, said there are ''an awful lot of good people'' in the industry and that he hoped they would change their minds about his bill.

Kennedy, whose grandfather Joseph was a major liquor importer after Prohibition, was asked about his family's involvement with the business. With a smile, Kennedy said, ''Grandpa never mentioned that to me.''

''You must be Republican, or read some nasty books,'' he said to the reporter who asked the question, prompting laughter from the audience.

The legislation would require warnings on print, television and radio advertisements and promotional displays in stores that would include a toll-free telephone number for consumers to obtain more information.

Five different warnings would be rotated for print and broadcast advertising, with shorter messages to be used on radio and television.

The TV warnings would have to be read in ''an audible and deliberate manner'' and would have to appear on screen for the time it takes to read them.

The broadcast warnings are:

-Drinking during pregnancy may cause mental retardation and other birth defects. Avoid alcohol during pregnancy.

-Alcohol impairs your ability to drive a car or operate machinery.

-Alcohol may be hazardous if you are using any other drugs such as over-the-counter, prescription or illicit drugs.

-Drinking alcohol may become addictive.

-It's against the law to purchase alcohol for person under age 21.

GOVERNMENT PANEL URGES SHARP LOGGING CUTS TO SAVE OWLS

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Government scientists, criticizing their own agencies, recommended Wednesday curtailing logging on federal lands in the Pacific Northwest by at least 25 percent to save the northern spotted owl from extinction.

Current strategies by the U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management to protect the owl are ''inadequate to ensure its viability,'' an interagency panel of researchers said in a report presented to Congress.

The panel comprised scientists from the Forest Service and BLM - the two agencies overseeing federal timber sales - as well as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which has proposed listing the owl as a threatened species.

The findings will likely play a key role in deciding whether to list the owl. That decision is expected in late June.

Wilderness Society President George Frampton hailed the report as ''the best spotted owl recovery plan that American science can provide.''

But Rep. Bob Smith, R-Ore., a staunch ally of the timber industry, said the owl plan would create staggering job losses and economic dislocation in Oregon, Washington and northern California.

''It's like standing over a grave looking into a dark hole,'' he said.

The committee of scientists ''concluded that the owl is imperiled over significant portions of its range because of continuing losses of habitat from logging and natural disturbances.''

If logging continues at current rates in the old-growth forests where the bird nests, ''ultimately we would see extinction,'' Jack Ward Thomas, a Forest Service scientists who headed the panel, told a congressional hearing.

Essentially, the report recommended abandoning the ''flawed'' system of owl protection zones now in place and setting aside larger blocks of land, called habitat conservation areas, where logging activities would be strictly forbidden.

However, the plan makes allowances for cutting timber already under contract within conservation areas in order to meet harvest levels set by Congress under last year's ''timber compromise.''

Where possible, the new zones would be drawn large enough to accommodate at least 20 pairs of owls, rather than the one to three pairs now protected. The conservation areas generally would be located no more than 7 to 12 miles apart.

The panel also recommended protecting at least 80 acres of suitable owl habitat around the ''activity centers of all known pairs of owls in the managed forest,'' up to a total of seven per township.

Overall, the plan would set aside roughly 6.2 million acres of land - federal, state and private - specifically for the spotted owl in Oregon, Washington and northern California, Forest Service officials said.

Thomas said about 40 percent of that lies in national parks or wilderness areas already off limits to logging.

Analysis By: Joan Hanauer

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Peter O'Toole is one brave actor - not only does he lead a group of frightened children out of Nazi-occupied France in a new TV film, but he fearlessly worked with seven child actors, six of whom were amateurs. All this happens in "Crossing To Freedom," based on Nevil Shute's novel, "The Pied Piper," to air on CBS Sunday, April 8, 9-11 p.m. Eastern time.

O'Toole plays an Englishman vacationing in France in 1940 when the "phony war" turns real and German troops race through France while Stukas dive-bomb and strafe lines of fleeing refugees. He heads for home and is asked to take back to London two young English children.

His Englishman is crotchety and acid-tongued in a well-bred way and certainly not the type to fawn over tykes and waifs. But he keeps picking up children along the the way and by the time he hits the French side of the Channel he is shepherding to England seven children - two English, two French, one Dutch, one Polish and one German.

At one of the first stops he picks up as an assistant, Mare Winningham, playing a Frenchwoman who knew his son, one of the war's early casualties over whose death O'Toole still grieves deeply.

Executive producer Stan Margulies, who conceived the idea of teaming O'Toole, the man who played Lawrence of Arabia, and a gaggle of kids, spoke in an interview about the casting:

"One of the reasons for doing this is that the central figure is eminently star-worthy," he said. "Looking over the list of Englishmen of a certain age, Peter stood out because he's always had that biting, waspish quality. The idea of putting him with seven children made for an interesting piece of chemistry.

"As it turned out, Peter is a pushover for kids, a total pushover. I told him this picture would ruin his image forever. He will never again be the devil-may-care, Irish eyes are twinkling, hellraiser. He will be the arms-round-the-kids lovely father figure."

The only Americans involved in the production - shot in the Loire Valley of France and in England - were Margulies and Winningham. Why choose Winningham to play a French woman?

"The point was, and I do not mean this in any derogatory fashion, my goal was not to make this a PBS film," Margulies said, pointing out this was a co-production among his company, sole sponsor Procter & Gamble and Britain's Granada Television.

"Granada has done a lot of films for PBS, some of them classics, and so one of the ways not to make it like that was to cast an American actress. The only American actress that I had confidence in was Mare."

As for the children, Margulies said: "Six of the seven kids had never worked in a movie. In England, they don't cast kids the way we do. I thought we would go to an acting school, but they said, no, acting schools deliver terrible actors."

Instead they went to private schools and embassies to find children who spoke French and English, and also a Polish boy and a German girl. Only the one English boy had acting experience.

He said Clare Drumond, the five-year-old novice who played an English girl was asked by a crew member what she would miss most when filming ended. She thought for a second and said, "All the kisses in the morning." "I thought that describes moviemaking, that says it all," Margulies said.

"Forbidden Nights" describes the love affair between an American teacher and a Chinese student in politically turbulent China - post-Cultural Revolution and pre-Tiananmen Square.

Based on a true story, it stars Melissa Gilbert as teacher Judith Shapiro, and it airs on CBS Tuesday, April 10, 9-11 p.m. Eastern time. The show was shot in Hong Kong. "I'd never been there before," Gilbert said in an interview. "It was interesting but it also was a very difficult shoot.

"Conditions are not that great by a long shot. There were no bathroom facilities on the set and no real dressing rooms on the whole island, just buses with curtains. All the other actors had to share. "There also was a communications problem with the basically all-Chinese crew, a lot of whom did not speak a word of English."

The actress has not found it hard to make the transition from being a child star on "Little House on the Prairie" - she was nine when the series began - to being a grown-up star. "I like to work, period," she said, and that includes stage as well as television and film.

"There are things about each that I like. I like the spontaneity of being on stage and I enjoy that specially when things go wrong and you have to cover. It's exciting and scary, knowing you could die at any moment."

There was the time, for instance, when she was appearing off-Broadway in "A Shayna Maidel" when in the middle of a dramatic scene that takes place at the breakfast table she accidentally spilled a glass of milk all over the stage. We had to do the scene while we cleaned up the milk because we couldn't just leave it there. That's challenging."

Analysis By: Ken Franckling

(APRIL 4) UPI - America never appreciates its national treasures until they are gone. And that is why, in the hours following word that Sarah Vaughan was claimed by lung cancer at age 66, the airwaves were filled Wednesday with her amazing voice.

Snippets of "Misty," "Send in the Clowns," "Moonlight in Vermont" and her first big hit, "It's Magic," popped up every few minutes on network radio and TV feeds and even on all-news stations, at a rate unheard of - even on jazz stations - while she was alive.

"This is another example of how irreplaceable the really GREAT jazz artists are," said jazz festival producer George Wein, a frequent employer of Vaughan over the past 40 years.

"Sarah was one of the greats. She was to singing what Art Tatum was to the piano," Wein said. "She could not only sing, she knew and understood every nuance of music."

Vaughan belonged to the upper echelon of jazz vocalists with Ella Fitzgerald and Billie Holiday. All three saw their careers propelled forward from talent showcases at the Apollo Theatre in Harlem.

"She was most unusual, so highly talented, such a fantastic singer. Everybody loved her. ... I know I'm going to miss her," saxophonist-jazz composer Benny Carter said Wednesday.

Called "Sassy" by friends because of her volatile on-stage personality, Vaughan was a stickler for the right sound from the hall and her band. She could be warm or taciturn, depending upon her mood at the moment.

In spite of more than four decades as a performer, before going on stage she was as nervous as a schoolgirl waiting to recite her first book report. She would wring her hands and mop her brow in the wings and throughout the performance.

Her 2 1/2-octave voice, which sounded much larger because of her technique darted and swooped up and down the register. Her lower register richened and deepened with age and from chain-smoking, but her falsetto remained effortless and pure.

Though she won countless awards over the years as best jazz vocalist, Vaughan said she believed there was no such thing as a jazz singer. "That's a title. They give us all titles," she said in a 1986 interview. "They've got so many titles I don't know which music is which. People tend to categorize. I just sing. I sing whatever I can."

Bob James, her accompanist for four years in the late 1960s, disagreed with her viewpoint. "When I first started working with her, I discovered that she really was, in the best sense of the word, a jazz musician. She was an improviser. She could respond in the most subtle and fantastic way to anything that goes on around her.

"That made it tremendously inspiring to play for her, because you knew that any time you might come up with an inspired chord or a rhythm or a treatment of an arrangement for her, it would change immediately the way she sang.

"She'd respond to it. She was a terrific pianist, too, so I had the intimidating experience of knowing that if I didn't get it right, Sarah would sit down and say, 'Bob, this is the way it should go."'

In her later years, Vaughan remained fussy about her repertoire, which ranged from the American Songbook to the lovely romance ballads coming out of Brazil in the past decade. "I want hits, but I want good music," she said. "I want a hit out of my kind of music, not 'Let's Roll Tonight, BABY.'"

MEMPHIS, TN (APRIL 4) UPI - Garbage workers whose strike brought Martin Luther King Jr. to the city of his death 22 years ago renewed their fight for a better life Wednesday by rallying on the anniversary of his assassination.

More than 1,000 city sanitation workers and supporters marched silently through downtown past the Lorraine Motel where King was slain on April 4, 1968, and then poured inside a church to pray and sing hymns in memory of the civil rights leader.

The garbage workers, who are fighting a proposal by Memphis Mayor Dick Hackett to hire private trash haulers, wore patches reading, "Don't Dump City Sanitation Workers. Remember '68."

Gerald McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Muncipal Employees, told the throng that the nation has more poor and jobless than in 1968 and decried what he called an erosion of civil liberties.

"Dr. King would have been shocked by the terrible plague of twisted greed that has hit our country," McEntee told the workers, who are represented by his union. "We have spent billions to rescue the savings and loan industry but we can't spend a dollar on education.

"In 1968, the establishment here didn't want to give us a union. They told us you can't beat City Hall, but we did. We're going to do it again in 1990. We weren't really fighting for money. We were fighting for decent treatment. You remember the signs saying, 'I want to be treated like a man.' Who is this mayor to say he's going to take it all back?"

In Atlanta Wednesday, King's widow, Coretta Scott King, and other relatives laid a wreath at the crypt where King is entombed. The ceremony at the Martin Luther King Center was part of a week of events sponsored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, an organization founded by King. Dozens of people attended the ceremony, many of them carrying signs with messages of love for King.

"Love Thy Neighbor Week" included a series of symposiums, church services and dinners to remember King's message of change through non-violence. The Rev. Fred Taylor of the SCLC said the rising crime rate among urban blacks showed a need for the theme observed on the anniversary of King's death - "Crime Free Day."

"It is pretty much evident that someone needs to give issue to ... crime in our community," Taylor said. "It is an issue whenever we pause and reflect on the life and work of Martin Luther King Jr."

In 1968, King journeyed to Memphis to support a strike by the garbage workers. An assassin stood in a dirty bathroom of a flophouse, braced a 30.06 pump-action rifle on a rotting windowsill, and fired one shot. That shot slammed into the neck of King, who was standing on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel.

James Earl Ray, a habitual criminal and Missouri prison fugitive, pleaded guilty to killing King and is serving a 99-year sentence at Tennessee's fortress-like Brushy Mountain State Prison. The Lorraine Motel is being converted into the National Civil Rights Museum and is scheduled to open July 4, 1991.

Speakers at Wednesday's church rally recalled the fight for union recognition in 1968 and denounced the Memphis mayor for proposing that the city hire private trash haulers at an annual savings of $1.4 million.

"Wake up Memphis. We were on the march in 1968 and we are on the march again. We're marching for the same identical thing. We're not going to roll over and play dead. We're going to fight this," said Taylor Rogers, president of union Local 1733.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - Public pension fund chiefs from New York City, California and Massachusetts met with Exxon's top officials Wednesday in a bid to wring a commitment to environmental protection from the accident-plagued energy giant.

But the pension leaders, trying to use the weight of their combined 21 million Exxon shares to influence company policy, came away empty-handed, frustrated and with little hope for success.

''I hope we reached them today. But I have to tell you, we didn't walk out of there with one concrete promise,'' said California Controller Gray Davis at a news conference afterwards with New York City Comptroller Elizabeth Holtzman.

''I'd like to tell you something positive happened, but I can't tell you what it is,'' he said.

Asked what he thought the odds were for getting Exxon to make environmental safeguards a company policy, Davis said, ''I wouldn't go to Vegas and put a bet on it.''

Holtzman was more optimistic, but only slightly more so. She said she took it as a ''positive'' sign that company officials even agreed to meet with them.

Exxon had refused to meet with Holtzman when she requested a similar session following a major oil spill in January in the Arthur Kill waterway between New Jersey and Staten Island, N.Y. That and subsequent spills in the area have led Exxon to suspend all activity in New York Harbor.

The company released a statement following the meeting that did little more than confirm the session had taken place with Chairman Lawrence Rawl, President Lee Raymond and Vice President for Environment and Safety Edwin Hess.

Paul Quirk, executive director of the Massachusetts Pension Reserves Investment Management Board, also attended, Exxon said.

Exxon has been on the defensive ever since the March 24, 1989, Exxon Valdez oil spill, in which the tanker dumped 11 million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound - the worst U.S. oil spill ever.

Exxon management recently said in its annual proxy statement that it would oppose six shareholder environmental proposals to be made at the April 25 annual meeting in Houston, including a pledge to clean up the Alaska spill.

Exxon has spent more than $2 billion on the cleanup and the oil giant's management said such a pledge is unnecessary.

Davis and Holtzman said they were pressing for the company to make policy changes not just in the interests of the environment but out of concern for their pensioners.

The value of Exxon shares has remained ''flat'' since the Valdez spill while that of other energy companies has increased by 25 percent, Davis said.

He said that was of major concern for the two state pension funds he manages, which hold some 15 million Exxon shares. New York City has approximately 6 million shares and the Massachusetts system has about 300,000.

But Holtzman and Davis stressed they were not threatening to divest from Exxon.

Holtzman said selling the stock was not feasible and would have a very negative impact on the marketplace.

HAVANA, CUBA (APRIL 4) UPI - Controversy over U.S.-sponsored television broadcasts to Cuba is leading three decades of already strained relations between the two nations into their worst period since the Bay of Pigs invasion, officials and diplomats said Wednesday.

''The signs of a possible and gradual improvement in bilateral relations that seemed to be turning into a reality until last year are fading now,'' a Cuban official who asked not to be identified told United Press International.

''The ball is in (the U.S.) court. Everything depends on them,'' he said.

Relations between the United States and Cuba have deteriorated in recent days with testing of TV Marti, a Spanish-language television project sponsored by Washington that Cuba says violates its sovereignty and international telecommunications agreements.

''We consider (TV Marti) an aggression against our country, a violation of our sovereignty,'' the official said. ''There is absolutely no way of even talking with them as long as they continue with the TV Marti project. They must stop it or the situation will get worse.''

Cuban technicians have successfully jammed the TV Marti signals, which originate in Washington and are relayed from the Florida Keys to Havana.

Western diplomats based in Havana said the TV Marti controversy could escalate into something as serious as the crisis when 1,200 CIA-trained Cuban exiles landed at the Bay of Pigs on April 17, 1961, in an invasion attempt that was crushed by President Fidel Castro's forces.

''TV Marti is potentially as bad as the Bay of Pigs and it can become very dangerous, but the United States would not like that to happen,'' a Western diplomat said.

The diplomat said that for Washington there have been three major stalling points for improving ties with Havana: Cuban involvement in Central America, Cuban activities in southern Africa and Castro's failure to carry out democratic reforms on the Caribbean island of 10 million.

''The first two conditions have been met as Cuba has been calling back its military personnel and advisors from Central America and Africa,'' the diplomat said. ''The issue of the democratic reforms inside Cuba was the only impediment,and TV Marti has created another major problem.''

U.S.-Cuban relations deteriorated sharply in 1959 when Castro, whose revolutionary forces ousted the dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista, confiscated U.S. investments in banks and industries and seized large U.S. landholdings in Cuba.

The United States broke diplomatic ties Jan 3, 1961, and imposed a commercial and financial embargo the following year.

Since then, some efforts have been made to improve relations, including a 1984 bilateral immigration agreement that allowed more than 11,000 Cuban immigrants and former political prisoners to move to the United States.

Castro suspended the agreement in 1985 when the United States launched Radio Marti, but it was reinstated two years later.

The diplomat said TV Marti runs the risk of opening old wounds and making normalization of relations even more difficult.

Regarding Castro's refusal to accept changes toward democratic elections and capitalist-style economies in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, the diplomat noted that Castro ''looks at East European changes as mist'kis.''

''Changes in the East Bloc countries make (Castro) more stubborn. He has become more and more determined to continue his communist policies just to show how he can survive despite all odds against him,'' the diplomat said.

On Tuesday, Castro again reaffirmed his commitment to socialism.

''Cuba is a symbol of socialism, a symbol of revolution. A lover can suffer deception, but a revolutionary can never suffer deception,'' Castro told some 200 foreign journalists.

BOSTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Daily doses of the drug AZT appear to be the best treatment for many people infected with the AIDS virus even if they have not yet become sick, researchers said Wednesday.

A study published in The New England Journal of Medicine supports recommendations made last summer by the National Institutes of Health and backs up a recent Food and Drug Administration decision authorizing use of AZT in AIDS-infected people before they develop symptoms.

Dr. Paul Volberding, co-author of the study, said the work has ''implications for hundreds of thousands of people'' because doctors will be better able to weigh options for treating patients infected with AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV.

The study involved 1,338 people infected with HIV who had no symptoms of disease when the research began. All were judged to have impaired immune systems based on levels of key disease-fighting cells, called T-4 cells.

Researchers divided the people into three groups. One group of 453 received 500 milligrams daily of AZT, also known as zidovudine. Another group of 457 were given 1,500 milligrams of the drug every day, while 428 people received a worthless substitute.

Volberding, of San Francisco General Hospital, said the smaller dose produced significantly fewer toxic side effects, such as low white blood cell counts, than the larger dose.

After an average of 55 weeks, 33 of those who received the worthless placebo had developed AIDS, but only 11 of those who took the smaller doses of AZT and 14 who took the larger amounts.

Researchers calculated that the rate of progression to either AIDS or AIDS-related complex, known as ARC, in patients who took either dose of AZT was half that of those who were given the substitute.

In August, a panel monitoring the study recommended that the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, which sponsored the work, stop giving out the substitute.

Although the study indicated that AZT could delay the onset of AIDS or ARC at least in some patients, Volberding said it is still unknown whethes xhe drug can actually improve long-term survival in people with HIV.

He said additional studies looking at that issue are underway, but initial results probably will not be known for at least a year.

Also unknown is whether the drug has any significant beneficial effect for those with HIV whose T-cell count is above 500 per cubic millimeter of blood, the cut-off point in the recent study, he said. Questions also exist about whether long-term therapy with AZT eventually makes the deadly virus more resistant to drugs.

Volberding said doctors must also consider whether costs of AZT treatment outweigh the benefits. Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C., said it sells the equivalent of a one-year supply of the drug at the 500 milligram daily dose level to wholesalers for $2,200.

Although it is not a cure, AZT is the only government-approved drug to directly fight the AIDS virus.

Because 600,000 of the estimated 1 million people nationwide thought to have HIV might qualify for AZT treatment, there are ''major economic implications'' in the results of Volberding's study, said Dr. Paul Skolnik director of the AIDS laboratory at New England Medical Center in Boston.

Skolnik predicted most doctors treating HIV patients who have no AIDS symptoms but do have impaired immune systems will now use low doses of AZT.

In an editorial accompanying the study, Dr. Gerald Friedland of New York's Albert Einstein Medical College said the results ''should encourage persons who may be at risk for HIV to undergo testing for the virus'' so they can get early AZT treatment.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told the nation's newspaper editors Wednesday he cannot guarantee that the Pentagon's press pool will be sent with leading military units to report on future U.S. conflicts.

''I have no problem in trying to improve on the (press pool) operation,'' Cheney said when asked if he would agree to a recommendation that there be a written guarantee assuring the press will be sent with lead military units.

''But I will say to all of you, as long as I'm in this job, it's a decision I'm going to make on a case-by-case basis,'' Cheney said. ''Each circumstance is different and unique.''

Cheney delayed informing the Pentagon press pool of the Dec. 20 invasion of Panama until it was too late for the reporters to cover the first critical hours of the fighting. The pool arrived five hours after the 1 a.m. invasion.

Cheney was later criticized for that decision and his ''excessive concern for secrecy'' by a report on the process that was contracted by the Pentagon and conducted by Fred Hoffman, a former Associated Press reporter and a former deputy Pentagon spokesman.

Among Hoffman's recommendations in the report was that an annex be attached to operational plans of the Joint Chiefs of Staff assuring that the Pentagon press pool is taken in the future with leading military units.

The press pool concept was formed by the Pentagon and news organizations after a military attempt to limit coverage of the 1983 invasion of Grenada.

The pool is composed of a small group of selected representatives from wire services, newspapers, magazines and radio and television networks.

Under the accord, pool reporters agree to keep notification of a pending military action confidential in return for being taken to the scene. Once fighting starts, the reporters can relay information back to all U.S. news organizations.

Cheney defended his decision to delay informing the Pentagon press pool until 7:30 p.m. EST, after the nightly TV network news shows, saying he will ''always come down on the side of protecting security as long as I can in order to safeguard those lives'' of American soldiers.

''We had the experience, for example, in connection with this particular callout - remember this was the week before Christmas - that one of the calls went to a bureau chief here in Washington and got him in the middle of the office Christmas party and the assignment to go to Panama was shopped around the party,'' Cheney said.

''Now fortunately there was no immediate disclosure of that call, but it was not treated with the seriousness in which it has to be treated if the secretary of defense is going to have absolute confidence that his notifying the press won't lead to putting at risk the lives of the young men he sends into combat,'' Cheney said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - The Resolution Funding Corp. said Wednesday it will auction $3.5 billion in 40-year bonds Apr. 10 to raise money for the government's bailout of the savings and loan industry.

The bonds, which mature Apr. 15, 2030, will be offered in minimum denominations of $1,000 and pay semi-annual interest on Apr. 15 and Oct. 15 of each year, the RFC said.

There was a poor investor response to the RFC's initial offering of 40-year bonds in January.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Secretary of State Baker says Lithuania will dominate the agenda when he meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze this afternoon. Baker says the United States is concerned about developments in Lithuania and wants to see the situation resolved peacefully. He also says he's encouraged by the talks that took place yesterday in Moscow between Lithuanian leaders and a top aide to Mikhail Gorbachev.

One of the leaders of last year's pro-democracy protests in Beijing's Tiananmen Square has surfaced in a videotape shown on Hong Kong television. The tape also was broadcast in the United States. Dissident Chai Ling and her husband escaped from China after the brutal army crackdown. Hong Kong's largest English-language paper, The South China Morning Post, says the couple is in France. Other reports say they have applied for visas to come the United States. Both are on China's most-wanted list.

Officials in Paris say French President Francois Mitterrand has invited P-L-O leader Yasser Arafat and former President Jimmy Carter to the Elysee Palace so he can join in their talks today. Arafat and Carter arrived in Paris earlier today for the unprecedented meeting that is to focus on efforts to break the stalemate in the Mideast peace process. A French Jewish group is demanding to know why Carter agreed to meet with Arafat.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Wednesday that Congress can boost the international competitiveness of U.S. banks by repealing the Glass-Steagall Act, which keeps banks from doing securities work.

Greenspan, in remarks before a subcommittee of the House Banking Committee also said competitiveness could be enhanced by lowering the cost of capital to U.S. banks.

The Glass-Steagall Act, which prohibits commercial banks from engaging in securities activities, has been ''particularly burdensome,'' Greenspan said.

''Our laws greatly inhibit the ability of U.S. banks to evolve along with technological and other changes and to achieve the synergies which come from producing multiple, but similar, products and services,'' Greenspan said.

Greenspan said the increasing globalization and interdependence of world financial markets requires U.S. banks to be able to offer services comparable to those of their intenational competitors.

The decline of U.S. banks as an international financial power has prompted calls in Congress, and within the industry, for modernization in an effort to keep up with advances in technology.

Of the world's 25 largest banks, only one, Citibank, is based in the United States. The majority of the world's largest banks are Japanese.

The issue of international competitiveness affects only a small percentage of banks in the United States. About half of the international assets held by U.S banks are placed in four institutions. Ten U.S. banks account for about 80 percent of international assets.

Greenspan said the measures used to rank banks internationally can be misleading as measures of international competitiveness.

''Our research suggests that cost controls and differences in management across banks of the same size are more relevant for competitiveness than any economies of super-scale are likely to be,'' Greenspan said.

Greenspan said policymakers would be better served by focusing on the performance of U.S. banks rather than dwelling on comparing their competitiveness with foreign banks.

''If we get bogged down in struggling to make comparisons of competitiveness, policymakers risk losing sight of the fundamental need to ensure that government policy does not hinder but rather enhances in an absolute sense the competitiveness of U.S. banks and financial firms,'' he said.

PARIS (APRIL 5) UPI - The French political and religious establishment reacted with indignation Wednesday to comments about Jews by Nice Mayor Jacques Medecin, whose increasing sympathy for the extreme right wing led to the resignation earlier this week of three Jewish members of the city council.

''I do not know an Israelite who refuses a gift given to him even if that gift does not suit him,'' Medecin told a television interviewer in a reference to the three city council members who resigned their posts Monday.

Asked if he could envisage a member of the extreme right-wing National Front Party filling the post of deputy mayor, Medecin replied ''If a place is made for him, yes. I did not make a place for him. The Jews were the ones who left.''

The resignations of two of the three Jewish council members opened two deputy mayor posts.

The mayor admitted Wednesday evening he had misspoken. But he also charged that the Socialist government, which had sharply criticized his remarks, ''was trying to create a smoke screen to hide the fact that it receives Yasser Arafat, who is the enemy of Jews.''

President Francois Mitterrand met with PLO leader Yasser Arafat and former U.S. President Jimmy Carter at the Elysee Palace Wednesday evening in an effort to break the current stalement in the Middle East peace process.

Medecin's comments raised an outcry in the French Jewish community, with the Jewish Institutions of France expressing its regret that the mayor ''had chosen to use such language to give free reign to his bitterness.''

The mayor's remarks came just one day after a round table meeting between the Socialist government and representatives of the political opposition to discuss evidence of growing racism and intolerance towards foreigners among significant sectors of the French population. The right-wing National Front was not invited to the meeting, chaired by Prime Minister Michel Rocard.

''At a time when our country's principal political leaders have agreed to fight the scourge that is racism, Monsieur Medecin distinguishes himself yet again with a declaration that is scandalous and behavior that is dishonorable,'' government spokesman Louis Le Pensec said.

Many were surprised by the remarks, because Medecin is known to maintain close ties with the Jewish community and his father was a well-known resistance fighter during the Nazi occupation.

The three city council members resigned their posts to protest what they called ''the increasing closeness of the municipality with the National Front.'' The Front's leader, Jean-Marie Le Pen, has frequently made clearly inflammatory remarks about Jews over the years, including a remark that Nazi concentration camps were ''a detail'' of the Second World War. Le Pen has argued that his statement was taken out of the historical context in which it was made.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (APRIL 4) UPI - The bodies of executed dictator Nicolae Ceausescu and his wife Elena were ''lost'' for several hours Dec. 25 amid the confusion of Romania's pro-democracy uprising, the news agency Rompres said Wednesday.

The bodies were in hidden a sports arena after the couple were shot to death by firing squad. After nightfall, rebel soldiers were unable to locate them in the darkened stadium, the news agency said.

''The dictators' bodies, wrapped in canvas, stayed lost for the whole

Christmas night,'' Rompres said, citing an interview granted to the newspaper Dimineata by Deputy Prime Minister Gelu Voican Voiculescu and Defense Minister Victor Stanculescu.

Both men are members of the National Salvation Front, which took command after Ceausescu was overthrown and arrested Dec. 22.

A military court convicted the dictator and his wife of a charge of genocide Dec. 25 and sentenced both to death.

''The helicopter crew took off in a hurry after leaving the two 'parcels' in the stadium, where they could not be seen because of the dark,'' Staculescu was quoted as saying. ''We found them only on the morning of Dec. 26.''

The bodies were kept for another five days in a military hospital morgue, the defense minister said, adding that ''no one was allowed to tamper with them.''

Five days later, the Ceausescus were placed in plain army coffins and buried in graves 100 yards apart, he said.

TOKYO (APRIL 5) UPI - The trial of a Chinese jet hijacker who says he fled China to escape political persecution ended Wednesday with the supporting testimony of an exiled Chinese dissident.

Yue Wu, a Chinese dissident living in France, testified that Zhang Zhenhai who has admitted he hijacked a passenger jet to Japan, was a leader of the pro-democracy demonstrations in Tiananmen Square last May and June.

''I saw Zhang running in Tiananmen Square when the People's Army began moving in,'' Yue told the Tokyo High Court, which will decide April 22 whether to extradite Zhang to China.

Zhang, 36, said he hijacked an Air China jet with 223 people aboard on Dec. 16 because he saw no other way to escape China, where he feared he would be imprisoned and tortured for his role in the Tiananmen Square demonstrations.

He has asked Japan not to send him back to China, and his lawyers have argued he may be tortured and executed if he is returned.

Prosecutors said hijacking can never be tolerated and Zhang should be returned to China.

Zhang, along with his wife and son, hijacked the Air China Boeing 747 and ordered it to fly to Fukuoka in southern Japan.

The hijacking ended when an Air China crew member shoved Zhang out an open door. He was hospitalized with two broken legs and a broken pelvis, and his wife and son were immediately returned to China.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu's spokeswoman said immediately after the hijacking that Zhang should be returned to China, and the Foreign Ministry has repeated that as the position of the Japanese government.

Zhang's lawyers have said the court is under political pressure to send Zhang back.

''We only hope the court will remain impartial,'' said Yaeko Takeoka, one of three Japanese lawyers who volunteered to defend Zhang.

''If they do not, it will mean there is no difference between Japan and China,'' she said.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - A federal bankruptcy court Wednesday approved the sale of the Bonwit Teller name and two of its 16 department stores to a mall development company, which has hopes of revitalizing the moribund retailer.

Terms of the transaction were not disclosed.

The Pyramid Cos., based in Syracuse, N.Y., said it plans to operate existing Bonwit Teller stores in Boston and Buffalo, N.Y., the location of Bonwit's newest outlet. That store is situated in a mall owned by Pyramid.

All but two of Bonwit's remaining stores - including its New York flagship located in Trump Tower on Fifth Avenue - will be liquidated by Bonwit's parent, the L.J. Hooker Corp., or bI buyers vho purchase certain locations solely to liquidate them, said Tom Armentrout, a Pyramid spokesman.

Bonwit Teller stores in Cincinnati and Columbia, S.C., will continue to be operated by Hooker, which has agreed to license the name from Pyramid, said a Hooker spokesman.

Hooker, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors last August, is the U.S. arm of Australia's Hooker Corp., which was placed in the hands of a provisional liquidator last year.

Pyramid said it will seek a ''prime, modern location in the Fifth Avenue neighborhood to create a brand new, state-of-the-art Bonwit Teller flagship.''

The company said it plans to open a Bonwit's late this year in a mall it is developing in Syracuse. Other new Bonwit Teller stores are to be opened within three to five years in malls owned by Pyramid in Providence, R.I., Rockland County, N.Y., Harrisburg, Pa. and Albany, N.Y.

The transaction, approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Tina Brozman, ends a frenzied auction for Bonwit's, a once-proud carriage trade retailer observers said had fallen on hard times even before its purchase by Hooker in 1987.

A consortium including dealmaker Donald Trump bid nearly $22 million for five Bonwit stores, while Galeries Lafayette, a French retailer hoping to gain a foothold in the United States, offered $4 million for the chain's flagship outlet in Manhattan.

That 12 stores are to be liquidated came as no surprise to retail industry insiders.

''The stature and relevance of Bonwit Teller over the last few years had fallen to such a low and insignificant level that its disappearance in certain markets is not going to open up a void,'' said Kurt Barnard, publisher of Barnard's Retail Marketing Report. ''It was a lemon when Hooker bought it.''

Besides the New York outlet, Bonwit stores to be closed include those in Scarsdale, N.Y., Bal Harbour, Fla., Palm Beach, Fla., Philadelphia, Jenkintown, Pa., Chicago, Oakbrook, Ill., Troy, Mich., Kansas City, Mo., Manhasset, N.Y., Short Hills, N.J.

Bonwit Teller was founded in 1898 in New York and quickly gained a reputation as a fine women's apparel store.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Congress will miss a Thursday deadline set by President Bush for passage of a bill providing $720 million in aid for new U.S.-backed governments in Panama and Nicaragua, a Senate aide said Wednesday.

Marsha Berry, spokeswoman for the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the panel will not consider the aid request before the Senate leaves later this week on its nearly two-week Easter recess. The panel's failure to act would prevent the full Senate from taking up the House-passed measure.

Bush, in proposing an $800 million aid package for Panama and Nicaragua, asked that Congress send him a final bill by April 5.

Asked when the Appropriations Committee would consider the aid bill, Berry said, ''Not until after the break. We haven't got the time.'' The House and Senate begin Easter recesses later this week and do not return to work until April 18.

The House passed the measure Tuesday, leaving Bush's request of $300 million for the incoming Nicaraguan government of Violetta Chamorro in tact but cutting Bush's $500 million Panama aid request to $420 million.

The aid package is part of an emergency supplemental spending bill, which still has Bush's support despite the fact it contains $1.5 billion in domestic spending that he did not request.

Earlier at the White House, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater tried to prod the Senate into final action on the aid bill before the break.

''Our position is simply that we believe the Panamanian, Nicaraguan democracies deserve our support and they deserve it immediately and we still want passage before the recess,'' said Fitzwater, who added that he had ''high hopes'' Bush would get a final bill before Congress left town.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine vowed to lead attempts to slash the aid request unless Bush sent Congress an overall foreign aid plan.

After a White House meeting with Bush on the foreign aid bill, Mitchell said he hoped the Senate could act before the recess on an bill authorizing the aid, which he said is the first step in the process leading to appropriations. Mitchell said Republicans were blocking his effort to bring the authorization bill to the floor amendment-free and until that bill passed, there was no point in speculating on when the Senate will debate the spending bill itself.

Fitzwater charged that Mitchell's demand for a comprehensive foreign aid plan would cut into presidential authority.

''The five-year plan idea gives us a number of problems, most notable among them, again, the Congress trying to dicate foreign policy in a way that takes away our prerogatives,'' Fitzwater said.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - The dollar took a roller-coaster ride against the Japanese yen in New York trading Wednesday, falling sharply in the morning but making a strong recovery later on rumors of further Tokyo market turmoil.

Participants said bearish sentiment on the dollar versus the yen dissipated as talk spread of a Japanese securities house declaring bankruptcy. The Nikkei average of 225 Tokyo stocks might dive Thursday, according to the rumors.

Meanwhile, the dollar mostly marked time in trading against the main European currencies, finishing slightly stronger against most of them amid cautious trading ahead of Saturday's Group of Seven session in Paris.

The British pound held most of its gains from a European rally.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.70 West German marks, up from 1.6970 marks late Tuesday. The U.S. currency was trading at 159 Japanese yen, off from 159.80 yen the previous day.

''There was substantial action in the yen,'' said Stephen Jury, chief dealer for Chemical Bank in New York. He said the dollar ''dropped quite heavily'' on the opening to lose 2 yen against Tuesday's close.

''It's a diabolical currency,'' Albert Soria, foreign exchange manager for the Kansallis Osake Pankki merchant bank, said of the yen. ''It's incredible.''

He said the yen's initial rise was purely technical. Trader Radhika Rajan of Manufacturers Hanover cited brisk activity against the deutsche mark and the ''feeling that the dollar-yen (price) had topped.''

Rajan said the dollar stabilized and ''came up very rapidly on rumors that the Japanese stock market would take a big tumble tonight.''

Soria said he expects considerable volatility in the yen around the G-7meeting, given uncertainty on whether monetary officials will resolve on a plan to boost the yen in currency markets.

''The breakout one way or another is not likely until after G-7,'' Soria said, adding that a lack of G-7 resolve could sink the unit, particularly if Japan does not raise its interest rates in defense.

Other dollar rates: 1.5055 Swiss francs, up from 1.5020; 5.7110 French francs, up from 5.7070; and 1,249.25 Italian lire, up from 1,247.50.

The British pound was at $1.6400, ahead from $1.6350.

The dollar closed mostly lower in Europe. It was off against the West German mark, closing in Frankfurt at 1.6958 marks against 1.6990 Tuesday, but rose in Zurich to close at 1.5050 Swiss francs against 1.5015.

The dollar was lower in Paris, Milan and Brussels at 5.7070 French francs against 5.7190, 1,248.60 Italian lire compared with 1,250.50, and 35.1150 Belgian francs against 35.1700 the day before.

In London, the pound rose to $1.6415 against $1.6335. Dealers said the market shrugged off jitters after weekend riots in London over a new poll tax, and the pound rallied without Bank of England intervention.

In Tokyo, the dollar inched down to close at 158.90 yen from Tuesday's finish of 158.95. Traders said it fell on reports U.S. and Japanese officials will reach terms on the yen after the Group of Seven meets Saturday.

''The dollar was sold because we heard the United States and Japan will discuss the yen-dollar rate after the G-7,'' said Junpei Ishii, vice president at Taiyo Kobe Bank.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $377.25 an ounce, up from $376 Tuesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $377.10 an ounce, up from $375.30. In Zurich, gold moved down to $374.50 an ounce, against $375.50. London gold fell to $374.50 an ounce from $375.25.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.17 an ounce, ahead from $5.03. The Comex closed spot silver at $5.16 an ounce, up from $5.07. Zurich silver declined to $5.00 an ounce from $5.07, while in London the metal moved up to $5.03 an ounce compared with $5.01.

GENEVA (APRIL 4) UPI - Global cases of AIDS reported to the World Health Organization rose in March by 14,370, or 6.45 percent, to a total of 237,110, the U.N. agency said Wednesday.

WHO said the United States had 2,637 new cases of the deadly disease, giving it a total of 124,282 cases, 52.4 percent of the world figure.

The Ivory Coast showed a significant increase in the number of reported cases. The country's report put its total at 3,647 as of Feb. 1, more than triple the 1,010 cases it reported in October.

WHO officials said they believe there have actually been about 600,000 cases of AIDS in the world since the organization started keeping track of the disease 10 years ago and said half of that number have died.

They said the number of cases actually reported to WHO is probably not accurate because many African countries, where acquired immune deficiency syndrome is prevalent, are unable to trace and diagnose the disease.

Many African nations at the end of March werd till months, and sometimes more than a year, behind in sending reports to WHO headquarters in Geneva.

Zaire also sent in an updated figure of 11,732 as of Jan. 31, 7,096 higher than its old total and placing it second worldwide behind the United States in the number of per capita cases.

WHO officials warned, however, that some African countries certainly had as many, if not more cases, than Zaire.

According to WHO's figures, which are not all updated, the countries most affected by AIDS are:

-Africa: Burundi 2,355, Congo 1,250, Ivory Coast 3,647 (updated), Ghana 1,077, Kenya 6,004, Malawi 2,586, Rwanda 2,285 (updated), Uganda 7,375, Tanzania 5,627, Zaire 11,732 (updated), Zambia 2,709, Zimbabwe 1,632.

MILAN, ITALY (APRIL 5) UPI - A combined operation by police in Italy, the United States, Australia and West Germany has cracked an international drug ring operated by Bulgarians and Romanians, police announced Wednesday.

Officials said the operation climaxed with the arrest near Milan of Bulgarian operatic baritone Toma Tomov, 37, the accused boss of the drug ring.

Tomov, a 13-year resident of Italy and well known figure in elegant Milan circles, was arrested at his home in Rho, near Milan, a few days ago, police said.

They said the gang smuggled heroin into Italy from Bulgaria and sent it by courier to Los Angeles, where it was converted into cocaine and shipped back to Europe and Australia.

Investigators said the gang, operated mainly by Bulgarians and Romanians, had distributed at least 220 pounds of drugs in various markets since the beginning of 1989.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - U.S. and Japanese negotiators have made ''good progress'' in talks to break down trade barriers against American products a Japanese envoy said Wedneday, and a White House spokesman expressed a similar view.

Special Japanese emissary Nobuo Matsunaga, former ambassador to Washington visited the White House Wednesday afternoon and delivered a personal letter to President Bush from Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu. He gave no details of its contents.

Matsunaga, accompanied by Deputy Foreign Minister Hisashi Owada, arrived in Washington on short notice Monday. The formal talks, held at the State Department, originally were expected to end Tuesday but were extended because of the complexity of the issues, said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

Speaking to reporters through a translator after meeting with Bush, Matsunaga said he hoped the so-called Structural Impediment Initiative talks, which seek to ease intrinsic problems in each country's economies that are contributing to trade problems, would wrap up Wednesday.

''We made good progress and hope to end our meetings by the end of the day '' he said.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said he had expected an interim report on the negotiations would be ready Wednesday, but it ''probably will not be available until tomorrow.''

In a statement, Fitzwater said Bush had emphasized his hope both sides would take further steps in the final report and follow-up talks.

''Bringing about structural adjustments will not be easy on either side of the Pacific but both governments are committed to achieving a positive interim SII report as well as a more comprehensive finished product in July,'' the statement said.

''We have had substantial success to date but we must continue our efforts because neither the Japanese consumer, nor the American public will be convinced until they see concrete results.''

Before the meeting, Fitzwater said Bush was ''pleased that we seem to have made good progress on super-computers and satellites. I'm not sure we have a good report yet on the other category (telecommunications). ... But at least we feel a good start has been made.''

Matsunaga said Japan was pleased to see agreement ''on both sides'' on the three key issues. He said he also had delivered a proposal from his government on the sale of American wood products to Japan but added, ''I can't tell you the content of that proposal.''

''We were very encouraged by the president's firm commitment to fight protectionism,'' Matsunaga said, an onlique reference to calls in the United States for retaliation against Japan.

Fitzwater said, ''The president emphasized the vital importance of maintaining excellent relations with Japan, not only in trade, but with regard to security and the global partnership between the United States and Japan.''

Both Fitzwater and Matsunaga stressed that Bush had words of praise for Kaifu's role in moving the talks along.

According to Japanese sources, Tokyo offered to dismantle its retailers law, which effectively bars foreign firms from competing with the mom-and-pop stores that do most retail business in Japan.

The Japanese offered to bar any new restrictive legislation immediately and to phase out the existing law over a five-year period, the source said. The Americans pushed for a quicker phaseout and more details on how the legislation would work.

A final report on the talks is expected in July.

The Bush administration has been working against the clock to avoid tough trade sanctions being imposed against Japan.

Currently, Japan sells $49 billion more in goods in the United States each year than Americans sell in Japan. Many U.S. experts believe the reason for the imbalance is Japan's official efforts, some based in cultural bias to protect its home markets while exploitng those abroad.

Tutwiler praised the Japanese for resolving two issues on which the Japanese were cited for unfair restraint of trade under a provision of the 1988 Trade Act. Under that law, if Japan does not respond satisfactorily, Congress will impose retaliatory tariffs.

Some U.S. officials fear that would touch off a destructive trade war between the world's two economic giants.

MOSCOW (APRIL 4) UPI - Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis hailed preliminary talks with Moscow but the rebellious Baltic republic's Parliament approved a resolution Wednesday that warned its legally elected government was in danger of being overthrown.

Outside of the parliament building in Vilnius, scuffles broke out between protesters holding an anti-independence rally and Lithuanian television cameramen, witnesses said.

Landsbergis told the Lithuanian Parliament Wednesday that talks Tuesday between three Lithuanian officials and Alexander Yakovlev, perhaps President Mikhail Gorbachev's closest aide, marked a breakthrough in the nearly four-week impasse over the Baltic republic's drive for independence.

''A direct dialogue is already taking place,'' Landsbergis told the Parliament in Vilnius. ''They did not part on bad terms.''

But the Parliament later passed a resolution accusing Moscow of being aggressive in asserting its control over the republic last week and warned against ''a real danger of the overthrow of the legally elected (Lithuanian) Supreme Soviet and of the government that has been formed.''

While Lithuanian leaders who participated in the talks praised them as being constructive, they did not say whether any agreements had been reached.

''These are consultations and conversations,'' Soviet deputy Edigius Bickauskas said Tuesday of the talks with Yakovlev. ''Don't call them negotiations.''

''This talk made us feel good,'' Lithuanian Deputy Prime Minister Romualdes Ozolas, who was one of the three officials to meet with Yakovlev said after returning from Moscow.

In a marked note of conciliation, Ozolas urged other Lithuanian leaders to ''keep in mind the situation as Moscow sees it and the situation we have put them in.''

Gorbachev also warned the Baltic republic of Estonia to annul its own softly worded independence declaration or face a response similar to Moscow's tough stand in Lithuania, Estonian President Arnold Ruutel said Wednesday.

Ruutel told the Estonian Parliament that Gorbachev issued the warning during a ''long telephone conversation'' with him late Tuesday, the Estonian news agency ETA said.

He said Gorbachev used ''harsh words'' to protest the Estonian Parliament's declaration Friday that the republic was entering ''the beginning of a period of transition'' to full independence and that ''the restoration of the Republic of Estonia has begun.''

Though the Estonian resolution Friday was milder than the Lithuanian measure three weeks earlier, which declared immediate independence in Lithuania, Gorbachev gave Ruutel the same demand for annulment he gave Lithuania last weekend.

Gorbachev demanded Saturday that the Lithuanian Parliament annul its March 11 declartion of independence as a condition for negotiations. Failure to rescind the declaration, Gorbachev warned, would lead to ''grave consequences.''

An aide to Landsbergis said the Lithuanian Parliament had drafted a response to Gorbachev's demand and would finalize the statement Thursday.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Secretary of State James Baker said Wednesday the United States was encouraged by the talks between the Soviets and Lithuania and said he expected the Lithuanian situation would be discussed at an upcoming superpower summit. Baker held pre-summit talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who said Tuesday he hoped the Lithuanian crisis could be resolved by ''an honest dialogue.''

Also in Washington, the House of Representatives called on the Soviet government to negotiate with Lithuania in its bid for independence and to refrain from intimidating Vilnius with its military and economic might.

Not all Lithuanians approve of the move away from Moscow. Several thousand people, most of them ethnic Russians, gathered outside the parliament building in Vilnius to condemn the independence declaration.

Witnesses told UPI by phone from the Lithuanian capital that the speeches were more fiery than at similar rallies held recently.

They said some of the demonstrators scuffled with Lithuanian TV cameramen and that several cameras were smashed.

The apparent breakthrough talks came after Landsbergis in a speech to parliament Monday said the embattled Baltic republic may be willing to delay establishment of full independence.

In an earlier telegram to Gorbachev, Landsbergis said Lithuania ''has no intention of harming the policy of perestroika,'' the Soviet president's drive for economic and political renewal.

CAIRO, EGYPT (APRIL 4) UPI - Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz said Wednesday his country is willing to get rid of its chemical weapon arsenal if Israel destroys its nuclear weapons and signs the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, Egypt's official Middle East News Agency reported.

In a related development, Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid said Cairo would support Iraq against any aggression aimed at undermining its security, but stopped short of saying Egyptian troops would go to war to help Iraq.

Abdel-Meguid also lashed out at the United States, Israel and Britain for what he described as a series of ''anti-Iraqi attacks.''

''We would support Iraq against aggression which undermines its security, because protecting Iraq means protecting the Arab world,'' state-owned Amman Radio, monitored in Cairo, quoted Abdel-Meguid as saying in Amman.

At a meeting in Amman of the foreign ministers of the Arab Cooperation Council, Aziz defended comments made by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein Monday that his country would wipe out half of Israel with poison gas if the Israelis launched an attack on Iraq.

''Iraq has a right to defend itself, and is willing to get rid of its chemical weapons, provided that Israel destroys its nuclear weapons and signs the nuclear non-proliferation treaty,'' MENA quoted Aziz as saying.

Israel is believed to possess nuclear weapons, but has never acknowledged it publicly.

Iraq, Egypt, North Yemen and Jordan are members of the Arab Cooperation Council, an economic and political group that encompasses almost half the population of the Arab world.

Aziz accused Israel of seeking an excuse to strike industrial and scientific targets in Iraq in order ''to halt Arab progress for several years to come,'' the government-supervised Cairo daily Al Akbhar reported.

Israeli jets in 1981 bombed an Iraqi nuclear reactor under construction near Baghdad, destroying Iraq's infant nuclear industry. Saddam at the time vowed revenge for the Israeli raid, but then became embroiled in the 8-year Iran-Iraq war, which was suspended under a U.N.-brokered agreement two years ago.

''If an attack against Iraq takes place, the world will witness a startling Iraqi-Arab deterrence. ... Iraq is a strong country,'' Al Akbhar quoted Aziz as saying in Amman.

Aziz said the manufacture of chemical weapons has not been banned by international treaty, and that if Iraq was attacked, it would not hesitate to use all the weapons at its disposal.

''The manufacture of chemical weapons is not banned. ... if Iraq is attacked, it will not hesitate to use all the weapons at its disposal,'' MENA quoted Aziz as saying.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Jesse Jackson Wednesday used the 22nd anniversary of the assassination of fellow civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. to call for statehood for the District of Columbia.

"In the spirit of Dr. King we shall escalate the struggle for New Columbia " Jackson said. "The statehood movement continues in the tradition of Dr. King's struggle to expand democracy to all of the people."

Jackson, like King an ordained Baptist minister, spoke before a group of ministers at First Baptist Church in Northwest Washington, remembering the day King died and criticizing the cautious reception the statehood drive has received from some liberal politicians.

"The 630,000 residents of the District of Columbia are still disenfranchised," said Jackson, who moved to the city last year and is leading a movement to make it the nation's 51st state. "We are under congressional occupation against our will. We are denied democracy and self-determination."

A bill granting statehood to the District is pending in the House of Representatives with little hope of passage this session. The legislation would create a state out of the non-federal parts of Washington, while the remaining land, including the White House, the Washington Monument, the Mall, and the Capitol, would form a federal enclave.

Jackson said if King were alive he would not be pleased with the status of civil rights today. "The freedom and justice struggle for which Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. gave his life 22 years ago today was essentially about opening up and expanding democracy," Jackson said. "While he accomplished much - the 1964 Public Accomodations Act, the 1965 Voting Rights Act and the 1968 Open Housing Act - much remains to be done."

Jackson, 48, a two-time Democratic presidential candidate, cited recent Supreme Court decisions making it tougher to sue for job discrimination and lifting the requirement of states to set aside minority contracts as examples of a rollback of the civil rights movement. "We're more challenged than ever before to protect the gains we have made," he said.

Jackson, the nation's best known black politician, said he would work through Congress to pass legislation to close the "interpretation gap" of civil rights initiatives.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Under pressure from two consecutive weeks of large buildups in U.S. crude inventories, world oil prices plunged Wednesday with gasoline plummeting more than a penny a gallon.

Three major oil companies - Sun Co., of Radnor, Pa., Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, subsidary of USX Corp., and Citgo Petroleum Corp., of Tulsa Okla. - dropped the posted price they will pay for crude oil at the wellhead by 50 cents to $18.75 a barrel for the benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude.

WTI crude for May delivery ended the day on the New York Mercantile Exchange down 52 cents at $19.78 a barrel, near its low on the day of $19.75 a barrel. Trading volume was an above-average 92,380 contracts.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, prompt delivery WTI dropped 50 cents to $19.80 a barrel.

Late Tuesday after the Merc closed, the oil industry's American Petroleum Institute reported crude oil supplies rose 4.3 million barrels last week to 362.8 million barrels.

A week ago, API reported crude stocks had risen 7.5 million barrels in the previous week as refineries slowed down production during the annual maintenance turnaround from heating oil to gasoline production.

Crude deliveries to refineries are backing up and gasoline output is declining as a result of reduced refinery activity during the turnaround.

Consequently, the API also reported Tuesday that gasoline stocks had fallen a cumulative 12.9 million barrels in the two previous weeks.

The market Wednesday was faced with the choice of either following the lower-price signal provided by the crude inventories or the gasoline signal for higher rates.

''People were kind of weighing it out,'' said Tom Bentz, director of trading for United Energy Inc. in New York.

The crude signal proved predominant in the initial trading. When gasoline then fell below the 66-cent level, sell orders were triggered that added steam to the selloff, the analyst said.

''It remains to be seen which way the market will move after Wednesday,'' Bentz said.

Unleaded gasoline for May delivery dove 1.02 cents to 64.86 cents a gallon on the Merc after trading as high as 66.40 cents.

On the New York Harbor cash market, prompt delivery unleaded gasoline dropped 1.05 cents to 64.55 cents a gallon.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent lost 33 cents to $17.75 a barrel.

United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - slipped 25 cents to $15.40 a barrel.

On the Merc, heating oil for May delivery finished the day at 54.02 cents a gallon, a decline of 1.48 cents.

Prompt delivery heating oil dove 1.45 cents to 57.55 cents a gallon on the New York Harbor cash market.

HOUSTON (APRIL 4) UPI - A medical technology company said Wednesday that Sumitomo Corporation of Japan has agreed to invest up to $1 million to market products used in developing and screening new drugs.

Sumitomo and its subsidiary, Sumitomo Corporation of America, will initially invest $500,000 in GES Pharmaceuticals with an option to invest another $500,000 at the end of six months, organizers said.

The GES technology uses genetically engineered cell lines to determine which chemicals will hinder, accelerate or interrupt normal communication among nerve cells. GES is working on the selective interference of these chemical messages to treat various medical problems.

The technology provides a new way of determining which chemicals could be used to develop pharmaceuticals that are more specific and have fewer side effects than existing drugs.

Dr. Dominic Man-Kit Lam, a GES director, who invented the GES technology, said it could speed up the testing of drug effectiveness in treating such disorders as depression, migraine headaches, heart irregularities, schizophrenia, epilepsy, and Parkinson's and Alzheimer's diseases. The process also could reduce the cost of developing new drugs, he said.

''By understanding in very fine detail the structure of protein in the chemicals, we may begin to discover drugs not by random screening as is done now but by deliberate design,'' Lam said.

Researchers currently test thousands of chemical compounds in a hit-or-miss approach for the treatment of specific diseases.

Many chemical compounds are never tested for diseases in which they could prove effective, said Dallas Anderson, president and chief operating officer of GES Pharmaceuticals, based in The Woodlands, a community north of Houston.

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire praised Sumitomo's financial commitment in GES, calling it the biggest investment in technology transfer that the Houston-area medical industry has experienced.

Whitmire said she considers medical technology to be a key component for diversification of Houston's economy, which has traditionally focused on the energy industry.

''We have long realized in Houston that the outstanding medical care and medical research at the Texas Medical Center is one of the most important resources here,'' Whitmire said.

Akikazu Tamai, general manager of new drug and biochemicals development department for the Sumitomo's Tokyo office, said his firm was excited about getting involved with the GES technology.

''We are looking for new technology anywhere in the world, and Houston is famous,'' for its medical research, Tamai said.

Sumitomo also is GES Pharmaceuticals' exclusive agent for business development in Japan and has an option to license certain applications of the technology for use in Japan.

The collaboration includes a relationship with Special Reference Laboratories, Japan's largest clinical reference lab.

Sumitomo and GES have already been sending employees back and forth between the lab, near Tokyo, and GES offices in Texas, Anderson said.

GES was established in March 1989 by BCM Technologies, the business development arm of Baylor College of Medicine.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - The stock market closed lower Wednesday in moderate trading, pressured late in the session by fears of a sharp decline in the Tokyo market tonight.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which jumped 36.26 Tuesday, fell 17.34 to close at 2719.37.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 1.24 to 187.31 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 2.55 to 341.09. The price of an average share lost 22 cents.

Declines led advances 915-591 among the 1,976 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 159,540,000 shares, versus 154,310,000 shares traded Tuesday.

Analysts said there was speculation that there might be heavy selling in Tokyo when that market opens tonight, which unnerved investors and sent prices lower. The talk is that a major player there is in financial trouble and won't be able to meet margin calls.

Sidney Dorr, vice president of institutional trading at Charles Schwab and Co. in San Francisco, said the talk in the market was of a possible decline of 1,000 to 3,000 points in the Japanese market tonight.

''With all this pessimism around, though,'' he said, ''I'd say the market looked pretty healthy today. We were ripe for some profit taking with the market up as much as it was yesterday.''

The market opened higher, buoyed by computerized program buying, used to profit on price spreads between stocks and stock index futures, and by buying carrying over from Tuesday.

Profit taking then surfaced and prices turned mixed, but the market made another bid at midday to extend Tuesday's surge. However, prices again lost their gains and the market drifted.

Analysts said many investors have begun to set their sights on the March employment figures, due for release Friday, and on the weekend meeting in Paris of the Group of Seven industrialized nations, where target levels for currencies of different countries are expected to be the topic of discussion.

On the trading floor, Avon Products was the most active issue, up 1 1/4 to 35 1/4.

Woolworth followed, tumbling 2 to 61 1/2. Reports said the company would not comment on a big block trade representing about 4.7 percent of its shares.

Baxter International was third, down 1/4 to 24 3/8. The company reportedly said it would take a pre-tax charge of $566 million against first-quarter earnings, expects a first-quarter loss of $1.50 to $1.60 a share after the charge and will reduce its work force by about 10 percent.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was down 3/4 to 41 1/4, IBM was down 1/8 to 106 1/2, General Electric was down 3/4 to 64 1/4, General Motors was up 1/2 to 46 1/8, and Merck was down 1/2 to 71 1/4.

Elsewhere, Bank of New England was down 3/8 to 4 1/4. In a major restructuring to remain solvent, the troubled bank holding company said it would eliminate 5,600 jobs, representing one-third of its work force, by year's end.

About 1,700 Bank of New England employees will receive pink slips within the week, and the remainder of the jobs will be eliminated through attrition, continued asset sales and consolidation, the bank said.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 192,337,930 shares, compared with 182,876,040 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed lower in heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index lost 0.53 to close at 361.12. The price of an average share fell 1 cent. Declines led advances 310-223 among the 786 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 22,578,700 shares, compared with 16,660,400 traded Tuesday.

Salomon's put warrants on Tokyo's Nikkei index led the Amex issues, up 2 to 12 3/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 2.23 to 435.42.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 4) UPI - Gov. Robert Casey Wednesday commended emergency crews for their handling of the Allegheny River fuel spill now headed for Ohio, but expressed concern about delays in initial reports of the leak, his top spokesman said.

Water managers along the Ohio River said they had no plans to close drinking water intake valves as the dissipated spill drifted past Pittsburgh toward the Buckeye State. About 40 miles downstream, utility officials in East Liverpool, Ohio, said they would add carbon to their treatment system.

Further downstream, the Ohio communities of Toronto and Steubenville were bracing for the contamination. "(They're) prepared to deal with whatever comes down the river," said Stuart Bruny, chief of Ohio's Environmental Protection Agency's public water division.

The FBI and U.S. Attorney's Office have joined the state Department of Environmental Resources and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in the investigation of the 200,000-gallon spill and the pipeline owner - Buckeye Pipe Line Co. of Emmaus.

DER Executive Secretary Mark McClellan said Buckeye failed to notify authorities about the leak until at least four hours after it was discovered by company workers. The leak occurred when a landslide ruptured a ten-inch line carrying a mixture of diesel fuel, oil and gas at about 11 p.m. last Friday.

"It's a matter of very serious concern to us," Casey's press secretary Vince Carocci said of the delay. He said Casey was pleased with the performance of state, federal and local emergency crews in Armstrong and Allegheny counties "in spite of the delay in notification." "The inconveniences, although frustrating, were kept at a minimum," Carocci said from Harrisburg.

McClellan said Buckeye's failure to contact DER prevented early efforts to contain the spill, which left thousands of residents in Allegheny County without running water this week and forced water use reductions for an estimated one million people. The company could be subject to thousands of dollars in fines, officials said.

"I don't think they realized how big it was," said John Kaus, deputy director of Allegheny County's emergency management center. "I think a lot more could have been done at the scene to keep a major portion of that spill where it began."

Buckeye spokesman Roy Haase Jr. said the company alerted authorities in a timely manner. Company officials have promised to cooperate with investigators and accept full responsibility for the spill and the undetermined clean-up costs. Buckeye is insured for pipeline accidents and executives do not expect spill expenses to effect its operations, spokesman Thomas Dornblaser said.

Most communities were back to normal Wednesday with conservation orders lifted throughout Allegheny County with the exception of several small towns attempting to replenish water supplies.

Pittsburgh Mayor Sophie Masloff discontinued a water conservation request at noon Wednesday for the city's 500,000 residents, satisfied the river was clear of hazardous contaminants.

Three Pittsburgh residents, meanwhile, filed a lawsuit against Buckeye in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court. Attorney Howard Specter said he is seeking to organize a class-action suit filed for all residents, businesses, municipalities, and utilities affected by the spill.

The suit accuses Buckeye of negligence, abnormally dangerous activity, reckless conduct, and creating a nuisance. It seeks real and punitive damages.

NEW YORK (APRIL 4) UPI - Average yields for money market mutual funds were mixed in the latest reporting week, while rates at competing savings and loan institutions were mostly higher, organizations that track the funds and institutions said Wednesday.

The Donoghue Organization of Holliston, Mass., said average seven-day simple yields on money market funds fell to 7.67 percent from 7.69, while 30-day simple yields rose to 7.67 percent from 7.66.

The average maturity of fund portfolios was unchanged at 45 days.

The Bank Rate Monitor of North Palm Beach, Fla., reported that rates at competing banks and savings and loan institutions were mostly higher in the latest week.

The Monitor's index of average rates: money market deposit accounts, 6.08 percent, up from 6.07; Super-Now accounts, 5.0 percent, unchanged; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.68 percent, unchanged; one-year CDs, 7.79 percent, up from 7.78; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.80 percent, up from 7.79; and five-year CDs, 7.84 percent, up from 7.83.

The average rate for a one-year adjustable rate mortgage was 8.59 percent, up from 8.56.

The average rate on a 15-year fixed-rate mortgage rose to 9.91 percent from 9.88 and the average rate on a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage was 10.08 percent, up from 10.06.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was 12.22 percent, unchanged.

RANCHO MIRAGE, CA (APRIL 4) UPI - Former President Gerald Ford underwent surgery Wednesday to replace his left knee, which was injured during his days playing football more than a half-century ago, a hospital spokeswoman said. Ford, 76, was awake during the 90-minute procedure, which began at 9 a.m. at Eisenhower Medical Center, spokeswoman Sallie Mananssah said.

Dr. Robert Murphy, an orthopedic surgeon, said the operation to mend damage to Ford's knee suffered in a 1933 football injury was successful. "It was done under a spinal anesthesia with him wide awake," Murphy said. "He spent most of the time talking with the anesthesiologist."

Murphy said it was Ford's fourth operation on his left knee, which the former All-American center injured while at the University of Michigan. In the first surgery, doctors removed torn cartilage. As a result of subsequent degeneration of the remaining cartilage, Ford was walking "bone-against-bone," Murphy said.

Over the years since Ford's athletic injuries, both his knees developed advanced degenerative arthritis, Murphy said. The former president was scheduled to undergo the same procedure on his right knee in October.

"He's had a lot of pain and instablity in his knees, the feeling his knees would buckle on him," Murphy said. "He's had a great deal of difficulty going up and down stairs."

Murphy said that Ford's entire left knee was replaced with an artificial joint, including portions of the adjacent femur, or thigh bone, and tibia, or leg bone.

The new joint is made of titanium, with some high density plastic parts adjoining the metal. Murphy described the artificial knee is a "bone ingrowth prosthesis." "The older model used until few years ago used bone cement ... but the new model uses no bone cement. His bone will grow into it," Murphy said.

Murphy said Ford's active lifestyle, which includes regular swimming and golf, made him a good candidate for the bone ingrowth type of joint because exercise promotes healing.

"We'll get him out of bed tomorrow afternoon. He'll be walking on a walker with just partial weight bearing (on the left leg)," Murphy said. "He's not going to be able to put full weight on it for about two months."

After a seven-day hospital stay, Ford will walk on crutches until the bone and titanium joint fuse, which is expected to take two months. Murphy said Ford will undergo therapy at his Palm Springs home with Eisenhower staff therapists.

Penny Circle, Ford's chief-of-staff, said that Ford is in otherwise good health. Since he left office in January 1977, Ford has served on several corporate boards of directors and the Pepperdine University Board of Regents.

A congressman from Michigan for 25 years who rose to become Republican leader of the House of Representatives, Ford is the only person ever to serve as vice president or president without winning either office by general election.

Ford was elected by Congress to the vice presidency in 1973 after Spiro Agnew resigned the post under suspicion of federal income tax evasion. Ford came to the Nixon White House during the most tense times of the Watergate scandal. He stepped in as the 38th president on Aug. 9, 1974, when Richard Nixon resigned in disgrace.

In his only campaign for the highest office in 1976, he was defeated by Democrat Jimmy Carter and became the first incumbent to lose the office since 1932, when Herbert Hoover was defeated by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Ford's wife, Betty, recovered from breast cancer and alcohol and prescription drug abuse. She founded the Betty Ford Center, a rehabilitation clinic for drug and alcohol abuse at the Eisenhower Medical Center.

SEATTLE (APRIL 4) UPI - Edward E. Carlson, a former hotel bellhop who became the top officer of Westin Hotels and United Airlines, has died of cancer. He was 78.

Carlson also is credited with coming up with the idea and drawing the first rough design for one of Seattle's most famous landmarks, the 605-foot tall Space Needle built for the 1962 World's Fair.

Carlson died Tuesday night at Virginia Mason Hospital in Seattle.

''I mourn very deeply the passing of Eddie Carlson,'' Gov. Booth Gardner said. ''He was a visionary and a remarkable man. There very well might not have been a World's Fair in Seattle without him.''

Carlson served as chairman of the 1962 Seattle World's Fair and was designated ''First Citizen of Seattle'' in 1966.

''Eddie Carlson was a dynamic leader whose interest in people was evident in the rapport he enjoyed with employees and in the many civic and community activities in which he participated,'' United Chairman Stephen Wolf said. ''His leadership is an important part of United's history.''

Harry Mullikin, chairman emeritus of Westin Hotels, called Carlson his personal mentor for 50 years.

''He's the most important person in our lives, both at the Westin and also at United,'' Mullikin said.

Carlson was born in Tacoma, Wash., on June 4, 1911. At 17, he landed a job as a part-time bellhop at a Seattle hotel while attending the University of Washington.

After a stint in the Navy, Carlson became assistant to the president of Western Hotels, which later became Western International Hotels. The upscale lodging chain eventually was renamed Westin Hotels and Resorts.

Carlson stayed with Westin and in 1960 was elected president. He became chairman of the board in 1969.

In 1970, Westin merged with UAL Inc., parent company of United Airlines. Five years later Carlson became chairman and chief executive of both the carrier and the holding company.

Beginning in 1976 Carlson started relinquishing his various titles until his retirement in 1983 as chairman of the UAL executive committee. He was still a director emeritus of UAL at the time of his death.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Israeli Labor Party leader Shimon Peres says he has enough support to form a new government. Army Radio says Peres asked for a meeting of parliament to get a vote of confidence. The announcement comes after Peres signed an agreement with a parliament member who broke away from the Likud Party. Israeli President Chaim Herzog asked Peres last month to form a new government after Prime Minister Shamir's government fell in a NO-confidence vote.

P-L-O chairman Yasser Arafat and former U-S President Jimmy Carter are in Paris today, holding talks aimed at breaking the stalemate in the Middle East peace process. French President Francois Mitterand arranged to join the meeting. A Jewish group in France that opposes the Carter-Arafat meeting is demanding that Carter clarify his reasons for agreeing to talk with Arafat.

U-N officials in Geneva say that as far as they are concerned, the peace process to end El Salvador's 10-year civil war is now under way. A U-N mediator made the statement today after the Salvadoran government and leftist rebels agreed to begin U-N-sponsored peace talks in May. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar says the first objective of the talks is a cease-fire.

Legendary jazz singer Sarah Vaughan is dead. Jazz critic Leonard Feather, a long-time friend, says Vaughan died last night at her home in Hidden Hills, California. She was 66. She was born on March 27th, 1924, in Newark New Jersey, and got her break at age 16 at the Apollo Theater in Harlem. Her operatic range and horn-like effects changed the art of jazz singing, and earned her the nickname ''The Divine One.'' She died of lung cancer.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - President Bush said Wednesday the clean air bill passed by the Senate is a ''major step forward,'' but administration officials promised there would be efforts in the House to water down some sections.

With the spotlight shifting from the Senate, Midwest lawmakers on the House Energy and Commerce Committee struggled to find support for changing the House version of the legislation to help their region pay for acid rain cleanup.

In a meeting with Senate leaders, Bush called the Senate bill - approved 89-11 Tuesday night - ''a major breakthrough'' in balancing environmental cleanup and economic growth, but said more work is needed to ensure the bill that finally reaches his desk will clear the air without taking too high a toll in jobs.

''There's no question that the Senate bill is a major step forward,'' he said, ''but it is only a first step and more progress is going to be needed if we're to achieve the balanced bill that I feel is essential.''

Marlin Fitzwater, Bush's press secretary, told reporters that while the president was pleased with the Senate vote, the administration had some concerns it would seek to resolve during House action or in House-Senate deliberations later this year.

''We have some problems with the compromise and we will be working on trying to get those changes made as we go through the House,'' Fitzwater said.

Among other concerns with the Senate bill, White House officials cited:

-Provisions to phase out ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons by the turn of the century. Officials said the administration did not want to endorse a unilateral U.S. phaseout at a time negotiators are working on an international agreement for greater CFC reductions.

-Sections seeking to reduce carbon monoxide emissions during start-up of automobiles.

-Measures allowing environmental groups to sue the Environmental Protection Agency to force emission reduction actions the agency has failed or refused to take.

White House officials declined to say whether Bush would seek to change highly controversial provisions concerning automobile tailpipe emissions that cause ozone smog.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine has said he will seek to strengthen the bill as it moves through Congress. During negotiations with the White House, Mitchell agreed to weaken auto emission controls as a way of getting the bill through the Senate.

While Bush and Senate leaders celebrated the Senate vote, leaders of the House panel pushed to get their bill out of committee by the end of the week.

The committee has reached compromises on automobile emissions and toxic industrial pollution, leaving acid rain as the last major hurdle.

The main controversy centers around efforts by Midwest lawmakers to get ''cost-sharing'' legislation that would provide assistance in paying for pollution control equipment to reduce emissions from coal-burning power plants.

The Midwesterners held marathon closed-door meetings with other committee members late Tuesday night and all day Wednesday in an attempt to draw up a cost-sharing compromise. Prospects for an accord were dim, however, particularly since the Bush administration strongly opposes cost-sharing.

Both the Senate and House clean air bills would require about 100 Midwest and Southern power plants to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions, a primary cause of acid rain blamed for damage to lakes, streams and forests in the Northeast and Canada.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - A House subcommittee, faced with daunting estimates of the cost of a soybean ''marketing'' loan, heard one idea Wednesday how to meet budget targets - take the money out of other crop support programs.

The subcommittee delayed a showdown on the soybean issue until after Easter. Chairman Dan Glickman, D-Kan., asked panel members to try to iron out their differences and solve the cost question during the interim.

U.S. soybean acreage has dropped by 10 million acres since 1980 despite booming world demand for oilseeds.

Commodity groups blame ''the soybean problem'' on rigid farm program rules. They say the cure should include a marketing loan to make soybeans a financially attractive crop and to help the United States regain a large share of the world market.

''If we don't reverse the trend, it has grave implications for our ability'' to supply world needs, Rep. David Nagle, D-Iowa, said in proposing one version of a soybean marketing loan to the House Agriculture subcommittee on grain.

Congressional analysts said Nagle's plan could cost as much as $10 billion over five years. Other versions have been estimated to cost as little as $600 million. One key factor is whether the government lets land shift to soybeans or offers inducements to farmers to maintain the current volume of wheat, feed grain, cotton and rice production.

Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, suggested the cost of the marketing loan should come out of government support for other field crops. Their prices are supposed to go up if the marketing loan is a success, he said, so ''there is a certain amount of equity'' in asking them to share the cost burden.

Grandy also called his idea a ''control mechanism'' to hold down the cost of the overall farm policy law that is being written this year.

''I recognize the intent of the amendment. It is very nice,'' Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., sponsor of a marketing loan plan, responded stiffly.

The marketing loan already is in use for rice and cotton. Under it, farmers with a government crop loan can sell their crop at the world price - often lower than U.S. prices - and pocket the difference between the sale price and the loan rate.

Glickman, who has his own marketing loan proposal - at a lower rate than Nagle or Marlenee - said a program that cost $5 billion or $6 billion over five years would be too costly. The Soybean Association wants a $6.25 loan rate. Glickman has proposed $5.50 a bushel.

Before it recessed the subcommittee rejected, 7-5, a proposal by Marlenee to let farmers be governed by limits on how many bushels they could market rather than the current system of acreage controls.

SEATTLE (APRIL 5) UPI - The Boeing Co. said Wednesday a program implemented five years ago has led to much greater control over the amount of hazardous waste produced by the aerospace giant's many operations.

Since beginning its organized attempt in 1985 to identify and reduce toxic wastes spewed into the air, ground and water, the amount of waste produced on average by Boeing's hourly employees has decreased almost 35 percent, said Kirk Thomson, manager of environmental affairs.

That has meant a decrease of about 269 gallons of hazardous waste produced for each hourly employee in 1985 to 176 gallons last year, Thomson said. He said the numbers took into effect Boeing's dramatic increase in employment in the past few years.

''Our challenge now is to reduce (the hazardous chemicals) we are using and find new materials,'' Thomson said, adding that Boeing uses about 16,000 different chemicals in its operations.

He said the company has allocated about $7.7 million for a program this year that will look at new ways to minimize hazardous waste and well as the reduction of specific chemicals that are particularly harmful to the environment, including chlorofluorocarbons, cleaning solvents, and chromium materials.

Still, the company's total hazardous waste volume has climbed steadily in the past five years, from a total of 6.7 million gallons in 1985 to 9.6 million gallons last year. Thomson said the higher volumes resulted from increased production and removal of contaminated soil from company properties, many of which were contaminated prior to Boeing's ownership.

Most of the contaminated soil has been removed, untreated, to a hazardous waste landfill in the north-central Oregon town of Arlington near the Columbia River. Thomson said the Arlington landfill is very secure and there is no danger of toxins leaching into the river.

''I wouldn't characterize us as a polluter at all,'' he said.

However, Boeing has had problems with badly polluted sites, some of which were contaminated by former owners.

The company is currently involved in the cleanup of the Western Processing chemical dump in Kent, Wash., a Superfund site closed by the Environmental Protection Agency in 1983.

Although it shares responsibility for cleaning the highly toxic site with dozens of other companies, Boeing is shouldering the bulk of the cost for Western's cleanup, which Thomson said could run up to $65 million. A court will ultimately decide whether Boeing or its insurers pay for the cleanup.

Boeing also is cleaning up what Thomson called ''several hot spots'' at its 120-acre parts manufacturing facility in Portland, Ore. Groundwater contamination discovered at the site has been traced back to a former owner.

Last year, Boeing was ordered by the state Department of Ecology to stop dumping the pulpy residue of shredded documents into the Duwammish River in south Seattle.

A Boeing plant in Auburn also was the target of an investigation last year by health officials trying to determine the cause of illnesses among production line workers who complained of nausea, dizziness and chest pains. Vapors from sophisticated resin materials used in airplane parts were suspected, and the complaints subsided after Boeing installed a new ventilation system.

INDIANAPOLIS (APRIL 4) UPI - Ryan White's doctor said Wednesday they were hopeful he could recover from his latest AIDS-related infection but cautioned against being too optimistic.

White remains heavily sedated and on a respirator at Riley Hospital for Children, where he has been confined for treatment of what the doctors said was his most severe problem since he contracted AIDS more than five years ago. He is in no apparent pain, said hospital spokeswoman Marie Brunsman.

White has been in the hospital since last Thursday for treatment of a respiratory infection complicated by the AIDS virus. He also has suffered internal bleeding but his physician said White's lungs are of primary concern.

Dr. Martin Kleiman, the director of infectious diseases and a professor of pediatrics at the Indiana University Medical Center, has treated White since he contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome in 1984.

''Ryan White remains in critical condition,'' Kleiman said Wednesday. ''However, we continue to be hopeful. I think others have been less hopeful than we.

''I think it's important for you, as the media, to continue to take the information we give you as the information which is most strongly associated with how he is really doing and not become overly optimistic based upon one or two statements that are heard or taken out of context.''

He said White's treatment, which has consisted mainly of antibiotics and sedatives, including morphine and curare, has remained the same since Thursday. No experimental drugs are being used, the doctor said.

Before entering the hospital, White had been taking AZT, an AIDS medication approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration. His doctor said he was continuing to receive the drug while hospitalized.

Kleiman said White has responded to treatment but that should not necessarily be interpreted to mean he is improving. He said White's lungs were not strong enough to support him without the aid of the respirator.

Kleiman said White could remain in his present state for ''a very long time. Asked if it would be accurate to describe White's condition as a drug-induced coma, the doctor replied, ''If you want to use that term, yes.''

Still, Kleiman remained optimistic.

''It is not beyond reason that he recover from this acute episode,'' he said. ''There have been patients who have been this ill who have recovered their prior state,'' he said.

White's mother, Jeanne White, said Wednesday through a spokeswoman that her son always had been involved in decisions about his medical treatment.

''The decision to put Ryan on a respirator came from Ryan,'' she said. ''If anybody knows Ryan, if he had a chance to get better, he would want to go for it.''

Kleiman also said that White was ''a full particpant'' in the decision to put him on a respirator.

Later Wednesday, Jeanne White said she would not make any more statements to the press because some reporters had tried to contact her directly instead of going through spokespeople.

Ryan White picked up the AIDS virus, which robs the body's immune system of its ability to fight off infections and diseases, during a treatment for his hemophilia. He and his mother battled intense local opposition to his right to attend school near Kokomo, Ind. Their struggle drew national attention.

Since he entered the hospital, White has been visited by singer Elton John and football player Howie Long, and has received phone calls from singers Michael Jackson, John Cougar Mellencamp, Johnny Cash and the Statler Brothers, football player Joe Montana, Sen. Edward Kennedy, talk show host Phil Donohue and entertainer Carol Burnett, family spokeswoman Carrie Jackson Van Dyke said.

Van Dyke said singer Lionel Richie sent a fax and Paul McCartney tried to call but could not get through.

John, Van Dyke said, has been a constant visitor to Riley Hospital ever since White's condition was announced. John has spent much of his time in White's room hanging up the hundreds of cards and letters that have poured in from around the world, Van Dyke said.

President Bush, during a visit to Indianapolis Tuesday for a tree planting ceremony and a political rally, dedicated the tree to White.

Former President and Mrs. Reagan issued a statement late Monday, saying they were praying for White and his family.

Most of Ryan White's relatives and family friends have arrived in Indianapolis to keep vigil. Ryan's estranged father also returned to visit him, Van Dyke said.

White eventually was allowed to attend Western School Corporation near Kokomo in early 1986 after a yearlong court battle. Then in 1987 he and his mother and sister moved to Cicero, where students at nearby Hamilton Heights High School welcomed White and expressed little concern about being around a classmate with AIDS.

His struggle was detailed in the 1989 ABC television movie, ''The Ryan White Story.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - The nation's Roman Catholic bishops have hired the public relations firm of Hill and Knowlton to help them wage a stepped up battle against legal abortion, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said Wednesday.

The bishops' unprecedented effort, which will also include the hiring of the generally Republican polling firm The Wirthlin Group will be directed by Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, head of the bishops' Committee for Pro-life Activities.

The anti-abortion campaign will be aimed at Catholic and non-Catholics alike.

Although the bishops' announcement did not say how much the public opinion-shaping effort would cost, estimates circulating in the advertising industry and among Catholics put the price tag at $5 million.

O'Connor said the precise scope the project is still undetermined and is contingent on what the polls to be taken for the bishops in the upcoming weeks reveal.

He said the money will be raised from outside sources and will not affect the funding of other programs of the bishops' conference.

''We want this effort to unfold on peaceful grounds, without vitriol, as we work to encourage both within and beyond our faith community serious consideration of moral ends, means and achievable public policy goals,'' O'Connor said.

O'Connor traced the origins of the new campaign to last November's meeting of the bishops and their adoption of a resolution on abortion calling the fetus's right to life a fundamental human right and pledging to strengthen the church's anti-abortion activities.

He said that as part of the bishops effort to protect the unborn, the conference must also speak and ''be heard, by the faithful, by American citizens generally, and by the public policy community nationwide.''

''This requires a commitment no less intense than that which we have made over the years to the poor, the aged, the homeless, the handicapped, disadvantaged minorities, refugees and immigrants,'' O'Connor said.

He noted that secular organizations that support legal abortion have ''purchased the advice and assistance of professional communications counselors and public opinion experts.''

''Given the stakes - life itself - we can do no less,'' O'Connor said.

The effort, however, was sharply criticized by Frances Kissling, president of Catholics for a Free Choice, who termed the project ''outrageous and scandalous.''

''At a time when parochial schools are being closed for lack of money, when religious orders of aged sisters are in financial crisis, when the homeless are crying to be housed and the hungry to be fed, to spend money on an advertising campaign is very disturbing.

''I think Catholics are going to be very angry that their money is going to fancy Madison Avenue public relations firms,'' Kissling said.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 5) UPI - Several Occidental Petroleum Corp. shareholders objected Wednesday to a proposed settlement of lawsuits opposing a $95 million museum currently under construction for Chairman Armand Hammer's art collection.

The Delaware Court of Chancery heard arguments Wednesday on whether it should approve the proposed settlement, which would place a $60 million cap on museum construction costs, limit future company donations to Hammer-related charities and provide for $1.4 million in fees plus expenses for attorneys.

The settlement involves a class-action suit filed in May by shareholders Joseph Sullivan and Alan Brody. The court took the matter under advisement and did not indicate when it would issue a ruling, an attorney in the case said.

But the proposed pact has been opposed by another set of plaintiffs, who also filed a similar lawsuit in May, and by the California Public Employees Retirement System, which has joined the litigation.

CalPERS, which holds 2.4 million of the 400 million Occidental shares, filed a 40-page brief last week with the court that called the proposed settlement ''a cosmetic gesture'' that does not resolve ''claims of waste'' directed at the museum.

A special committee of Occidental directors, which approved spending the funds for the museum, has argued that the collection, which includes works by Van Gogh, Rembrandt, Rubens and Leonardo Da Vinci and has been valued up to $400 million, will provide goodwill for the company.

Despite the suits, Occidental has been going ahead with the construction of the museum at a site adjacent to its headquarters in the upscale Westwood area of Los Angeles, with a planned opening set for late this year.

The company has declined comment on the litigation.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Jesse Jackson, who two weeks ago claimed he and Democratic moderates were at peace, attacked that faction Wednesday, claiming it had a ''perverted view'' of the party's tradition.

The liberal preacher and twice-failed presidential candidate, in a speech marking the 22nd anniversary of the murder of Martin Luther King Jr., bitterly charged that it was inconsistent for the moderates to call for equal opportunities, but not necessarily equal outcomes, for all Americans.

The object of Jackson's attack was the Democratic Leadership Council, an organization of party moderates and conservatives.

At the group's annual meeting two weeks ago in New Orleans, it issued a broad declaration of goals, including the statement: ''We believe the promise of America is equal opportunity, not equal outcomes.''

Even though he is far more liberal than the group, Jackson addressed the organization in New Orleans and claimed that the two sides were at peace and that party moderates were moving toward his views.

However, many of the moderates took issue with Jackson's interpretation and the fiery civil rights leader Wednesday made it clear he was not on their side.

''The Democratic Leadership Council said in their New Orleans Declaration that they stood for 'equal opportunity' but not for 'equal results.' They quoted the names of FDR, Truman, Kennedy and LBJ who, they said, stood in that tradition of the Democratic Party as well,'' Jackson said Wednesday.

''I think that's a perverted view of that tradition,'' he charged.

''To say you stand for equal opportunity, but not for equal results is either a non sequitur, or a statement based on racist or sexist assumptions,'' he added.

DEERFIELD, Ill. (APRIL 5) UPI - Baxter International Inc. said Wednesday it will close or sell 31 plants and eliminate some 6,400 jobs under a restructuring plan to reduce overhead and improve cash flow and earnings.

Baxter Chairman Vernon R. Loucks Jr. said the company plans to consolidate or close 21 manufacturing plants and reduce its administrative staff at corporate headquarters and elsewhere. In total, Loucks said, Baxter's worldwide workforce of 64,300 will be reduced by about 10 percent.

He said the company also plans to get out of several marginal businesses which have annual sales totaling about $140 million.

''These decisions are in the best interest of all of our constituencies,'' Loucks said. ''The affected plant communities and employees will receive advance notification and employees whose jobs are being eliminated will receive a range of benefits, including severance pay and outplacement assistance.

He did not specify which plants would be closed.

''This is a carefully considered redeployment of human and capital resources consistent with the stretegic direction we have been pursuing since the acquisition of American Hospital Supply Corp. in 1985 and Caremark in 1987,'' Loucks said.

''Baxter must keep evolving to help its customers meet their objective of providing high quality health care while controlling costs,'' he said.

The company said the restructuring will improve the cost structure of its hospital supply and medical specialties businesses and decentralize corporate functions.

Baxter also plans to establish a separate subsidiary for its diagnostics products business, and has hired First Boston Corp. to assist in evaluating ways to enhance that business segment.

The company said the restructuring will result in a pre-tax charge of $566 million against first quarter earnings. As a result, Baxter expects to post a loss of $1.50 to $1.60 a share for the quarter.

However, the company said the moves will result in annual pre-tax savings increasing to approximately $275 million by 1993.

It said operating income for the full year is expected to increase at least 15 percent, despite a projected earnings decline of about 15 percent in the first quarter.

The company said it believes the restructuring will allow it to achieve annual growth of 15 percent to 18 percent for the next several years, as well as significantly improved cash flow and a better return on shareholders' equity.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - President Bush said Wednesday that ''prejudice and racial tensions still exist in America,'' but predicted that ''the day will come - and it is not far off'' when a black man or woman will be elected president.

Switching his sights to Africa, Bush also declared ''we can take hope that the age of apartheid is nearing a close'' in South Africa.

The president made the remarks in an address prepared for delivery at a 20th anniversary dinner of the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, and he repeatedly invoked the name and spirit of Abraham Lincoln, who freed the slaves more than a century ago.

''It is said that Lincoln's hand shook as he diped his quill into the ink well before he signed the Emancipation Proclamation,'' Bush said. ''Perhaps he felt the weight of history. Perhaps he was weary.

''In any event, he waited a moment to steady his hand so that no one would think he wavered on such an important decision,'' Bush said. ''Through the vision of one man, millions were freed.''

Bush said, ''The day will come - and it is not far off - when the legacy of Lincoln will finally be fulfilled at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue - when a black man or woman will sit in the Oval Office. ... When that day comes, the most remarkable thing about it will be how naturally it occurs. He or she will be another president, another traveler in the continuum of freedom, representing all the people of America.''

Bush praised the progress that blacks have made in being elected to public office in the past two decades.

''But I also know that prejudice and racial tensions still exist in America,'' he said, renewing his promise to use his office as a ''bully pulpit to condemn in the strongest terms racism, bigotry and hate.''

Turning his attention to South Africa, Bush said, ''The state of emergency must end and political prisoners must be released. Most of all, there must be an end to the cycle of violence,''

Bush added that both sides have failed - the government with apartheid policies and the opponents by violent attacks inside South Africa.

''I will spare no effort to bring about positive change in South Africa,'' he said.

Bush enjoys a high approval rating among blacks - close to 60 percent, according to the White House. This is in sharp contrast to popularity among minorities of President Ronald Reagan, who got less than 10 percent of the black vote.

Russell Owens, a director at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Research, said, ''Blacks perceive this administration as much more gentle and caring about issues facing black America than the Reagan administration was.''

''We have seen this president make an attempt to reach out to black leaders. Something the former administration never did,'' Owens said. ''Still, a lot of blacks are withholding judgment. A lot of Bush's support is soft.''

Bush's speech came just hours after a Senate panel approved a bill that would overturn 1989 Supreme Court rulings that civil rights advocates said made it harder for minorities and women to prove job discrimination. He did not mention the legislation in his speech.

Bush opposes the proposed Civil Rights Act of 1990, saying it could lead to hiring quotas, and has instead proposed his own legislation that critics say would provide inadequate protection.

Owens said Bush's approval rating among blacks may shift depending on whether he remains opposed to the Civil Rights Act of 1990. ''This could be the first big rest,'' he said.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 5) UPI - A Superior Court judge issued a preliminary order Wednesday barring American Continental Corp., parent of Lincoln Savings and Loan, from selling securities that may be fraudulent.

Judge David P. Yaffe issued his order after hearing arguments from attorneys for the state Department of Corporations and American Continental.

Under the order, American Continental - which has been under bankruptcy protection since April 1989 - also is forbidden from offering and selling unapproved securities, making false filings with state regulators or advertising any securities offerings without gaining approval from the corporations department.

The preliminary order marks the first time a court ''finally has said that it considers the marketing of those bonds ... to have been fraudulent,'' said George Crawford, a Department of Corporations attorney.

Crawford was referring to Yaffe's comment that there has been ''an abundant showing that (American Continental) has in the past engaged in violations'' of California's corporations code.

The order came in a lawsuit filed March 1 by the department against American Continental, Chairman Charles H. Keating Jr., and two other officers.

The suit accused the defendants of fraudulent misrepresentation and fraudulent sale of securities to more than 23,000 investors who bought uninsured, now-worthless debentures issued by American Continental from December 1986 to April 1989.

As much as $250 million was allegedly lost in the bond-selling scam, according to the Department of Corporation's lawsuit, which seeks a civil injunction and restitution for bondholders, who contend they were not told the debentures were uninsured.

Federal regulators seized Lincoln last April, a day after Phoenix-based American Continental filed for bankruptcy protection. Bailing out Lincoln is expected to cost taxpayers $2 billion, making it the costliest thrift cleanup ever.

During Wednesday's hearing, American Continental's attorney, James H. Berry Jr., argued that ''nothing can happen as far as American Continental is concerned'' without the prior approval of the bankruptcy court.

The filing of a bankruptcy action ordinarily halts other legal actions, but there are some exceptions under state law. One of those exceptions, Crawford successfully argued, is when governmental agencies are carrying out their regulatory functions.

No order was issued against Keating and the other officers because Yaffe decided they had not been properly notified.

Crawford, however, said the Department of Corporations can - and probably will - file papers asking the court to issue the same preliminary orders against them as well.

Crawford said after Wednesday's hearing that he is optimistic Yaffe's preliminary order will help investors who have filed two civil actions to recover their money.

''We're looking at a cumulative effect. ... We hope this will be one of a series of steps in obtaining justice'' for the investors, Crawford added.

BOULDER, CO (APRIL 4) UPI - Police said Wednesday a plane crash that killed two people earlier this week may have been a murder-suicide perpetrated by the passenger in the twin-engine Cessna.

David Grimm, police spokesman, said local authorities have asked the National Transportation Safety Board for permission to take control of the crash site.

''We are investigating it now as a probable murder-suicide,'' Grimm said.

The pilot, Bill Layne, 56, of Aurora, and a passenger died Sunday when their twin-engine Cessna 421 Golden Eagle crashed into a residential neighborhood in southwest Boulder.

The crash destroyed several outbuildings and garages and one vacant home. A man who thrown 40 feet out of his garage by the impact suffered a broken hip.

Grimm said the passenger was tentatively identified as Gordon Larry Hood, 45. He said Hood originally was from the Atlanta area but had lived in Denver for some time.

Grimm said investigators have been unable to locate any of Hood's relatives. But he said authorities contacted two ''friends and associates'' of Hood's who live out of state and both reported that the man was suicidal.

''The sources told us there were indications made to them that Mr. Hood was potentially contemplating suicide, and in a manner similar to what occurred,'' Grimm said.

Ruth Loftus of Indianapolis, a friend of Hood's, said Hood told her in December he was going to kill himself by hiring an airplane and overpowering the pilot.

Loftus said Hood told her he had an inoperable brain tumor.

''He showed me on a piece of paper what he was going to do. He showed me how he was going to kill himself. He said that he was going to get a pilot out of Colorado, take him up in the plane ... he was going to hit him with a blunt instrument and they would go down and they both would be dead,'' Loftus said.

Loftus said she told the story to Atlanta police and to an Atlanta newspaper reporter in January.

Witnesses reported that the plane approached Boulder from the west and was flying very low and at high speed. Several witnesses said the plane appeared to be out of control.

Grimm said the most likely scenario is that Hood wrestled control of the plane from Layne, causing it to crash. He said Hood may have shot or otherwise injured Layne and no possibilities are being dismissed.

''Was the pilot overpowered, was the pilot shot, was the pilot stabbed, we just don't know,'' he said. ''The most likely scenario is that there was a struggle, not necessarily a physical struggle between Hood and the pilot, but a struggle for control of the plane.''

Grimm said there is no evidence that Hood knew Layne before chartering the plane.

''As far as we can tell, the pilot just happens to be the unfortunate person that got hired that day,'' he said.

The plane had landed at Granby and crashed while enroute back to Denver. Witnesses saw Hood enter the Granby post office carrying a briefcase and authorities speculated he mailed something.

''He clearly mailed something, small packages or letters,'' Grimm said. ''Those should start being received soon. Anyone who receives mail from Mr. Hood, we would like them to contact the police because we need that information. It could help us.''

(APRIL 4) UPI - Arafat, Carter and French President Mitterrand talk about Mideast peace... Israel close to a new government... U-S House asks Soviets to negotiate with Lithuania. U-P-I has it all, next:

Former President Jimmy Carter is meeting with P-L-O leader Yasser Arafat and French President Mitterrand at the Elysee Palace in Paris to discuss the Mideast peace process.

Carter and Arafat arrived separately at the palace for the meeting, which officials say will focus on efforts to break the Middle East stalemate.

It's Carter's first-ever meeting with Arafat, and it drew protests from a Jewish group. The Representative Council of Jewish Institutions in France wants to know why Carter agreed to meet with Arafat.

Diplomatic sources say Carter is acting as an unofficial representative of Secretary of State Baker, who wants to get peace talks started between the Israelis and Palestinians.

Carter toured Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Israel last month and criticized Israel for its methods of suppressing the Palestinian uprising.

It looks as though two weeks of intense political bargaining have paid off for Israel's Labor Party leader.

Army Radio says Shimon Peres told Israeli President Chaim Herzog today that he has enough support to form Israel's new government.

The announcement came after Peres signed an agreement with a Parliament member who broke away from the right-wing Likud Party. Peres has been lobbying for the support of a five-member breakaway faction of Likud to garner enough support to win a vote of confidence in Israel's Knesset, or parliament.

Army Radio says Peres has asked for a meeting of the Knesset to get a vote of confidence.

Herzog last month asked Peres to form a new government after the government of Prime Minister Shamir fell in a NO-confidence vote.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 5) UPI - Rockwell International Corp. announced

Wednesday it has moved its controversial work with nuclear materials from its Santa Susana field laboratory to the University of Missouri, Columbia.

The decision was welcomed by anti-nuclear activists who have long fought Rockwell's work at the facility, where nuclear fuel rods were dismantled for a number of years, creating, they contended, a potential for radioactive contamination. About 500,000 people live within 10 miles of the facility.

The move comes about seven months before Rockwell had promised to stop operations at the ''hot lab'' at its Rocketdyne facility in the Simi Hills northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

''We are delighted that Rockwell has finally seen reality,'' said Mary Nichols, a senior attorney with the Natural Resources Defense Council in Los Angeles. ''The Rocketdyne facility is not an appropriate place to be handling nuclear materials.''

Rockwell said the research project - a joint U.S.-Japan project aimed at demonstrating a new technique for radioactive waste disposal - will now be conducted under contract to Rocketdyne. The contract has been signed jointly by the Missouri University Research Reactor, the nation's largest university research reactor, and the Colleges of Engineering and Arts and Sciences.

The research project is called TRUMP-S, or Transuranic Management by Proportionating-Separation.

Rockwell spokesman Patrick Coulter said the only work at the ''hot lab'' in recent years has involved decommissioning and decontaminating the facility. Coulter said the facility had stopped dismantling nuclear fuel for the federal Energy Department's weapons programs in 1986.

But Rockwell had asked last year for a 10-year extension of its license from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, a move that generated strong opposition from local homeowners and anti-nuclear activists.

The company amended its license request last October, saying it would seek only a one-year extension to operate the facility until this October. Rockwell Chairman Donald Beall promised at the company's annual meeting in February that Rockwell would not perform nuclear materials work at the facility after October.

But activists had opposed even the one-year extension of the license and cited reports of contamination at the facility. The Energy Department released its own report in November outlining a $34 million five-year plan to remove contaminated soil in the area by 1992 and contaminated buildings by 1995.

Rockwell said Wednesday that because of the transfer of the program, it had filed a motion with the NRC to terminate the on-going hearings on the license renewal.

Coulter said that about a half-dozen employees would be affected by the transfer of the work. He also said the move would have no effect on the principal work of testing rocket engines at the Rocketdyne facility.

(APRIL 4) UPI - The House today approved a NON-binding resolution calling on the Soviet Union to negotiate with Lithuania on its drive for independence.

The resolution also urges the Soviets to refrain from ''acts of political, military and economic intimidation'' against Lithuania.

The resolution passed 416-3. Sponsors say it voices congressional support for Lithuanian independence, while still acknowledging the implications for U-S-Soviet relations.

Lithuania is at the top of the agenda for talks in Washington this afternoon between Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze.

Earlier today, Baker said he was encouraged by yesterday's talks in Moscow between Lithuanian leaders and a top aide to Soviet President Gorbachev GOHRB'-ah-chawf.

On the negative side, Moscow closed the border between Lithuania and Poland and barred foreign visitors from entering the Baltic republic.

Leaders of the seven East German political parties are meeting behind the scenes in East Berlin today to try to form a broad-based coalition government.

The liberal Social Democrats say they trust the leader of the conservative Christian Democratic Union will build a positive government. Lothar de Maizaiere... who led the C-D-U to victory in the March 18 elections... will most likely head the coalition government as prime minister.

The liberals' main worry is the German Social Union.

The Social Democrats had vowed during the campaign NOT to work with the arch-conservative group. But the two parties have agreed to settle their differences away from the main coalition talks to avoid disrupting the proceedings.

The second round of coalition negotiations are scheduled to begin tonight.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan surprised fellow members of the National AIDS Commission Wednesday by apparently abandoning support for a bill giving him power to lift travel restrictions on AIDS-infected foreigners.

An HHS spokesman, who asked not to be named, said Sullivan does not back a new bill aimed at eliminating the AIDS-related travel restrictions that may spur international boycotts of medical meetings hosted by the United States.

''At this time, we do not support the legislation. It is in the review process,'' the spokesman said Wednesday evening. He offered no explanation for Sullivan's position, but added the lack of support could not be equated with a neutral stance.

The bill, introduced Wednesday by Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., would give the health secretary power to decide what contagious diseases, like AIDS and infectious tuberculosis, would be grounds for barring a foreign visitor from the United States.

The secretary made such decisions until 1987, when Congress passed legislation requiring that foreigners infected with the AIDS virus be forbidden from entering the country.

Rowland, who also is a member of the AIDS commission, had previously received indications from high-level HHS officials that they agreed with his legislation, said Selby McCash, an aide to the congressman. The Georgia Democrat, who is a physician, ''would like to know the reasons'' for the department's apparent policy switch, McCash said.

''This bill would simply put authority back in the hands of the Secretary of Health and Human Services to decide which infectious diseases pose a threat to public health and therefore should go on the exclusion list,'' McCash said.

In addition to travelers, the proposed move could also apply to AIDS-infected foreigners seeking to immigrate to the United States, McCash said.

Currently, visitors to the United Stats are required to state whether or not they are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus or HIV, which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome. HIV-infected pople can obtain waivers allowing them to visit the United States for 30 days.

Activists who object to the restrictive policy have vowed to shun the Sixth International AIDS Conference in San Francisco in June and the International Hemophilia Congress in Washington in August.

Groups threatening to boycott the meetings include the British Red Cross, International Planned Parenthood Foundation and the U.S. National Gay and Lesbian Task Forces.

Earlier this year, the Bush administration ordered the Immigration and Naturlization Service to stop its practice of marking the passports of AIDS-infected travelers, and pledged to speed up granting of travel waivers for conferences. But administration officials have said the 1987 law prohibits them from totally lifting AIDS-related travel restrictions.

Dr. June Osborn, chairman of the AIDS commission, Wednesday said she would be surprised if Sullivan failed to stand behind Rowland's legislation, which the 12 voting members of her panel have strongly endorsed. Sullivan, along with the Secretary of Defense and Secretary of Veterans Affairs, are non-voting members of the commission created by Congress to oversee the nation's fight against the deadly epidemic.

''The executive branch said it needed legislative help to resolve this issue, and the introduction of the legislation is that final, mising step. I would think it would deserve strong support from everyone. It reaffirms the authority long invested in the Secretary of Health and Human Services '' said Osborn, who is dean of the University of Michigan School of Public Health.

(APRIL 4) UPI - The U-S-backed Salvadoran government and the leftist rebels that have waged a 10-year civil war have agreed to another round of peace talks.

The Secretary General of the United Nations announced the agreement in Geneva today after holding separate talks with the rebels and the government. The location of the talks was NOT disclosed. They begin the first week of May.

Both sides earlier signed a U-N-sponsored agreement to negotiate a peace accord with an end to fighting as the first objective.

The accord does NOT mean an immediate cease-fire.

The F-M-L-N rebels may have been motivated to accept the new peace effort because of the recent electoral defeat of their biggest supporter... Nicaragua's Sandinista-led government.

South African black leader Nelson Mandela denies rumors of a split in the African National Congress. He says unity in the A-N-C has NEVER been stronger.

Mandela won't say what issues he will raise with de Klerk tomorrow. But he lashed out for a second day at Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok for the perceived support by police of the rival Zulu Inkatha movement.

Mandela says his supporters in Natal are so afraid of police that they would prefer to see the army keeping order.

(APRIL 4) UPI - One of the great voices of the jazz world has fallen silent. Sarah Vaughan died last night in her home near Los Angeles at the age of 66 after a battle with lung cancer.

Trumpet great Dizzy Gillespie, who performed with Vaughan on the New York club scene in the late 1940's, says- ''There will NEVER be another one like Sarah Vaughan, with her musicality, presentation knowledge.''

Fellow jazz singer Helen Merrill calls Vaughan ''the greatest jazz singer that the world of music ever produced.'' Merrill adds that Vaughan- ''was blessed with an instrument that allowed her to convey all of her musical thoughts.''

Vaughan recorded her share of jazz classics, including ''Don't Blame Me'' and ''I Cover The Waterfront.'' Her first hit, ''It's Magic,'' sold more than two-Million records.

Her most popular songs included her versions of ''Misty,'' ''Perdido'' and ''Send In the Clowns,'' which served as her usual concert-closing encore.

Vaughan's most recent recent top-selling recording was a Latin album, ''Brazilian Romances,'' recorded in 1988.

Ryan White remains in critical condition at a hospital in Indianapolis, battling a respiratory infection that doctors say is his worst since he contracted AIDS more than five years ago.

The 18-year-old White is heavily sedated and on a respirator at Riley Hospital for Children. His doctors say they are hopeful he can pull through, but they cautioned against being too optimistic.

Dr. Martin Kleiman says- ''it is NOT beyond reason'' that White could recover from this infection.

White picked up the AIDS virus in 1984 during treatment for his hemophilia. He gained national attention in the mid-1980's when he and his mother fought for his right to attend school near Kokomo, Indiana. He won that right in 1986 after a year-long court battle.

OTTAWA (APRIL 5) UPI - The vice president of Lithuania's parliament began a hasty trip to North America Wednesday to drum up Western support for the secession-minded Soviet republic's independence movement.

Bronius Kuzmickas, a founder of the Lithuanian independence movement, told reporters in Ottawa that such recognition is ''very important,'' although he understood that a state that declares its independence could not be recognized ''the following day.''

The Canadian government has been unwilling to arrange a meeting with Kuzmickas, who planned to spend several days in Ottawa and Toronto and is eager for meetings with U.S. and Canadian officials.

''Every country which gets back its independence should be recognized by (other) countries,'' Kuzmickas said at a Lithuanian community dinner.

He said Western democracies might be more willing to recognize Lithuania formally once the republic has cemented the structure of its new government.

''We already have formed the ministers' cabinet, and if our peaceful attempts to build a government go on, the West will see it is proper and right for them to recognze us,'' he said.

Kuzmickas said formal international recognition of Lithuanian independence would help force the Kremlin to negotiate with Lithuanian officials.

''It would have a positive effect because the world is interconnected and the public opinion of the world affects all governments including that of the Soviet Union,'' he said.

The Lithuanians would prefer recognition by the United States, whose opinion, Kuzmickas said, ''has very great importance in the entire world.''

Kuzmickas said Lithuania is grateful for the response so far from the United States, especially its insistence that Moscow use no military force.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 4) UPI - A federal jury found a Rhode Island woman guilty Wednesday of conspiring to violate export laws by trying to ship $50 million worth of missile guidance parts to South Africa.

Maryanne Callaghan, 40, who was found guilty in U.S. District Court of three counts of conspiracy, faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison and up to $1.5 million in fines. She is scheduled to be sentenced May 18.

Callaghan and several co-conpirators were indicted on three counts of conspiracy to violate the Arms Export Control Act and a 1986 ban on military trade with South Africa.

''This case demonstrates our commitment to prosecute those who engage in international schemes designed to violate the national security of our nation,'' said U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens.

Callaghan, of Warwick, R.I., was involved in an elaborate scheme to ship military gyrosopes to a South African company. A group of men used forged documents, false Israeli companies and offshore bank accounts to try and circumvent federal exporting laws, Stephens said.

When those efforts failed, they allegedly recruited Callaghan to help them. Evidence showed the group discussed sending $50 million worth of gyroscopes used in missle guidance systems.

Callaghan argued that she was duped by her South African business partner and that she knew nothing of the scheme. She said she never actually shipped any gyroscopes to South Africa.

Callaghan was arrested by U.S. Customs agents in a sting operation in November 1988. Callaghan ran LCR Capacitors in Rhode Island, which exported computers and other high technology hardware to South Africa.

Two other defendants, Frank J.Randazzo and Symone Morris Behrmann, have entered guilty pleas in the case and are scheduled to be sentenced before a federal judge on April 20. Two others, Guy Perfezou and George Lester Buckingham Talbot, are fugitives and are believed to be living in South Africa.

A new study says bacteria found in uncooked pig intestines or so-called ''chitlins'' can cause diarrhea. The bacteria was the cause of fever and diarrhea in 14 babies in the Atlanta area about a year ago. Infants come in contact with the bacteria when adults are cleaning or preparing the uncooked food and handling the infants at the same time.

(APRIL 4) UPI - News from around the world and across the nation... the latest details and developments from United Press International.

A spokswoman for the Senate Appropriations Committee says Congress will miss the Thursday deadline set by President Bush for passing an aid bill for Nicaragua and Panama.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says he still has ''high hopes'' Congress will send Bush the bill Thursday before it starts a two-week Easter recess.

But Marsha Berry says her committee doesn't have the time. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell wants to amend the bill.

Legislators already have cut the amount of aid destined for Panama from 500-Million dollars to 420-Million dollars... along with 300-Million dollars for Nicaragua.

But, despite the cuts and an extra one-point-five-BILLION dollars in domestic spending Bush didn't want... the president still supports the bill.

Mitchell says Republicans are trying to stop him from bringing the bill to the floor.

The Soviet Union is applying the same firm stand against Estonia that it's using against Lithuania.

President Gorbachev warned Estonia today to annul its declaration of secession from the Soviet Union.

Estonian President Ruutel confirmed today that he received the warning during what he described as a ''long telephone conversation'' with Gorbachev.

Estonia and Lithuania were both annexed by the U-S-S-R as a provision of the 1940 non-aggression pact with Nazi Germany.

In Lithuania, President Landsbergis delivered a hopeful message to the state parliament today following his talks with a high-ranking Soviet official yesterday.

Landsbergis told the parliament ''a dialogue is already taking place.''

But the Lithuanian parliament refused to moderate its stand in favor of secession, issuing a resolution today that gave public warning that the state government is in danger of being overthrown.

(APRIL 4) UPI - Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi is said to be calling for freedom for the Western hostages held in Lebanon.

Tripoli Radio reports that Gadhafi says the hostages should be freed to mark the Moslem month of fasting, Ramadan.

Gadhafi is quoted as saying... ''Islamic values call for the hnncring of human dignity.''

It's NOT known what effect Gadhafi's statement will have in Lebanon, where 18 Westerners are held hostage- eight of them U-S citizens. And it's NOT known what prompted the statement from the extremist Libyan leader.

But the White House was quick to welcome the message today. Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said- quote- ''Sometimes you get support from strange quarters, and this is certainly one of those.''

Timothy Ryan overcame sharp Democratic criticism to win Senate approval today as the nation's top savings-and-loan regulator.

The 44-year-old former Labor Department attorney had admitted to casual use of marijuana and experimenting with cocaine in the early '70's... and also confirmed he had little experience in the thrifts industry.

Ryan's drug admissions did NOT hurt his nomination. Michigan Democrat Donald Riegle spoke for the body when he said the issue should play NO part in the senate's decision.

But Ryan's inexperience was the frequent target of Democratic critics. Illinois Senator Alan Dixon said he had nothing against Ryan on a personal level, but that- in his words- ''he isn't the man for the job.'' Dixon said Ryan was confirmed ''because we couldn't find anybody.''

Ryan's nomination to head the Office of Thrift Supervision- the agency charged with the thrift bailout- passed on a 62-37 vote.

(APRIL 4) UPI - The Nicaraguan Contras say they're sticking to a deal they made with the incoming government of President-elect Chamorro ... regardless of a new edict from Central American presidents.

The presidents of Guatemala, Honduras, Costa Rica, El Salvador and Nicaraguan outgoing President Ortega say the Contras must begin disbanding immediately and be finished when Chamorro takes office April 25th.

Five-thousand Contras already have returned from Honduras and at least 80 have turned over their weapons to Honduran authorities.

But the rebels say they're NOT required to start turning over weapons until April 18th and their target goal for fully demobilizing is April 25th when Chamorro takes office.

They say today's declaration by the five presidents will NOT change their plans.

An attorney for Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi tried to distance the former multi-Millionaire from his co-defendant Imelda Marcos today in an opening statement at their trial in New York City.

The attorney portrayed Khashoggi as a dupe of the Marcoses, going so far as to call the financier ''dumb'' for befriending the couple.

Ferdinand Marcos was said to have told Khashoggi of ''a ship of gold'' he hoped to send out of the Philippines for his own use. He supposedly sought Khashoggi's help.

Said the attorney... ''This guy fell for it.''

But he maintained that Khashoggi never actually helped the Marcoses.

Imelda Marcos is facing charges of racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice in the alleged scam to direct government money from the Philippines into New York real-estate holdings.

Khashoggi is charged with fraud and obstruction of justice.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Several celebrated trial lawyers will show court reporters here Saturday how US Sprint's videoconferencing network can save time and money for attorneys and the legal community.

This new application will be demonstrated through US Sprint's ''Meeting Channel,'' the world's largest videoconferencing network, which is connecting to the National Shorthand Reporters Association Annual Spring Seminar at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, Saturday, April 7.

Using a videoconference network for depositions whenever possible can eliminate the extraordinary travel expenses associated with taking depositions.

Toward that effort, a national video network linking 17 court reporting firms in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and other cities will be in place this month, according to H. Allen Benowitz, president of Legal Image

Network Communications (LINC).

The LINC debut will be spotlighted with a coast-to-coast demonstration featuring trial lawyers such as Melvin Belli in San Francisco, Richard Gregorie in Miami, and F. Lee Bailey in Palm Beach on Saturday, Benowitz said.

Legal Image Network Communications utilizes the fiber-optic network technology of US Sprint, along with its public videoconference rooms in those cities where the court reporter network does not yet have its own videoconference room.

US Sprint is a unit of United Telecommunications Inc., a diversified international telecommunications company headquartered in Kansas City, Mo.

CHICAGO (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Kemper Financial Services Inc. (KFS) has introduced the Kemper Environmental Services Fund, a mutual fund that allows investors to participate in what may be one of the fastest growing opportunities of the 1990s.

The Kemper Environmental Services Fund seeks to provide long-term capital appreciation by investing primarily in a portfolio of equity security issuers that are positioned to benefit from increasing governmental regulation and corporate spending on the environment, particularly in activities such as solid waste management, recycling, hazardous waste treatment, pollution control and environmental technology.

The Kemper Environmental Services Fund minimum investment is $1,000, or $250 for an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Other features include the ability to exchange into any of the other Kemper Mutual Funds without charge, the ability to automatically invest dividends without charge -- subject to certain limitations described in the prospectus -- and redemption of shares on any business day at the then current net asset value.

The exchange privilege is subject to modification, suspension or termination by the fund. The Fund will be offered until May 17, 1990, after which the Fund will not be available for sale to new investors until after Jan. 1, 1991.

KFS is the Fund's investment manager, and currently has more than $56 billion in assets under management.

For a Kemper Environmental Services Fund prospectus containing more complete information, including management fees and expenses, please write Kemper Financial Services Inc., Mutual Fund Department, 120 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, IL 60603.

Investors should read the prospectus carefully before investing or sending money. A registration statement relating to these securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission but has not yet become effective. These securities may not be sold nor may offers to buy be accepted prior to the time the registration statement becomes effective.

This communication shall not constitute an offer to sell or the solicitation of an offer to buy nor shall there be any sale of these securities in any State in which such offer, solicitation, or sale would be unlawful prior to registration or qualification under the securities law of any State.

IRVINE, CA (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Cliff Piscitelli, president, and Wendell Shirk, executive vice president, Farwest Residential Services, have announced a new department and appointment.

''We have recently established the department of creative marketing and development. Our full-service mortgage banking company seeks to constantly improve and grow as a service to our clients. Our continuing purpose is to develop fresh marketing ideas for our products, improve communications, and be sensitive to our customer base,'' Shirk said.

Gene Oliver has been appointed as director of creative marketing and development. Shirk said, ''Gene's 14 years experience in the industry has covered real estate sales, loan officer, loan branch manager (sales and operations), regional multi-state supervision, sales motivation and training.

''With his varied experience, we believe he can be sensitive to all areas of our company, our realtor clients and our borrowers. His talents in public speaking, sales and motivational training will be utilized inside and outside our company.

''This development is consistent with our company's continuing attitude of 'full-service' mortgage banking. Not only do we wish to offer consistent quality loan programs, we want a department which stays in touch with communications and customer needs.''

Farwest Residential Services is a full-service direct lender with a servicing portfolio of $1.65 billion. BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Litton's Applied Technology division in San Jose has been awarded $10.8 million by the U.S. Air Force for continued production of AN/ALR-69 airborne threat warning receiver systems.

Production options could raise the total contract value to $20.4 million.

The Litton division will produce the systems for U.S. Air Force F-16 aircraft and for U.S. government sales to other nations. Deliveries under this contract are scheduled to begin in June 1991 and continue through September 1992.

Applied Technology has been producing ALR-69 systems for the U.S. and other countries for 12 years under previously awarded contracts.

The system provides threat warning for air crews by a cockpit alert that they are being illuminated by hostile radar. Using advanced receiver and computer technology, the system detects and analyzes the radar signals and rapidly displays identification which permits pilots to take evasive action and employ electronic countermeasures against the threat.

Litton is a technology-based company providing advanced electronic and defense systems, resource exploration services and industrial automation systems for U.S. and world markets.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - AIFS Inc. (ASE/PSE:AIF), an international educational services company, Thursday announced that it has signed a memorandum of understanding with the attorneys for the class action plaintiffs in litigation against the company and its directors in the Delaware courts, entitled Kennard, et al. v. AIFS, Inc., C.A.No.10303 (Del. Ch.) and Shields v. AIFS,Inc.,et al., C.A.No.11406 (Del. Ch.).

The litigation seeks to enjoin the proposed buy-out of the public stockholders of AIFS at $6.50 per share by a management buy-out group led by Roger O. Walther, president and chief executive officer.

The understanding reached with the attorneys would settle all claims asserted by plaintiffs, or which could have been asserted by plaintiffs, without the admission of any liability on the part of AIFS or its directors. The terms of the settlement confirmed the $6.50 per share price previously announced.

The settlement it subject to additional discovery by the plaintiffs' attorneys, to the execution of a definitive settlement agreement setting forth the substance of the memorandum of understanding, to court approval of the settlement agreement, and to the consummation of the transactions contemplated by the buy-out agreement.

Walther stated that the buy-out group was pleased that this litigation was now well on its way to resolution.

AIFS Inc. designs, markets and operates educational and cultural programs world-wide. The company, through its operating subsidiaries, provides opportunities for American college and high school students to study and travel abroad and brings foreign youths to the United States on a variety of cultural exchanges.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (NYSE:AHM), parent company of Home Savings of America, announced Thursday the election of Charles R. Rinehart to the company's board of directors.

Rinehart, who joined Ahmanson as president in December of 1989, was also appointed chief operating officer of Ahmanson and Home Savings of America.

Prior to joining Ahmanson, Rinehart was president and chief executive officer of Avco Financial Services. Before joining Avco in 1983 as president, he was an executive vice president at Fireman's Fund Insurance Co., a subsidiary of American Express Co., with responsibility for the company's field operations, sales and distribution systems.

Rinehart, 42, received his bachelor's degree in mathematics from the University of San Francisco in 1968. He was a Second Lieutenant with the 82nd Airborne Division in the U.S. Army from 1968 to 1969. He is a member of the American Academy of Actuaries and a Fellow in the Casualty Actuarial Society.

HOUSTON (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Browning-Ferris Industries Inc. (NYSE:BFI) announced Thursday that it will withdraw from the hazardous waste collection, treatment and disposal business.

Under a plan approved by the Board of Directors today, the company will incur a one-time aftertax charge of $295 million, or $1.93 per share, net of anticipated proceeds from the sale of hazardous waste assets and operations. The provision will be included in the results for the second quarter of fiscal 1990, expected to be released later this month.

The provision consists of a writedown of the company's hazardous waste assets and the immediate recognition of future closure and postclosure expenses of certain disposal sites, as well as other items associated with this decision.

William D. Ruckelshaus, chairman and chief executive officer, said: ''While we are confident that the substantial investments we have made in people and capital to get CECOS back on track would have eventually paid off, we feel that our resources are better directed in the future toward developing opportunities in our core solid waste business.

''The future prospects of our core solid waste collection and disposal business are extremely attractive. Recycling, medical waste collection and disposal, industrial solid waste disposal and international growth are business areas of great promise that we are pursuing aggressively.''

The hazardous waste business, which represented only 2 percent of revenues has suffered operating losses for the past year and a half, caused by a significant decline in disposal revenues together with a rapid escalation in operating expenses to maintain both active and inactive disposal sites.

The decline in disposal revenue is largely attributable to the inability of the CECOS land disposal sites in Ohio and New York to obtain permits for new hazardous waste disposal capacity. At the same time, capital costs to develop and maintain these hazardous waste disposal sites have increased substantially in recent years to meet new federal and state regulatory requirements.

The hazardous waste business will be reported in the company's financial statements as discontinued operations. Assets in the company's hazardous waste business include primarily the hazardous waste collection and treatment operations of BFI Environmental Systems Inc. and hazardous waste disposal operations of CECOS International Inc., both wholly owned subsidiaries of BFI.

The immediate negative impact on stockholders' equity caused by this non-cash charge will be offset by future growth in the company's core business and by the elimination of continuing losses in the discontinued hazardous waste business.

Browning-Ferris Industries Inc. is one of the largest publicly held companies engaged primarily in providing waste services.

HOUSTON (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of National Convenience Stores Inc. (NYSE: NCS) Thursday approved a new Shareholder Rights Plan and redeemed the rights issued under its original rights plan adopted in June 1986.

Holders of the company's common stock of record on April 16, 1990, will receive the rights issued under the new Rights Plan and will receive, on April 23, 1990, a one-time payment of $.01 per share to redeem their rights under the previous rights plan.

The new Rights Plan dilutes the investment of certain acquirors who attempt a takover of NCS that the board believes disadvantages the remaining shareholders. The provisions of the new Rights Plan would be triggered when a person or group has acquired ownership of 10 percent or more of NCS' common stock. American Financial Corp., currently a 17.2 percent owner, is exempted unless its ownership position reaches 20 percent. When triggered, the new Rights Plan allows all shareholders, other than the person exceeding the ownership threshold, to purchase NCS common stock at a 50 percent discount.

A more complete description of the new Rights Plan will be set forth in a current report on Form 8-K to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission shortly.

SAN JOSE, CA (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Santa Clara Valley Water District began construction in April on the Mountain View Distributary.

This is a $1.8 million project, which when completed this winter, will bring treated water from the water district's Rinconada Water Treatment Plant in Los Gatos to the city of Mountain View's Municipal Water Co. and California Water Service Co. The Rinconada plant treats water from both the State Water Project and the federal Central Valley Project.

Both water sources originate from snow melt in the northeast Sierra.

A key link in the water district's in-county treated water distribution system, this project begins at the district's existing West Pipeline adjacent to Granger Avenue south of Loyola Drive. It extends 6,100 feet to the city of Mountain View's Municipal Water Co. pump station on Miramonte Avenue just north of Amalfi Way.

The project consists of a 24-inch-diameter buried pipeline, a tunnel under Foothill Expressway and underground structures to house flow regulating and metering devices.

By beginning and ending the work day in nonpeak traffic periods, the district's contractor, Mountain Cascade Inc. of San Ramon, is minimizing the impact on traffic in the construction area. At least one lane of traffic will remain open on Miramonte at all times, and though Granger will be closed periodically, signs will be posted in advance of closing and detours set up.

DALLAS (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Hallwood Energy Partners L.P. (AMEX:HEP) (the partnership) announced Thursday 1989 financial information for the partnership and certain of the 18 oil and gas programs involved in the partnership's exchange offer, and the 1989 reserve information for the partnership and all of such programs.

For 1989, the partnership reported increased revenues of approximately $13.6 million, compared with approximately $10.5 million for 1988, primarily as a result of the inclusion in 1989 of the partnership's indirect interest in the revenues from the properties controlled by Energy Development Partners Ltd. and the programs.

In 1989, the partnership recorded net income of approximately $100,000 (0 cents per unit, without giving effect to the proposed 1-for-20 reverse split of the units) compared with a net loss in 1988 of approximately $1.8 million (7 cents per unit, without giving effect to the proposed 1-for-20 reverse split).

The partnership had cash flow from operations of approximately $5.2 million for 1989 and approximately $3.8 million for 1988.

Total assets of the partnership increased to approximately $70,852,000 at Dec. 31, 1989, from approximately $27,012,000 at Dec. 31, 1988, primarily as a result of the partnership's acquisition of Quinoco Oil and Gas Inc. and Hallwood AIC Inc. Partner's equity was approximatley $17,416,000 at Dec. 31, 1989, as compared with approximately $19,392,000 at Dec. 31, 1988.

Cash flows from operations in 1989 for the Enex programs totalled approximately $4,319,000, as compared with approximately $7,043,000 in 1988.

The Enex programs' total revenues in 1989 declined to approximately $7,507,000 from approximately $9,145,000 in 1988, primarily because of a 24 percent decline in oil production, a 15 percent decline in gas production and a take-or-pay settlement of $460,351 in the first quarter of 1988. There was a net loss for 1989 of approximately $455,000, as compared with a net loss of approximately $229,000 in 1988.

Total assets of the Enex programs were approximately $43,741,000 at Dec. 31, 1989, as compared with approximately $47,433,000 at Dec. 31, 1988. Partners' equity was approximately $35,637,000 at Dec. 31, 1989, as compared with approximately $40,231,000 at Dec. 31, 1988.

Cash flow operations in 1989 for the May Programs totalled approximatley $3,889,000, as compared with approximately $1,288,000 in 1988.

The May programs' total revenues in 1989 were approximately $5,381,000 in 1989, as compared with approximately $4,089,000 in 1988.

The increase in revenue is primarily attributable to a 34 percent increase in production in 1989 over 1988. The production increase was the result of several recompletions and workovers performed during 1989, which significantly improved production on existing wells, and the elimination of balancing problems on a large well.

Total assets of the May programs were approximately $7,080,000 at Dec. 31, 1989, as compared with approximately $6,895,000 at Dec. 31, 1988. Partners' equity was approximately $6,605,000 at Dec. 31, 1989, as compared with approximately $6,726,000 at Dec. 31, 1988.

The Cliffwood programs are not required to file reports under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, and the partnership agreement of each of the Cliffwood programs requires the preparation of tax-basis financial statements.

Therefore, to save the limited partners in the Cliffwood programs the expense of preparing financial statements based on generally accepted accounting principles, each of the Cliffwood programs has prepared only tax-basis financial statements.

Based on such financial information, Cliffwood does not believe that there has been any material change in the financial condition of any of the Cliffwood programs since Sept. 30, 1989.

In addition, year-end financial information for the AIC programs is not presently available. Hallwood AIC acquired control of the AIC programs at the end of June 1989. Under a contractual arrangement with Apache, which formerly controlled the AIC programs, Apache administered the AIC programs until the end of September 1989.

Because of such change in control, Hallwood AIC was unable to obtain all of the necessary information to complete the year-end financial statements. Based on information presently available, Hallwood AIC is not aware of any material change in the financial condition of either of the AIC programs since Sept. 30, 1989. 1989 Reserve Information

The proved oil and gas reserves of the partnership, the AIC programs, the Cliffwood programs and the May programs were estimated as of Dec. 31, 1989 and the estimated future net revenues from the production and sale of oil and gas reserves and the present value thereof were computed by the general partner of each such entity and reviewed by Williamson Petroleum Consultants Inc. (Williamson).

The proved oil and gas reserves of the Enex programs and the estimated future net revenues from the production and sale of oil and gas reserves and the present value thereof were computed by Gruy Engineering Corp. (Gruy). Williamson has not conducted a revenue of the reserve estimates prepared by Gruy.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Advertising revenues at the Los Angeles Business Journal increased by 82 percent for the first quarter of 1990 compared with figures for the same quarter a year ago, according to a report released by the newspaper's publisher and president, Tom Link.

First-quarter revenues were $1.2 million, up from $695,000 during the first quarter of 1989.

As part of its growth strategy for the 1990s, Link said, the Business Journal has embarked on a new mass marketing campaign to boost its paid subscriptions.

The newspaper, which publishes 52 weekly issues annually as well as numerous special publications, last year observed its 10th year of operation. It is owned by CBJ Associates Inc., which also owns the San Diego Business Journal and the Orange County Business Journal, based in Newport Beach.

At the San Diego Business Journal advertising revenues also exceeded 1989 projections. The Orange County Business Journal, acquired by CBJ Associates last year, reported a strong showing, Link said.

MENLO PARK, CA (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Raynet Corp. Thursday announced a breakthrough in fiber optic transmission systems for local telephone networks that could significantly speed the completion of all-fiber, broadband services networks in the United States and abroad.

Raynet's new LOC-2 (Loop Optical Carrier) commercial system delivers the performance, reliability and enhanced services capability of fiber optics for the same cost as new copper telephone facilities, thereby making fiber in local telephone networks a cost-effective reality.

The LOC-2 system brings fiber to the ''local loop,'' the last mile of the telephone network between phone company central offices and subscriber homes and businesses. The LOC-2 system uses a resource-sharing architecture and a unique fiber optic coupler to eliminate the cost penalties associated with installing fiber in local telephone networks.

The system supports a variety of cable topologies to accommodate a wide range of neighborhood layouts. Supporting software makes the system operationally compatible with existing telephone networks. The system is modular, providing easy incorporation of AM video and SONET-based BISDN service capabilities as demand for them develops.

The Raynet LOC product family has been in development for over three years. Prototype systems are now operational in two field trials. The LOC-2 system will be ready for shipment to first installations in the fourth quarter of 1990.

Raynet Corp. develops, manufactures, and sells high-performance, cost-effective resource-sharing fiber optic telephone and video distribution systems for local loop applications throughout the world. Founded in 1987, Raynet is a subsidiary of Raychem Corp.

CUPERTINO, CA (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Tandem Computers Inc. (NYSE:TDM) Thursday stated that early indications for the second fiscal quarter, which ended March 31, are that the company will report revenues above the level of the previous quarter, but below the company's operating plan.

Early indications are that expense control and asset management were better than the company's expectations. However, as a result of revenues falling below the company's operating plan, the company anticipates reporting earnings below the previous quarter but above the year-ago level.

Commenting on the preliminary results, Tandem Chief Financial Officer David J. Rynne said: ''Tandem expects to report significant year-over-year revenue growth as well as sequential revenue gains. The Integrity S2 UNIX computer system, announced during the quarter, successfully began shipments to end users and partners such as Nixdorf and AT&T.

''However, the second fiscal quarter has historically been less predictable than others. We believe our business in the quarter may have been affected by possible tightening of budgets by financial institutions in the United Kingdom due to higher interest rates and downsizing of securities market volumes in the United States.

''Although the quarter was weaker than we had expected, we had several strategic successes.''

Tandem Computers Inc. manufactures and markets online computer systems and enterprise networks. The company is headquartered at Cupertino.

DENVER (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Crown Resources Corp. Thursday announced continued good drill hole results on their Crown Jewel Project in Okanogan County, Wash.

Results from an additional 40 drill holes have been received with 22 drill holes containing mineralized intercepts exceeding 10 feet grading better than 0.030 oz./ton gold.

The best result was in drill hole 190 which intersected a 20-foot upper zone grading 0.959 oz./ton gold and a 60-foot lower zone containing 0.460 oz./ton gold.

Approximately a quarter of the recent drilling has been infill drilling on 50-foot centers and the remainder has been 100-foot step-out drilling. The Crown Jewel deposit remains open with an entirely new near surface zone indicated by drill hole 200.

Crown recently granted Battle Mountain Gold Co. an option to earn a 51 percent interest in the property by paying to Crown $10 million cash and providing 100 percent funding needed to construct a minimum 3,000 ton per day milling facility by mid-1993. Battle Mountain is the operator and drilling is continuing on the 9,000-acre property.

EL SEGUNDO, CA (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Computer Sciences Corp. (CSC) (NYSE:CSC) has been selected by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) for a contract valued at $65.7 million for engineering support services.

Under the contract to be negotiated, the company will support sounding rocket, balloon and aeronautical programs and launch range projects at NASA's facility at Wallops Island, Virginia. The facility is a unit of Goddard Space Flight Center, Maryland.

The work spans a wide range of services, such as engineering, instrumentation construction, instrumentation laboratory operations, software development, computer operations and other tasks.

CSC's Applied Technology Division, with headquarters in Falls Church, Va., has provided the Wallops Island facility with these services since 1970 under prior contracts. During the last five years, the company has supported more than 100 sounding rocket launches in locations ranging from Norway to Alaska to the Marshall Islands.

The launches have involved experiments in such areas as plasma physics, galactic astronomy and upper atmospheric research.

The new contract provides for a two-year base performance period and three annual renewal options. The company values the contract at $65.7 million over five years if the agency exercises all of its options.

CSC is a major supplier of computer and communications systems and services to industry and government.

HOUSTON (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Western Resource Technologies Inc. (''Western'') is pleased to announce its first accord with the state of Texas to use its technologies to restore production to off-shore wells owned by the state.

As part of the arrangement, Western acquired five (5) state of Texas offshore leases, including wells and surface equipment, contributed by Pena Energy Inc., of Houston. Acquisition was through a Texas Land Commission lease sale arranged to test Western's technologies on offshore wells owned by the state. Western paid 100,000 shares of treasury stock valued at $2.10 (Cdn) per share.

Each of the wells has deep production from deep, geopressured gas reservoirs, so that the company's technologies, especially the Australian hydrocyclone production system, can be fully utilized to match the successes experienced in similiar wells in Louisiana offshore waters.

In the case of the Louisiana wells, over $3 million in net revenue has been realized in 18 months from wells which had either been shut in or were making so much water that they were considered to have reached the end of their economic life.

According to the company's president, Breckenridge McKinley: ''It is impossible to overstate the opportunity this represents for Western. The state of Texas has literally thousands of shut-in wells, both on and off shore, to many of which our technologies can be successfully applied.''

''Once we succeed with these first five wells, and we have every reason to believe that we will, there should be a steady source of future wells for years to come.''

In addition to revenues for its services, Western receives a 12.5 percent working interest in each well at no cost for making its technologies available.

Western Resource Technologies is a Houston-based technology company that specializes in finding and producing oil and gas which has been overlooked or deemed otherwise unproducible by the more traditional methods.

HARRISON, NY (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Melville Corp., a specialty retailer of apparel, prescription drugs, health and beauty aids, footwear, toys and household furnishings, Thursday reported retail store sales for the fiscal month and three month periods ended March 31.

Sales for the five week and three month periods ended March 31, are not comparable to sales for the same periods in 1989. Sales were adversely impacted by the important Palm and Easter Week selling periods which occur in April this year vs. March last year. The reported March sales included sales of Bob's Inc., the casual family apparel and footwear chain acquired as of Feb. 26.

Retail store sales for the five weeks ended March 31, were $687,137,000, an increase of 2.8 percent over sales of $668,484,000 for the five week period last year.

Retail store sales for the three month period ended March 31, were up 7.1 percent to $1,616,942,000 compared to $1,510,323,000 last year.

As of March 31, there were 6,930 stores and leased departments in operation, an increase of 2.8 percent from the 1989 total of 6,744.

Melville specialty retail chains, with stores located across the country, include Marshalls, the off-price brand name apparel chain; Chess King, the OAK BROOK, IL (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Making an important statement to shareholders and employees, McDonald's Corporation has devoted the editorial focus of its l989 annual report to the environment, and has printed all pages and covers of the report on l00 percent recycled paper, all of which has been collected from McDonald's offices and suppliers.

The editorial content, entitled, ''Agenda: Planet Earth,'' reflects McDonald's commitment to being a part of the solution to the environmental challenges we all face.

''The environment is an issue that's important to our customers, to the communities in which we do business, and to us as a company'' said Mike Quinlan, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of McDonald's Corporation. ''We are not environmental experts, but over the years we have learned a great deal about the environmental issues that affect us. We are sharing that information to foster a broader understanding of these issues.''

Quoting from the 'Letter to Shareholders', the company says, ''Preserving the integrity of our environment benefits everyone. That's good for us and good for everyone that we do business with. We are concerned about the future of our children and the world in which they will live. We intend to be a part of the solution, along with each of you.''

Paper for the report was sourced and manufactured exclusively for McDonald's, creating a quality grade of recycled paper not previously achieved. Also contributing to the uniqueness of the report is the fact that it is 100 percent recyclable -- made with unvarnished paper throughout, and assembled using water soluble glue.

The report concludes with a call to action, encouraging shareholders and other readers of the report to take part in recycling efforts, resource conservation projects and responsible waste management activities.

To help ensure the accuracy of the editorial content -- and to make sure it was addressing the most important environmental issues -- the company enlisted the support of several environmentalists and conservation organizations. Representatives from World Wildlife Fund, the Audubon Society and a former EPA executive were invited to review the editorial direction and make recommendations, while other environmental experts are quoted throughout the text.

McDonald's is the world's leading quick service restaurant organization, serving 22 million people each day in more than 11,000 restaurants in 52 countries. The company's commitment to a better environment includes learning everything we can about the issues, launching initiatives to reduce waste, recycle, use recycled materials and sharing what we've learned with others. Seventy-five percent of McDonald's restaurant businesses are locally owned and operated by independent entrepreneurs.

NEWTON, MA (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Wedgestone Financial (NYSE:WDG) Thursday reported the results of operations for the quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

For the quarter ended Dec 31, 1989, the trust reported a net loss of $7,840,300, of which $7,492,000 was due to a fourth-quarter increase in the provision for losses, as compared to a net loss of $10,267,400 for the same period one year ago, of which $9,864,000 was due to a fourth-quarter increase in the provision for losses.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, the trust reported a net loss of $10,665,900, of which $8,992,000 was due to an increase in the provision for losses, as compared to a net loss of $11,065,100 for the previous year of which $15,259,000 was due to an increase in the provision for losses.

The primary reasons for this loss were the provision for losses and the continued high level of underperforming assets, the former having been necessitated by the deterioration in the estimated value of both properties securing loans anad foreclosed properties.

This loss and the continued high level of underperforming assets caused the trust to be in default of certain previously modified covenants in its debt agreements, but the trust's lenders have agreed to waive these defaults at Dec. 31, 1989, and to modify these covenants for the future.

Pursuant to other modifications in the trust's debt agreements, the trust, as previously announced, has agreed to cease making new loans; to accumulate cash from operations, loan repayments and sales of foreclosed properties, setting aside only those amounts needed for operating costs and for funding existing commitments; and to apply this cash to debt prepayment.

The trust's lenders have required prepayment of the first $18,000,000 of total debt of $44,500,000 by June 30, 1990, and a cumulative total of $30,000,000 by Jan. 31, 1991, and will accept partial prepayments. As of March 1990, $11,250,000 has been prepaid.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Customers of First Interstate Residential Mortgage (FIRM) may receive up to $350 under a new ''Pay Our Partner Program'' announced Thursday.

John Ferni, FIRM senior vice president, emphasized that this program is unique in that it rewards customers for both a speedy and successful transaction.

Customers will be rewarded for helping to expedite processing of residential mortgage applications. Upon loan closing participating customers will receive $100 if they provide requested documents within seven days of application. If a loan is closed within 45 days from the date of application, customers will receive an additional $250. The program will run from March 30 to May 15, 1990.

Branch employees of First Interstate are participating in the program by referring interested customers to FIRM for financing of new home purchases and refinancing of existing mortgages. FIRM offers competitive fixed and adjustable rate mortgages (ARM) loans.

FIRM vice president Robert Camerola said that in addition to the $350 bonus, customers also are guaranteed conditional loan approval within 24 hours as a part of the bank's Service Guarantee Program.

FIRM is a subsidiary of First Interstate Bank of California, the principal affiliate of First Interstate Bancorp, the nation's largest retail banking system. First Interstate Bank serves its California customers through 329 branches statewide.

DALLAS (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - American Realty Trust Inc. (NYSE: ARB) Thursday declared a regular cash distribution of 20 cents per share for the first quarter ended March 31.

This distribution is payable May 15, to shareholders of record as of April 30.

''The board of directors decided to lower the quarterly dividend because current cash flow does not justify a higher rate,'' said a spokesperson for the trust.

''Over the last few months, affiliates of Southmark Corp. (NYSE: SM) quit paying on five mortgages due the trust which negatively impacted our cash flow. Two of the properties involved have already been foreclosed. One of these properties is under contract to be sold at a significant profit.

''However, the foreclosure or workout of the other loans is expected to have a negative impact on cash flow for the balance of the year. We are taking this impact into account in reducing the quarterly dividend at this time. We don't expect further changes in the dividend rate this year.''

LEXINGTON, MA. (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Unitrode Corp. (NYSE:UTR), a manufacturer of electronic components and subsystems, Thursday announced the resignation of Howard F. Wasserman as president, chief executive officer, and director effective June 5, 1990, the date of the company's annual meeting.

Wasserman, who has served as president since September, 1986, and as chief executive officer since June, 1988, is resigning to pursue other interests. The company also announced the retirement of George M. Berman, presently chairman of the board and a founder of the company, who will not stand for re-election to the board when his term ends, also on June 5.

At the same time, the company announced that on June 5, the board of directors will elect Robert L. Gable chairman of the board and chief executive officer and Franklin P. Weigold president and chief operating officer. Weigold will report to Gable.

Gable has been a director of Unitrode since August, 1988; he will resume his position as chairman of the executive committee until June 5. He is the former president and chief executive officer at Computervision and the current chairman of Outward Bound, USA.

Weigold joined Unitrode as general manager of its Integrated Circuits Division in April, 1987. He was elected a vice president of the parent company in January, 1988. Prior to joining Unitrode, he was executive vice president of Silicon General and Vice President of Rexon. He holds a B.S.E.E. from Michigan Technological University and a M.B.A. from the University of Pittsburgh.

Commenting on the transition in leadership, Gable said, ''Unitrode wishes Howard Wasserman well on his decision to seek satisfaction from other business and personal ventures, after 21 years of service to the company. As president, he has had a permanent influence on re-directing the values and culture of Unitrode during a very turbulent time.''

''Frank Weigold has proven himself an able leader in setting strategic directions and executing operational improvements in several companies in the electronics business. He certainly has done an outstanding job in developing Unitrode's Integrated Circuits Division, which has consistently grown in sales and profits since his arrival.''

He continued, ''I look forward to stepping into the breach created by George Berman's decision to enjoy a well-deserved retirement. Since the founding of Unitrode in 1960, George has been an articulate spokesman for Unitrode and our industry.''

He concluded, ''Our immediate task is to restore the company to profitability as soon as possible and to enhance its position as a dependable supplier of quality products. Our balance sheet remains strong; with little debt, we are well positioned to take advantage of opportunities.''

Unitrode is a manufacturer of superior quality electronic components and subsystems, including discrete semiconductors, power management integrated circuits, switching power supplies, and data conversion products. Its products are sold throughout the world for a variety of defense/aerospace, industrial, computer/telecommunications, data processing, and consumer applications.

NEW ORLEANS (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - Freeport-McMoRan Copper Company,

Inc. (NYSE: FCX), Thursday declared a cash dividend for the three months ended March 31, 1990, of 25 cents per share on its Class A and Class B common stock payable May 1, 1990, to all common shareholders of record at the close of business on April 16, 1990.

The amount of the dividend exceeds the minimum quarterly dividend of 10-1/4 cents per share that would otherwise accumulate on the Class A common stock through the five-year period ending May 1, 1993, and reflects the continued excellent operating and financial performance of FCX's Indonesian copper operations, despite increased interest costs and depreciation charges related to the expansion of the company's Grasberg copper/gold ore body.

Prior to 1990, interests costs associated with the development of the Grasberg ore body had been capitalized. Unit costs in the years ahead are expected to be significantly lower as Grasberg, which began production in 1990, gradually increases copper and gold output and FCX total production finally reaches its targeted 52,000 tons-per-day level in 1992.

The amount of this first-quarter 1990 cash dividend and the amount of the minimum cumulative cash dividend on the Class A common stock take into consideration the one-for-one stock dividend paid April 2, 1990, on the FCX Class A and Class B common shares outstanding on March 15, 1990. Future quarterly cash dividends will continue to be based on actual operating and financial results and capital requirements. The amount of this dividend may not be indicative of future cash dividends.

WOBURN, MA. (APRIL 5) BUSINESS WIRE - MedChem Products Inc. (AMEX:MCH) Thursday reported net income of $938,000, or 21 cents per share, for the second quarter ended Feb. 28, 1990, a 37 percent increse from the prior year's $684,000, or 15 cents per share.

Sales for the quarter were $7,477,000 vs. the prior year's level of $5,102,000.

For the six months ended Feb. 28, 1990, MedChem reported net income of $1,940,000, or 42 cents per share, a 37 percent increase over last year's $1,416,000, or 33 cents per share. Sales for the six months increased 22 percent to $12,741,000 from $10,406,000 in the prior year.

The second quarter results were achieved despite after-tax charges of $1,406,000, or 31 cents per share, related to the preliminary injunction effected on Feb. 1, 1990, against further U.S. use, manufacture and sale of the company's AMVISC product line.

The write-offs relate principally to severance pay associated with a 30 percent workforce reduction on Feb. 2, 1990, reserves against AMVISC inventory and related components, costs associated with the idling of the AMVISC manufacturing facility in Massachusetts and a writedown in the company's investment in its proposed Avitene manufacturing facility located in Puerto Rico due to the postponement of construction plans.

Legal expenses associated with the ongoing patent litigation with Pharmacia Inc. totalled $637,000 for the six month period ended Feb. 28, 1990, as compared with $89,000 for the comparable period in 1989. Interest expense fell 50 percent to $849,000 as a result of the company's continuing accelerated repayment of its debt.

Domestic sales of Avitene remained strong, increasing 12 percent over 1989 levels. A $1.4 million shipment of Avitene to the U.S. government also boosted sales. Shipments of Amvisc, which were curtailed on Feb. 1, 1990, by the preliminary injunction, also increased over the prior year's amounts.

#90095c0084 04/05/1990 ~Comtex

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) COMTEX - Congressmen Dan Glickman (D-Kan.) and Dennis Eckart (D-Ohio) introduced legislation yesterday which would create a super agency called the Markets and Trading Commission to replace both the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Exchange Commission.

The bill is aimed at restructuring the regulatory framework of the financial marketplace. Under the current dual regulatory system, the SEC regulates the stock markets and the CFTC oversees the futures markets.

The SEC and CFTC have been engaged in a turf war over which agency should regulate stock index futures, currently under the jurisdiction of the CFTC.

The White House Working Group on Financial Markets met to discuss the issue last week. The working group, set up after the 1987 stock market crash to coordinate the Reagan administration's actions on market issues, consists of the top officials of the SEC, CFTC, Treasury Department and Federal Reserve Board.

SEC Chairman Richard Breeden and Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady favor SEC control of stock index futures. CFTC Chairman Wendy Gramm opposes moving index futures out of the CFTC domain and Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan gave a lukewarm endorsement for moving index futures to the SEC in a recent Senate hearing.

Index futures allow investors to bet on the movement of a basket of stocks without buying the actual securities. Program trading allows investors to profit from differences in the prices of futures contracts on stock indexes and of the corresponding stocks. Those quick shifts between products have been cited as a cause of stock market volatility.

Eckart argues that a single agency regulating the products that are traded simultaneously in both the New York and Chicago markets, but are now regulated by the SEC and the CFTC, is the best answer to control market volatility.

"Like other advanced nations, we should adopt a unified financial regulatory structure to oversee our trading markets," Eckart said. "We propose to reorganize our federal regulators by merging the SEC and CFTC, to create a single entity to oversee and safeguard both the equity and futures marketplaces."

The legislation also addresses the concern over the disparate margin levels for equities and futures. Margins are good faith money needed to initiate trades. For stocks, an investor must put up 50 percent of the purchase price but investors can ante up less than 5 percent for futures contracts. Critics say this level of disparity can lead to undue speculation in Chicago and result in another stock market crash.

Stock margins are presently regulated by the Federal Reserve and futures margins fall under the control of the Chicago futures exchanges. The CFTC can only regulate futures margins in specific emergency situations.

Glickman said he does not believe that margins on futures contracts need to be equivalent to the 50 percent requirements of equities, but he said the margins need to be harmonized.

"Our proposal would grant the Markets and Trading Commission the authority to oversee margin levels for both equities and futures while leaving the day to day futures margin-setting authority with the exchanges," Glickman said.

Gramm has said she is opposed to an SEC-CFTC merger. Breeden has indicated he would be satisfied with SEC jurisdiction of stock index futures but would not oppose a merger with the CFTC if that is what Congress decides.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) COMTEX - Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher said today the Bush administration favors a bill introduced by Sen. Robert W. Kasten, Jr. (R-Wis.) designed to reform the present product liability system.

Testifying before a Senate commerce consumer subcommittee, Mosbacher said product liability costs in the U.S. are far higher than other nations and this results in unnecessarily high prices for American products. He also cited reports of asbestos substitutes, improved child safety seats and new vaccines that companies are refusing to market because of fear of litigation.

"The existing product liability system imposes excessive costs and creates unwarranted uncertainty for American companies," Mosbacher said. "It denies job opportunities to American workers by contributing to plant closings and deterring business expansion. It harms American consumers by raising prices, diminishing the quality of goods, and denying access to socially beneficial products that manufacturers will refuse to produce."

The present product liability system consists of 50 different state laws. Kasten's bill contains no "caps" on damage awards and would establish a uniform set of national rules governing product liability litigation. The bill creates a uniform standard for the imposition of punitive damages and abolishes joint and several liability for noneconomic damages (pain and suffering, emotional distress, etc.).

Other key provisions include:

- Alcohol and Drug Defense. Persons who are intoxicated or under the influence of drugs will not be rewarded in a lawsuit if that condition was the primary cause of their injury.

- Pro-Consumer Statute of Limitations. Plaintiff can file suit for two years after harm and its cause are discovered, even if discovery occurs after many years. On harms resulting from capital goods (industrial machinery, etc.), the limit is 25 years from delivery date and only if claimant is eligible for workers' compensation benefits and the harm is not a "toxic" harm.

- Expedited Settlement. Provides incentives for expedited settlement of product liability lawsuits.

Mosbacher said enactment of this legislation will decrease insurance premiums in the long run.

However, a spokesperson for the American Insurance Association (AIA) said the bill is unlikely to reduce insurance costs.

"Because the bill does not adequately address a number of key liability issues, it is unlikely to reduce insurance claim costs or improve the insurance market," said Debra Ballen, AIA vice president for policy and development.

Ballen added that the bill's reforms in the areas of joint and several liability and punitive damages are "a step in the right direction."

TOKYO (APRIL 5) - Moody's Investors Services Inc. said Thursday it had upgraded its credit rating for South Korean government debt due to improvements in the country's economic and political situation.

The move raises South Korea's rating on government-guaranteed debt from "A-2" to "A-1" and affects 647 million dollars in bonds issued by Korea Development Bank Ltd., the Japanese unit of the U.S. rating agency said.

South Korea's external debt fell from a peak of 51.1 billion dollars in 1986 to 36.4 billion dollars at the end of last year with total debt repayments now absorbing only 10.5 percent of export receipts, the agency said.

Moody's also noted the "substantial and ongoing diversification of Korea's exports which enhances the country's ability to compete in world markets despite the sharp rise in real wage which occurred during 1989." Democratic development meanwhile had a "stabilising influence", it added.

The sharp reduction in the country's current account deficit and economic growth rate last year did not indicate a weaker economy but were "by-products of desirable adjustments in real wages and exchange rates," the agency said.

"Wage demands are likely to be more moderate in 1990 and higher wages will be offset by continuing gains in productivity," it added.

"Korea is well placed to absorb possible future adverse movements in its current account without jeopardising Korean borrowers' access to foreign exchange needed to service their foreign obligations."

BEIJING (APRIL 5) - China this weekend launches its first foreign commercial satellite, the U.S.-made AsiaSat 1.

Barring last minute hitches, AsiaSat 1 will roar into space Saturday atop a three-stage Long March III rocket, then go into geostationary orbit 35,000 kilometers (21,700 miles) over a point southeast of Singapore.

From there, it will provide television and telecommunications relay services for customers from Afghanistan to Japan - an area of 2.5 billion people.

AsiaSat 1 is owned by Asia Satellite Telecommunications of Hong Kong, jointly held by Cable and Wireless PLC of Britain, China International Trust and Investment Corp. (CITIC), and Hutchison Whampoa Ltd. of Hong Kong.

For China, a successful lift-off from Xichang space base in southwest Sichuan province will mark its formal entry into the lucrative satellite launch industry, now dominated by France and the United States.

"They see it as a prestige business in which they can make a lot of money, and they're pulling out all the stops to make it work," said a Western diplomat.

Even before AsiaSat 1 goes up, China has made plans to launch two Aussat satellites from Australia from 1991, plus a French-built unit for Arabsat and Pakistan's first-ever domestic-made satellite.

But storm clouds are brewing over China's space program, with renewed allegations that the country is engaged in unfair pricing practices and is secretly shipping ballistic missiles abroad.

Last week Arianespace, the European rocket consortium, revived allegations that China's state-controlled space industry is "dumping" its launch services.

"We are taking this very seriously," said Jean-Claude Biget, director of marketing and sales at Arianespace.

LONDON (APRIL 5) - More than 2,000 Waterford Crystal workers were on strike Thursday over company plans to cut costs and bonuses paid to glass cutters, union officials said.

The strike, the first in the company's 41-year history, has closed three plants in Waterford county in the Irish republic.

Local politicians have criticised the strikers and said Waterford Crystal could switch its production to east European countries where costs were lower.

A group of investors, headed by Anthony O'Reilly, Irish chairman of the U.S. food giant H.J. Heinz, took a 29.9 percent stake in March this year in Waterford-Wedgwood, the parent company grouping Waterford and the British porcelain manufacturer Wedgwood.

Waterford-Wedgwood is in financial difficulties due to a slump in demand in the United States, where it sells 75 percent of its products, and Britain.

The company reported pre-tax losses of 45 million U.S. dollars in 1989.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 5) - Assurances Generales de France (AGF), a French insurance group, has bought a 15.2 percent stake in publicly listed Malaysia British Assurance Bhd., an official of the Malaysian company said Thursday.

Managing director Lau Khuan Siew said AGF bought the stake, equivalent to six million shares, for 18 million dollars (6.7 million U.S.) last week through local stockbroker T.A. Securities.

"They bought it through a married deal," he said.

The Malaysian company has a paid-up capital of 39.59 million dollars (14.7 million U.S.) and is involved in all classes of general insurance.

Mr. Lau said AGF would be the company's third largest shareholder -- after locally-incorporated General Corp. Bhd., which holds 34 percent of its equity, and Malaysian tycoon Tan Chin Nam, who has a 20 percent stake.

Industry sources said Mr. Tan was among vendors of the shares to AGF and his stake had probably been reduced to about 16 percent.

The sources also said AGF was eyeing a stake in the company's subsidiary, MBA Life and that a deal would be tied up within the next two weeks.

Malaysia's life insurance sector grew 28.9 percent to 358.2 million dollars (133 million U.S.) in terms of new annual premiums last year, according to a recent report by the director-general of insurance.

Written premium income in the general sector grew 10.4 percent to 1.46 billion dollars (541 million U.S.) in the general sector.

JAKARTA (APRIL 5) - A group of prominent Indonesian business leaders has begun talks with various institutions over a government call to share their wealth with cooperatives, press reports said here Thursday.

In talks with Cooperative Minister Bustanil Arifin, the group of 15 businessmen, including tycoon Liem Swie Liong, proposed Wednesday three alternatives for transferring shares in their firms to cooperatives, the Kompas daily said.

The cooperatives could acquire the shares through purchases at normal market prices, or at pre-listing primary rates for companies that have gone public, or through grants, Kompas quoted Mr. Arifin as saying after the meeting.

The group is scheduled to meet with the Indonesian Chamber of Commerce and Industry on Thursday for similar talks.

The talks were held after a call by Indonesian President Suharto in January for major businesses to sell up to 25 percent in shares to cooperatives in an effort to bridge the gap between rich and poor.

Mr. Arifin did not say whether they had discussed the financial arrangements needed for these purchases.

He said he had stressed that the businesses could freely choose the cooperatives to which they wanted to sell or grant their shares.

Indonesia has some 34,000 cooperatives, constitutionally viewed as one of the country's economic pillars, along with state enterprises and the private sector.

Critics have said that most of the cooperatives lacked the efficiency, financial capability and managerial credibility to support such a scheme.

One of the businessmen present at the meeting, William Suryajaya, last week pledged to grant 2.5 million shares, worth 20 million dollars, from his personal stake in his holding company, Astra Group, to two cooperatives.

Mr. Suharto last weekend also gave several cooperatives shares worth 210,000 dollars in a tea-plantation firm run by foundations that he chaired.

LONDON (APRIL 5) - IEP Securities, the British arm of New Zealand entrepreneur Sir Ron Brierley's empire, said late Wednesday that it has increased its stake in loss-making British defense electronics company United Scientific Holdings (USH) to 20.3 percent.

An IEP spokesman said his company, which took a 9.3 percent stake in USH five weeks ago, is supporting USH's asset disposal plans, and analysts here see the stakebuilding as a reminder to USH that a failure to move swiftly back into profit will result in a full takeover bid from IEP.

British defense engineering company Meggitt pulled out of a takeover bid for USH in December last year after gaining 83 percent control of the company -- scared off by the condition of its balance sheet.

USH made a pre-tax loss of 3.4 million pounds (5.6 million dollars) in 1989, which did not include an extraordinary debit of 2.8 million (4.6 million).

Shares in USH have slumped since Meggitt's 140 pence per share offer was withdrawn. On Thursday morning after the news from IEP, the stock climbed two pence to 76 pence.

IEP's investment in a total of about 25 British companies amounts to around 500 million pounds (822 million dollars), and the company maintains a high profile in many of its holdings.

Sir Ron has clashed recently with British engineering giant Vickers, in which he holds an 18 percent stake, demanding that the company float separately its Rolls Royce motor manufacturing arm, and more recently with criticism of Vickers' acquisition of engines manufacturer Cosworth from Carlton Communications.

NEW DELHI (APRIL 5) - Indian automaker Maruti Udyog Ltd., partly owned by Suzuki Motors of Japan, is accelerating domestic sales and exports, but plans to cut down on imported components for assembly of vehicles.

Maruti, which has the most advanced manufacturing facility in India, said it planned to increase exports of a small 800 c.c. car and earn 40 million dollars this year, compared to 21.5 million dollars in exports last year.

Company spokesman S. R. Krishnan said they sold 2,100 cars in Paris last year and hoped to break into the British, Italian and Belgian markets this year. The Maruti is already sold in South Asia and several African countries.

The 800 c.c. car, which was assembled with almost all imported parts in the early 1980s, now uses locally manufactured components accounting for 90 percent of the car, Maruti said.

Besides the small car, which is a huge success in the domestic market starved of foreign cars because of prohibitive duty, Maruti manufactures an 800 c.c van called Omni and a small four-wheel drive, Gypsy.

The company said it expects imports of components to come down to 65 million dollars in the new year, from 83 million dollars in the last financial year ending March 1990.

''During 199192, the company expects to earn all foreign exchange required for import of components for production,'' the statement said.

The public company, in which Suzuki has a 40 percent equity stake, is also planning to increase its output to 250,000 units a year from the present 100,000 automobiles. The expansion plan is expected to be submitted to government for approval shortly.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 5) - A group of leading French executives on a fact-finding visit here said Thursday they were impressed by Malaysia's quality infrastructure, training facilities and favorable investment environment.

"Malaysia is quite a good place to start an industry. It is quite a well organised country, which is politically stable and has good infrastructure " said Miguel Doze, the deputy director for international affairs of glass manufacturer Saint Gobain.

"From here you can spread to other countries," Mr. Doze said. "We can do something here. I do really believe we can."

The executives, heads of corporate planning in their companies, also said that they saw vast opportunities to invest in Malaysia's oil and gas sectors, as well as in public utilities and transportation projects.

A senior official of Electricite de France said the company was eyeing a project to build gas turbines in Malaysia and link up power transmission networks within the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

The 11-member delegation, which also included representatives from Matra, Gaz de France and Credit National, was given high-level briefings at the Malaysian Industrial Development Authority and Economic Planning Unit.

The group also held discussions with officials of the central bank, the National Electricity Board, the national oil company Petronas and private companies including conglomerate, Sime Darby.

The industrialists, members of the French association for analysis of industrial and energy strategies, were expected to leave for Singapore later Thursday after calling on finance minister Daim Zainuddin.

ANKARA (APRIL 5) - The International Monetary Fund (Imf) has accepted and registered the convertibility of Turkish lira, Guenes Taner, the state minister for economics, told a news conference here Thursday.

He said the lira had therefore become the 67th national currency which could be used in transactions in 152 countries.

Guenes said despite the counter-claims of the opposition, press, and even some of the government ministers and deputies, the economy was sounder than it had ever been in the past 45 years.

He insisted that the inflation rate would be halved to around 30 percent by the end of the year, although the sum for the past three months had already reached 14.1 percent.

Following a cabinet meeting Wednesday night, government spokesman Mehmet Yazar disclosed that the national currency would be accepted in free shops in Turkey and the West German airline Lufthansa would start selling tickets for the Turkish lira.

WELLINGTON (APRIL 5) - Hong Kong's Sally Aw Sian relaunched her bid on Thursday to buy out the remaining 31 percent of stock in her investment company, Aw New Zealand, a company statement said.

Ms. Aw, who already owns 69 percent of the investment company, is offering 25 cents (14 U.S. cents) per share through an associate company, Asco Investments Ltd.

Ms. Aw originally bid for the outstanding shares last November, but withdrew her offer after the future of a 100 million dollar (57 million U.S.) retail and office development in Auckland was cast into doubt after partner Angus Group Ltd. went into receivership.

Aw New Zealand company secretary Jim Carney said Ms. Aw had decided to withdraw the bid until the future of the development was certain. Construction had continued and the bid had therefore been reactivated under the same conditions and offering the same price, he said.

Aw New Zealand's independent directors immediately warned shareholders not to sell until they had received the formal bid and the directors had responded with a recommendation.

Tokyo (APRIL 5) - Japanese car imports for the fiscal year 1989-90 soared by 42.7 percent to reach 203,010, the Japan Car Importers Association reported Thursday.

West German carmakers set the pace of foreign car sales, with VolkswagenAudi accounting for 26.4 percent of the cars imported by Japan.

Bmw, with a 37 percent rise in sales in Japan, accounted for 18.4 percent of the foreign cars imported, while Mercedes had an 18.3 percent share, amid a 57 percent surge in sales, the association reported.

Japan's total vehicle sales during the year which ended March 31 surged past five million, which meant that foreign cars still made up only about four percent of the total market.

MANILA (APRIL 5) - The Philippine Long Distance and Telephone Co. (PLDT) suffered a 7.6 percent drop in its net income in 1989 to 91.9 million dollars, a company statement said Thursday.

PLDT has seen an annual increase in its net income of more than two per cent since 1985 and has been rushing a 4.15 billion peso (185.3 million dollar) modernization and expansion program launched last year, when the government removed its overseas telephone service monopoly.

The country's largest communications firm posted net income of 2.06 billion pesos (91.9 million dollar) for 1989, compared to 2.23 billion pesos (104.2 million dollars) in 1988.

The publicly-listed company's total operating revenues hit 9.46 billion pesos (422.3 million dollars) in 1989, a 22.3 percent increase from 1988 revenues, it said.

The company's total current liabilities hit 3.59 billion pesos (160.2 million dollars) in 1989, a 5.4 percent increase over 1988, following investments in improvement and modernization last year.

MOSCOW (APRIL 5) - Moscow is considering closing loss-making factories, which may account for a third of all national entreprises, according to Soviet Finance Minister Valentin Pavlov.

As an alternative to shutting them, some loss-making plants could be sold to foreigners who, under recently-introduced legislation, now have a right to own property in the Soviet Union, the minister told Interfax, a Moscow-Radio publication.

"To achieve a transition to a plan-and-market economy, we must get rid of inefficient enterprises. They must be allowed to go broke and they must be put in the hands of their own staffs, the staffs of other enterprises or foreign investors," he added.

"We are prepared to sell them (foreigners) some of our enterprises which must be rebuilt or upgraded (...) We are prepared to introduce an open economy to enable our (foreign) partners to do their own business while promoting perestroika at the same time," the minister said, pointing to the need to boost consumer goods production.

Foreigners would be allowed to reinvest profits in the Soviet Union. Export goods could be sold for hard currency or foreigners could be allowed to convert their rubles, at currency auctions, for example, Mr. Pavlov said.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 5) - Malaysia and Sudan signed a memorandum of understanding on Thursday to enhance bilateral economic cooperation in trade, technology and training, Bernama news agency said.

The agreement was signed by Malaysian Minister of Finance Daim Zainuddin and Sudan's Finance and Economic Planning Minister, Ahmed Ali Zaki, who ended a six-day visit here Thursday.

Mr. Zaki said he had identified raw material processing for the textile and cotton industry, tyre manufacture and the electronics industry as possible areas for cooperation.

Under the agreement, Malaysia is expected to provide technical training for Sudanese in such fields as banking, industry and agriculture.

LONDON (APRIL 5) - Base rate should start to drop this summer, from the present 15 percent down to 13 percent by Christmas, and then to 10.5 percent at the end of next year, National Westminister chief economist David Kern said in the bank's April business report issued on Thursday.

While not ruling out higher rates in coming months in case of attacks on sterling, Mr. Kern thinks the decline should start in July or August, with a slowdown in demand and a better trade balance.

He differs from other analysts, who do not expect any decline in the next few months in view of recent statements by Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major about the need for maintaining interest rates at a high level for a rather long time to combat inflation.

Mr. Kern adds that Mr. Major was right to avoid an overly-austere budget that would have created a risk of recession.

The absence of an agreed schedule for sterling to join the exchange stabilization mechanism of the European Monetary System makes sterling particularly fragile, the NatWest analyst thinks. This vulnerability should lead to British membership within 15 months, and perhaps as early as the autumn, he says.

BRUSSELS (APRIL 5) - Unemployment in the European Economic Community averaged 8.6 percent of the workforce in February, the same as January, the EEC's official statistics agency Eurostat reported Thursday.

But its figures showed an obstinately wide gap between member-states, from 16.7 percent in Ireland and 15.9 percent in Spain to five percent in Portugal, 5.4 percent in West Germany and 6.1 percent in Britain.

Joblessness in the Community has progressively fallen by about a fifth over the past three years, from 10.6 of the workforce in February 1987 to 9.9 per- cent in February 1988 and 9.2 percent in February 1989, Eurostat said.

The figures are adjusted for seasonal variations.

BUDAPEST (APRIL 5) - Hungary's 7.8 million registered voters go to the polls Sunday for the second time in two weeks to decide which of the country's two largest conservative parties will lead them away from communism and towards the free-market West.

The results of the poll, the first free elections held in Hungary since communism arrived on the heels of World War II, are being watched especially closely because of fears that the two leading parties may end up unable to govern the country either together or separately.

The key battle is between the Hungarian Democratic Forum (MDF), which won 24.7 percent of the vote in the first round on March 25, and the Free Democratic Alliance (SZDSZ), which won 21.3 percent.

The two parties, way ahead of their nearest rivals, which all scored less than 12 percent, are certain to come out on top in the second round.

But the key questions are whether either of them will be able to reach agreement with enough of the smaller parties to form a government, or failing that, whether they will be capable of governing together.

The MDF is a more nationalistic and traditional right-wing party than the SZDSZ, which is in favor of faster progress towards integration with the capitalist economies of the West.

The fact that the two parties have devoted a lot of their energies in the election campaign to sniping at one another has irritated many Hungarians, who feel the need for unity amid the accelerating change their country is undergoing.

"The first round showed that there are two big right-wing parties almost neck-and-neck," a diplomat said here. "The question now is whether the national interest will prevail to allow them to govern."

Both the big two have already reached agreements with smaller allies under which the smaller parties' voters will be asked to vote for the bigger one.

The MDF is allied with the Christian Democrat Party, which won 6.46 percent of the vote on March 25, and the SZDSZ has teamed up with the Federation of Young Democrats (FIDEZS), which gained 8.95 percent.

But it is the votes of two other larger parties which are likely to provide the jokers in the pack after Sunday's poll.

The Small Landowners' Party (FKGP), which emerged as the third biggest in the country in the first round with 11.73 percent, has officially thrown in its lot with the MDF by calling on its members to vote for the Forum.

However a minority of its leadership has refused the agreement, preferring to support the SZDSZ.

The other major unknown is the party which emerged as the main loser in the first round, the former Communist Party.

Now renamed as the Socialist Party, it came in fourth with 10.89 percent, and has decided to maintain candidates in the second round.

However some Socialist voters are expected to opt for the MDF in the second round, as its policies are less hostile to the state intervention and social programs which formed the backbone of the former regime.

Amid doubts over whether a future coalition made up of one of the big parties plus smaller ones could provide stability, pressure is growing for the MDF and the SZDSZ to overcome their differences and agree to govern together.

But hopes were dashed on Wednesday when MDF leader Jozsef Antall all but ruled out such a possibility during a television debate.

Hungarians will not be the only ones watching anxiously the results of Sunday's poll.

Western countries and banks are owed a whopping 21 billion dollars by Hungary, and they will be concerned to see a stable government capable of creating the conditions under which that debt can be serviced.

PRAGUE (APRIL 5) - The Czechoslovak People's Party, a former communist satellite which recently formed an electoral coalition with two other pro-Catholic groups, has re-elected Josef Bartoncik as its chairman, party sources said Thursday.

The People's Party, which claims 80,000 members, formed an alliance on Tuesday with the Christian Democratic Party, from the Czech republic, and the Christian Democratic Movement, of Slovakia, ahead of free elections scheduled June 8 and 9.

Mr. Bartoncik, 47, was one of the leaders of his party's pro-reform wing before the ouster of the communist regime. He was elected chairman on November 28, at the height of Czechoslovakia's revolution.

Under the former communist government, Mr. Bartoncik's party was one of four in the Communist-led National Front.

PORT MORESBY (APRIL 5) - Papua New Guinea appealed Thursday for 60 million dollars in aid from southeast Asian and other countries to help save its tropical rainforests, and said it would not issue timber permits for two years.

Forests Minister Karl Stack said at the end of a three-day Tropical Forest Action Plan seminar in Port Moresby that the government plans to submit a major new policy intiative to parliament in July.

He also hinted at the possibility of curbing logging exports after expiration of the two-year ban on operational permits which starts in July.

To date, 60 timber permits and 44 export licenses have been issued to companies, mainly from southeast Asia.

Mr. Stack made a strong appeal for about 60 million kina (dollars) in aid to fund forestry improvement and conservation projects, to compensate landowners and make up losses in governmment revenues.

He said Papua New Guinea made a good start in its fund-raising effort, with 15 million kina pledged by some countries and organisations represented at the conference here. "We're challenging the international community to stop pontificating," Mr. Stack said. "We've told them: 'You do the right thing and we'll do the right thing.'"

He aimed his words particularly at Southeast Asian countries, which he said take 70 percent of Papua New Guinea's timber but did not follow the lead of Australia and New Zealand in offering assistance.

"Countries that are taking our timber and using it to create huge employment in their own nations didn't step forward," Mr. Stack said. "There's obviously something perverse in that which rankles."

The moratorium means that 28 applications for permission to develop more than three million hectares (7.4 million acres) of timber will be put on hold.

HARARE (APRIL 5) - Zimbabwe aims to resume in December beef exports to the European Community which were banned last year because of an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease, the Cold Storage Commission (CSC) announced Thursday.

The parastatal said in a statement there had not been a single case of the disease for more than six months and "the EC situation is looking good."

Zimbabwe's worst outbreak of foot-and-mouth and the lost EC export market cost it some 100 million Zimbabwe dollars (40 million U.S.) in desperately-needed foreign exchange.

The CSC said it had managed to export some 202 tons of beef to the Canary Islands and to Mayotte during the period of suspension. More shipments were planned, and while prices were not good it was possible to break even and earn some foreign currency.

MOSCOW (APRIL 5) - Lithuania's permanent representative in Moscow, Egidius Bickauskas, Thursday indicated that the breakaway republic might be ready to compromise with the union on some issues, Tass news agency reported.

"Lithuania is ready to look for a compromise concerning the spring military conscription, since this factor may create an explosive situation," Mr. Bickauskas said.

The Lithuanian parliament, which issued an unilateral declaration of independence from the Soviet Union on March 11, might be ready to "offer more than the center expects", according to Mr. Bickauskas, newly-appointed as head of the permanent Lithuanian mission here. Each republic has a mission in Moscow.

Wednesday, the Lithuanian parliament adopted a resolution calling on draftees to refuse to serve with the Soviet army. The Defense Ministry in Moscow has protested against attempts by the Baltic states to disrupt the draft.

"We understand Soviet strategic interests in Lithuania which are of a European and even of a world scale. This aspect of our relations should be discussed," Mr. Bickauskas said.

Tass said the envoy did not rule out the holding of a referendum on the secession issue.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA (APRIL 5) - Australia's richest are getting poorer, a reflection of the misfortunes of its entrepreneurs, a magazine survey published Thursday showed.

The Business Review Weekly, which compiles a list each year of Australia's 200 wealthiest individuals and families, said it had to lower the threshold for entry by five million Australian dollars (3.8 million U.S.) to 30 million dollars (22.9 million U.S.) to find enough qualifiers this year.

The reason for the fall is the crumbling fortunes of Australia's entrepreneurs, many of whom were dumped from the list, it said. Those missing included Alan Bond, now fighting legal battles to prevent creditors from ravaging his empire. Last year he was worth an estimated 100 million dollars (76.3 million U.S.).

Christopher Skase, the playboy who made a takeover bid for Hollywood studio MGM/UA just weeks before his company Qintex Australia Ltd. went into receivership, is another omission.

Media magnate Kerry Packer, who is bidding for Alan Bond's media assets, stayed Australia's richest person, boasting a fortune of 1.8 billion dollars (1.37 billion U.S.). A distant second was entrepreneur Robert Holmes a Court, worth 800 million dollars (611 million U.S.).

The list contains 72 immigrants, 30 of whom were born in Eastern Europe. Eighty-nine of the 200 made their fortunes through property while 55 inherited their wealth.

Singapore, April 5 dpa - Singapore's Jurong Shipyard and the Sembawang group Thursday signed a joint venture agreement with four Soviet partners to build two floating hotels (Rivertels) costing 70 million U.S. dollars.

The Soviet partners are the Moscow City Hotel Association, Moscow River Shipping Company, Expocenter and the Sudoimport foreign trade organisation.

The Soviets will hold 50 per cent of the joint venture while Jurong will hold 40 per cent and Sembawang group 10 per cent.

Jurong Shipyard chairman S. Chandra Das told reporters the first target of the joint venture was ''to build and operate two units of floating hotels which will be of five-star international standard''.

The two hotels which will have accommodation for 400 tourists will be built in Singapore. They will be fully equipped with up-to-date telecommunications facilities such as telefax, telex and telephones in addition to modern office equipment.

''The formation of this joint venture company...marks the start of a new era of business cooperation between our two countries,'' said Das. It also represented the beginning of ''Singapore's penetration into the Soviet tourist industry which will benefit both countries''.

A spokesman of Sudoimport said the Russian parties decided to build the floating hotels ''because of the shortage of space in Moscow city and the time taken is much shorter than land-based hotels''.

PARIS (APRIL 5) - France would be "available" for reflection on its defense ties if it involved changes towards "genuinely more European defense, within the (Atlantic) Alliance," a source close to President Francois Mitterrand said Thursday.

But British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, who last week called on France fully to participate in a reformed North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), had "given no grounds" for his request, added the source in the Elysee Palace, who asked not to be named.

"No plans for change, no alterations of any sort" to the NATO alliance had been submitted to the French government, the source said.

"If there were to be consideration of a genuinely more European defense, within the Alliance, that's to say through maintaining the Washington (NATO) treaty but with major changes to the organization, (France) would be available to take part," the source said.

President spokesman Hubert Vedrine had on Saturday said the possibility of France rejoining NATO's integrated military command was not for the present at issue.

The source Thursday indicated, however, that developments in Europe would "inevitably" lead to "fresh balance" within NATO between the United States and its European partners. Mr. Mitterrand appeared set to raise the issue with U.S. President George Bush when they meet in Florida on April 19.

"The United States is keen to save NATO because any broad questions (on the future of the alliance) would deprive them of a formidable tool," the source said.

The Elysee considers the compromise that would keep a united Germany within alliance while allowing Soviet troops to remain for some time on what is now East German territory virtually ineluctable.

MANAGUA (APRIL 5) - Nicaragua has proposed establishing five zones in which the contra rebels could demobilize and surrender their weapons, Deputy Defense Minister Joaquin Cuadra has said.

Major General Cuadra, a military leader of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front, said Wednesday that each zone would be 500 square kilometers (310 square miles) and located in the interior of the country, but he did not give their precise locations.

Officials estimate that 9,000 contra forces have entered Nicaragua during the past weeks from their bases in neighboring Honduras.

Maj. Gen. Cuadra announced the proposal after meeting with Organization of American States representative Hugo de Zela to discuss the mechanisms for disbanding the anti-Sandinista rebels.

Mr. de Zela said he was satisfied by the results of the meeting, which were attended by Sandinista army leaders and representatives of President-elect Violeta Chamorro led by Roberto Ferrey.

Mr. Ferrey repeated that the goal was to comply with an accord reached last month in which the contras promised to disband.

Five Central American presidents, ending a summit in Nicaragua Tuesday, called for the contras to demobilize by April 25, when Mrs. Chamorro is to take office.

STRASBOURG (APRIL 5) - The European Parliament Thursday adopted a motion calling on the 12-member European Community (E.C.) to impose an arms export ban on Iraq.

The motion urged E.C. nations to do everything possible to prevent Iraq from acquiring nuclear weapons.

The resolution also called on the United Nations Security Council to look into the possibility of imposing sanctions.

Legislators said a recently unveiled plot to smuggle into Iraq what U.S. and British investigators said were nuclear detonators showed that the country had violated the Nuclear Non-Profiferation Treaty to which Baghdad is a partner.

Signatories to the treaty have pledged not to acquire atomic weapons in return for a promise by the 1967 nuclear arms powers to help them use nuclear technology for civilian purposes.

Parliamentarians also condemned a threat by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to use chemical weapons against Israel.

BONN (APRIL 4) - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has succeeded within a matter of weeks to line up all of Bonn's major allies, including Britain's long-hesitating Premier Margaret Thatcher, behind his German policy.

When the foreign ministers of the two German states and the four Second World War allies (U.S., Ussr, Britain and France) get together soon for the first ''two-plus-four'' conference on foreign policy aspects of the German question, the Western countries will have a more or less unified position.

''French President Francois Mitterrand and Thatcher have been placated, U.S. President George Bush is on our side anyway, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev looks friendly,'' commented West Germany's Rhein-Zeitung newspaper, adding: ''Now only the Germans themselves can spoil everything.''

Even Kohl's political opponents have been stunned by his ability to dispel Western reservations about the speed of the German unification process.

It was a decisive boost for the chancellor when the conservative Alliance for Germany triumphed in the first free elections in East Germany on March 18.

After this victory, which represented a personal triumph for the Christian Democrat Kohl, the tone of voice changed in Paris and London.

Mitterrand on March 25 expressed respect for the Germans' determination to carry out a speedy unification and dropped his remaining doubts.

When Kohl visited Thatcher in Cambridge March 30, the two reportedly reached ''far-reaching agreement''.

The last remaining irritations between Bonn and its chief partners in the West thus appear to have been cleared out. The United States had from the start given Kohl the strongest possible backing.

At the same time, government sources in Bonn said they saw reason to hope that the Soviet Union will eventually back down from its demand that a future united Germany must be internationally neutral.

Controversies, especially with France and Britain, had emerged at the end of November when Kohl, without forewarning the Allies, presented his ten-point plan for a German federation.

For various reasons, both Mitterrand and Thatcher raised objections against the too-hasty birth of a nation of 75 million.

Mitterrand feared above all that the Germans in future would be too preoccupied with their own affairs and thus hamper the growth of the European Community.

Thatcher saw unification as being ''not on the agenda'' and warned against the dangers of German unity. All this was further complicated by Kohl's all but clear stance on the Polish-German frontier.

Among his trump cards, Kohl counted the solidarity of the United States and a pledge in general terms by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev that it was up to the Germans to decide about their future.

By agreeing immediately to a special E.C. summit on April 28 in Dublin and by going to Brussels on March 8 to brief the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (Nato) allies about his policies, Kohl sought to allay fears among the smaller Western allies.

The chancellor gave a solemn promise to respect the interests of Germany's partners and neighbors.

TOKYO (APRIL 5) - Japan will urge major industrial democracies to fully resume loans to China at a meeting of top finance officials Saturday, finance ministry sources said Friday.

The sources said Japan would outline Tokyo's loan policy to China at the Paris meeting of the Group of Seven (G-7) major industrial countries and coordinate their views toward full resumption of loans to the communist country.

Japan believes that China should not be isolated in the international community despite its military crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators last June 4, the sources said.

After the crackdown, most major industrial democracies stopped granting fresh loans to Beijing.

The G-7 groups Japan with the United States, France, Britain, West Germany, Italy and Canada.

PARIS (APRIL 5) - The future of the Banque Internationale de l'Afrique Occidentale (BIA0), at stake since majority shareholder Banque Nationale de Paris decided to pull out of part of the network, has been settled, informed sources said here Thursday.

The four shareholders, the French government and African political and financial administrators have reached broad agreement on a plan that would entail the BNP handing over part of its operations to its Swiss subsidiary the Societe Financiere d'Outre-Mer.

A banking source said that "the figures still have to be fine-tuned". It was not immediately clear whether the BNP, a 51 percent shareholder in the almost bankrupt BIAO, or the French government, would carry part of losses amounting to some two billion francs (350 million dollars).

The BNP had announced plans to close its branches in Senegal and Ivory Coast, while the future of branches in Cameroon depended on the outcome of an audit. The BIAO also operates in Burkina Faso,the Central African Republic, the Congo, Gabon, Mali, Niger, Nigeria and Togo.

The three other shareholders are the Union de Banques Suisses (20 percent), the Banco Do Brazil (also 20 percent) and the Compagnie Interafricaine d'Investissement (nine percent, representing West African interests).

Thursday's disclosures follow talks here Wednesday between French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy and representatives from Ivory Coast and Senegal.

The future of some 280 BIAO employees at its Paris headquarters is still in doubt. There have been reports that Standard Bank of South Africa is keen to take over the headquarters and some subsidiaries to gain a foothold on European capital markets.

Details of the plans for the BIAO's future appeared likely to be announced after the next board meeting on April 24.

TEL AVIV (APRIL 5) - The West Bank and Gaza Strip saw heavy disturbances Thursday following a period of relative quiet. Arab sources reported one dead and fifteen Palestinians wounded in clashes with troops, including a two-year-old boy hit in the head with a rubber bulllet.

An Israeli army officer was severely injured when a Palestinian driver in the West Bank city of Nablus ploughed his truck into an army foot patrol, injuring five soldiers.

The driver was shot and injured with rubber bullets while trying to flee after the incident, and was arrested along with his three passengers by troops investigating the case.

Four local youths were also injured by rubber bullets fired by troops in disturbances following the incident, which reliable defence sources said was almost certainly nationalistically motivated.

A 16-year-old youth was killed in Ramallah by troops firing rubber bullets. Residents claimed the shots had been fired from an army look-out post during disturbances in the city's main square.

KATHMANDU (APRIL 5) - Over 40,000 Nepalese villagers from outside Kirtipur took part late Thursday in a peaceful anti-government demonstration as riot police stood by, witnesses said.

The protest came as the political situation deteriorated in the Kathmandu valley with continuing street violence, calls for protest runs on major banks, and key state-run sectors striking in support of the democracy movement.

The new agitation followed early morning clashes between riot police and protestors which opposition reports said left 12 people injured and more than 90 people arrested in the capital and other cities between Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Official confirmation was unavailable.

The Kirtipur demonstrators were carrying black protest flags and banners of the outlawed Nepalese Congress party and seven left-wing parties.

The demonstrators gathered in the Kathmandu valley town of Kirtipur to hear former village chief, Ramesh Maharjan, who recently resigned to protest the government repression, and other opposition figures address the rally.

Riot police were seen posted but they did not interfere as the speakers, including Surendra Pandey, president of Tribhuvan University's Tri-Chandra campus, and Shanker Pokharel, president of the university's multipurpose campus, slammed the non-party Panchayat system introduced in 1960.

Mr. Maharjan said the "people of Kirtipur have no more love and respect for the Panchayat system which has turned like a man-eater tiger, terrorizing the public."

Large demonstrations were also held in different parts of Kathmandu and on the outskirts of Lalitpur township, opposition sources said.

An opposition source said several thousand demonstrators clashed with riot police in the village of Harisiddhi.

Nabindra Raj Joshi, general secretary of the pro-democracy Nepal Students Union, said "over 100 students have been arrested Thursday in different localities" accused of throwing rocks at police.

"Anybody wearing jeans, track-shoes and jean jackets are considered as anti-Panchayat campaigners and are arrested even if no wrong deeds are committed," Mr Joshi said.

Authorities have also indefinitely closed down nearly all schools throughout the Kathmandu valley in an apparent bid to avoid further student-led unrest, sources at Tribhuvan University here said.

Leaflets were handed out here calling for runs on Nepal's four main banks, including the central Nepal Rastra Bank, to protest the government's alleged use of deposits to pay for a crackdown on the democracy movement.

Officials said all employees of Nepal Telecommunications Corp. walked off the job Thursday in protest after colleagues at one office were briefly detained by police for observing the token strike.

LONDON (APRIL 5) - The British government plans to give Australia an original copy of the Australia Constitution Act of 1900 and will introduce a new law soon to allow a copy currently in Canberra to remain there, it was announced here Thursday.

"The announcement is excellent news for Australians and will further improve Anglo-Australian relations," said Labor MP Alf Morris, who had pushed legislation under which the document would be given to Australia.

There are two original copies of the Act, effectively Australia's constitution. One is currently on loan to Australia and on display in Parliament House in Canberra while the other is displayed in the House of Lords.

Under Britain's Public Records Act of 1958, the documents are considered public records and cannot be presented as a gift.

PARIS (APRIL 5) - Former U.S. president Jimmy Carter is trying to persuade the Ethiopian government and rebel factions in the country to allow foodstuffs to be delivered to northern areas where famine is again threatening, a close aide said here Thursday.

Mr. Carter, who is already involved in mediation efforts between Addis Ababa and rebels in Tigre and Eritrea provinces, was in Paris Wednesday where he met with Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat and French President Francois Mitterrand.

He also addressed a two-day conference on food security in Africa organized by the World Bank.

Geoffrey Clark, head of the Carter Foundation's Africa project launched in 1989, told a press conference Thursday that Mr. Carter had tried to tackle the problem in Ethiopia where more than four million people were threatened with famine in Tigre and Eritrea, victims of both drought and civil war. He gave no further details.

The United States, the Soviet Union and European nations, including France which plans to send a special government envoy to Ethiopia, are trying to obtain a cease-fire on the ground or, failing that, neutral security corridors through which relief food could be transported to famine areas.

Mr. Clark said Mr. Carter's overall objective was to obtain political and financial support for food security projects in Africa, in collaboration with international and regional aid programs such as the United Nations Development Program, World Bank and African Development Bank.

His Africa project has the backing of eight African countries who were all represented at the Paris meeting - Tanzania, Uganda, Botswana, Zambia, Malawi, Mali, Ghana and Senegal.

Representatives from the Development Committee of the Paris-based Organization for Cooperation and Economic Development, the French cooperation ministry, the United States Aid Agency (USAID) also attended the closed door conference.

Sources close to the conference said it was agreed that Mr. Carter would personally undertake "delicate" political steps, particularly those relating to the consequences of regional conflicts and bad economic policies on the risks of famine.

He was also asked to urge rich countries to ensure better regulation of international markets for agricultural products, and to adapt their food aid to meet local needs.

BEIRUT (APRIL 5) - Contacts are under way that could lead to the speedy release of eight French and Belgian hostages held by a pro-Libyan Palestinian faction, a senior official with the group said here Thursday.

"The discussions have yielded some positive elements," said Walid Khaled of the Fatah Revolutionary Council (FRC) in an interview with Agence France-Presse.

He said contacts had been undertaken "directly with the concerned parties" and could lead to the "speedy liberation" of a French woman, her two children and five Belgians.

The woman, Jacqueline Valente, her two elder daughters and the Belgians were siezed by the FRC aboard their yacht, the Silco, in the eastern Mediterranean in November 1987.

Mrs. Valente's two daughters were freed in Libya in December 1988 but she is reported to have given birth to two more children while in captivity.

Mr. Khaled said discussions have so far centered on "FRC demands," which he would not disclose, nor would he say whether the hostages were being held in Libya or Lebanon.

He said Lucien Bitterlin, head of the Franco-Arab Solidarity Association, was taking part in the contacts and was expected soon in Beirut. Mr. Bitterlin also took part in efforts to free Mrs. Valente's daughters in 1988.

The FRC, headed by Abu Nidal, earlier Thursday announced that it would consider an appeal for Mrs. Valente's release issued Wednesday by Libyan leader Moamer Kadhafi.

The Libyan leader had also urged the liberation during the current Islamic holy month of Ramadan of "all hostages and political prisoners, especially those in the Middle East."

His remarks and the subsequent reaction by the FRC coincide with increasing indications here and in Iran that 17 other hostages, all believed held in Lebanon, could be released by the end of the year.

Several of the 17 are reported to be in the hands of pro-Iranian groups, and analysts in Teheran have said Iran is anxious to see an end to the hostage affair in order to attact foreign participation in its economic reconstruction.

Mr. Khaled on Thursday said the release of the Silco hostages could serve as a "prelude" to the liberation of all Western captives, adding that the Fatah Revolutionary Council had been in touch with "certain groups" close to Iran.

The FRC, which is deeply hostile to Palestine Liberation Organization

Chairman Yasser Arafat, is anxious to "strengthen friendly relations between the Arab nation and the French people and with President Francois Mitterrand," according to Mr. Khaled.

A well-informed Palestinian source meanwhile told AFP that the FRC and French authorities concluded a "non-aggression pact" in 1986, under which France released two FRC members accused of killing PLO Paris representative Ezzediin Kalak.

In return, according to the source, the FRC agreed to cease its activities in France.

GEORGETOWN (APRIL 5) - Guyana's state-owned sugar industry's 20,000 workers walked off the job Thursday in demand for increased wages, according to Dr. Cheddi Jagan, the opposition leader in parliament.

Dr. Jagan, who also heads the Guyana Agricultural and General Workers Union (GAWU), said the strike had been called because the Guyana Sugar Corporation (Guysuco) broke off pay talks.

Guyana's state-owned sugar industry fears it may not be able to meet its 1989-90 quota to the European Economic Community (EEC) of 167,000 tons of sugar, negotiated under the Lome Convention trade and aid pact between the community and developing countries in Africa, the Caribbean and Pacific.

Heavy rainfalls have adversely affected harvesting and grinding operations.

Sugar is the biggest foreign exchange earner in Guyana -- followed by bauxite -- with 30 million dollars earnings in 1989.

TAIPEI (APRIL 5) - Taiwan said Thursday it had restored diplomatic relations at ambassador level with the southern African kingdom of Lesotho, which maintains official ties with Beijing.

Foreign Minister Lien Chan told a press conference here that Justin Lekhanya, chairman of Lesotho's military council, had visited Taiwan twice and that the two governments had maintained a "very close relationship" despite a seven-year break in official ties.

Taiwan suspended relations in 1983 when Lesotho, an independent enclave within South Africa, recognized Beijing as representative of all China.

Mr. Lien said that no financial deals figured in the decision to resume ties, taken in March and signed this month, and that the two governments would exchange ambassadors soon.

Lesotho becomes one of 27 countries with diplomatic links with Taiwan, and the fourth country to do so since the government here modified its rigid stance against countries with official links to Beijing in July 1989.

Both Taipei and Beijing claim to be the sole, legitimate representative of all China, from which the Nationalists fled in 1949 after losing a civil war to the communists.

President Lee Teng-Hui told legislators Tuesday that Chinese officials had misunderstood the new policy, adding that it would help reunify the two governments.

China has attacked Taipei's foreign policy as "elastic" and accused the government here of attempting to further divide the island from Chinese territory.

TUNIS (APRIL 5) - The Arab League declared its solidarity with Iraq in the face of a Western ''campaign'' Thursday and charged that warnings of a looming Iraqi nuclear capability were merely a smoke screen for a possible Israeli military attack.

The Arab League Council, at a session requested by Baghdad, roundly condemned the alleged conspiracy against Iraq by ''official circles and the press in Britain, the United States and Israel''.

Accusations against Baghdad represented a ''great threat'', the council said, adding that Western governments would do better to single out Israel with its ''atomic and chemical weapons'' that ''threaten peace and the security of Arab states without pause''.

The League statement came in response to fears expressed in the West that Iraq could be readying the construction of a nuclear bomb. Last week British and U.S. agents in London thwarted an attempt to smuggle nuclear triggering devices to Iraq.

Alarm over Baghdad's possible military course grew further earlier this week, when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein threatened to destroy large parts of Israel with chemical weapons in the event of an Israeli attack on his country.

Noting that Israel still was not party to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Agreement, the League reiterated its backing of Iraq's right to pursue ''scientific and technological progress''.

Any initiative ''seeking to deny an Arab state of this natural right'' was unacceptable, the council statement said.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 5) - About a quarter of a million East Germans demonstrated Thursday in the first show of popular discontent at the terms of their coming unification with West Germany.

The protests in several cities were organized by the East German trade union federation Fdgb, with the support of the East German Social Democrats and the Party of Democratic Socialism, the successor to the old communist party.

Placards held by the protesters denounced property and currency speculators trying to cash in on unification and called for generous welfare benefits to cushion East Germans after unification.

The issue which rallied most demonstrators was the exchange rate to be set for their old money in the course of a monetary union with West Germany planned for this year. Placards said: ''We want 1 to 1.''

The West German central bank went public Saturday with a proposal to convert most of the East German currency at half parity, or a rate of 2 ostmarks to each deutschmark.

Many East German wage-earners had hoped for parity, meaning they would be paid as many deutschmarks in future as they are paid ostmarks at present. The current exchange rate for travel is 3 to 1, while the black market rate is more than 5 to 1.

The biggest rally Thursday was in East Berlin, where about 100,000 people showed up. In the provincial city of Dresden, 70,000 turned out and 50,000 marched in Leipzig, while smaller rallies were held in minor centers.

Fdgb speakers announced they would organise a general strike unless West Germany offered currency parity.

WASHINGTON, (APRIL 5) - Former U.S. president Jimmy Carter, who met with Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) Chairman Yasser Arafat in Paris Wednesday, is not an emissary of President George Bush's administration, the White House said Thursday.

"President Carter is traveling on his own and on his own initiative... there was no specific discussion, no messages, he is not an emissary for our government," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Mr. Arafat said Wednesday that Mr. Carter, the architect of the 1979 Camp David peace accords between Israel and Egypt, had conferred with Mr. Bush before heading for the Paris talks and would brief the U.S. leader on his return.

Mr. Carter did meet with Mr. Bush March 28 on his return from a Middle East tour. A U.S. official then said Mr. Carter had not brought up his meeting with Mr. Arafat.

LIMA (APRIL 5) - Presidential candidates heading into elections Sunday all agree Peru needs to launch a major effort to kill its major export-earner -- the growing of coca bushes.

They are facing a powerful alliance of drug traffickers and growers making coca paste for export from the "sacred leaf of the Incas" under protection of the Shining Path guerrillas and the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement.

With the country on the brink of economic collapse -- pushed by hyperinflation and recession -- drug trafficking has become the country's main source of foreign currency, experts say.

Still, frontrunner Mario Vargas Llosa of the liberal Democratic Front, Alberto Fujimori of the emerging independent group Cambio (Change) 90, Luis

Coca bushes cover 200,000 hectares (500,000 acres) in this South American country of 22 million people, making it the biggest crop in Peru.

The country is the world's largest producer of the coca paste used to make cocaine.

Economist Manuel Romero estimates that coca paste grosses some 2.8 billion dollars annually, of which 2.1 billion remains in the cash-starved country.

While industry and new investments languish, he said "the only activity that is prospering is drug trafficking."

Vargas Llosa, a conservative author, has called not only for mobilizing Peru's police force but for cooperation with Colombia and Bolivia, the other major coca growers in South America.

Peruvian peasant farmers have long harvested coca as a cash crop. They depend upon the guerrillas for protection from authorities and traffickers in nearby Colombia are ready buyers for the coca paste, which they refine into cocaine for export.

Police can drive up the cost of cocaine by disrupting production, but the government must offer the farmers a lucrative alternative cash crop to wean them away from coca, Barrantes says.

He has promised farmers that if he wins the presidency he will supply every kind of technological and agricultural help necessary to produce coffee, corn, rice, palm oil and other products. Peru imports much of its food.

Converting to other crops would be difficult. Former interior minister Jose Barsallo said the cultivation of coca leaves and their transformation into the paste, from which cocaine is refined, employs 600,000 people in Peru.

Peru's cocaine industry produces 1.8 million kilograms (almost four million pounds) of coca paste worth 36 billion dollars annually, according to official Peruvian 1988 figures.

Alva Castro has called for a "national accord to create an unbreakable moral force, a nation truly united in its struggle against drug trafficking," an effort that he said would require "transforming the state."

Fujimori, an 11th hour surprise candidate who may face off against Vargas Llosa in a second round of voting in June if no candidate wins a majority of the vote, has also demanded help from the world's major cocaine consumers.

U.S. President George Bush has pledged cooperation with the Andean countries to depress demand in the United States, the world's principal consumer of cocaine, by cracking down on distributors and users there.

But the Andean countries where the coca is grown and cocaine is produced, want more than stepped law enforcement abroad -- they want the money needed to fight the battle on their own turf.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) - Nepalese police have resorted to widespread torture in trying to repress a seven-week-old wave of demonstrations in favor of multi-party democracy in the Himalayan kingdom, a U.S. rights group charged Thursday.

Asia Watch accused Nepalese authorities of arbitrarily arresting thousands of protesters and of indiscriminately shooting peaceful demonstrators.

It called on the administration of President George Bush to demand an independent investigation of the torture allegations and urge the immediate release of all political detainees.

More than 30 people have died and 100 have been seriously injured in the protests, while more than 10,000 people have been arrested, according to opposition sources in Kathmandu.

The protesters are seeking to abolish Nepal's partyless Panchayat political system and install a multi-party democracy.

In testimony to Congress March 6, Assistant Secretary of State for South Asia John Kelly welcomed Kathmandu's "restraint" in dealing with the protesters.

But given the continuing use of deadly force and widespread reports of torture gathered by two Asia Watch investigators in interviews in Kathmandu last month, the human rights group said such a statement "seems particularly inappropriate."

Washington must "call for full investigations into all incidents of shooting of demonstrators," it said in a report issued Thursday.

MADRID (APRIL 5) - Soviet diplomats Thursday were studying a novel idea to symbolize improving East-West ties following a Spanish mayor's request to President Mikhail Gorbachev to donate a submarine to house migratory birds which flock to his town.

Joan Payola, mayor of the northeastern town of Palau de Plegamans, said the council would pay transport costs and that the submarine would be set afloat on a resevoir in the nearby Hostal de Fum park, which is noted for its wildlife.

In a letter to the Soviet embassy, he said the vessel could be used to house the migrating water fowl and symbolize improving East-West relations.

Payola said he had got the idea after hearing that Spanish steel factories were tearing down junked Soviet Navy submarines for scrap.

He said hundreds of migratory birds passed through the park each year and that the submarine would help ensure their conservation.

TEGUCICALPA (APRIL 5) EFE - The Honduran parliament began debating a motion Thursday to ban the lambada, a popular erotic dance that one deputy said was inciting the country's youth to "collective idiocy".

Deputy Olman Serrano, of the ruling National Party, introduced the motion in support of the Roman Catholic Church's criticism of the hip-grinding dance as an attack on "Hondurans traditional customs and morals".

"I'm not against the music but I am against the dance," said Serrano, who slammed it as "abominable" and a "destroyer of values."

The lambada, a senuous dance set to a rapid Latin beat, first swept the world's discos last year.

Many Hondurans described the proposed ban as "prudish" and "puerile" and suggested the deputies concentrate instead on relieving the country's crushing poverty.

MADRID (APRIL 5) EFE - Spanish Foreign Ministry officials summoned the British consul-general Thursday to demand the release of a Spanish youth jailed after an anti-tax riot in London.

A ministry spokesman said the officials complained to the British diplomat that the youth's arrest was not immediately reported to the Spanish embassy under the terms of a bilateral agreement.

The youth, Mario Turegano, 22, was arrested Saturday for stealing a bottle of cologne from a shop window shattered during a violent tax protest in the city center.

Turegano was sentenced to 28 days in jail Sunday by Judge Roger Davis who said the youth should have known better after two years of military service.

The foreign ministry spokesman said Davis mistook Turegano's two years as a student in a non-military arts and trade school run by the Air Force, because the translator assigned to the Spaniard did not interpret his words exactly.

The Foreign Ministry demanded London rectify "the notable defects" produced during the trial by the faulty translation, the spokesman said.

MEXICO CITY (APRIL 5) EFE - Mexican police have arrested 116 members of an underground radical leftist party and have foiled plans by the group to wage a guerrilla campaign across the country, officials said Thursday.

The arrests Wednesday followed a series of attacks, murders and kidnappings by suspected members of the People's Union Clandestine Workers' Revolutionary Party (PROCUP), police said.

The group had been active in the western state of Guerrero, where some 60 people have been killed in political violence since December in protests over electoral fraud.

High-calibre weapons were seized along with documents containing plans to carry out assassinations and kidnappings of industrialists as part of a campaign to revive guerrilla activity in Mexico, authorities said.

Several political groups protested to police Thursday over arrests.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) today placed Colony Savings Bank, FSB, Monaca, Pa., in receivership and chartered a new federal mutual institution to take its place.

The new institution, Colony Federal Savings Bank, will operate in conservatorship under the oversight of the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC). The RTC will determine which assets and liabilities will be assumed by the newly chartered thrift.

The receivership did not result in any interruption of Colony's day-to-day operations. The institution will remain open for business as usual as will all 10 of its branches. Holders of insured accounts are not affected by the action, which was taken by OTS to protect insured depositors and the interests of the thrift insurance fund. Deposits remain insured to the $100,000 legal limit.

OTS initiated the action because Colony was operating in an unsafe and unsound condition and has suffered losses that have depleted substantially all of its capital, with no prospect of replenishment without federal assistance.

Colony's condition is due primarily to losses on securities trading and commercial real estate loans, and to a substantial writeoff of goodwill that was obtained in 1982 when Colony was formed by the combination of four savings institutions.

As of Dec. 31, 1989, Colony reported assets of $451.4 million, liabilities of $465 million and tangible capital of negative $13.8 million, for a tangible capital-to-assets ratio of negative 0.03 percent.

DALLAS (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - D. E. Foster & Partners L.P. has opened an office in Dallas for its newly established executive search operations.

J. Richard "Rick" Davis, 38, of Richardson, Texas, will be managing director of the firm's new office, located in the Thanksgiving Tower at 1601 Elm Street, and will be responsible for the southwestern U.S. region. Davis has 14 years of experience in the search business and has covered a wide range of service industries, including financial institutions, hospitality, real estate, health care, and oil and gas.

Davis will be one of 10 partners of the new firm that was established in January with the acquisition of the executive search practice of KPMG Peat Marwick, the international accounting and consulting firm, by several of the practice's senior management group. Foster Partners function as a strategic alliance partner with Peat Marwick, although there is no cross ownership.

"Essentially, we're a brand new firm that is built upon a foundation of more than 28 years of history, tradition, and professional practices and approaches," says Dwight E. Foster, executive managing director and senior partner of the firm, which is based in New York. "we are delighted that Rick Davis shares our view of how this business should be run, and we are counting upon him to rebuild the practice in this very important region of the country."

Davis was associated earlier with the Peat Marwick search practice for nine years before joining another national search firm in June 1989. Prior to joining Peat Marwick in 1980, Davis held sales and marketing positions with American Hospital Supply corporation from 1973-76 and worked for two search firms from 1976-80. Davis was graduated from Austin College in 1973 with a bachelor's degree in business administration.

In addition to Dallas, Foster Partners has offices in New York, Stamford, and Washington and affiliates in several overseas capitals through its KPMG alliance.

AKRON, OH (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The BFGoodrich Company's (NYSE: GR) Geon Vinyl Division announced today that, effective May 1, 1990, the market price for Geon pipe-grade polyvinyl chloride resin will be increased by 2 cents to 38 cents per pound, when delivered in bulk rail cars. The appropriate premiums will apply to other Geon resin products and to deliveries west of the Rocky Mountains.

The increase follows a previous increase of 3 cents per pound that was announced in January and became effective in stages in March and April.

In announcing the price increase, the Geon Vinyl Division said that demand for vinyl products remains strong and that PVC supply is projected to be tight in the coming months.

DALLAS (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - American Realty Trust Inc. (NYSE: ARB) today declared a regular cash distribution of 20 cents per share for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990. This distribution is payable May 15, 1990, to shareholders of record as of April 30, 1990.

"The board of directors decided to lower the quarterly dividend because current cash flow does not justify a higher rate," said a spokesperson for the trust. "Over the last few months, affiliates of Southmark Corp. (NYSE: SM) quit paying on five mortgages due the trust which negatively impacted our cash flow. Two of the properties involved have already been foreclosed. One of these properties is under contract to be sold at a significant profit. However, the foreclosure or workout of the other loans is expected to have a negative impact on cash flow for the balance of the year. We are taking this impact into account in reducing the quarterly dividend at this time. We don't expect further changes in the dividend rate this year."

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Michael Dornemann, chairman and CEO of Bertelsmann Music Group (BMG), today announced that Lou Maglia has assumed the presidency of BMG's newly created but as yet unnamed fourth music label. BMG's other labels are RCA, Arista and Ariola.

In making the announcement, Dornemann described Maglia as one of the most respected professionals in the music industry and congratulated him on the success he achieved while serving as president of Island Records and executive vice president of Elektra.

In describing the enthusiasm with which he approaches his new partner and his new challenge, Maglia said "The thing that impresses me most about BMG is its commitment to human capital -- to the people like myself who are the builders of the music business.

"This will be a Los Angeles-based, spontaneous, lean, and hungry music label without committees; I'm anxious to get in there early to make acquisitions and commitments. We'll focus on a well-rounded roster of contemporary music that will include Black, street, and metal as well as rock. Ancillary products related to music will also capture our attention."

Dornemann concluded the announcement by noting that the development of this new label will play a significant role in helping BMG fulfill two of its long-term goals -- that of expanding its business in general and that of developing a more meaningful presence on the West Coast. He also said that he "looks forward to welcoming Maglia to the BMG family of entrepreneurs working in partnership to build a successful global music company."

Bertelsmann Music Group is the $1.6 billion-a-year global music and video operation of Bertelsmann AG, the $7 billion-a-year West German media enterprise. BMG operates in 30 countries.

BLUEFIELD, WV (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Pocahontas Land Corporation, natural resources subsidiary of Norfolk Southern Corporation (NYSE: NSC), has bought a 29 percent average working interest in 77 producing natural gas wells in Pike and Martin counties, Ky., and certain other assets from WJS, Inc., an affiliate of KV Oil & Gas, Inc.

The acquisition for $5.35 million in Norfolk Southern stock was announced jointly by Robert L. Raines, president of Pocahontas, and William J. Simpson, owner of KVOG, at today's closing in Lexington, Ky.

Included in the purchase is a 40 percent interest in PKV Limited Partnership, a newly formed operating entity, which will explore for and develop new gas fields, mainly in West Virginia and Kentucky, as well as manage the existing producing wells. KVOG owns the remaining 60 percent interest in the limited partnership. Simpson said the existing 77 wells are projected to produce about 1.5 billion cubic feet of gas in 1990.

Pocahontas owns and leases out to operating companies its substantial holdings in coal, gas and timber in several states, including West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky. With the present transaction, the company moves into production of natural gas for the first time.

BASKING RIDGE, NJ (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T said today it is extending its switched digital service to 84 more cities and introducing discount rates.

Today's announcement completes a major phase of deployment for ACCUNET(R) Switched Digital Service and brings the number of cities where the service is available to 389, which is the most in the industry, the company said.

ACCUNET Switched Digital Service is a fully-supported, guaranteed end-to-end dial-up digital data service that operates at transmission speeds of 56 or 64 kilobits per second. It is particularly useful for such applications as bulk data transmission, Group IV facsimile and video conferencing.

During the past six months, AT&T has increased the availability of its switched digital service by 370 percent, AT&T said.

AT&T also announced price reductions for the service, introducing night/weekend and evening rate periods. Evening rates are discounted 20 percent off the day rates. Night/weekend rates are 28 percent below day rates.

"Now even more customers can take advantage of dial-up, high-speed digital applications on AT&T's switched network," said Walt Suski, AT&T product manager, ACCUNET Switched Digital Services. "Users find that switched digital service is highly economical, and we have made the price during off- peak hours even more attractive.

"ACCUNET Switched Digital Service offers such capabilities as digital broadcast, intercompany as well as intracompany communications and customized data and image solutions. Customers get outstanding value for critical applications."

ACCUNET Switched Digital Service is provided over a separate "clear digital" network within AT&T's public switched network and is available through T1.5 access in 389 cities, digital switched access in 160 cities and DATAPHONE(R) Digital Service in 83 cities.

The service also offers direct connections to the United Kingdom, France, Japan and Jamaica, Suski added.

Investment Advisor Commentary: -- In line with the fund's cautious short-term stance, the U.S. Treasury Bond market performed decently during March as news of the Fed's strong anti-inflation stance was balanced out by strong U.S. economic data and fear of Japanese curtailment of investing.

-- Over the short-term, the fund's investment adviser believes the U.S. government market should remain stable, while the investment climate could prove to be more favorable longer-term.

-- Due to the relative strengthening of the dollar, the investment adviser has maintained currency hedges on all of its foreign holdings except Canada.

CHICAGO (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Resort Income Investors Inc., (ASE: RII) today announced the declaration of its first quarter dividend of $0.375 per share. The dividend is payable May 15, 1990, to shareholders of record on April 20, 1990.

The dividend of $0.40 per share for the previous three quarters was, in part, the result of the Bonus Interest payment the company received in June 1989 on the retirement of the company's Laguna Niguel loans and reflected the company's policy of distributing the receipt of Bonus Interest over time. The return to the $0.375 per share quarterly dividend reflects the quarterly rate of the annual dividend guarantee.

Annual dividends of $1.50 per share are guaranteed through Oct. 31, 1991, by Hemmeter Guaranty Corporation (HGC). HGC is a single purpose corporation formed to provide the Cash Flow and Mortgage Loan Guaranties to the company.

The company operates as a Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT) under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. As such, it is required to distribute to shareholders at least 95 percent of its taxable income each year to continue to qualify as a REIT.

Resort Income Investors Inc. (RII) is a Chicago-based REIT. RII is a lender focusing on the destination resort market and has a portfolio of participating pre-development mortgage loans made to affiliates of Honolulu-based Hemmeter Corporation.

The Investment Manager of RII is RC&H, Inc., a Chicago-based affiliate of Ruff Callaghan & Hemmeter Company (RC&H Company). (NYSE: ENE), a Houston-based energy company, has signed on as an underwriter for the revered financial program "Wall Street Week with Louis Rukeyser," produced for the PBS system by Maryland Public Television. The sponsorship marks one of the few times Enron, through its philanthropic arm, the Enron Foundation, has used television to reach a nationwide audience.

"One of the public television's longest-running and most-watched programs, 'Wall Street Week with Louis Rukeyser' is a leader in bringing financial news and commentary to the American public," said Kenneth L. Lay, chairman president, and chief executive officer of Enron Corp.

"Through our association with the program, we bring our company before a significant body of decision-makers, business professionals, and investors. Our presence also serves to emphasize the place of natural gas as part of the solution to a cleaner environment and more energy-independent America," Lay said.

Enron Corp., America's leading natural gas company with approximately $9 billion in assets, operates the nation's largest natural gas transmission system; markets natural gas, gas liquids, crude oil and refined products nationally and worldwide; owns 84 percent of Enron Oil and Gas Company, one of the country's largest independent (non-integrated) natural gas production companies; and also is one of the largest independent producers of electricity in the United States with extensive experience in combined heat and power installations.

"We're confident that Enron's corporate goal of increasing its visibility amongst potential investors will be realized with the program's market savvy and affluent viewership," said Raymond K.K. Ho, president and chief executive officer of Maryland Public Television.

"Wall Street Week with Louis Rukeyser" airs Fridays at 8:30 p.m. (ET, check local listings) on PBS. The Enron Corp./Enron Foundation joins Prudential-Bache Securities, The Travelers Corporation, and public television viewers nationwide, in supporting "Wall Street Week with Louis Rukeyser." At Maryland Public Television, the program is produced by Rich Dubroff and directed by George Beneman. John Davis is executive producer.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The Centaur Partners Group today sent the following letter to all stockholders of National Intergroup, Inc. (NYSE: NII):

"Give us time." "Trust us." We believe that is what National Intergroup's management and board have told stockholders for six years.

The management and board have been given time. They have been trusted. What they have given in return, in our opinion, are broken promises and disgraceful results.

NII has responded to this trust by incurring six consecutive years of losses totalling more than $450 million. (These losses refer to net income from continuing operations to holders of common stock.) That's more than $22 a share.

Your trust in the leaders of your company has resulted in a decline of more than 63 percent in the market value of each share of your stock from Jan. 1, 1984, through Nov. 17, 1989 (the day before we started purchasing shares).

We believe that NII stockholders can no longer trust the current management and board to deliver the true value of your stock.

We believe that our plan to place control of National Intergroup back in the hands of the stockholders is the best way to end what we regard as the sorry record of broken promises and to start maximizing shareholder value.

A vote on the attached white consent card in favor of expanding the size of the current 12-member board to 15 members is a first step in that direction.

MILWAUKEE (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - America is keeping its edge. First-quarter sales for Sharp's, Miller Brewing Co.'s new non- alcoholic brew, are more than double company projections, a company official announced today.

Tony Sciolla, new products brand manager, said the overwhelming consumer response to Sharp's is causing spot product shortages throughout the country. To accommodate strong consumer demand, Sharp's is now being brewed in three of Miller's six breweries, with additional capacity being considered.

"The fact that regular beer drinkers are accepting Sharp's as a viable alternative is an acknowledgement of Sharp's real beer taste," Sciolla said. "We want to thank beer drinkers for their support and patience. We're making every effort to brew more product to ensure product availability."

Miller acknowledges Sharp's success in a full-page advertisement in tomorrow's editions of USA Today.

Sharp's was introduced nationally last December and originally brewed in Miller's breweries in Eden, N.C., and Albany, Ga. The company began shipping Sharp's brewed at its Fulton, N.Y., brewery in March.

Sharp's uses a unique Ever-Cool(TM) brewing process, which allows the brew to retain the distinctive taste of beer without its alcohol.

"To produce a non-alcoholic product most brewers use a normal brewing cycle and then remove the alcohol, through evaporation, along with the real beer taste," said Sciolla. "Our Ever-Cool process enables us to brew naturally at lower temperatures, which minimizes alcohol production but allows for the full development of beer flavor and taste."

Sharp's has 74 calories per 12-ounce serving and is available in both 12-ounce cans and 12-ounce non-returnable bottles. By federal regulation non-alcoholic brews contain less than .5 percent of alcohol by volume.

The brand is supported by print and television advertising. The campaign was developed by the Milwaukee-based advertising agency Frankenberry, Laughlin and Constable.

Miller is a wholly owned subsidiary of Philip Morris Companies Inc. (NYSE: MO).

ALPHARETTA, GA (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Digital Communications Associates Inc. (DCA) (NYSE: DCA) today reported earnings of $9.4 million or 64 cents per share for its third fiscal quarter ended March 31, 1990, up 30 percent for $7.3 million or 49 cents per share reported for the same period a year ago.

DCA said that earnings for the quarter ended March 31, 1990, included a gain of approximately $500,000 or three cents per share above amounts previously reported relating to the sale of DCA's wide area networking operation to Racal Electronics Plc.

DCA's revenues for the quarter ended March 31, 1990, were $40.6 million compared to $50.3 million for the same period a year ago. Average shares outstanding for the quarter were 14.7 million vs. 14.9 million for the same period a year ago.

DCA noted that revenues for the quarter ended March 31, 1989, included sales of $12.7 million from the wide area networking operation - which was subsequently sold to Racal - and its Digital Transmission Systems Inc. (DTS) unit.

For the nine months ended March 31, 1990, DCA reported earnings of $28.8 million or $1.94 per share compared to $10.1 million or 68 cents per share reported for the same period a year ago.

Earnings for the nine-month period ended March 31, 1990, included an unusual gain of $4.4 million or 29 cents per share resulting from the sale of DCA's wide area networking operation to Racal and the write off of assets and the establishment of certain reserves relating to DTS.

DCA noted that the $10.1 million in earnings for the nine months ended March 31, 1989 reflected an unusual charge of $12.6 million or 85 cents per share incurred in connection with DCA's acquisition of DTS.

Revenues for the nine months ended March 31, 1990, were $149.7 million compared to $154.2 million for the same period a year ago. Average shares outstanding during the nine months ended March 31, 1990, were 14.8 million vs. 14.9 million for the same period a year ago.

DCA noted that revenues for the nine months ended March 31, 1989, and March 31, 1990, included sales of $41.8 million and $28.7 million respectively from the wide area networking operation - which was subsequently sold to Racal - and DTS.

ARLINGTON, VA (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - USAir reported a 4.3 percent increase in revenue passenger miles flown during March compared with March 1989.

Available seat miles flown during March rose 6.3 percent and passenger boardings were down 1.8 percent. March load factor was 62.9 percent compared with 64.2 percent for March 1989.

The Easter Holiday, one of the top travel periods of the year, was in March last year and will occur in April this year. March 1989 results were favorably impacted by a strike against another major airline.

During the first three months of 1990, USAir posted gains over the comparable period of 1989 of 8.5 percent in revenue passenger miles, 6.7 percent in available seat miles flown and 2.1 percent in passengers boarded. Year-to-date load factor for 1990 was 57.2 percent compared with 56.2 percent for the same period of 1989.

Statistics for 1989 periods prior to USAir's merger with Piedmont Airlines on Aug. 5, 1989, have been restated to reflect the combined airline operations of both carriers on a pro forma basis.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Sutton Holding Corp. announced today that it had entered into an agreement with DeSoto, Inc. (NYSE: DSO) pursuant to which Sutton will participate in DeSoto's previously announced process of exploring means of maximizing shareholder value.

Pursuant to the agreement with DeSoto, Sutton will receive non- public information about DeSoto. In addition, Sutton may discuss with up to seven third parties the possible sale of DeSoto businesses or other business arrangements as part of Sutton's proposal to acquire DeSoto.

The agreement with Desoto also provides that during DeSoto's process of seeking to maximize shareholder value, Sutton will not terminate its current $50 per share tender offer for all of DeSoto's outstanding shares or reduce the per-share price offered in the current tender offer to less than $50 per share.

While this process is continuing, Sutton will not engage in a proxy contest involving DeSoto, and the parties will not pursue certain litigation. DeSoto has also agreed to use its reasonable efforts to set a date no later than May 4, 1990 as the deadline for the submission by third parties of final bids for all or portions of the company.

Under the agreement, Sutton has reserved the right to conduct after June 15, 1990, a proxy contest in connection with DeSoto's rescheduled annual meeting of stockholders to be held on July 16, 1990. If Sutton elects not to pursue a proxy contest, it will be entitled to have three of its nominees included on DeSoto's slate of 13 directors for election at the 1990 annual meeting of stockholders.

William Spier, chairman of the board and president of Sutton, and Michael Zurawin, senior vice president of Sutton, said, "We are pleased that Sutton and DeSoto were able to reach agreement on these matters. We believe the agreement with DeSoto fairly balances the interests of both Sutton and DeSoto, and we believe it will permit both parties to engage in a cooperative effort intended to provide maximum value for DeSoto shareholders."

Sutton also said that in light of the agreement with DeSoto and the significant time that has already elapsed and the length of the process contemplated by DeSoto for maximizing shareholder value, it would not extend the commitments of Creditanstalt and PaineWebber to provide financing for Sutton's current tender offer. These commitments are scheduled to expire on April 8, 1990.

TORONTO (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Clifford H. Frame, chairman and president and chief executive officer of Curragh Resources Inc., announced today the company's worldwide, initial public offering of nine million subordinate voting (common) shares. A preliminary prospectus providing for the offering has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Ontario Securities Commission and will be filed with other Canadian provincial securities commissions. Frame indicated that approximately 4.5 million shares will be offered in Canada, 2.0 million in the United States, 1.5 million in Europe and 1.0 million in the Far East.

Frame said that Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc. will act as global coordinator and will lead manage the United States and international underwriting syndicates and Gordon Capital Corp. will lead manage the Canadian underwriting syndicate and participate in the United States and international offerings. Nesbitt Thomson Deacon Inc. and ScotiaMcLeod Inc. will co-lead the Canadian offering and participate in the international offering.

The worldwide offering will include leading investment banks in the United States, the United Kingdom, Europe and the Far East.

Curragh Resources has two classes of shares, the subordinate voting shares being offered and the multiple voting shares. The rights of the subordinate voting shares and the multiple voting shares are essentially identical except holders of the subordinate voting shares are entitled to one vote per share and the holders of the multiple voting shares are entitled to 10 votes per share. After the offering, Frame Mining Corp. and other companies controlled by Frame will hold all the Multiple Voting Shares.

Of the 9,000,000 shares being offered 6,250,000 shares are being offered by the company and 2,750,000 shares are being offered by Giant Resources Ltd. of Australia as a consequence of its decision to divest its Canadian mining assets.

The net proceeds to Curragh Resources from the sale will be used to retire long-term debt.

Curragh Resources Inc. is a major producer of zinc and lead concentrates. In Canada, it is the second largest producer of zinc concentrate and the largest producer of lead concentrates. In the western world, it ranks with the sixth largest producers of these concentrates.

NOTE: A registration statement relating to these securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission but has not yet become effective. These securities may not be sold nor may offers to buy be accepted prior to the time the registration statement becomes effective. CEDAR HILL, TX (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - NCNB Texas confirmed today that it has entered into a purchase and assumption agreement with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) to assume approximately $12.7 million in deposits of the former First Bank and Trust Co., headquartered here.

The bank was declared insolvent earlier today and turned over to the FDIC as receiver. NCNB Texas paid the FDIC a premium of $250,000 for entering into the agreement.

"Southwestern Dallas County is an important market for NCNB Texas, and because of that we are pleased to be the winning bidder of First Bank and Trust," said Deborah Cannon, NCNB Texas district manager. "We are the strongest-capitalized bank in Texas, and we want to assure the former First Bank and Trust Co. customers that we want them to continue with NCNB."

The deposits represent approximately 4,200 accounts from First Bank and Trust. Cannon said the former First Bank and Trust facility will reopen on its regular schedule on Friday, Apr. 6, as a branch of NCNB.

The former First Bank and Trust is located at 156 Beltline Rd. NCNB Texas reported $33.7 billion in total assets at Dec. 31, 1989. It serves customers through a network of more than 200 banking centers in 69 Texas communities.

DENVER (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Scientific Software-Intercomp Inc. (NASDAQ: SSFT) today reported an operating income of $469,000 for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, on operating revenues of $4,212,000. An overall net loss of $173,000, or $0.05 per share, was reported for the quarter due to large nonoperating costs. This compares with net income for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988, of $421,000, or $0.11 per share, on revenues of $6,421,000. Results for the full year ending Dec. 31, 1989, were a net income of $529,000, or $0.14 per share, on revenues of $20,917,000. This compares with a net loss of $2,150,000, or $0.60 per share, on revenues of $23,509,000 for 1988.

Dr. E.A. Breitenbach, chairman of the Denver-based supplier of proprietary software and consulting services to the worldwide oil and gas industry, reported that overall operations showed a profitable pretax operating income of $469,000 for the quarter due in large part to the effective cost control measures utilized throughout the year and a claim against a subcontractor. However, a one-time lease abandonment charge of $500,000 was taken in the fourth quarter in conjunction with moving the European operation from expensive downtown London offices to more modest quarters in Egham, England. This nonoperating cost resulted in the quarter showing a loss.

Breitenbach said that the company was disappointed with the fourth quarter financial results. Overall revenues were lower than expected because of lower software licensing and delays in closing large consulting studies. He stated that lower revenues are expected to continue for one or two more quarters until new software products, now in testing, are ready for the market.

Breitenbach reported that investment and operating agreements are proceeding with the Halliburton Company following the executive of a letter of intent announced Feb. 27, 1990, between SSI and Halliburton. Final agreement is expected soon.

Breitenbach reported that research and development continues at a record pace in order to position SSI for both current and future markets. The company's Workbench product line for the exploration and production marketplace is on schedule for release in early summer. In addition, four major pipeline and facilities products are scheduled for release during the second quarter. The affect of these product releases on revenues should begin during the second half. Because of the higher development costs incurred, total capitalized software on the balance sheet increased by $1,368,000 even though software amortization for the year was $1,746,000.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The Air Line Pilots Association, which represents Eastern Airlines pilots, issued the following statement today in response to the company's announcement that it will seek to have the Bankruptcy Court void all or part of the pilot labor agreement:

Eastern pilots have been attempting to reach agreement with a company that has refused to bargain in good faith since the opening round. We have said from the beginning that the company's intent is eventual elimination of Eastern and its unions.

The interim agreement addressed many of the company's economic needs, and Eastern pilots are prepared to continue bargaining toward final agreement on appropriate pilot wages and working conditions. To understand why negotiations have dragged on for 33 months, it is only necessary to understand that Frank Lorenzo has never reached final agreement on a pilot contract since he acquired Continental and pushed it into bankruptcy seven years ago. The words "labor peace" and "fair labor contract" are not in Frank Lorenzo's vocabulary. The demise of Eastern unions, and if need be the demise of Eastern itself, are his eventual goals.

Whether this is accomplished by merger into Continental Airlines or by liquidation of Eastern, Frank Lorenzo's intent is clear. The petition to have the Bankruptcy Court void the labor agreement is simply the next step in that process. Having failed to achieve these goals through the National Mediation Board, Eastern management is resurrecting its effort to enlist the Bankruptcy Court in breaking the unions. Eastern failed in an earlier attempt to do so during the strike, and we are confident that the Bankruptcy Court will see through this second attempt.

Regarding the pilot contract, the fact of the matter is that all Eastern pilots could work for free, and Eastern still would not be able to overcome its problems, which are rooted in Texas Air's view of Eastern as an asset to be looted rather than as an ongoing, viable airline.

In announcing the Section 1113 petition to abrogate the pilot contract, Eastern complained about the pilots' desire to regain their jobs. The company conveniently overlooked the fact that the interim agreement was based on a quid pro quo expectation that jobs would be part of the exchange for the economic relief sought by the company. Eastern now in effect is saying, "I already took one slice of your pie, now I want more, and I'm still not going to give you the jobs you wanted in exchange."

The company's reference to its "obligation to be fair to creditors" is rank hypocrisy. The company has strung the creditors along since the beginning of the bankruptcy, starting with its promises for payment of 100 cents on the dollar, on down to its latest offer of 25 cents, in the form of 5 cents cash plus Eastern and Texas Air notes. Reports that creditors are starting to call for appointment of a Bankruptcy Court trustee are hardly surprising at this point.

The company is drifting, with no clear direction or sensible business plan. Management's latest proposals are more of the same failed formula to shrink Eastern to profitability. The bankruptcy examiner's report detailing the stripping of Eastern assets by Texas Air confirmed what the employee groups had been saying all along.

The next few months will be a critical period in determining whether Eastern survives. Management should focus its efforts on constructive goals that aim toward rebuilding Eastern, rather than the present course of tearing it down piece by piece.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - In this century, we've progressed from horse-drawn wagons to landing men on the moon, from primitive operator-assisted telephones to instant worldwide satellite communication and from limited medical knowledge to an understanding of most factors that affect our health.

But despite our many technological advances, we haven't been able to conquer one of the most mundane maladies of them all -- bad breath. Every day nearly 80 million adult Americans attempt to freshen their mouths with an assortment of products that only provide a temporary cover-up.

Now, however, there may finally be an answer to bad breath. Two California visionaries -- Douglas Pratt, a pharmacologist specializing in cellular physiology and Steven DeVore, a successful entrepreneur -- have developed a "super" breath tablet that they claim lasts for hours rather than the 10 to 12 minutes of their sugar-flavored counterparts.

According to Pratt and DeVore, IntiMint incorporates an ingenious time-release technology. Instead of being chewed or sucked, the small (1/4- by 1/8-inch) pillow-shaped tablet rests comfortably in the mouth between the upper gum and cheek. After a few minutes, the tablet softens and turns to a gel. The saliva slowly dissolves the gel, providing a continuous release of natural mint extract in the mouth for two, four or six hours. The product is all natural and sugar free. It not only sweetens the mouth, but promotes saliva which helps to wash away the bacteria that cause bad breath.

Pratt and DeVore developed their own time-release system, but when they discovered that a major international pharmaceutical house -- Forest Laboratories -- had already developed and patented worldwide a time-release technology called Synchron, they decided to join forces.

Though the Synchron time-release technology can produce a tablet that lasts up to eight hours, the IntiMint tablet is formulated to last for two hours to fit the way most people segment their day. IntiMint will cost $30 for a bottle of 200 tablets.

The first IntiMint tablets will be available to the public in May.

NEWARK, NJ (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The resurgence of development in Newark was lauded here today as Public Service Electric and Gas Company (PSE&G), New Jersey's largest utility, launched a campaign to attract new business to the state's largest city.

Speaking before an audience that included New Jersey Gov. Jim Florio, Newark Mayor Sharpe James, and more than 250 brokers, real estate developers and government officials, E. James Ferland, PSE&G chairman, president and chief executive officer, said the launch of the development program "is a continuation of the urban initiatives campaign we announced three years ago at Liberty State Park in Jersey City."

"At that time," Ferland said, "we focused attention on seven of the state's largest cities and their combined redevelopment opportunities. Today, we will focus on just Newark. The city has come a long way from the days of the late '60s and the early '70s. At the start of the '90s, it stands on the threshold of a new era."

Ferland noted that since 1980, more than $6 billion has been invested in Newark, with approximately 50 development projects, including $1.8 billion in office/commercial projects and $450 million in industrial projects currently under way or about to start.

Harold W. Borden, PSE&G senior vice president-external affairs, noted, "World-class developers are coming to Newark to undertake major commercial and residential projects."

The PSE&G campaign, Ferland said, includes a new full-color brochure -- "Newark: The Excitement Is Sky-High," which depicts projects recently completed, under construction, or proposed, a detailed map of project sites, and information on available business incentives and people to contact. In addition, PSE&G unveiled a new 15-minute videotape, "Newark: Primed for Growth," which includes comments on the business climate in the city from business leaders, James, and members of his administration.

Ferland also presented the following PSE&G Urban Initiatives awards: A private sector award in honor and memory of Robert V. Van Fossan presented to Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company for its continuing commitment to making Newark a better place in which to live and work. The award was accepted by Henry E. Kates, Mutual Benefit's president and chief executive officer.

A public sector award presented to Newark Mayor Sharpe James for uplifting the spirit of the city and generating a new feeling of confidence among its people.

ANN ARBOR, MI (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - MEDSTAT Systems, Inc. (NASDAQ: MDST) announced today new service agreements with GenCorp and Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation, both headquartered in Ohio, along with Merck & Co., headquartered in New Jersey. These corporations will be using MEDSTAT databases and analytical computing services to control the rising cost of their group health insurance for over 50,000 U.S. employees.

"Rising healthcare benefits costs continue to significantly impact the cost of doing business for most U.S. corporations, as well as the out-of-pocket costs, co-payments and deductible amounts paid by employees " said Ernest G. Ludy, MEDSTAT chairman and chief executive. "At a total cost of between $2,000-$3,000 per employee, companies are increasingly realizing the importance of tracking their healthcare costs in order to target the appropriate financial and utilization controls, and to achieve a deceleration in their future cost trends."

ROCHESTER, NY (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Extraordinary collections of rare books, letters, cameras, patent materials and television commercials, illuminating more than 110 years of the history of Eastman Kodak Company (NYSE: EK), have been donated by the company to the International Museum of Photography at George Eastman House. The collections have an estimated value in excess of $2.5 million.

"This gift, overall, is equivalent to a museum in itself, both in the quality it represents and in its value and size," Colby H. Chandler, chairman and chief executive officer at Kodak, and James L. Enyeart, director of the Museum, said in a joint statement.

The gift includes:

-- Almost all business and personal correspondence received or written by George Eastman, founder of Eastman Kodak Company, from 1879 until August 1932. The letters -- some handwritten and signed, some typewritten copies -- had been housed in basement archives at Kodak. They will now become a part of the Richard and Ronay Menschel Library at George Eastman House. In all, more than 45,000 items are included.

-- A sizable collection of cameras from Kodak's Patent Collection, comprising about 28,000 items from many different manufacturers and covering a century of photographic history, from the late 19th century to 1975. The collection, valued at more than $750,000, includes many duplicates of items already in the Museum collection. Under the terms of the gift, the Museum can sell duplicate items to other museums, providing significant funds for restoration and maintenance of the remaining collection.

Also included in the gift are the glass-front cabinets in which the collection will be stored, which will help make these cameras accessible to the public.

The cameras become part of the Eastman Historical Collection, which Kodak gave to the Museum shortly after it opened 40 years ago, and other significant gifts of cameras which Kodak has donated over the years.

LYNDEN, WA (APRIL 5 PR NEWSWIRE - Dr. James P. Cox, spokesman for the Bon Dente Company, today announced the development a new product, Prime O Lean(TM). This new animal fat replacer is technically referred to as "artificial adipose tissue." An extensive patent has been filed. Prime O Lean was developed in response to fast food chain and retail consumer needs for hamburger and sausage products with reduced saturated fat and cholesterol.

Prime O Lean replaces normal fat portions of chopped meat, the result being hamburger or sausage products considerably reduced in both cholesterol and saturated fat. Prime O Lean can be added to very lean ground meat (less than 9 percent) to replace animal fats which are normally added to increase the percentage of fat required for various products. All of the flavor, texture and juiciness preferred by consumers are retained but with over 50 percent less cholesterol.

Prime O Lean hamburger looks, cooks and tastes like hamburger. It will sell competitively with extra lean ground beef, provide a higher cooked yield and remain fresher for longer periods of time after preparation.

Cox stated, "We have created a new choice for the health conscious consumer, one which is judged by focus groups to be better than the natural product. However, our ultimate goal for Prime O Lean is a 75 percent cholesterol reduction and a 50 percent calorie reduction for hamburger and sausage meat. We have already obtained cholesterol and saturated fat reductions of over 50 percent and have developed technology for the calorie reduction, as well.

"In sausage, the reduction is even greater," Cox went on to say. "Cholesterol and saturated fat reduction are not the only gains. Recent focus groups judged Prime O Lean hamburger to be tastier, juicier, better textured and of slightly greater yield than equivalent hamburger made with regular beef or pork fat.

"Our marketing consultants report that Prime O Lean is a 'breakthrough' product. We believe that fast food chains will be anxious to begin serving Prime O Lean. In addition, at least one major producer of beef and pork meat products will produce Prime O Lean under license for the consumer market," Cox said.

The Bon Dente Company is a seasoned research and development firm dedicated to serving the needs of large corporations by generating and licensing innovative, market-ready new products. To date, Bon Dente has signed a recent agreement with a Fortune 100 company for Egglite(TM), a cholesterol free whole egg analogue. Other products developed by Bon Dente are Ultrarice(TM) and vitamin A enriched grains developed in conjunction with the USDA.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Woolworth Corporation (NYSE: Z) reported that total sales for the five weeks ended March 31 rose 2.5 percent to $794 million from $774 million in the comparable year-earlier period, despite the fact that the Easter selling season this year falls in the April reporting period, in contrast to 1989 when it occurred in the March period.

Domestic sales for the five-week period decreased 1.0 percent to $476 million from $481 million, and foreign sales, expressed in U.S. dollars, increased 8.2 percent. If foreign exchange rates had remained constant, foreign sales would have increased 4.2 percent and total sales would have increased 1.1 percent.

Domestic comparable store sales decreased 3.7 percent. For the cumulative nine weeks, total sales rose 7.0 percent to $1,356 million from $1,267 million in the comparable year-earlier period. Domestic sales increased 4.6 percent to $807 million from $771 million, and foreign sales, expressed in U.S. dollars, increased 10.8 percent. If foreign exchange rates had remained constant, foreign sales would have increased 6.9 percent and total sales would have increased 5.6 percent. Domestic comparable store sales rose 2.1 percent.

Harold E. Sells, chairman and chief executive officer, stated, "Domestic sales in March exceeded our plan, and while total sales for the period showed only a small gain over the prior-year period, they were satisfactory considering the fact that last year's March results included the important Easter selling season. This highlights the merits of viewing sales for both March and April as a single reporting period in making year-to-year comparisons."

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - EJV Partners, L.P. (EJV), a company formed by six financial services firms, today announced its intention to provide a broad base of market information services to the financial services industry.

In addition, D. Bruce Peterson has been named chief executive officer. Peterson, 43, was formerly executive vice president and general manager of the information services division of SEI Corporation of Wayne, Pa., a leading supplier of information, financial and evaluation services to the financial community.

The dual announcements were made by Michael Balk, a partner of international management consultants Booz-Allen & Hamilton Inc., who led the project in which Booz-Allen worked with six participating firms on formation of EJV and its business plan.

According to Peterson, EJV has been formed by a group initially consisting of affiliates of the First Boston Corporation; Goldman, Sachs & Co.;

Morgan Stanley and Co. Incorporated; Salomon Brothers Inc; Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. and, subject to regulatory approval, Citibank N.A.

Over time, additional firms are expected to participate. Customers & Services EJV will provide securities prices, research and analysis based on information provided by participating firms and others.

"Our first emphasis will be on putting together a profitable, independent entity built on products using the highest-quality information, including pricing, historical data, and securities descriptions," said Peterson.

The initial products will focus on fixed income and should be available to the marketplace during the first year of the venture.

Peterson said that EJV would utilize "an open architecture concept" which would allow other organizations, including information vendors, to distribute incremental services through its network. It is also envisioned that subscribers would be able to mix EJV data with their own to meet individual needs.

EJV sees demand for its products eventually spanning every facet of the securities industry -- form large sell-side institutions (broker- dealers) to participants on the buy side, and from large institutional firms to smaller clients.

GLASTONBURY, CT (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - DataImage, Inc. (NASDAQ: DATA) of Glastonbury, Conn. announced today the successful installation of an image-processing system at Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation at its Boston facility.

Stone & Webster offers professional consulting, engineering, design, construction and management services worldwide to a variety of industries including power, process, chemical, pulp and paper, and transportation sectors. In conjunction with system engineers at Stone & Webster, DataImage custom-designed an image-processing system which automates and organizes the functional applications of the Treasury Department i.e.; account payables, account receivables, billing and general accounting. For the design and implementation of the installation, DataImage's expertise in system integration was combined with Stone & Webster's expertise in records management, system analysis and system implementation to create a fully integrated account billing support system.

DataImage's system coordinates the image-processing functions of input, index, storage, retrieval, and distribution with the functions of billing clients to provide document backup as support to billings using both the company's mainframe and a networked personal computer platform. Once automated, questions regarding bills can be addressed on-line and resolved quickly.

The system is important to Stone & Webster because it coordinates the organization of unstructured information (receipt, third party invoices, etc.) with internally structured information that can be retrieved from Stone & Webster's own mainframe. In terms of the magnitude, Stone & Webster will image a total of 150,000 pages per month (if stacked, 60 feet of paper documents or as high as a six-story building). With the DataImage system, Stone & Webster sends the images to its mainframe, which compiles the structured and the unstructured information in print order by bill and automatically sends it to the Xerox 4050 to be printed.

Robert L. Brasher, president of DataImage stated that "This is one of the more dynamic, fully integrated image-processing systems in the country. The system was co-designed between the engineers of DataImage and Stone & Webster to utilize the relative strengths of both the mainframe and the personal computer platform employed at Stone & Webster. DataImage's open architecture approach allows for future upgrades to its existing hardware with a software solution rather than expensive hardware."

As a systems integrator of hardware and software components, DataImage, Inc. designs, assembles, installs and maintains image- processing systems. The company's image-processing system captures, indexes, manages, files, retrieves, and re-files text, data and images (non-computerized information). Since July 1987, DataImage has sold more than 25 systems to corporate customers including Fortune 500 companies, financial institutions, insurance companies and a regional brokerage house.

PHILADELPHIA (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) said today that the maintenance outage underway at Unit No. 2 at the Peach Bottom Atomic Power Station in York County is being extended until approximately mid-April to accommodate further review and testing of the unit's Emergency Service Water (ESW) system.

The unit was taken off line on March 3 for a planned, four-week, mid-cycle outage for maintenance, testing and instrument calibration.

Dickinson M. Smith, PE vice president for Peach Bottom, said the extension will enable plant personnel to conduct a series of tests on the unit's ESW system, similar to tests done at the plant's Unit 3 during an outage in early March.

The need for the tests was identified during recent reviews of the plant's design and testing requirements by the company and the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC).

The ESW system is a water cooling system that cools rooms housing emergency core cooling system (ECCS) pumps, and also cools the unit's diesel generators. The ECCS functions as a backup water safety system designed to cool the reactor in the event normal core cooling systems would fail.

Smith said flow tests of the water cooling system are necessary to make sure it is receiving adequate cooling water. Similar tests, he said, confirmed sufficient flow in the Unit 3 ESW system.

He said the results of the Unit 2 tests will be presented to the NRC prior to the unit's restart, as were the tests of Unit 3.

Unit 3 went back on line on March 11 and currently is operating at full power.

DALLAS (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - JCPenney (NYSE: JCP) stores and catalog sales for the five weeks ended March 31, 1990 increased 9.7 percent, to $1,351 million from $1,233 million in the comparable 1989 period. On a comparative store basis, that is stores open at least a year, sales rose 8.7 percent.

Commenting on March sales results, William R. Howell, chairman of the board, said that sales of both stores and catalog were strong during the period. The men's area showed the largest increases, led by suits, sportswear, and athletic footwear. Strong gains also occurred in home furnishings, particularly bedding, bath shop, and window coverings. Other contributors included women's and junior sportswear, lingerie, and fine jewelry. Howell noted additionally that shopper interest was sparked by a semi-annual credit promotion held in the last two weeks of the month.

For the 9 weeks ended March 31, 1990, sales of JCPenney stores and catalog rose 9.0 percent, to $2,231 million from $2,047 million for the same period a year earlier.

JACKSONVILLE, FL (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The Acuvue(R) (etafilcon A) Disposable Contact Lens, the product eyecare practitioners prescribe for more patients than any other lens, is now available nationally for farsighted patients, according to Vistakon, Inc., the Johnson & Johnson (NYSE: JNJ) company that manufactures the lens.

"The new product line represents another first for Vistakon," said Philip Keefer, Vistakon's executive vice president of marketing. "When we introduced Acuvue for nearsighted patients in 1987, it was the country's first disposable contact lens, creating an entirely new category of contact lens wear. Now, it's first again -- the first disposable contact lens for farsighted patients to be in full nationwide distribution," he said.

"Acuvue lenses have been extremely well accepted by doctors and patients alike. Independent market data show that in less than three years, the lens has become the number one soft contact lens brand prescribed for new soft contact lens patients," said Keefer, "including both initial fittings and patients refit from other lenses.

"The lens reached this position," he said, "because of its many advantages over conventional soft lenses. Doctors and patients report that it provides superior visual acuity, comfort, and convenience. Complex cleaning regimes are not necessary, and continuous lens replacement helps minimize problems related to long-term deposit buildup. The lens also offers the opportunity for improved patient care. Each time the patient returns to the doctor's office to pick up new lenses, the doctor can check the patient's eyes to ensure continued good eye health."

Keefer described the new line of lenses as a "boon to farsighted patients who qualify for soft contact lens wear." The American Optometric Association estimates that close to 60 percent of the U.S. population is farsighted to some degree with the majority of this segment requiring vision correction.

According to Keefer, the new lenses for farsighted correction are an option for many patients who need bifocals, or "half glasses." Such patients have the condition doctors call "presbyopia."

Simply stated, presbyopia is a natural consequence of getting older, usually beginning around age 40. As the eyes age, their focusing ability decreases. Consequently, a person can usually see objects at a distance well while objects close by may seem dim or blurred. Research shows that approximately 70 million American are presbyopic.

One of the more commonly used techniques for correcting presbyopia is "monovision," which involves wearing a lens for near vision on one eye, and, if necessary, a lens for distance vision on the other.

"Our new lenses for farsighted correction provide monovision patients with the convenience of disposability as well as the sharp, clear vision that has become synonymous with the name Acuvue," added Keefer.

He said that patients should consult their doctors for the appropriate Acuvue wearing regimen, including a new daily wear option.

"The availability of lenses for farsighted correction should greatly expand the universe of potential Acuvue wearers, refining our position as the number one prescribed soft contact lens for new patients," Keefer said.

STUTTGART, WEST GERMANY (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Mercedes-Benz has built its two millionth automobile equipped with the ABS anti-lock braking system. Mercedes first offered the safety advance -- which it co-developed with Robert Bosch GmbH -- in 1978 as an option in its top European models. Since late 1988, ABS has been standard equipment in all Mercedes-Benz models sold in North America.

The system is designed to preserve steering control and stability during hard braking on slippery surfaces by sensing when any tire is about to start skidding and then quickly and automatically controlling the braking force applied to that wheel. Effectively, the system can "pump" that brake as needed, up to 10 times per second, under electronic control. Each front wheel and both rear wheels are monitored and controlled separately, allowing the system to cope with hazards such as ice patches or wet leaves.

Mercedes several years ago released its trademark rights to the term ABS -- which actually stands for "Anti-Blockier-System," or anti- blocking system -- so that it has now become the generic descriptor for virtually all anti-lock brake systems.

Although they began working on ABS with Bosch in 1975, Mercedes engineers started researching anti-lock braking in 1959, showing a prototype system in 1970. Bosch's developments in digital electronics allowed ABS to become a practical reality and a significant contributor to the prevention of auto accidents.

FAIRFIELD, NJ (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Ogden Projects, Inc. (NYSE: OPI), today announced it has completed the purchase of the Wallingford Resource Recovery Facility in Connecticut and commenced operation of the facility to provide 20-year solid waste disposal services for five Connecticut municipalities.

The facility processes up to 420 tons of municipal solid waste per day from the host community of Wallingford and the communities of Cheshire, Hamden, Meriden and North Haven. Waste is burned to create steam for sale to a local American Cyanamid installation and electricity for sale to Connecticut Light and Power Company. The original developer, Vicon Recovery Systems, Inc., filed for bankruptcy in 1988 as the facility neared completion of construction. The facility uses Enercon combustion technology.

OPI contributed $9.1 million in equity. The $55 million facility was originally financed through project revenue bonds issued by the state sponsor, the Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority (CRRA). OPI operates the facility through special subsidiaries in accordance with a service agreement with CRRA. OPI had been operating and maintaining the facility under a separate interim agreement since September 1989.

"The purchase by OPI assures safe, long-term solid waste disposal for the participating towns, and is the centerpiece for a statewide program enabling two-thirds of the communities in the state to address their long-term needs," stated Robert E. Wright, executive vice president of the CRRA. "We are pleased to have a 20-year solid waste disposal solution provided by an operator of Ogden's caliber," said Philip Hamel, project coordinator representing the five communities.

"Ogden Projects is particularly pleased to have helped the towns avoid a failed project and ensuing disposal crisis by providing long- term disposal service with the protection of technical performance and cost guarantees that we provide all our client communities nationwide," said David L. Sokol, president and chief executive officer of OPI.

"Ogden's commitment to work with the parties to solve the complex problems related to the Vicon bankruptcy was critical to the success of this project, and was the primary reason we committed to back this effort," said Gary Neus, vice president of National Westminster Bank PLC, which furnished an alternate letter of credit to secure the outstanding debt.

Ogden Projects, Inc., through its subsidiary, Ogden Martin Systems, Inc., is a leading full-service builder and operator of waste-to-energy and recycling facilities for municipalities in the United States. OPI currently has 27 projects in operation, under construction or in development in 14 states.

GREENWICH, CT (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - United Parcel Service has acquired an interest in Bermuda Delivery Services Ltd. (BDS), a package and document delivery firm located in Hamilton, Bermuda. Terms of the sale were not announced.

Acting on a strategy of expanding its worldwide reach through acquisitions and selection of authorized service representatives, UPS has begun to strengthen its presence in Central and South America and the Caribbean basin.

"BDS is a natural fit for UPS," said Joe Blanchard, UPS Americas international manager, "because it has developed a strong customer base in Bermuda through its reputation for high quality service."

"Our customers can only benefit from this expanded service," said Henry A. Tavares, who founded BDS in 1985. "Besides having a reputation for service excellence, UPS has worldwide reach that can mean new trade opportunities for our customers."

UPS, based in Greenwich, Conn., is a worldwide company serving all 50 states and more than 180 countries and territories. With a volume of 2.8 billion packages and documents in 1989, and revenues of more than $12 billion, UPS is the largest package delivery company in the world.

ST. LOUIS (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Ocuvite(R), the first major vitamin and mineral supplement formulated specifically for eye care patients, has been introduced by Storz Ophthalmics, a subsidiary of American Cyanamid Company (NYSE: ACY).

Ocuvite supplements the dietary intake of zinc, selenium and the antioxidants beta-carotene (the most natural form of vitamin A), vitamin C and vitamin E in people who have or may be at risk of developing chronic eye diseases. Ocuvite contains more elemental zinc than any other leading multi-vitamin/multi-mineral product.

Zinc, selenium and vitamins A, C and E are "key essential elements in keeping the eye, particularly the aging eye, healthy," said David Newsome, M.D., clinical professor of Ophthalmology at Tulane University School of Medicine. "The eye has special nutritional demands, and a diet poor in nutrients such as zinc and antioxidants may render the eye more susceptible to damage."

Ocuvite was formulated based on recent studies which suggest a possible link between dietary deficiencies and chronic eye diseases such as night blindness and macular degeneration. The elderly are particularly vulnerable to degenerative changes in the eye and are frequently found to have nutritionally deficient diets.

Each year an estimated 167,000 new cases of macular degeneration, the leading cause of severe vision loss in the elderly, are seen in physicians' offices. Most of these visits are by persons age 60 and over.

Ocuvite may be taken by people whose diet might benefit from the special combination of components in this new nutritional supplement.

Ocuvite is a non-prescription product available in bottles of 60 uniquely eye-shaped, bi-layered tablets. Eye patients are encouraged to consult their physician to determine need and dosage.

Ocuvite is manufactured and distributed by the Lederle Laboratories division of American Cyanamid Company, and marketed by Storz Ophthalmics.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Westinghouse Electric Corp. (NYSE: WS) today announced it has agreed to sell substantially all of the assets in its beverage group to a new corporation formed by Bart Brodkin, current president of the Westinghouse beverage group, and other members of the management organization.

Financing is being provided by Citicorp Venture Capital, Ltd.; Hong Capital Investors, L.P.; and other institutional investors.

Westinghouse will purchase a 15 percent interest in the new venture. Other terms were not disclosed.

Headquartered in Vernon, Calif., the Westinghouse beverage group consists of two divisions. The western division includes facilities and bottling franchises in southern and central California; Las Vegas, Nev., Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz.; and Albuquerque, N.M. The Caribbean division includes Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The world's largest bottler of 7-Up, the beverage group bottles and distributes a wide variety of beverages. In addition to 7-Up, its quality portfolio of nationally-branded trademarks include RC Cola, A&W Root Beer, Sunkist Orange, Hawaiian Punch, and Seagram's Wine Coolers. It also distributes Perrier and Evian bottled water.

"Remaining in the beverage industry no longer fits the corporation's long-term strategy," said John C. Marous, Westinghouse chairman and chief executive officer. "The new ownership structure, with Westinghouse as a minority investor, will enable the beverage operations to compete more flexibly in the rapidly changing soft drink bottling industry."

Bankers Trust Commercial Corp. has provided a commitment letter for senior financing and Equitable Capital of The Equitable Life Assurance Society has provided a commitment letter for mezzanine financing. Transfer of the beverage franchises and completion of the financing are required before closing.

Citicorp Venture Capital is a subsidiary of Citibank, N.A., headquartered in New York. Hong Capital Investors is managed by Hong & Co., a Richmond-based investment firm led by James M. Hong.

The beverage group employs about 2,000 people. The new owners are expected to offer employment to all of the employees affected by the sale.

CINCINNATI (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The Charter Company (NYSE: CHR) announced today that it has entered into an agreement in principle with The Circle K Corporation (NYSE: CKP) to purchase two subsidiaries of Circle K, New England Petroleum Distributors, Inc. and Charter Marketing Company (Connecticut), for approximately $26 million in cash.

These subsidiaries were included in the sale of Charter's gasoline and convenience store operations to Circle K in 1988, and are engaged primarily in the wholesale distribution of gasoline to dealers at locations in the New England area including some that are owned or leased by the subsidiaries.

The transaction will be subject to conditions including the negotiation and execution of a definitive agreement, requisite corporate approvals following evaluation by investment bankers and necessary regulatory approvals. An early completion of the transaction is anticipated.

Approximately 51 percent of Charter's common stock is owned by American Financial Corporation, which also owns approximately 15 percent of Circle K's common stock. American Financial Corporation is the beneficial owner of approximately 38 percent of Circle K's common stock, calculated by assuming that only preferred stock and warrants owned or controlled by American Financial Corporation (including shares of Circle K preferred stock owned by Charter) are converted into common stock.

The Charter Company's petroleum operations include supplying fuel oil to electric utility companies, trading petroleum products in the open market, and a 24.5 percent interest in an oil producing concession in the Middle East. Charter also maintains a portfolio of cash and short-term investments which is being held for possible acquisitions of operating businesses.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of General Public Utilities (NYSE: GPU) today declared an 18 percent increase in its quarterly cash dividends in common stock.

The quarterly dividend of 65 cents per share is payable May 30, 1990, to shareholders of record on April 27. The board of directors raised the dividend 10 cents per share from 55 cents per share.

"I am pleased we were able to increase the dividend," said Standley H. Hoch, GPU chairman, president and chief executive officer. "The 18 percent increase reflects GPU's strong financial condition, improved overall operating performance and the success of our continuing cost- containment programs.

"We understand the importance of the dividend to our shareholders and expect to continue to review the dividend from time to time. In view of our actions during the past few years, an annual review may be most appropriate."

GPU reinstated a dividend in April 1987 after seven years of omission following the accident at Three Mile Island Unit 2. With the latest dividend increase, GPU has raised the dividend four times since 1987.

HARRISBURG, PA (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Environmental Resources Secretary Arthur A. Davis today announced the award of a $2 million contract to Camp Dresser and McKee of Lancaster to provide technical and engineering services for Pennsylvania's Hazardous Sites Cleanup Program.

"This contract will provide increased engineering and expertise to help the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) to protect public health and safety by cleaning up more hazardous waste sites," Davis said.

The company will perform sites assessments and investigations, develop engineering studies and devise cleanup plans for the contaminated sites.

Davis said the contract, which is effective for two years, was awarded under the Commonwealth's competitive bid process. It is the fifth contract that has been awarded by DER for site cleanup services since the hazardous sites cleanup program began last year.

The cleanup program, proposed by Gov. Robert P. Casey, gives the state the authority to cleanup hazardous sites that may not qualify for the federal Superfund program.

Under the act, the Commonwealth can order responsible parties to clean up hazardous sites, or DER may use state funds to perform cleanups and recover costs from the responsible parties.

The hazardous sites cleanup program is funded by about $50 million in annual fees on the transportation and management of hazardous waste, a portion of the Capital Stock and Franchise Tax and general fund revenues.

ARLINGTON, VA (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - We can make it ... but will they buy it? That's the key question facing today's high-technology marketers.

Bell Atlantic (NYSE: BEL) stood up to the challenge recently by conducting a first-of-its-kind test of integrated services digital network (ISDN) technology with 30 Bell Atlantic employees and their families living in Silver Spring, Md., a Washington suburb.

"Communications equipment and systems are advancing so quickly that there's almost no limit to what can be done," said Tim Brenton, Bell Atlantic information services manager. "The real question is whether people are comfortable with the technology and whether they'll actually use it. The only way to find out what will actually happen with a product is for it to be used by real people in real-life situations. That was Bell Atlantic's intent in creating a 'living laboratory' in Silver Spring."

Bell Atlantic's ISDN test, conducted with the participation of AT&T, began June 26, 1989, and ran for six months. During the trial, existing telephone lines to each employee's home were modified to provide the capability of simultaneously transmitting two voice conversations and various computer documents.

The 30 families participating in the "living lab" then were provided personal computers and special ISDN telephones by AT&T, along with 20 different telecommunications services, including Bell Atlantic IQ Services Bell Atlantic Gateway service and the PRODIGY (A) interactive personal service.

Results of the experiments will be used to fine tune everything from the design of telephone sets to the combinations of features that will be offered once residential ISDN service becomes widely available over the next several years.

Initial findings indicate consumers will respond first to voice features such as call forwarding, conferencing and home intercom and later to data features, as they learn about them.

People didn't trust moving money or paying bills by computer at first, but eventually most participants took advantage of these features. Once they got the hang of it, people who had never used personal computers before found they were using their PCs and the ISDN link daily to forward calls, manage money and connect their homes to vital resources in their offices and in banks, libraries, financial databases and even department stores.

Interestingly, children in all the families were much more at ease with the data technology, feeling equally at home playing computer games as they did searching Grolier's encyclopedia.

Bell Atlantic is now in the process of trying to confirm the findings of its living laboratory through traditional market research, including a detailed 800-person survey.

Bell Atlantic, based in Philadelphia, is a leading source of communications and information management services and systems.

MIAMI (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastern Airlines today reported sharp improvements in March and first quarter traffic this year, compared with the same partially strike-affected period in 1989.

The airline had a 66.83 percent passenger load factor -- percentage of seats occupied -- last month, against 50.08 percent in March a year ago. A strike by three unions occurred March 4, 1989, severely curtailing operations.

For the quarter, Eastern's load factor this year was 63.23 percent, compared with 59.25 percent in the January-March period a year ago.

Revenue passenger miles in March were 1.72 billion, against 299 million for the same month last year. Capacity, as measured by available seat miles, was 2.57 billion versus 598 million.

First quarter results showed an increase in revenue passenger miles to 4.75 billion, up from 4.35 billion a year ago. Available seat miles rose to 7.51 billion, from 7.34 billion.

Passenger volume for March soared from 374,000 to 2.16 million this year, a reflection of the strike's first month impact. Eastern flew 5.83 million passengers in the quarter, compared with 5.22 million in January-March 1989.

SENECA, SC(APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE- Oconee Nuclear Station has completed its best quarter in history, generating 31 percent of all electricity consumed by Duke Power customers since January 1.

The three units at Oconee Nuclear Station operated at 100 percent capacity during January, February and March, generating 5.5 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity for customers.

Oconee, Duke Power Co.'s (NYSE: DUK) first and largest nuclear station, is beginning its 18th year of operation.

In addition, unit 1 has been on-line continuously for six months, and unit 2 has operated without interruption for over four months.

"Oconee continues to be a safe, reliable workhorse for our customers," said Brew Barron, station manager. "The units are running better than ever, thanks to the skill and hard work of the plant team."

Barron credits Oconee's performance to an experienced operating and maintenance team, plus an aggressive preventive maintenance program.

"Our philosophy is fix it so it doesn't break," Barron said. Since coming on line in 1973 and 1974, Oconee has been joined by the McGuire Nuclear Station in Cornelius, N.C., and Catawba Nuclear Station in Clover, S.C. Today, these three nuclear stations provide two-thirds of the electricity consumed by Duke Power customers.

LAFAYETTE, LA (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Union Exploration Partners Ltd. (UXP) has made four recent discoveries of natural gas and condensate offshore and onshore Louisiana, according to Marty F. Miller, vice president for Unocal's Louisiana Region. UXP, a master limited partnership, holds most of Unocal's oil and gas exploration, development and production assets in the region. Unocal is UXP's managing general partner.

At Ship Shoal Block 253, the partnership's OCS G-7301 E-13 well discovered significant gas reserves in a new fault block about one mile from a platform operated by UXP. The well encountered 123 feet of Pliocene gas sands below 11,100 feet, which will be tested after completion of a follow-up well. The discovery well is in 170 feet of water on a block UXP shares with Marathon Oil Co. Both companies hold 50-percent interests.

A second new fault block discovery is on Ship Shoal Block 268. The OCS G-7757 No. 1 well found 143 feet of net gas pay in eight Pleistocene sands at depths between 2,500 and 4,200 feet. The well was temporarily abandoned. UXP, which holds a 100-percent interest, expects to test the well after setting a sub-sea template and drilling a step-out well. The discovery well is in 190 feet of water adjacent to production facilities UXP operates on Ship Shoal Block 269.

A new pool discovery found significant reserves in the South Marsh Island Block 48 field. The partnership, which holds a 100-percent interest in this block, deepened the OCS G-0787 C-2 well to 15,800 feet, more than 1,500 feet below a previous completion. A Pliocene sand between 15,610 and 15,640 feet was tested at a rate of 8.2 million cubic feet of gas per day with 144 barrels of 48-degree gravity condensate through a 24/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,141 pounds per square inch. Further drilling is planned to develop the reservoir. The block lies in 96 feet of water.

Onshore in Vermilion Parish at its North Freshwater Bayou field, UXP added deep gas reserves in a new fault block with the successful completion of the Louisiana Furs F-18 step-out well. Four Lower Miocene sands at depths between 16,200 and 18,850 feet have more than 140 feet of net gas pay. An additional deep well is planned for the field later this year. UXP holds a 100-percent interest in this lease, where four wells produce 50 million cubic feet of gas per day.

HIGHLAND PARK, MICH. (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - David R. Platt, Chrysler Vice President - Procurement and Supply, today announced his plan to retire from the company after 10 years of service.

Platt, who will be 63 in October, joined Chrysler in May, 1980, in his current position. Prior to joining Chrysler, he was a general purchasing agent at Ford Motor Company and held a number of positions at other companies including president of Sicard, Inc., a division of Pacific Car and Foundry Company, and plant manager for the Kenworth Division of the same company.

"Dave joined Chrysler when we were in our most precarious position and made significant contributions to the turnaround and success of the company," said Chrysler Corporation Chairman Lee Iacocca.

"We have a closer partnership with our suppliers than ever before. Dave has been a key player in leading Chrysler toward developing this more progressive and effective way of doing business."

A native of Pittsburgh, Platt graduated from Pennsylvania State University in 1950 with a B.A. in Business Administration. He received his M.B.A. in Production and Finance from Harvard Business School in 1955.

Platt's retirement will be effective May 1.

DOWNEY, CA (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - A team of aerospace companies headed by Rockwell International Corporation's (NYSE: ROK) Space Transportation Systems Division (STSD) began work this week on a National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Johnson Space Center contract to study a Space Station Assured Crew Return Vehicle (ACRV) System.

Working with Rockwell on the study are team members Honeywell Inc., Clearwater, Fla.; McDonnell Douglas Space Systems Company, Huntington Beach, Calif; and TRW Federal Systems Division, Redondo Beach, Calif. Rockwell STSD is managing the effort from its Downey headquarters.

The ACRV contract is divided into two parts: Phase A Prime is a six-month $1.5 million study to validate ACRV system requirements and evaluate system and vehicle options. Phase B, a 12-month priced option, would evaluate options; develop specifications; define systems, operations and plans; and conduct systems performance demonstrations. If exercised by NASA, Phase B could increase the total contract price to $6 million. The Rockwell team is one of two contractor teams selected by NASA for the study.

The ACRV concept provides NASA's planned Space Station "Freedom" with an assured crew return capability for medical situations, Space Station contingencies, or situations where Space Shuttle flights are interrupted for extensive periods of time.

Rockwell International is a $12-billion, multi-industry company applying advanced technology to a wide range of products in its aerospace, electronics, automotive and graphics businesses.

ST. LOUIS (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Eveready Battery Company has announced a major reduction of mercury in its U.S. alkaline battery products. The new low-mercury batteries represent the latest, most significant step in the company's ongoing mercury reduction program, which began in the early 1980s.

With this most recent reduction, Eveready is the first to produce a 99.975 percent mercury-free alkaline battery in the United States. The reduction of mercury in the most popular-sized Energizer and Conductor brand batteries addresses concern over the long-term impact of heavy metals in the environment. The company said it is working on technology that would eliminate mercury from its batteries entirely.

"There is little question that reducing mercury at the source is a sensible and good course for the battery industry," said J. Patrick Mulcahy, Eveready chairman and chief executive officer. "In that respect we hope others will follow our lead in lowering the use of mercury in battery products."

In the past decade, Eveready has led the U.S. battery industry in the reduction of mercury in its alkaline batteries, gradually lowering the mercury present in the battery by 97 percent, to .025 percent of battery weight in the new generation.

Mercury traditionally has been used to control certain electrochemical reactions within the battery which produce energy. Eveready's proprietary technology allows it to lower the mercury content without affecting the long-lasting performance of the battery. The company said it has increased the service life of its Energizer batteries by 50 percent over the last decade while lowering the content of mercury present in the batteries.

According to Eveready, production lines for all AA, AAA, C, D and 9-volt sizes of the Energizer and Conductor brands have been converted for production of low-mercury batteries, and all batteries now being shipped to stores contain the new lower levels.

Eveready Battery Company is the world's leading producer of batteries, manufacturing and distributing more than 500 power and lighting products.

DETROIT (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Combined domestic car and truck production for the month of March totaled 1,000,828, marking the first time U.S. monthly vehicle output has topped 1 million since May 1989's count of 1,069,899, Ward's Automotive Reports announced today.

March car output was 615,190, while truck output totaled 385,638. This compares to year-ago March counts of 652,145 cars and 390,280 trucks.

U.S. automakers will assemble an estimated 110,245 cars this week, down 18.8 percent from last week's actual count of 135,907, Ward's said. Same-week 1989 saw car output of 159,295.

Ward's reported that total estimated U.S. car output for calendar 1990 through the end of this week is 1,554,149 units, trailing year- ago's build of 2,057,044 by 24.4 percent.

General Motors Corp.'s Wentzville, Mo., launched production of the 1991 Park Avenue this week. Its Oklahoma City plant is closed this week preparing to reduce production schedules. Weekend car output is slated at Lansing, Mich. (Skylark/Calais), and Janesville, Wis. (Cavalier).

Ford Motor Co.'s Dearborn, Mich. (Mustang), and Lorain, Ohio (Thunderbird/Cougar), plants are closed this week due to a shortage of dealer orders. Daily overtime was reported at plants in Wixom, Mich., Kansas City, Mo., Wayne, Mich., Atlanta, and Chicago. The Wixom plant also planned Saturday overtime.

Chrysler's St. Louis car plant continues to operate at only one shift. Plants in Belvidere, Ill., Newark, Del., and Sterling Heights, Mich., are closed this week for inventory adjustment.

Ward's said U.S. truck production will be an estimated 79,617 units compared to last week's count of 89,170. This compares with year-ago's count of 90,761.

U.S. truck production for calendar year 1990 through the end of this week is estimated at 1,004,961 vs. year-ago's 1,236,056, said Ward's.

Ford's Twin Cities, Minn., Louisville, Ky., Lorain, Kansas City, and St. Louis plants slated daily overtime. General Motors has planned weekend truck output at the Moraine, Ohio, truck plant. Chrysler's Toledo, Ohio, Jeep facility is down this week for inventory adjustment.

Of this week's estimated U.S. car output, GM accounts for 50.3 percent; Ford, 24.5 percent; Chrysler, 2.1 percent; Honda of America Manufacturing Inc., 7.1 percent; Mazda Motor Manufacturing (USA) Corp., 3.9 percent; Nissan of America Manufacturing Corp., 1.4 percent; New United Motor Manufacturing Inc., 3.7 percent; Toyota Motor Manufacturing USA Inc., 4.0 percent; Diamond-Star Motors Corp., 2.6 percent; and Subaru-Isuzu Automotive Inc., 0.4 percent.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Avon Products Inc. (NYSE: AVP) today unanimously amended its share rights plan to make the rights non-redeemable 10 days after anyone acquires more than 12.5 percent of Avon's outstanding voting stock.

But the rights may be redeemed by the board in conjunction with the acquisition of a majority of the outstanding voting stock by any party other than a 12.5 percent holder. And the amendment provides for the "grandfathering" of any current owner of 12.5 percent or more, unless the current owner acquires any additional shares.

The amendment does not affect the "flip-in" threshold of the share rights plan, which remains at 20 percent of the outstanding voting stock.

The amendment was adopted among other reasons to protect the ability of the previously announced special committee of Avon's board to evaluate all methods of maximizing shareholder value.

The board's action was in response to the reported continuing purchases, including approximately 3 million shares yesterday, of Avon stock by Chartwell Associates, bringing their ownership to almost 12 percent of Avon's voting stock. Such purchases create an ongoing threat to the best interests of all Avon shareholders.

The amendment doesn't preclude Chartwell or anyone else from making a bid for Avon or from acquiring the company in a transaction approved by Avon's board prior to crossing the 12.5 percent threshold.

HOUSTON (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Wainoco Oil Corp. (NYSE: WOL) today announced the recent employment of four explorationists, a geologist and three geophysicists, in the expansion of its exploration program.

Three of the new staff members are located in Houston, employed by Wainoco Oil & Gas Co., the U.S. subsidiary, and the fourth is in Calgary, employed by the firm's Canadian division.

Two of the new employees, Ralph R. McLeod, senior geologist, and Edgar M. McLendon, senior geophysicist, have been working as a full-time consulting team for Wainoco in its Gulf of Mexico offshore exploration over the past two and one-half years and they will continue their offshore exploratory responsibilities for the company in their new positions as employees.

McLeod has 36 years of geological exploration experience throughout the Gulf Coast area including employment with Sun Oil Co., Anderson Prichard Oil Corp. and Transocean Oil Co. For the past 25 years his work has been concentrated on the Gulf of Mexico, offshore Texas and Louisiana.

McLendon has 33 years of geophysical experience, including 23 years with Amoco Production Co. where he became senior staff geophysicist prior to working for two small independent firms and before he began consulting. The greatest part of his experience, similar to that of McLeod's, has been in the Gulf of Mexico offshore, primarily in Louisiana waters.

James Shipman joined Wainoco as a geophysicist in its Houston office. He has over 15 years' experience, primarily in Texas and Louisiana both onshore and offshore, in geophysical technology and interpretation. Shipman, who most recently was employed by Total Minatome Corp., will have responsibility for Wainoco's onshore geophysical studies as well as for developing its technological capabilities.

Louis P. K. Hwang is a geophysicist in Wainoco's Calgary office, where he has assumed responsibility for the company's Canadian geophysical studies. Hwang had 11 years of experience as a geophysicist in Canada including positions with Murphy Oil Co., Ltd. and Ultramar Oil and Gas Canada Ltd. prior to joining Wainoco.

CHARLESTON, SC (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastern Airlines will provide free transportation to 60 Charleston fifth grade students, whose homes and school were destroyed by Hurricane Hugo, to attend the United States Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala.

Eastern responded to a request made by the mother of one of the students, Linda Tucker, to U.S. Senators Hollings and Thurmond, Gov. Campbell and the South Carolina Congressional delegation. Tucker wanted to send her child to Space Camp but was unable to after losing her home on the Isle of Palms.

The U.S. Space Camp has provided "scholarships" for the Charleston students to experience a weekend at camp.

The children attended Sullivans Island Elementary School, before it was destroyed by the storm last September. They are currently attending Whitesides Elementary.

The children will be accompanied to space camp by the school principal and their two fifth grade teachers.

The 60 students are divided into two groups. Both will leave Charleston tomorrow, April 6, and return on April 8.

CHICAGO (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Montgomery Ward & Co. today reported improved sales for the five-week period of Feb. 25, 1990, through March 31 1990. Net sales of $399,167,000 were up 1.8 percent compared with $392,281,000 for the same period last year on a total company continuing business basis.

"Gold 'N Gems, Electric Avenue and Home Ideas showed the strongest sales results during the period," said Bernard F. Brennan, chairman and chief executive officer. "Last year, the important Easter selling period was in March and we reported a sales increase of 8.5 percent. With Easter coming in April this year, the comparative results were affected significantly. Our sales performance this month compared with last year's strong March results indicates a continuing growth trend."

Cumulative sales for the nine-week period of Jan. 28, 1990, through March 31, 1990, totaled $698,168,000, an increase of 2.1 percent versus $684,094,000 last year on a total company continuing business basis. Montgomery Ward has 334 stores in operation.

OLD TOWN, ME (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Penobscot Shoe Company (AMEX: PSO) today announced that net sales for the first quarter ended Feb. 23, 1990 were $3,202,000, down 24 percent from $4,230,000 in the comparable period in 1989. A net loss of $337,000, or 23 cents per share, was incurred in the current quarter, vs. a net income of $77,000, or 5 cents per share, a year ago.

Soft consumer demand for footwear in a difficult retail climate continues to adversely affect the company's sales. Disposition of surplus inventories is responsible for a significant portion of the first quarter's loss, and such sales will continue their negative impact on earnings through the year.

At the annual stockholders meeting held today (April 5), six directors were elected: Francis J. Guthrie, Jr., Irving Kagan, James L. Moody, Jr. Gerald E. Rudman, Paul Hansen and John I. Riddle. The stockholders also elected Paul Hansen as treasurer and Gerald E. Rudman as clerk.

At a scheduled meeting of the board of directors following the annual stockholders meeting, the directors elected the following officers:

-- Irving Kagan, chairman, chief executive officer
-- Paul Hansen, president, chief operating officer
-- David Keane, vice president-finance and administration
-- Melvin Braverman, vice president-sales
-- Wilhelm Pfander, vice president-manufacturing
-- John French, vice president-management information systems

The directors additionally voted to pay a dividend of 5 cents per share on June 15, 1990, to all stockholders of record May 25, 1990.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Ogden Corporation (NYSE: OG) today announced that it had advised a meeting of analysts that while net income for the first quarter 1990 will significantly exceed net income for the first quarter 1989 the increase is due to a gain on the sale of stock by its subsidiary, Ogden Projects Inc.

Net income, exclusive of the gain on the sale of stock, is expected to be lower than the comparable period for 1989 as a result of a higher tax rate in 1990 and a minority interest in Ogden Projects which did not exist in 1989.

Income from operations for the first quarter 1990 will be higher than 1989 and the entire year of 1990 is expected to show substantial growth in revenue, income from operations and cash flow.

1990 results will reflect the acquisition of ERC International and 1989 numbers will be restated to reflect 1989 results for ERC International.

Ogden's restated 1989 earnings are $1.38 per share and 1990 earnings are estimated to be substantially higher.

SAIPAN, COMMONWEALTH OF THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS (APRIL 5) UPI - U.S. Navy helicopters removed 22 Anatahan Island residents Wednesday amid concerns they would be hurt in a volcanic eruption, but the involuntary evacuation was not universally welcomed.

''I want to go back as soon as possible,'' said Jess Wobol, 32, the volcanic island's only schoolteacher. ''If I can work there the rest of my life, I would be happy.''

The volcano that crowns the tropical island 80 miles north of Saipan has been rumbling for several days and Wobol said two minor earthquakes rocked the island Friday. But the teacher said he felt it presented no danger and that the evacuation was unnecessary.

Navy helicopters plucked 22 islanders, including 14 children, from Anatahan Island on orders from Gov. Larry Guerrero, who acted despite residents' pleas.

Anatahan is part of a cluster of Pacific islands that make up the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, which has been part of the United States since 1986.

Concern about the residents was prompted by plumes of sulphur steam rising from the volcano that could be seen from as far away as 20 miles. Pilots who surveyed the island Tuesday and Wednesday said the smoke could have been from a grass fire in the crater.

Anatahan is one large copra plantation, and its residents live off the land and sea, supplementing their diets with chickens and livestock.

Resident Dani Taisican also dismissed concerns about the volcano, saying it is always gurgling and smelling of sulphur.

''The volcano is what makes Anatahan such a rich and healthy island,'' he said.

At least one evacuee, Fichiuo Rollis, said he was happy to leave, although did not appear to be frightened.

''Maybe if they don't take us, we would be left to God,'' he said.

Commonwealth civil defense coordinator Felix Sasamoto said the governor feared a repeat of a 1981 emergency evacuation from Pagan Island 170 miles north of Saipan, where a volcano believed to be dormant erupted. Its 54 residents took shelter in a cave and were rescued three days later by boat.

The Pagan islanders have never returned and their homes and farms are buried under lava beds.

Sasamoto said the people of Anatahan will not be allowed to go home until experts certify to the governor that it is safe. They were being cared for by the commonwealth government in Saipan.

LAS VEGAS, NV (APRIL 5) UPI - Comedian Redd Foxx, whose taxing problems with the Internal Revenue Service are in the seven-figures bracket, has reached a temporary settlement, attorney Marc Risman said Wednesday.

Risman said the IRS returned some property seized by federal agents in a November raid on the comedian's Las Vegas home as part of the settlement. Two truckloads of property, including clothing, furniture, televisions and personal possessions, were returned, along with jewelry the IRS agents had taken, the attorney said.

However, Risman said jewelry in storage, including a watch given to Foxx by the late singer Elvis Presley and eight automobiles, will be sold to help satisfy the multimillion-dollar tax debt the IRS says the comedian owes. Risman said Foxx will not contest the sale.

This is a temporary solution to Foxx's problems with the IRS, Risman said. "This is basically a one-year solution," he explained. "It will not satisfy the full debt. But it will stop the horrendous interest and penalties."

A permanent agreement to settle the tax debt, estimated at $2.9 million, including penalties and interest, still needs to be reached with the IRS, Risman said.

The IRS threatened to sell Foxx's property at auction earlier this year to satisfy the debt, but attorneys managed to forestall the sale. Risman said Foxx, as part of the temporary settlement, has made a lump-sum payment to the federal government and has an installment agreement that gives the performer enough money to live on each week.

The IRS has been garnishing an estimated $20,000 from Foxx's weekly paycheck for his standup act at the Hacienda Hotel. Foxx filed for bankruptcy in 1983 and since then has amassed a tax debt of more than $1 million and another $1 million in penalties and interest. The IRS has estimated that Foxx, best known for his role as television's junk dealer on "Sanford and Son," makes approximately $1 million a year.

Three Northwest Airlines pilots were indicted Wednesday in St. Paul,

Minnesota, on charges they flew a passenger jet while under the influence of alcohol. Each pilot faces a maximum of 15 years in prison and a fine of 250-thousand dollars. Northwest has fired the pilots and the F-A-A has revoked their licenses to fly.

A small plane crash that occurred in Boulder, Colorado, earlier this week and killed the two people aboard, may have been a murder-suicide. Police say the passenger is reported to have had suicidal tendencies and may have had plans to kill himself and the pilot when he hired the plane that day.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Kiki Vandeweghe's best game of the season helped New York Knicks Coach Stu Jackson hold his head high - at least for one night.

The long dormant Vandeweghe scored a season-high 21 points to complement a 37-point, 17-rebound effort by Patrick Ewing, helping the Knicks end a four-game road losing streak with a 118-107 victory over the Washington Bullets Wednesday night.

''It makes me look like a better coach, doesn't it,'' said Jackson, whose team has won two straight and is showing signs of coming out of a protracted slump. ''We looked like a good basketball team out there. It looks normal - like what some of the other good teams do.''

Ewing scored 6 of his 16 third-period points during an 11-0 run that gave

New York a 96-87 lead with 1:54 left in the third period and the Knicks never trailed again.

The Bullets rallied within 102-101 with 7:18 left in the game on a Ledell Eackles layup that capped a 10-2 run. Bernard King (33 points) hit a jumper to draw the Bullets within 109-107 with 4:22 to play, but it was Washington's last basket, as the Knicks scored the final 9 points of the game, starting with Vandeweghe's corner jumper off a pass from Ewing.

Jackson liked the way Vandeweghe's outside shooting balanced with Ewing's inside attack.

''It's nice to see Patrick setting a screen on Kiki and Patrick's guy (the defender) is as worried about Kiki as Kiki's guy is,'' Jackson said. ''Kiki's such a threat out there. I just hope he can continue to shoot the ball like he did tonight.''

New York, 42-31, has won six straight against Washington, including all five games this season. The Bullets, 28-45, had a three-game winning streak snapped.

''It's a confidence booster,'' said Ewing, who is averaging 35.2 points and 12.2 rebounds against the Bullets this season. ''Right now we feel good.''

Bullets Coach Wes Unseld blamed the loss on Washington's inability to contain Vandeweghe and fellow long-range shooter Trent Tucker (14 points).

''I still don't think Patrick Ewing was the reason why we lost,'' Unseld said. ''We let Vandeweghe go and Tucker, two guys who should be stoppable in most cases.''

New York outscored Washington 16-6 over the final 5:13 of the second period to forge a 64-58 halftime lead. Kenny Walker's 3-point play ignited the run.

The Bullets used a 7-0 run to gain the lead at 83-81, but the Knicks responded with their 11-0 run to take command.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Elsewhere, Boston defeated New Jersey 125-106, Cleveland stopped Atlanta 101-95, Golden State topped Miami 128-114, Dallas dumped San Antonio 104-98, Milwaukee edged Indiana 121-116 in overtime, and Charlotte beat Denver 116-112.

CELTICS 125, NETS 106

At Boston, Larry Bird scored 43 points, 17 in a pivotal third quarter, and pulled down 15 rebounds as Boston handed New Jersey its 25th consecutive road defeat. The last-place Nets, who have fallen behind Miami in the Atlantic Division, are 2-34 in their last 36 road games.

CAVALIERS 101, HAWKS 95

At Richfield, Ohio, Brad Daugherty scored 24 points and pulled down 13 rebounds and Mark Price dished out a career-high 20 assists to lead Cleveland over Atlanta. The triumph tied the teams in the battle for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

WARRIORS 128, HEAT 114

At Miami, Manute Bol blocked six shots in the second quarter to hold down Miami. Golden State was led by Chris Mullin with 30 points, Rod Higgins with 25 and Tim Hardaway with 20. The two wins in Florida started a four-game road trip for Golden State, battling Seattle and Houston for the last playoff spot in the Western Conference.

MAVERICKS 104, SPURS 98

At Dallas, Rolando Blackman scored 28 points, including 12 in the fourth quarter, to lead Dallas, which overcame a 19-point deficit. Dallas is now 42-32 while San Antonio fell to 48-25.

BUCKS 121, PACERS 116

At Milwaukee, Alvin Robertson scored 10 of his 30 points in overtime and Jack Sikma sank 4 free throws in the final 27 seconds for the Bucks. The victory moved Milwaukee, 38-35, two games ahead of Indiana, 36-37 and losers of three straight, in the race for the sixth Eastern Conference playoff spot. The Pacers remain one game ahead of Atlanta and Cleveland in the East.

HORNETS 116, NUGGETS 112

At Denver, Tyrone Bogues scored the final four points of the game, to lead Charlotte. Alex English scored 20 of his 29 points in the first half for Denver.

SAN JOSE, CA (APRIL 5) UPI - In a discovery with potentially wide industrial applications, IBM scientists said they had learned how to move atoms around at will, allowing them to build structures one atom at a time.

To demonstrate the technique, scientists released a photograph of atoms of the element xenon rearranged into the letters "IBM." The picture was the first known example of atomic advertising.

The discovery, described Wednesday in the British science journal Nature, opens the door for a wealth of future commercial applications, IBM said. By building structures from the atoms up, semiconductor makers could cram many more electrical circuits on a single computer chip than is currently possible, scientists said.

Computers could store data at atomic densities more than one million times greater than now possible, they said. Scientists could create custom molecules atom-by-atom, or alter existing molecules to their own designs, they said.

The technique is still impractical for commercial use, however. So far, scientists have tried the technique only on xenon atoms and are unsure if it would work on other types of atoms.

Physicists Donald Eigler and Erhard Schweizer, working at IBM's Almaden Research Center in San Jose, Calif., uncovered the ability to move individual atoms while using a giant scanning tunneling microscope to study how atoms behave on a surface.

The scientists discovered that by bringing the tip of the microscope to within an atomic diameter or so of a xenon atom on a metal or semiconductor surface, they could create an attraction between the atom and the tip, allowing them to drag the atom along the surface.

Once the atom was where the scientists wanted it, they lifted the microscope's tip, breaking the attraction and leaving the atom in place.

To accomplish the feat, the microscope and the atoms had to be cooled with liquid helium to minus 269 degrees Celsius, just above absolute zero.

The microscope was operated by computer and housed in a special room to isolate it from vibrations as faint as a human voice and heat sources as weak as a nearby human body.

In the "IBM" logo written with xenon atoms, the individual letters were about 500,000 times smaller than those on a standard typewriter. The atoms were separated by only 50 billionths of an inch, or 13 millionths of the diameter of a human hair.

Harold Hess, a physicist with AT&T Bell Laboratories in New Jersey, said he suspected the technique would be more useful for basic research into the behavior of atoms than for commercial use. "The trick now is to find out what other systems with which one can have this kind of control," Hess said.

Sheldon Schultz, a physics professor at the University of California at San Diego, said he was confident the technique could be applied to other atoms. "It won't work for every atom but I'm sure there will be enough to keep us busy," he said.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Soviet President Gorbachev is warning Estonia to rescind its declaration calling for a gradual transition to independence from Moscow. The Estonian leader told the republic's parliament Wednesday that he spoke with the Soviet leader by telephone and was warned Estonia will get the same treatment as Lithuania. The Estonian leader added the conversation began very politely and calmly but ended with ''harsh words'' from Gorbachev.

Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat said Wednesday his meeting with former President Jimmy Carter covered the Middle East process in ''its totality.'' Arafat added Carter did NOT present any new proposals but the P-L-O leader said their meeting in France was ''historic.'' The leader of the P-L-O says he's ready to negotiate a peace plan with an Israeli government being formed by Labor Party leader Shimon Peres.

Christian rivals General Michel Aoun and Lebanese Forces militia leader Samir Geagea have promised to lay down their weapons. Their agreement comes in reponse to a plea from the highest religious authority of the Maronite community. Also, the United Nations' Childrens Fund, UNICEF, has asked for peace so a three-day vaccination campaign can be carried out in safety.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Congressman Joseph Kennedy the Second and Senator Albert Gore say more action is needed to warn consumers, especially pregnant women, about the dangers of alcohol. The two politicians have proposed a bill that would require all television, radio and print ads for alcohol to include warnings. Advertising groups are attacking the legislation, saying it's unnecessary.

Government scientists, criticizing their own agencies, are recommending cutting down on logging activities on federal lands in the Pacific Northwest by at least 25 percent. An interagency panel of researchers says the northern spotted owl remains endangered, despite current strategies by the U-S Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management.

American Cablevision officials in Kansas City say they are reluctantly observing the rights of the Ku Klux Klan to produce a cable T-V program for the Kansas City area. A cable company spokeswoman says the 15-minute program outlines the Klan's views and urges white-working class people to join the group. The spokeswoman says- ''We regret being put into the position of having to convey this kind of programming.'' The American Civil Liberties Union defended the Klan's right to air the show.

(APRIL 5) UPI - They say the playoffs are a whole new season, and Wednesday night a trio of underdogs proved it by shocking the NHL elite of the Clarence Campbell Conference in the first game of the preliminary round Stanley Cup series.

The Calgary Flames and Chicago Blackhawks, both regular-season division leaders, were knocked off respectively by the fourth-place Los Angeles Kings and Minnesota North Stars. The powerful Edmonton Oilers were upended by the Winnipeg Jets. The only favorite to prevail was the St. Louis Blues which overcame the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Wales Conference opens its playoff series Thursday with matchups between the New York Rangers and New York Islanders; New Jersey Devils and Washington Capitals; Boston Bruins and Hartford Whalers; and Buffalo Sabres and Montreal Canadiens.

All series are best-of-7, and switch sites after game 2.

SMYTH DIVISION

KINGS 5, FLAMES 3

At Calgary, the Los Angeles Kings are asking ''Who needs Wayne Gretzky?'' after stunning the defending Stanley Cup champion Calgary Flames in the first game of their series without help from their injured center, who will also miss game 2.

''All the talk is about Wayne (Gretzky) not being here,'' said Luc Robitaille, who scored a pair of goals for the Kings. ''Tonight we showed we can play a patient, well disciplined game.''

Robitaille's second goal of the game at 10:44 of the third period snapped a 3-3 tie.

Robitaille's goal came just 18 seconds after Tony Granato tied the game on a Los Angeles power play at 10:44.

The Flames pressed for the tie, but with 1:33 left Steve Duchesne kicked a puck heading into the net out of danger. Steve Kasper scored into the open net with 53 seconds to go for the final margin.

The contest marked the second straight season the Flames lost the opening game on home ice in the playoffs.

''I thought we learned from last year's tough battle with Vancouver that you can not take anyone lightly,'' Al MacInnis said. ''We have take one game at a time.''

JETS 7, OILERS 5

At Edmonton, Dale Hawerchuck celebrated his 27th birthday by scoring a pair of goals to lead Winnipeg to an upset of Edmonton.

The Oilers were dominating play and enjoying a 4-2 lead at 2:04 of the second period when goaltender Bill Ranford was beaten cleanly on a slap shot off the stick of Moe Mantha from the blueline.

The Jets went on to score the next three, including the game-winner by Brent Ashton at 9:55 of the third period.

Ranford had a bad game, but said he was not particularly nervous for his first playoff start with the Oilers.

''I felt good in there,'' he said after the game. ''I just didn't make the big saves and to win in the playoffs that's what you have to do. I didn't feel like I was fighting the puck, it just was one of those nights.''

NORRIS DIVISION

NORTH STARS 2, BLACKHAWKS 1

At Chicago, goaltender Jon Casey frustrated the Blackhawks all night with brilliant saves to lead Minnesota to an upset victory.

Casey, playing in only the second playoff series of his career, stopped 30 of 31 shots in beating the Blackhawks, who were 1 of 9 on the power play.

''I think we needed to come out and try to get a win as soon as possible '' Casey said. ''That was important for us because of what happened last year. We lost two tough ones right away, and we kind of just fell apart after that.''

The North Stars were eliminated in the first round of the playoffs last season by the St. Louis Blues and goaltender Greg Millen. Millen was in the nets for Chicago Wednesday night but this time Minnesota beat him.

''Casey is just taking the opportunity to prove what he can do in the playoffs,'' North Stars coach Pierre Page said. ''It's all new to him. It's just his second year starting. That's all. He's 27. It came later for him, but better late than never.''

Brian Bellows scored the only goal of the first two periods, then, after Denis Savard tied the score 1-1 at 5:01 of the third, scored the game-winner 53 seconds later.

''I think what you saw was a total effort from our team in the sense that everyone played the roles that were expected from them and everyone followed the game plan well,'' Bellows said. ''No one put themselves ahead of the team tonight, and that was a big key.''

BLUES 4, MAPLE LEAFS 2

At St. Louis, Ron Wilson, who thought his playing days in the NHL were over last year, found himself a playoff hero. The veteran defenseman scored twice and rookie goaltender Curtis Joseph stopped 27 shots to lead St. Louis.

Game 2 in the best-of-seven Norris Division semifinal is scheduled for Friday in St. Louis.

Wilson was left wide open on his two goals and offered this by way of explanation: ''You don't bother checking a guy who only has three goals.''

Wilson, 33, has been a steadying influence on the Blues since arriving in a January trade with the Winnipeg Jets. He was a player-coach for the Jets' farm club and had been out of the NHL the past 1 1-2 years.

''I pretty much thought my playing days in the NHL were over,'' Wilson said. ''I was planning on being a coach.''

But the trade changed all that.

''I came here to play,'' he said. ''It's fun. I'm here to check and play defense. Any goals from me are a bonus. This was a big win for us. What else can I say?''

Wilson poked in a rebound of a shot by Adam Oates at 17:03 for a power-play goal and a 2-0 St. Louis lead. Oates fired a slap shot from the top of the slot, which Toronto goaltender Allan Bester saved. The puck went to the right side of the net, where Wilson was parked all

MOSCOW (APRIL 5) UPI - Estonian President Arnold Ruutel said there was ''no cause for alarm'' despite a stern demand from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that Estonia annul a declaration that it is breaking away from the Soviet Union.

Ruutel said Wednesday the Estonian Parliament's executive presidium would discuss Gorbachev's demand and send him a formal response.

''There is no cause for alarm,'' Ruutel said.

Ruutel told the Estonian Parliament Wednesday that Gorbachev issued the warning during a ''long telephone conversation'' with him late Tuesday, the Estonian news agency ETA said.

Gorbachev called Ruutel hours after the Estonian legislature chose Popular Front leader Edgar Savisaar as prime minister in another sign of the nationalists' increasing control of the republic.

''At the beginning, it was a polite and calm conversation,'' Ruutel later told Estonia Radio. ''He congratulated me on my election as chairman of the (Estonian) Supreme Soviet.''

Gorbachev then used ''harsh words,'' Ruutel said, to protest the Estonian Parliament's declaration Friday that the republic was entering ''the beginning of a period of transition'' to full independence and that ''the restoration of the Republic of Estonia has begun.''

Though the Estonian resolution Friday was milder than a Lithuanian measure three weeks earlier, which declared immediate independence in Lithuania, Gorbachev gave Ruutel the same demand for annulment he gave Saturday to Lithuania.

''Gorbachev said that if the Estonian Supreme Soviet does not rescind the document in question, the same sort of regime will be introduced in Estonia as in Lithuania,'' ETA said.

''Gorbachev called into doubt a number of principal questions in the document adopted by our Supreme Soviet,'' ETA quoted Ruutel as saying. ''He does not consider this resolution legally sound.''

The Soviet leader ''suggested to Ruutel that he present (Wednesday or Thursday) a detailed explanation to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.,'' ETA said in a dispatch dictated by telephone from Tallinn.

Gorbachev's call to Ruutel indicated he is wary of Estonian leaders' assurances that they will not follow Lithuania's abrupt path to independence, and that he is intent on stopping any repetition in Estonia of the nearly four-week showdown between Moscow and Vilnius.

Moscow's war of nerves with Lithuania, including the seizure of several buildings by Soviet troops in Vilnius and the dispatch of tank columns through the city, appeared to ease Tuesday when Presidential Council member Alexander Yakovlev met with three Lithuanian officials.

In his conversation with Ruutel, Gorbachev also expressed anger with a letter he received last week from Estonian members of the Soviet Parliament, ETA said.

The Estonian lawmakers told Gorbachev that they could not participate in the Soviet Parliament's current debate on a law that would provide the country's 15 republics a legal mechanism for secession under tough restrictions, it said.

''If we took part in the discussion of this law, it would be tantamount to recognizing the (1940) annexation'' of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania by the Soviet Union, the news agency quoted the legislators as having written to Gorbachev.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - Adnan Khashoggi, the Saudi financier once called the world's richest man and now on trial for fraud with Imelda Marcos, was described by his lawyer as a naive businessman who was duped by Marcos and her late husband.

After the opening statement Wednesday by Khashoggi's lawyer, a New York real estate broker testified that a Marcos aide threatened him because she thought he exposed a planned $14 million real estate deal involving the Philippines first family. Testimony in the trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan was scheduled to resume Thursday.

Marcos is charged with racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice for allegedly plotting with her late husband - ousted Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos - to divert money stolen from the Philippines treasury into real estate investments in Manhattan and around the world. Khashoggi is charged with obstruction of justice and fraud for allegedly assisting the Marcoses in their transactions.

Sotheby's International Realty salesman Thomas Bryant testified Wednesday that the Marcos aide, Gliceria Tantoco, accused him of leaking stories to the press about the Marcoses real estate deals and threatened him and his family.

"She said that if more information became public, I should fear for myself and my family," Byrant said of Tantoco, a close confidant of the former Philippines first lady.

Bryant testified he had set up the sale of a three-floor Manhattan apartment and its contents of furnishings and art, known as the "Samuels collection" to the Marcoses for $14 million.

The couple later were turned down as tenants by the building's committee, but they purchased the furnishings and art for just under $6 million, he said. Bryant said he worked with Mrs. Marcos and Tantoco, a Philippines businesswoman who is charged in the case and is presently a fugitive.

He said when the New York Post printed a story in 1981 quoting sources as saying the Marcoses were buying New York real estate, Tantoco called him up and accused him of leaking the story.

Khashoggi's lawyer, James Linn, said in his opening statement that the arms dealer once fell for a story of a "ship of gold" the Philippine president wanted disposed of overseas.

"Mr. Marcos told Khashoggi he had a ship of gold," Linn told the jury. "He told him, 'I will give you ten percent of this gold if you will find a port for it ... preferably an Arab port." Linn said President Marcos, who died in September, told Khashoggi that he wanted to use the money to fight communism in his country.

The gold treasure reference is a persistent story about the invading Japanese hiding bullion in a cave during World War II. Mrs. Marcos's defense attorneys contend that her husband had found the cache. "This guy fell for it," said Linn, laughing, as Khashoggi smiled. As Mrs. Marcos sat watching from another defense table, Linn nodded at Khashoggi and said, "He doesn't enjoy me saying how dumb he was."

PARIS (APRIL 5) UPI - PLO leader Yasser Arafat, who left Thursday for Italy and a Vatican meeting with Pope John Paul II, met with former President Jimmy Carter and said he was ready to negotiate peace with an Israeli government being formed by Labor Party chief Shimon Peres.

Arafat departed Paris Thursday morning aboard an Iraqi executive jet. The chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization was scheduled to have an audience with the pope Friday morning at the Vatican.

After more than two hours of bilateral talks Wednesday with the architect of the 1979 Camp David Middle East peace accords, Arafat told reporters that Carter presented ''no new proposals'' but they had discussed the Middle East peace process ''in its totality.''

''I consider it an important meeting and even historic,'' Arafat said. ''It has given a forward impulse to the peace process for I have met the former U.S. president who signed Camp David, who helped conclude peace between the biggest Arab state (Egypt) and Israel.''

Arafat said Carter consulted with President Bush before traveling to Paris.

Carter denied he was carrying out a mission for the Bush administration, maintaining that he had met the PLO leader as a private citizen.

The former president said he met with Arafat in his personal quest for global peace and came away persuaded that the 60-year-old PLO leader was ''doing all he could to promote the peace process'' in the Middle East.

''This implies not only peace but also justice, auto-determination for the Palestinians and security for Israel,'' Carter said.

Arafat and Carter met at the Crillon Hotel after a meeting between Carter and French President Francois Mitterrand at Elysee Palace.

Arafat said he had learned during the meeting with Mitterrand that Peres had announced he is able to form a majority government.

''We will negotiate,'' Arafat said. ''We will make dialogue with any government the Israeli people will accept.''

Arafat would not say if talks with Peres would be easier than with the conservative Likud-led government that recently crumbled. ''We have to wait and see,'' he said.

Arafat restated his appeal to the Israelis to a make ''peace among equals '' recalling the offer made by French leader Gen. Charles de Gaulle to Algerians fighting for independence from France.

Carter said he was optimistic about the prospects for Mideast peace but he lashed out at regional leaders who he said do not do enough to fulfill their peoples' peaceful aspirations.

''I think peace is necessary in the Middle East, I think peace is inevitable in the Middle East,'' Carter said. ''The problem is among the leaders who don't adequately represent the yearnings of the people - in Israel, the Palestinians, the Syrians, the Jordanians, and the Lebanese - for peace.''

Arafat landed at Orly Airport aboard a special Iraqi executive jet shortly after 4 p.m. Jewish groups led a demonstration by about 100 people outside Arafat's hotel.

Abu Iyad, Arafat's chief deputy, told Radio France Internationale that the PLO chose Paris for the meeting because of Mitterrand's ''courageous position'' on the Palestinian question.

Diplomatic sources said Carter is acting as an unofficial emissary for Secretary of State James Baker, who is eager to start talks between the Palestinians and the Israelis.

A Jewish group, the Representative Council of Jewish Institutions in France, protested the Carter-Arafat meeting, saying it ''has demanded to be received by Jimmy Carter to obtain clarifications'' about why he agreed to meet Arafat.

Last month, Carter toured Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Israel and denounced human rights violations in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank. Carter last month criticized Israel's methods of suppressing the 2-year-old Palestinian uprising and called for an international peace conference.

The United States started official talks with the PLO in December 1988 after the organization recognized Israel and agreed to renounce terrorism.

TOKYO (APRIL 5) UPI - Heavy buying late in the session Thursday helped the Tokyo Stock Exchange recover most of its early losses blamed on rumors about securities firms being in financial difficulty.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which recovered 757.65 yen Wednesday, closed down 193.88 yen Thursday at 28,249.06 yen. The Nikkei has lost 10,666.81 yen, or 27.4 percent of its value, since Dec. 29 when it reached a record high of 38,915.87 yen.

TOPIX, or the TSE Index of all listed major shares, was down 17.14 points at 2,058.82.

The U.S. dollar declined 1.00 yen to close at 157.90 yen in selling by foreign exchange banks ahead of Saturday's meeting of the Group of Seven industrialized nations in Paris.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange denied the rumors about troubled securities firms prompting optimistic investors to hunt for lagging issues at discount prices, brokers said.

Dealers said market players also were encouraged by progress in the ongoing U.S.-Japanese trade negotiations in Washington and bought back yen.

''(The rumors) were totally groundless and we hope investors will not be misled by such rumors and make calm judgment at a time when the market is experiencing an unusual situation,'' exchange director Kazuhiro Nagakawa told a hurriedly called news conference.

The exchange issued a similar appeal in the wake of the ''Black Monday'' global market crash in October 1987, when the Tokyo market suffered its worst fall of 3,836.48 yen, or 14.9 percent.

The rumors triggered heavy selling on the Tokyo stock market Thursday morning, causing the Nikkei to suffer one of its worst declines on record, losing 1,088.94 yen, or 3.8 percent of its value.

Analysts at the Long-Term Credit Bank said the current stock tumble will discourage personal consumption, housing investment and capital investment by corporations.

The government's GNP growth target for fiscal 1990, which started April 1, was set at 4.0 percent.

The rumors of financial trouble involving unnamed securities firms struck the market amid concern expressed by some analysts that small investors may face difficulties in settling their debt caused by margin trading, which allows investors to pay for part of their purchases and borrow the remainder, usually through a securities company.

If stock prices go up, investors can sell what they purchased and have six months to settle their debt.

Market sources said stocks traded on credit comprise nearly 10 percent of the daily trading volume on the market.

When share prices started falling this year, the Tokyo Stock Exchange eased controls on margin trading by lowering the minimum requirement to 40 percent of the transaction value from the previous 50 percent.

Securities companies have since increased their efforts to induce individual investors to buy on credit, according to the market sources.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Wintry snow fell on parts of New England and the upper Midwest early Thursday, while thunderstorms rumbled over northern and central California and parched Southern California finally got rain.

The National Weather Service said heavy, wet snow fell overnight in New Hampshire and Vermont as much of the rest of New England shivered under a cool drizzle. The tail end of the low-pressure system that has been plaguing the area with heavy rain began moving toward Quebec, forecasters said.

Early snow and heavy rain in the mid-Atlantic states generally gave way to lighter showers overnight. Some snow was reported in areas of higher elevation in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, but most of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and southern New Jersey experienced light rain. Maryland was covered by mostly cloudly skies.

Temperatures ranged in the 20s and 30s in Pennsylvania, while Maryland and southern New Jersey saw lows in the 30s. West Virginia reported lows in the upper 20s in its northern and central mountains.

The South was clear and chilly early Thursday, with temperatures ranging from the 30s to the 50s. Jacksonville, Fla., had an early morning reading of 49, while Knoxville, Tenn., fell to 50 and Miami registered 60.

Snow flurries swirled in northern Wisconsin and Michigan. Park Falls, Wis. reported 29 degrees and snow early Thursday, and Marquette in Upper Michigan recorded snow and 26 degrees.

Elsewhere across the Midwest and Great Lakes, the NWS reported variably cloudy skies. Temperatures ranged in the 30s through Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Michigan. In Missouri, temperatures were in the upper 40s.

A blast of cold arctic air began moving through New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, sending temperatures toward the freezing mark.

Scattered showers continued over Northeast Texas. Southwest Arkansas and northwest Louisiana were also rainy early Thursday. Temperatures were generally in the 70s and 80s Wednesday throughout the Plains states.

Welcome scattered showers dropped almost an inch of rain in the Los Angeles area and about a third of an inch in Orange County. Thunderstorms rumbled through the mountains of northern and central California. Other oceanside areas of California were cloudy, but inland valleys were mostly fair.

Temperatures reached into the mid 70s across much of the Oregon interior, and Portland tied its daily high-temperature record Wednesday with a reading of 75 degrees.

Clear skies and warm temperatures were reported across Washington late Wednesday. Afternoon temperatures in western Washington were in the 60s, about 10 degrees above normal.

Idaho was generally sunny and warm, but snow fell in some eastern areas. Southern Idaho got some rain.

Nevada recorded above-normal temperatures, and there were some thunderstorms in the north.

Thunderstorms popped up over Utah and some snow fell at elevations above 8,000 or 9,000 feet. Gusty winds up to 40 mph were also felt in near in the south.

NORFOLK, VA (APRIL 5) UPI - The leader of a research team that recovered more than a ton of gold from a 19th century shipwreck says he knew of no other group that had searched the area of the Atlantic Ocean where the treasure was found.

Thomas Thompson, president of the Columbus-America Discovery Group, underwent several hours of cross examination Wednesday in the second day of a complicated court proceeding to determine who owns the gold.

Nine insurance firms and Thompson's groups are vying over ownership of gold and artifacts valued at up to $1 billion. The insurance companies are trying to show they never abandoned claims that date to the 1857 sinking of the side-wheel steamer Central America in a hurricane 160 miles off South Carolina.

U.S. District Judge Richard Kellam may have hurt the insurance companies' case when he ruled that more than 200 pre-Civil War newspaper articles could not be used to prove the firms paid the gold claims. The articles were admitted in the case, but only as general information surrounding the sinking.

As Thompson sifted through the dozens of stories, Guilford Ware, an attorney for the insurers, asked him a series of questions on how his group was able to find gold 1 1/2 miles deep in the Atlantic Ocean. "It isn't like a bull's eye," Thompson said, when asked to identify the Central America's exact coordinates.

How Thompson's group found the gold later came under scrutiny from lawyers from Columbia University and two private investors. They contend Thompson relied in part on prior sonar work done through the university's researchers, moving his salvage site more than 30 miles.

Harry John, an heir to the Miller Brewing Co., and a partner, Jack Grimm, hired the university's research team in the early 1980s to help find the Central America, their lawyers said.

Thompson acknowledged he obtained sonar readings from the university, but said they were not clear enough to help his search. When pressed by the school's attorney, John Richardson, Thompson defended his operation. "We're an exploration company, and we have spent a lot of money and we have taken a lot of risk," Thompson said.

Another two tons of gold is still believed to be down with the Central America, in addition to the ton of gold bars and coins brought up last summer. Thompson's team has spent more than $10 million in its quest.

During his testimony, Thompson said his team used an underwater robot called Nemo and computer monitors of sonar images to close in on the booty. "We didn't want to put men down at the bottom," Thompson said. "We didn't want to risk lives."

MANILA, Philippines (APRIL 5) UPI - Gunmen claiming to be communist rebels fatally shot a police officer and wounded his wife in an ambush Thursday, and a guerrilla attack in the south killed nine troopers and a rebel, authorities said.

Capt. Leodegario Regis, 36, a company commander of the capital's anti-terrorist Special Action Force, was driving to work in suburban Mandaluyong town when five youths armed with .45-caliber pistols blocked the car and opened fire, police said.

Regis died instantly from bullet wounds and his wife, Norma, was wounded, police said. The gunmen took away his .45-caliber service pistol, commandeered a jeep along the busy street and fled.

Witnesses said the gunmen warned onlookers not to interfere because they were guerrillas of the New Peoples Army, the 18,000-member army of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines that has been fighting the government for 21 years.

More than a dozen lawmen have been killed since March 21, when the guerrillas intensified attacks in the capital to mark the 21st year of the founding.

Intelligence officials quoted in Manila newspapers have said some 1,000 communist hit men, called ''Sparrows'' for their cool and swift manner of attacking, have been fielded in Metropolitan Manila.

In the southern Philippines, some 100 guerrillas ambushed a government patrol in Asuncion, 600 miles south of Manila, Wednesday killing eight troopers, the military said in a report. One rebel also was killed, the report said. Two soldiers and three rebels were wounded, it said.

HONG KONG (APRIL 5) UPI - Britain's plan to grant citizenship to some 225,000 Hong Kong citizens ahead of the colony's return to China in 1997 received approval and condemnation Thursday.

The British Nationality Hong Kong Bill, introduced in Parliament Wednesday seeks to stem a confidence crisis in the colony that has seen about 1,000 people - mostly middle-class professionals - emigrate each week.

The bill would grant British citizenship to 50,000 heads of households in Hong Kong whose continued residence is deemed essential for public confidence, administration and commerce.

Public confidence in Hong Kong, wavering since the 1984 Sino-British agreement on the return of the colony to Chinese rule in 1997, plunged further following China's June military crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators at Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

Introduction of the bill came on the same day that China's National People's Congress approved the final draft of Hong Kong's post-1997 constitution, known as the Basic Law, which has been strongly criticized in the colony as undemocratic and repressive.

Hong Kong lawmakers overwhelmingly voted to ask China to amend the Basic Law to increase the pace of democratic reform, eliminate anti-subversion provisions and increase autonomy for what will be a special economic zone of China.

The Hong Kong government, in a statement, greeted the nationality bill with quiet acceptance, but admitted it had hoped for more British passports for the colony's residents.

''The Hong Kong government has made no secret of the fact that it would have liked to have had more passports,'' said Donald Tsang, director of Administration. ''The fewer there are, the harder it is to decide how to allocate them.

''Faced with this, we must secure the maximum benefit for the community in terms of stability. That means giving British citizenship to as many key people as possible in order to encourage them to stay in Hong Kong.''

China has repeatedly warned that ethnic Chinese in Hong Kong after 1997 would become Chinese nationals regardeless of whether they hold foreign passports - a move that could undermine the British scheme designed to give people the confidence to stay in the colony.

The bill made no special provision for ethnic Indians and other minorities in the colony, many of whom could become stateless after 1997 if China refused to grant them citizenship.

Opponents of the legislation dismissed the bill as falling far short of Hong Kong's requirements, arguing Britain should grant full citizenship to the 3.25 million holders of British overseas passports in the colony.

''Our position is not a negotiating one,'' said Rosanna Tam, a member of the governor's advisory Executive Council. ''Our position is for 3.25 million passports and it remains that way.''

The proposed nationality scheme would work on a point system. Points would be awarded based on age, work experience, job skills, ties to Britain and English-language ability.

The Hong Kong governor also would be empowered to award up to 500 passports to leading businessmen in the colony.

More than 70 percent of the passports would be given to public and private-sector managers, accountants, engineers, computer specialists, medical personnel and others whose departure could severely hamper the functioning of the colony.

About 7,000 passports are being kept in reserve for distribution at a time closer to 1997.

The Hong Kong government said it expected about 750,000 people to apply for the coveted documents but urged people not to apply until the bill was passed by Parliament.

Enactment of the bill is not guaranteed. Led by former Conservative Party Chairman Norman Tebbit, rebel members of Britain's ruling party have pledged to oppose the plan during debate on the bill in Parliment April 19 and the opposition Labor Party has voiced its opposition to the measure.

Greyhound say vandals apparently were responsible for starting a fire that destroyed one bus at a company garage in Boston, causing about 200-thousand dollars damage. No one was injured. It's believed to be the first instance of violence on Greyhound property in Massachusetts since a strike began March 2nd.

Kilauea volcano oozed lava that destroyed two homes and is threatening a housing area on the island of Hawaii. The homes are the 76th and 77th consumed since Kilauea began erupting in 1983. The eruption, the longest in recorded history, has caused an estimated 20 Million dollars damage.

The Soviet news agency Tass says a Soviet T-34 tank which served as a monument to Soviet troops killed in Estonia was destroyed by vandals this week. Tass says Estonian officials denounced the attack as ''aimlessly aggravating the situation.'' Estonia has declared its independence from Moscow.

Massachusetts Congressman Joseph Kennedy joined Senator Albert Gore of Tennessee in proposing a bill that would require T-V, radio and print ads for alcohol to have warnings about its dangers. The Democratic lawmakers say more action is needed, particularly to inform pregnant women about the dangers of liquor.

KEY LARGO, FL (APRIL 5) UPI - An atheist group has demanded that the government remove the Christ of the Deep statue that is submerged in 50 feet of water off Key Largo, calling it a religious symbol that has no place in a public park.

But no one is sure whether the 9-foot, 2-ton statue belongs to the state or the federal government. It stands on the ocean floor near the boundary between the Key Largo National Marine Sanctuary and the adjacent John Pennekamp Coral Reef State Park.

The South Florida Chapter of American Atheists said the statue violates the constitutional requirement for a separation of church and state.

''I find it incredible that someone had the brazen gall to install such a shrine on public property,'' American Atheists member Romulus Roberts of Wilton Manors said Wednesday.

''This is a public park, funded by the public's money, and there are other people in this world besides those who believe in Christ. I definitely want the statue removed.''

In a letter to the state Department of Natural Resources last month, American Atheists Director Christos Tzanetakos of Miami Shores demanded that the statue be removed immediately.

''The fair thing to do is quickly remove this religious statue from government property. Those of us who fight upstream to obtain the pathetically few Supreme Court decisions in our favor are horrified when the difficult-to-obtain mandate of the court is blithely ignored by government entitites,'' Tzanetakos said.

The group recently succeeded in getting the state to remove the words ''so help me God'' from the oath on notary public forms.

The solid bronze statue stands in a sand channel near Key Largo Dry Rocks reef. It was donated to the park by the Underwater Society of America in 1964 to commemorate people who died at sea.

At the time, the site was part of the state park. But officials with Pennekamp and the Department of Natural Resources, which oversees the state park, said the statue has not belonged to the state since 1975.

''The boundaries between the state and federal waters were changed by a federal judge in a salvage case and our park lost about 2 feet of ocean boundary,'' said Larry Fooks, assistant park director.

''The statue was caught in the middle between the state's boundary and the federal government's boundary. So the statue now belongs to the Marine Sanctuary which belongs to the federal government.''

Federal officials denied responsibility on Wednesday.

''We didn't put the statue there in the first place, we just inherited it from the state,'' said John Halas, a Marine Sanctuary biologist. ''Why should we have to remove it?''

Whoever the statue belongs to, Department of Natural Resources spokeswoman Michelle Tate wonders whether it should be removed at all.

''I mean, why should the statue bother these people? It's underwater,'' Tate said.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Brinksmanship has come to Estonia... even though its nationalist leaders are trying to secede from the Soviet Union more gradually than Lithuania is.

Soviet President Gorbachev demands that Estonia annul a declaration that it is breaking away from the U-S-S-R.

Estonian President Arnold Ruutel says there is ''NO cause for alarm,'' despite the demand. Ruutel said yesterday that the Estonian Parliament's executive presidium will discuss Gorbachev's demand and send him a formal response.

Ruutel told the Estonian Parliament that Gorbachev issued the warning and used ''harsh words'' during a ''long telephone conversation'' Tuesday night.

Gorbachev called Ruutel just hours after the Estonian legislature chose Popular Front leader Edgar Savisaar as prime minister in another sign of the nationalists' increasing control of the republic.

The Estonian Parliament declared Friday that the republic was entering ''the beginning of a period of transition'' to full independence... and that ''the restoration of the Republic of Estonia has begun.''

The Estonian resolution was milder than a Lithuanian measure adopted three weeks earlier- which declared immediate independence in Lithuania. But Gorbachev gave Ruutel the same demand for annulment he gave to Lithuania Saturday.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Round Two of U-S-Soviet pre-summit talks gets underway later this morning, when Secretary of State Baker holds more talks with his Soviet counterpart.

Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze is in Washington, D-C, on a three-day visit to iron out details of an expected June summit between Soviet leader Gorbachev and President Bush. So far, NO exact date has been set.

Shevardnadze spent yesterday afternoon at the State Department talking for more than three hours with Baker about Lithuania's bid to secede from Moscow. Soviet officials have used military exercises and other pressures to dissuade Lithuania from independence.

Baker and Shevardnadze yesterday appeared anxious to avoid a collision on the issue. Shevardnadze did say that the Kremlin solution to Lithuania's bid for independence will satisfy Moscow, the West and the rebellious state.

During the remaining two days of talks, Baker and Shevardnadze are expected to focus on arms control and regional issues such as the Middle East.

Shevardnadze told reporters when he arrived Tuesday that another pre-summit conference may be necessary to hammer out accords on destroying chemical weapons and a framework for a treaty to reduce troop levels in Europe.

President Bush says the ''day will come- and it is NOT far off''- when a black will be elected president.

Bush spoke last night at the 20th anniversary dinner of the nation's oldest black-think tank... the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies.

The president said prejudice and racial tensions still exist. But he said the day is going to come when a black man or woman will sit in the Oval Office.

Bush also said he will spare NO effort to bring about positive change in South Africa. He called for a halt to South Africa's state of emergency and the release of political prisoners. In the president's words ''Most of all, there must be an end to the cycle of violence.''

Those attending the gathering gave Bush's speech on civil rights a rather subdued response.

Several hundred of America's top black officials, including Virginia Governor L. Douglas Wilder and Democratic National Committee Chairman Ron Brown, were at the dinner.

The president's appearance came just hours after his administration threatened to veto the Civil Rights Act of 1990... which would reverse 1989 Supreme Court rulings that critics said eroded civil right safeguards.

Bush has proposed his own legislative alternative, which critics say is inadequate.

Bush wanted Congress to act by today to approve funding for the U-S backed governments in Nicaragua and Panama. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell vows to lead attempts to reduce the aid request unless Bush comes up with an overall foreign aid request.

GAINESVILLE, FL (APRIL 5) UPI - A journalism professor has challenged a Pulitzer Prize committee rule that blocks the Seminole Indians' newspaper from competing for the nation's top journalism prize.

The rule limiting entries to newspapers that publish at least once a week discriminates against the American Indian press and other minority newspapers, University of Florida journalism professor Don Grooms said Wednesday.

"Native American newspapers don't have that religious dedication to coming out at a specific time that other papers do," said Grooms, whose ancestors include Cherokee and Creek Indians. "They say they'll be out on Tuesday but they don't say which Tuesday."

Grooms nominated The Seminole Tribune in January for the 1990 prize for stories published on new evidence in a mass murder case. The entry was disqualified in March because the paper publishes only twice a month.

Grooms has written a letter to the Pulitzer Prize judging committee asking that the rule be changed or a special category be set up for smaller publications that print irregularly.

Pulitzer Prize awards administrator Robert Christopher said the committee must draw the line somewhere on the frequency of publication and has no plans to change the rule.

The nomination was for stories written by Tribune reporter Pete Gallagher and free-lance writer Charles Flowers. It led to the release of James Richardson, who served more than 20 years in prison on charges he killed his seven children by putting pesticide in their lunch. "Pete Gallagher and Charles Flowers almost single-handedly sprung James Richardson from prison after 20 years," Grooms said.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Heavy buying late in the session Thursday helped prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange recover most of their early losses blamed on rumors about securities firms being in financial trouble.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which gained 757.65 points Wednesday, closed down 193.88 points to 28,249.06, but at one point in early trading it was down more than 1,000 points.

The Nikkei index has lost 10,666.81 points, or 27.4 percent of its value, since Dec. 29 when it was at the record high of 38,915.87.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Index of all listed major shares lost 17.14 points to 2,058.82.

Declines outnumbered advances 648 to 185, with 44 issues unchanged.

In Hong Kong, stock exchanges, banks and most businesses were closed Thursday for the Ching Ming Festival holiday. Trading will resume Friday.

In Australia, stock prices closed lower in moderate trading on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The All Ordinaries Index, which gained 11.4 points Wednesday, fell 11.2 points to 1,505.6. The closely-watched Gold Index slipped 4.5 points to WARSAW (APRIL 5) UPI - Families of Polish officers murdered by Soviet secret police 50 years ago in the Katyn Forest massacre urged President Mikhail Gorbachev Thursday to officially admit Soviet culpability.

A group of about 50 people rallied briefly in front of the Soviet Embassy in Warsaw and nine of them were allowed to enter the compound to deliver a letter to Gorbachev.

The letter said Poles are concerned that the Soviet Union has refused to official confirm that the NKVD, predecessor of the KGB secret police, killed 15,000 officers - the cream of the Polish military intelligentsia - in the forests of Katyn near Smolensk in 1940.

''We are more and more concerned over the Soviet stand toward the genocide '' the letter said. ''It (the admission) can be made if you will use your presidential power.''

The letter also said Soviet police are destroying documents regarding Katyn but offered no elaboration.

The nine-member delegation talked with the Soviet Counsul Vladimir Voronkov for 20 minutes and then all approached the embassy gate, where Voronkov addressed the rally.

''The letter has been received and will be sent to President Gorbachev,'' Voronkov said. ''I hope the problem will be solved according to the law.''

He assured the families that truth about Katyn will be disclosed soon.

The Polish government, following a joint investigation with the Soviets, said flatly the Soviet NKVD killed 4,500 officers in the forest of Katyn near the Soviet city of Smolensk in 1940.

The fate of another 11,500 officers taken prisoner by the Soviets is still unknown.

A Soviet team said it found evidence of the crimes in old NKVD files but the Soviet government has yet to take responsibility for one of the major unresolved issues in Soviet-Polish relations.

''First truth and then reconcilation,'' said a poster carried by one of the Poles to note that the admission to the crime can pave the way for genuine friendship between Poland and Moscow.

''Holy Mary, take care of those killed by shots at the back of their skulls,'' said another, referring to the method of execution.

The Soviet have made first steps to announce that the NKVD committed the crime.

A delegation of 400 Poles visited Katyn on Tuesday and the inscription on the monument blaming Germans for the crime was removed. But a new one was not added.

The delegation went to Katyn to mark the 50th anniversary of the crime. The first trainload of officers arrived April 3, 1940, and the systematic execution of the officers continued until early May.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Active promotion of economic growth pays dividends in states that adopt a ''homegrown'' strategy of promoting their businesses and improving workers' education, a report said Thursday.

According to the ''1990 Development Report Card for the States,'' the economically most successful states are those that abandoned a strategy of luring out-of-state companies with tax breaks and now foster the development of their own resources.

The study published by The Corporation for Enterprise Development, a Washington nonprofit research and consulting group, noted that the policy change amounts to a ''quiet revolution.''

''At the outset of the 1980s, states were bleeding their resources dry, chasing smokestacks and giving away tax revenues, just to lure the occasional footloose plant from outside their borders,'' said Doug Ross, CfED president.

Presently, the emphasis is on ''tailoring 'homegrown' strategies to cure state economic ills,'' Ross said. States now encourage and support indigenous development modernizing in-state businesses, educating their workers and facilitating start-ups, he added.

The CfED report graded the economies of every state from A to F using over 150 economic and policy measures gathered into four graded indexes: Economic Performance, Business Vitality, Development Capacity, and State Policy.

Correlating states' economic, technological and education policies with results, the report concluded that ''active state policy pays dividends.''

Focusing on New England as the first region to feel the impact of global competition, the report said that ''the advent in some states of aggressive policies that invest in competitive capacities, and the ensuing recovery of those state economies, are too coincident to be a matter of chance.''

Also, the report said that ''no political party has a corner on the policy innovation market: of the 20 states earning A's and B's in State Policy this year, 11 are led by Democratic governors and 9 by Republican governors.''

By the same token, the study added, ''of the 15 states earning D's and F's eight are led by Democratic and seven by Republican governors.''

Maryland, the only state with A's in all the indexes, ranked first in the report. It was followed by New Jersey with three A's and one B. Tied for third place were Connecticut, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

At the bottom of the scale were Louisiana, North Dakota and West Virginia.

By the end of the 1980s, the homegrown ''quiet revolution'' had spread to most states, the report showed.

Nowadays, 44 states stimulate applied research, and 45 states help businesses commercialize new technologies or apply state-of-the-art technologies.

Also, 35 states offer novel development finance options like product development, seed capital and venture capital, while 40 states employ new financial mechanisms that leverage private resources to help meet business capital needs.

Forty-seven states launched education reform measures and the same number devote resources to improve the quality and productivity of their workers.

The report said thaton a regional basis, the Northeast and Pacific states continue to be the economically strongest.

''Of the 13 states with no more than one grade below B this year, nine are in these two regions - California, Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Oregon and Vermont,'' the report said.

Ross warned, nevertheless, that the Northeast struggles with labor shortages, the Pacific with the decline of the timber industry, and significant defense cutbacks could further shock their economies.

The industrial Midwest is resurgent after a long decline, with the index of Economic Performance getting stronger and the index of State Policy ''shining.''

The South is ''surprisingly healthy, getting healthier,'' but its condition is still guarded, the study claimed. Real progress is obvious in the State Policy index, although limited resources slow the speed of change.

The states in the Plains and Intermountain West are both weak and static, and their condition ''critical.''

States in the area, except for Utah, are still lingering from the early 1980s recession and few are working aggressively to revive their economies with the notable exceptions of Iowa and Oklahoma, the report said.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Vandals set fire to a Trailways bus in a Greyhound-owned garage in Boston and the strike by Greyhound employees moved into court in Virginia and New York.

The fire late Wednesday destroyed one bus, damaged another and scorched the garage. Eleven other buses in the building were undamaged but had their headlights turned on, officials said.

"The person or persons who torched the bus had turned on the lights so, if somebody tried to remove the busses, the batteries would be dead. That was not the case. The batteries did not run down," Greyhound spokesman Kevin Fry said.

He said it was unclear if the attack on the buses, which are owned by Greyhound's sister company Trailways, was related to a strike that began March 2.

At least 28 buses have been fired on across the nation since the strike started and Greyhound officials say they will not negotiate with the union until the snipings stop for at least a week.

The union won a legal round Thursday when a New York Supreme Court judge barred Greyhound from hiring strikebreakers in New York City or bringing them to the city from elsewhere.

Greyhound planned to go to court in Roanoke, Va., Thursday to ask a judge to prohibit what it calls illegal mass picketing at the Star City terminal. Greyhound spokeswoman Teresa Clancy said the company has filed 19 similar actions in cities where violence has been the worst. Most of the suits, including one in Richmond, have resulted in limits on the numbers of pickets and their actions.

PROVIDENCE, RI (APRIL 5) UPI - Providence College men's basketball coach Rick Barnes met with his supervisor Wednesday night to discuss a job offer from the University of Virginia, a published report said Thursday.

The Providence Journal quoted an unnamed source as saying Barnes met Wednesday night with Providence College athletic director John Marinatto.

Barnes spent Wednesday morning in Charlottesville, Va. and flew back to Rhode Island aboard a private plane with Virginia athletic director Jim Copeland, the Journal said.

Barnes and Marinatto were unavailable for comment Thursday.

While in Denver last week, Barnes said he was not interested in the Virginia job. However, the Journal said he met Tuesday with Copeland and outgoing University of Virginia President Robert O'Neil.

Since coming to Providence College in 1988, Barnes has led the Friars to consecutive NCAA tournaments. The team lost to Virginia in the first round of the 1989 tournament and was defeated by Ohio State in the opening round of this year's tournament.

Barnes has said he wants stability for himself and his family and does not want to continue moving from school to school. He was an assistant coach at four schools and a head coach at George Mason University in Virginia before coming to Providence College.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 5) UPI - A radical Palestinian group holding eight Europeans hostage expressed willingness Thursday to free a French woman and her two young children in response to an appeal by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

The Fatah-Revolutionary Council of Abu Nidal revealed it was in contact with concerned parties to release Jaqueline Valente, who was taken hostage in November 1987, and her two youngest children.

Valente has two older children who were taken hostage but were freed in 1988 after a similar appeal by Gadhafi.

In a statement delivered to a Western news agency in Moslem west Beirut, the group said: ''In light of the appeal made by brother Col. Gadhafi to free the captives, particularly Jaqueline Valente and her family, we are taking into consideration these efforts.

''Our group is at present studying the humanitarian appeal of Col. Gadhafi and is already engaged in immediate contacts with the concerned parties.''

The Palestinian group did not identify the powers it was holding contacts with but analysts suggested French and Libyan diplomats may have been engaged in behind-the-scenes efforts to secure some of the captives' freedom.

Walid Khaled, a spokesman for the group interviewed at the Palestinian refugee camp of Mar Elias in southern Beirut, said clandestine diplomatic efforts to win the three captives' freedom ''have been positive up to now.''

Asked whether relatives of Valente should expect her release along with her children soon, Khaled said, ''Well, they could be told so,'' but refused to give details of the expected release.

A security source, who requested anonymity, said ''a breakthrough in Valente's plight would take place Monday.''

In Paris, Valente's brother-in-law Andre Metral said Thursday, ''This is going to be very quick.''

Metral, who has campaigned for Valente's release, said there were only ''perhaps a few points to resolve ... purely technical problems of security'' and the release now is ''a question of days or weeks.''

Moslem political sources said Lucien Bitterlin, the head of the Franco-Arab Friendship Association, paid a previously unannounced visit to Beirut last week.

Bitterlin, who earlier has been involved in efforts to release captives kept by the group, held talks with Sheikh Moahmmed Hussein Fadlallah, the mentor of Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, and other local leaders.

Pro-Iranian militants in Lebanon hold hostage 18 other Westerners, including eight Americans and three Britons. They are demanding freedom for more than 400 Arabs held prisoners in Israel and Kuwait.

Gadhafi late Wednesday appealed to Moslems holding Western hostages in Lebanon to free them. The Libyan leader called in particular for the release of Valente.

Valente and her two oldest children were kidnapped along with five Belgians from a boat off the Israeli coast Nov. 8, 1987 by the Palestinian group.

The Belgians were identified as Emmanuel Houtekins, his wife Godelieve Kets, their two children, Laurent and Valerie, and Houtekin's brother, Fernand.

Gadhafi was reported to have secured the release of Valente's two oldest children in Libya in December 1988, because the two girls surfaced in Libya after Gadhafi made his appeal. Valente has given birth twice in captivity.

TOKYO (APRIL 5) UPI - Sanyo Electric Co. said Thursday it has developed a high-performance rechargeable storage battery with an energy density about 1.8 times that of the conventional nickel-cadmium cell.

The Tokyo-based company said the cylindrical cell combines a newly designed nickel plate with a metal hydride plate using a long-life, high-capacity hydrogen absorbing metal alloy.

The new battery can be charged in about one and a half hours and provide large amounts of electrical current by discharging all of its stored energy in only 20 minutes, the company said.

While the new cell can easily substitute for conventional nickel-cadmium batteries, it will provide longer lasting electrical power to communications equipment, such as transceivers, cellular phones, laptop computers and other consumer electronic devices like portable video camera recorders, the company said.

Two types of the new battery will be initially released on the market this fall.

The initial production scale will be 400,000 units per month, it said.

ENFIELD, CT (APRIL 5) UPI - Angelo Noto, 109, was a gentleman who always drank red wine at meals and took frequent naps but worked hard his entire life, said his 81-year-old daughter, Catherine Filossie.

Noto, who died Wednesday in a convalescent home, was one of Connecticut's oldest residents. He outlived two wives, a son, a daughter and seven siblings. "He was a gentleman from the old school, the type that tipped their hat when they saw a lady," Filossie said.

Filossie, one of his four surviving children, said Noto lived a life of moderation, never eating after 4 p.m., taking frequent naps and working hard. He was still shoveling snow at 103, she said. Noto drank only red wine at meals. "It was his own personal vitamin pill," Filossie said.

He came to Enfield from Italy as a young man. In addition to repairing looms at the former Bigelow carpet mills, where he worked for 47 years before retiring in his mid 70s, Noto often did odd jobs to support his family. He also enjoyed gardening, opera and playing the guitar.

Noto never returned to Italy but toward the end of his life, Filossie said "he would dream about times he had forgotten, when he was a young man in Italy."

She said he spent a lot of time with his children and taught them many lessons about life. "He had to say good morning to everyone he met. He'd always say that whenever you leave someone, never say goodbye, but always say, 'I'll see you again soon,"' Filossie said.

The state department of health services said Noto was one of Connecticut's oldest residents. Claudia Brown of Norwich is also 109.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (APRIL 5) UPI - Engineers belatedly completed critical testing of the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope early Thursday, keeping the shuttle Discovery on track for blastoff Tuesday, officials said.

"We're go. The testing was done about 3:30 this morning," said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. "We're on scheduled for April 10th. It's looking good."

Discovery's countdown to launch on the year's third shuttle mission is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. Saturday, about an hour after the ship's five-member crew arrives at the Kennedy Space Center from Houston for final preparations.

If all goes well, commander Loren Shriver, 45, co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43 Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38, will blast off on the 35th shuttle mission at 8:47 a.m. Tuesday, two days earlier than originally planned.

The date was in question earlier this week after an air conditioner cooling water pipe ruptured and sprayed water on critical electrical gear in a utility building near the launch control center. The resulting short circuit triggered widespread power outages and disrupted launch processing.

Electricity was quickly restored to most areas but a lack of cooling water disabled air conditioners and NASA was forced to shut down heat-sensitive launch control center computer gear needed to monitor testing at pad 39B.

As a result, critical work to charge the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope's batteries was interrupted, as was a 52-hour test of the telescope's sensitive instruments and electronic gear.

The test and battery charging resumed late Tuesday and by early Thursday, the telescope testing was complete. After final battery charging, Discovery's payload bay doors will be closed for flight.

NORWALK, CT (APRIL 5) UPI - An obsessed fan of late night television host David Letterman will face a competency hearing Friday to determine if she should be tried for trespassing at his home, court officials said Thursday.

Margaret M. Ray, 37, of Crawford, Colo., will appear before Superior Court Judge James Bingham in Norwalk, a court clerk said. She was arrested March 18 at Letterman's New Canaan home just days after being released from the prison for women at Niantic after serving seven months for violating her probation for a previous conviction for trespassing at Letterman's home.

Ray has been accused of trespassing on Letterman's property at least six times in the last two years. Letterman, who has said he does not know Ray, called police after he spotted her on his property March 18.

A competency hearing concerning the latest charge against Ray was originally scheduled for Wednesday but was postponed after a medical professional was unable to attend, court officials said.

Assistant State's Attorney Robert Hall said three medical professionals have found Ray competent to stand trial but the final decision was Bingham's. Ray was sent to prison last August when she violated her parole by wandering around the tennis courts at Letterman's home.

In May 1989, Ray received a one-year suspended sentence and three years probation after pleading guilty to two previous counts of criminal trespass and one count of using a motor vehicle without permission.

As a condition of probation she was ordered to stay away from Letterman, return to her home in Colorado, and continue psychiatric treatment. Ray gained notoriety in May 1988 when she was caught driving Letterman's midnight blue Porsche on the New Jersey side of the Lincoln Tunnel heading into New York City with her three-year-old son.

Ray, who told a toll collector she was Letterman's wife and introduced her son as David Letterman Jr., had broken into Letterman's home while he was out of town and stayed there for several days.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 5) UPI - East German deputies got their first taste of parliamentary democracy Thursday as they voted in a new president of the house at the inaugural session of the country's first freely elected assembly.

Shortly after the opening ceremony, deputies elected Sabine Bergmann-Pohl as president of the Parliament. The East Berlin doctor is a member of the conservative Christian-Democratic Union, which with 163 seats is the largest party in the assembly.

The first ballot Thursday morning did not give any of the candidates an absolute majority. Bergmann-Pohl received 214 votes in the second ballot.

The procedure contrasted sharply with the activities of the previous Parliament, which had been little more than a rubber-stamp institution during the four decades of Stalinist rule that ended with the ouster of the hard-line communists last fall.

Many of the 400 deputies, including leading members of the Party of Democratic Socialism - the renamed communists - attended an ecumenical church service before the ceremonial opening of the Volkskammer, the East German Parliament.

Among the delegates at the service in the downtown Gethsemane church were outgoing Communist Prime Minister Hans Modrow and Gregor Gysi, the leader of the PDS, which has 66 parliamentary seats.

''In this hour, not only our own citizens are watching us but also our neighbors and indeed the people of the entire world,'' said Lothar Pinche, 64, the senior member of Parliament.

Pinche, one of the 25 deputies of the center-right German-Social Union, delivered the inaugural speech, saying that ''40 years of a difficult road are coming to an end.''

He ended his address by saying ''God bless our German fatherland,'' a phrase that has become the rallying call for supporters of rapid German reunification.

The March 18 electoral victory by the three-party, conservative Alliance for Germany was widely seen as an endorsement of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's blueprint for unification.

Several deputies said they expected the life of the new-style democratic Parliament to be short and that the role of a still-to-be-formed, broad-based government would be largely restricted to passing legislation needed for reunification.

Parliamentarians are expected to soon start discussion of a planned economic union between the two Germanys - a crucial step toward political reunification.

In Bonn, Cabinet ministers said Thursday that a controversial proposal on the cost of monetary union would be discussed with the new East German Parliament and government.

The powerful West German Bundesbank recently suggested that two East German marks will buy one deutsche mark when the union is established, probably this summer. The central bank also said that individuals would only be able to change savings up to 2,000 marks at a 1-to-1 rate.

The plan drew sharp criticism from virtually all East German political parties and from West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's liberal coalition partners.

In addition to electing a house president, Parliament is also expected to abolish the post of chairman of the State Council, held for 18 years by Erich Honecker, the ailing and discredited former communist leader. A president will eventually hold the position of head of state.

The historic opening of East Germany's first democratically elected Parliament was partly marred by recent allegations some of the 400 deputies were once linked to the hated Stasi, the secret police of the hard-line communist leadership ousted last fall.

A parliamentary commission is to be formed to investigate all 400 Volkskammer delegates for Stasi links.

A somber mood prevailed as 390 deputies from 12 political parties filed into the huge, glass-sheathed Palace of the Republic, which houses Parliament.

On Monday, Ibrahim Boehme resigned his leadership of the SPD, saying he needed time to clear himself of accusations he had worked for the Stasi.

Earlier, de Maiziere had angrily rejected similar accusations leveled against him.

LONDON (APRIL 5) UPI - General Motors Europe announced Thursday it is investing $263 million in a new engine facility at its Vauxhall Motors factory in central England that will also produce V6 engines for Swedish-made Saab cars.

Officials of the subsidiary of the top U.S. automaker said the facility, in Cheshire county, is scheduled to start production in 1992. It will initially employ about 300 people. The facility will make advanced V6 engines for GM cars in Europe, as well as a special V6 engine for Saab cars, the automaker said.

GM purchased Saab's automotive operations late last year under a 50-50 joint venture deal that cost the giant carmaker about $600 million. Industry analysts say Saab needs a V6 engine to more effectively compete, especially in the U.S. market.

"The major proportion of the engine facility's output will be exported with substantial economic benefit to the United Kingdom," said Paul J. Tosch, the chairman and managing director of Vauxhall Motors, which is owned by GM.

The new facility was chosen in preference to a site in West Germany mostly because it will use available space at the factory in Ellesmere Port, 170 miles northwest of London.

Officials said a key element in deciding on the location in Cheshire was anagreement with unions which should minimize the risk of industrial disputes. The scheme involves giving all Vauxhall workers at the plant a five percent pay increase and a greater say in decision-making.

Nick Reilly, the director of the factory, said Vauxhall "has taken a significant step to raise its competitiveness by negotiating an innovative employee agreement."

He said the agreement gives Vauxhall more flexibility with its work force and ensures unions will be united as one voice when negotiating with management. "The spirit of the agreement recognizes that success is largely in the 'heads, hearts and hands' of the employees," said a statement by Vauxhall.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - The Bush administration opposes proposed legislation to deny applications to banks from countries that restrict U.S. financial institutions operating abroad, a Treasury Department official said Thursday.

"The president has clearly stated his opposition to measures that might restrict the flow of capital or increase protectionism," said David Mulford, under secretary of the Treasury for international affairs. "The market should be free to allocate resources," Mulford said.

The Fair Trade in Financial Services Act of 1990 would permit American banking regulators to deny applications from foreign banking and securities concerns in countries that impose trade barriers against U.S. firms.

"The U.S. objection to even limited reciprocity is the risk that reciprocity would be used and retaliation would follow," Mulford said. "The impact could be devastating to confidence in world financial markets and established patterns of monetary and capital flows."

In his testimony to the Senate Banking Committee, Mulford also said that the Justice Department has raised constitutional questions about the proposed international banking legislation.

"Thus, in seeking progress, the administration prefers to encourage other countries to open and liberalize their markets, to our mutual advantage, rather than threaten to deny foreign access to our own," Mulford said.

Nonetheless, the White House is concerned about the problem. "I agree that U.S. banks have lost their position of world dominance," Mulford said. "Not only has their position declined worldwide, it has also declined in the United States."

"Meanwhile, Japanese banks have increased their market share around the world and their penetration in the United States," he said. "This has occurred while U.S. banks have acquired only a negligible share of the Japanese market and have not enjoyed the same ease of access the Japanese banks have enjoyed in the United States."

KATMANDU, NEPAL (APRIL 5) UPI - Panicked depositers started a run on banks as thousands of civil servants went on strike against seven government ministries and 14 state corporations in spreading political unrest.

Civil servants in the capital went on a two-hour strike - the first in 25 years - joining striking employees of 14 state-owned companies including Royal Nepal Airlines.

Strikes hit the ministries of Works and Transport, Health, Forests, the Department of Roads, the Auditor General's Office and the Comptroller General's Office.

Most of the employees basked in the sun inside office compounds where banners read, ''Stop killings and terror immediately, let all government employees unite, let us fight for human rights.''

Several thousand employees of the Nepal Telecommunications Corporation, Royal Nepal Airlines, Nepal Rashtra Bank (the central bank) and other agencies also staged a similar strike.

Panic-stricken customers Thursday rushed to banks to withdraw money and at the central office of the Nepal Bank Ltd. the staff had to issue paper tokens when they ran short of coins.

Meanwhile, King Birendra, one of the last absolute monarchs in the world, Wednesday discussed the crisis with former prime ministers and leaders of Parliament, a source close to the discussions said.

Most suggested that the king start an immediate dialogue with the opposition and that reforms within the present system - which has banned political parties for 20 years - will be inadequate to ease the crisis, said the source.

Since Feb. 18, repression of a democracy movement has left 23 demonstrators dead and thousands arrested.

Vehicular traffic inside the capital came to a virtual halt in the evening Thursday after youths erected roadblocks, stopped vehicles and forced people to switch off lights.

With the average person's income equal only to $160 per year, Nepal remains underdeveloped with illiteracy widespread, infant mortality over 10 percent and life expectancy only 52 years.

After fellow Telecom employees went on an indefinite strike demanding the release of their colleagues, the 70 were freed.

Telcom workers also asked the government to stop police from using their vehicles to patrol cities. Police are running short of vehicles and commandeered some from different departments including some donated by the United States Agency for International Development.

A State Department official in Washington told United Press International ''The United States government has asked the government of Nepal to stop immediately the use of U.S. AID-funded vehicles to transport detainees and police.

''This is a violation of agreements under which vehicles were provided to the government of Nepal. Government officials have assured us they will stop the misuse of the vehicles.''

Meanwhile doctors announced they would strike Friday nationwide to protest the detention of 13 colleagues. And the Nepal Association of Travel Agents said they would halt tours and ticket sales during the upcoming prime tourist season in support of the democracy movement.

NAIROBI, KENYA (APRIL 5) UPI - The International Commitee of the Red Cross has resumed relief flights into famine-threatened southern Sudan after a gap of more than four months, a Nairobi-based official said Thursday.

Light planes are now flying out of Khartoum and Lokichokio near the border in Kenya carrying urgently needed seed and medical supplies to the towns of Wau and Malakal, said Dominique Buff, an ICRC coordinator for southern Sudan.

The United Nations has said up to 2.5 million people are at risk of famine in southern Sudan this year because of disruption from the country's seven year civil war.

Over a quarter of a million died because of the war and poor harvests in 1988.

Supplies of emergency food and other relief have been disrupted since November, when the Khartoum government stopped permits for flights into war-torn areas. It accused unspecified relief agencies of supplying military material to the rebel Sudanese People's Liberation Army.

A Twin Otter plane left Lokichokio for Wau, 630 miles southwest of Khartoum Monday, carrying vaccines for animals and children, Buff said. A second plane flew from Khartoum Tuesday to Malakal, 420 miles south of the capital.

If the flights go well, he said, a larger Hercules C-130 plane would be brought into use. The ICRC has flight permissions only until Apr. 16 at present is hopful of obtaining an extension, he said.

Buff said the ICRC was focusing its relief effort on seed distribution ahead of seasonal rains rather than on straight food distribution - the target of the U.N.'s parallel Operation Lifeline.

''The focus is on rehabilitation for the time being,'' he said. ''It very important to get seeds to these places before the rainy season starts.

''Later on there will be pockets where there is no food and we are earmarking certain destinations for food, giving 500 tons per destination '' he said.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (APRIL 5) UPI - The scorned Marla Maples may not be at Donald Trump's side Thursday for the lavish grand opening of his $1 billion Taj Mahal Casino Resort but Merv Griffin, his one-time nemesis, will.

Trump made headlines several weeks ago when he announced that he had invited Maples, the Georgia model and fledgling actress said to be at the heart of the Trumps' marital woes, to be his guest at the Taj's ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Requests for press credentials for the Taj opening soared at the news that Maples, who has been in hiding since she was identified as the "other woman," would finally be unveiled in Atlantic City.

Taj officials had anticipated issuing about 200 press credentials for the grand opening ceremony but that number has blossomed to more than 1,000. However, after all the hoopla, Trump ended up retracting Maples's invitation and reportedly has broken off his relationship with her.

Trump's personal life isn't the only thing people will be talking about at the opening. A veteran casino analyst who sparked Trump's anger by publicly questioning the Taj's ability to survive was fired from his job last month after refusing to back down from his unflaterring comments.

Marvin Roffman, was a gaming analyst with Janney Montgomery Scott Inc., the Philadelphia brokerage firm, when he told the Wall Street Journal that the massive gaming hall may not be able to earn the $1.3 million a day it needs to pay its annual debt service of $94.5 million during the resort's slow winter months.

Trump has invited entertainer Merv Griffin to share the dais with him Thursday evening during the ribbon-cutting ceremony, which will feature a laser show and fireworks.

It wasn't that long ago that Trump and Griffin battled for control of Resorts International Inc., which once owned the Taj. They eventually agreed in November 1988 to split the company, with Trump getting the Taj and Griffin getting Resorts International Casino Hotel and a casino in the Bahama.

"You know, I asked him the same question," said Willard "Bucky" Howard, executive vice president of the Taj, when asked why Trump had invited a rival casino owner to share in the Taj's grand opening festivities. "He said, 'Merv's a nice guy,"' Howard said. This will not be the first time the two moguls share the spotlight. Trump and Griffin were both judges at the Miss America Pageant in September.

Other celebrities rumored to attend the opening included Liza Minelli, Don Johnson and Melanie Griffith and Tom Cruise. Pop star Michael Jackson will reportedly visit the pastel-colored casino on Friday.

The Taj features a 120,000-square-foot casino with more than 3,000 slot machines and $14 million worth of Austrian crystal chandeliers. The facility, adorned with colorful minarets, sprawls over 17 acres along the Boardwalk.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Americans believe that the incidence of mental illness is increasing in the country, but generally prefer that treatment facilities be put in someone else's neighborhood, a survey showed Thursday.

The poll conducted for the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Program on Chronic Mental Illness in Boston was described by its sponsors as the first national survey in almost 30 years on Americans' attitudes about the mentally ill.

The telephone poll of 1,326 adults last December by Daniel Yankelovich of DYG Inc. had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Eighty-nine percent of those surveyed said mental illness is a serious health problem for the nation and 45 percent said it is a very serious problem.

Sixty-nine percent said mental illness has increased in the past 20 years, compared with 6 percent who said it has declined. Thirty-one percent said either they or a family member had gone to a psychiatrist or psychologist.

''We found that mental illness has very real day-to-day implications for a great many Americans,'' said Dr. Miles Shore, program director.

The survey showed Americans were optimistic that mental illness can be treated, but did not want treatment facilities near their homes - what the study authors called the ''not-in-my-backyard'' syndrome.

Of those polled, fewer than one in three said they would welcome a mental health facility in their area, with opposition most common among male, white, wealthier, better educated and older Americans. Sixty-five percent said there is still a stigma attached to the mentally ill.

However, 74 percent said ''anyone can become mentally ill'' and that ''mental illness can be cured.'' Sixty-nine percent rejected the idea that keeping the mentally ill behind locked doors is the best approach.

''On the one hand, people do object to siting these facilities in their backyard. On the other hand, over half recognize that mental illness can improve and that keeping up a normal life - which includes community living - will help with that improvment,'' Shore said.

''The ... findings show that we have our work cut out for us,'' he said. ''We must clearly do a better job of informing the American public about an issue which has a profound impact on American life.''

The poll found most Americans want to know more about mental illness, and Shore said the survey results would be used in devising educational campaigns.

The poll was funded by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the National Institute on Mental Health, the American Psychiatric Association and the PEW Charitable Trusts.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (APRIL 5) UPI - An avalanche killed two American climbers and their Sherpa guide as they prepared to climb Mount Manaslu, the world's seventh tallest peak in the Himalayan Mountains, Nepalese officials and expedition leaders said Thursday.

Those killed in the avalanche March 27 were Nancy Jackson, 34, an environmental engineer and part-time mountain guide from Federal Way, Wash., Charles Schertz, 35, a Pittsburgh physician, and the guide Nima Wangchuk, 41.

The remaining eight American climbers called off the expedition to climb the 26,775-foot peak, Nepalese officials and expedition organizers said.

''We are shocked and shattered by the loss of our good friends, Nancy,

Charlie and Nima Wangchuk in this tragic accident,'' said team leader Don Goodman, 33, of Mercer Island, Wash. ''Our sorrow goes out to their families.

''As a team, we have chosen not to go on,'' Goodman said. ''We will be returning home as soon as we can pull ourselves together here.''

Dan McConnell, a spokesman and organizer for the expedition, said three team members and two Sherpa guides had been helping setting up camps on the mountain and were on their way back down to the base camp when they were engulfed by the avalanche at the 15,500-foot level.

''They had not reached the top, but were setting camps higher up on the mountain ...'' McConnell said. ''They were just making preparations for the climb.''

Jackson, Shertz and Wangchuk were buried under the snow and efforts to resuscitate them were unsuccessful, organizers said. The two others were not hurt.

Goodman descended to Katmandu to contact authorities, while other members remained behind to remove the bodies.

''It is storming on the mountains now and they are waiting to see if the weather conditions will allow them to bring the bodies down,'' McConnell said. ''They have recovered them from the avalanche site.''

McConnell said the climbers would be cremated in a monestary in the valley below according to their wishes.

Jackson, an environmental engineer, was a part-time mountain guide who had climbed Mount Rainier more than 50 times during the 1980s and had also climbed Mount McKinley in Alaska and Aconcagua in Argentina.

Schertz, one of two doctors on the expedition, was a member of the successful Northwest American Everest Expedition in 1988 and the first American ascent of Cho Oyu in Nepal in 1986.

''They were not professionals but they all had considerable climbing experience,'' said McConnell.

The Nepalese Ministry of Tourism said four people have now died in the current climbing season, including a Japanese climber killed while trying to scale Mount Pumori.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (APRIL 5) UPI - A bomb set by suspected Sikh militants Thursday ripped through a bus in Haryana state, killing at least 12 people and injuring 42 others just minutes after the lower house of Parliament voted to extend federal rule of Punjab, police said.

Police said the bomb exploded Thursday as passengers were getting off the bus in the main bus terminal in the Haryana town of Panipat, and 30 miles north of New Delhi.

The 4:30 p.m. blast killed at least 12 people on the bus and injured 42 others, police said. Eighteen of the wounded were reported hospitalized in serious condition.

Police said they suspected the bombing was the work of the Babbar Khalsa, a Sikh extremist group blamed by authorities for two blasts Tuesday in the Punjab city of Batala and a nearby village that killed 39 people.

''The bomb exploded as the bus had just been parked and as the passengers were getting off,'' said a bus station employee contacted in Panipat by telephone.

The employee, who declined to be identified, said the middle and rear sections of the roof were blown off and bodies were hurled into the air.

The explosion came just minutes after the lower house of Parliament in New Dehli passed a constitutional amendment to extend federal rule of Punjab, where Sikh militants have been fighting since 1983 to create an independent theocratic state of Khalistan.

Extremist violence, which has occasionally spread from Punjab to Haryana and New Delhi, has claimed more than 7,000 lives.

The amendment was passed, 399-3, with the opposition Congress (I) Party joining the government of Prime Minister V.P. Singh in agreeing to extend ''President's Rule'' in the predominantly Sikh state.

The legislation was sent to the upper house for its approval.

President's Rule allows the central government to dismiss an elected state administration it deems incapable of performing its duties. New Delhi can then assume control of the state.

President's Rule was first declared on May 10, 1987, in Punjab by the Congress (I) Party government of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, which dismissed a moderate Sikh administration for failing to curb extremist violence.

The National Front government, which assumed power in November, said it wanted to extend the measure because conditions in Punjab were still to volatile to hold elections for a new state assembly.

Others note that national parliamentary elections were held in Punjab in November without major problems.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Former first lady Betty Ford and several other Republicans announced Thursday they had formed a new political action committee to support GOP candidates who oppose President Bush's anti-abortion stance.

The committee, calling itself Pro-Choice America, said it had ''only one purpose - to support courageous pro-choice Republicans who face anti-choice opponents.''

Jayne Hart, a spokeswoman for the group, said the PAC would concentrate only on races in which a Republican who favored abortion rights was opposed by another Republican or a Democrat who was opposed to abortion.

While the PAC planned to contribute to both state and federal races, Hart said it would likely stay out of contests in which both candidates held the same abortion position, or where the Democrat favored abortion rights and the Republican opposed abortion.

Hart said the group hoped to raise its initial money from a national mailing that cites several abortion rights Republicans and states: ''These brave candidates hold in their hands the capacity to swing the Republican Party to a pro-choice position and to reaffirm America's pro-choice consensus for decades to come.''

A statement announcing the PAC's formation said it would test the theory of Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater that the GOP was an umbrella party that could accept all abortion views, even though the party's platform and Bush are strongly anti-abortion.

The new PAC said it would ''aggressively back Republicans who differ with President Bush's anti-choice position.''

In addition to Ford, other founding members of the PAC included: Rep. Connie Morella, R-Md., former Republican Chair Mary Louise Smith and former Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J.

Also among the founders was Rep. Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., who is challenging Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. Both Schneider and Pell favor abortion rights. In addition, there were several Republican men among the founders, including Rep. Bill Green, R-N.Y.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - President Bush, already facing a busy election-year travel schedule, plans a trip to Latin America later this year, the White House announced Thursday.

Noting recent speculation about a rash of presidential globe-trotting later this year, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush ''hopes to visit'' Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Fitzwater said only that the trip would take place after Bush's scheduled Labor Day return from a summer vacation in Maine. He said details ''are still under discussion'' and other countries could be added to the itinerary.

Vice President Dan Quayle recently visited Chile and Venezuela as part of a Latin American swing arranged around his attendance at presidential inaugurations in Brazil and Chile.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - U.S. and Japanese negotiators ended three days of complex and intensive trade talks Thursday with a compromise that conference sources said will allow more American companies to enter Japanese retail markets.

The talks, which were to have ended Tuesday night, went for an additional 36 hours as the negotiators hammered out a deal on removing some of the ''structural impediments'' in Japan's laws and society that have the effect of barring foreign competition.

In the compromise disclosed by conference sources Thursday, the Japanese government committed itself to revise its laws governing retailers within one year, and to totally abolish the laws within three years.

When the Japanese arrived in Washington, they had proposed a five-year period for phasing out the retail act, but the American negotiatiors insisted on a shorter period.

The negotiators are expected to produce an interim report on their efforts to be published this week, and a final report will be issued in July.

The first congressional reaction to the reported compromise was skepitcal.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said, ''I'm much less interested in what this latest agreement pledges than what it provides in the way of increased world trade.

''Put me down as a skeptic who has seen too many agreements in which the results didn't match the rhetoric. Previous U.S.-Japan trade agreements - and we've had a lot of them - were like nothing so much as a drugstore cowboy, all hat and no cattle.''

Special Japanese emissary Nobuo Matsunaga, former ambassador to Washington visited the White House Wednesday afternoon and delivered a personal letter to President Bush from Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu. He gave no details of its contents.

Kaifu is expected to formally outline his government's position Friday in Tokyo.

Matsunaga, accompanied by Deputy Foreign Minister Hisashi Owada, arrived in Washington on short notice Monday.

The compromise on structural impediments and the Japanese decision to change their regulations to permit American super-computers and commerical satellites to be sold in Japan, also announced this week, appeared to defuse a crisis that some diplomats feared would grow into a full-scale trade war.

The Bush administration has been working against the clock to avoid tough trade sanctions being imposed against Japan.

Japan sells $49 billion more in goods in the United States each year than Americans sell in Japan. Many U.S. experts believe the reason for the imbalance is Japan's official efforts, some based in cultural bias, to protect its home markets while exploiting those abroad.

In a statement, Fitzwater said Bush had emphasized his hope both sides would take further steps in the final report and follow-up talks.

''Bringing about structural adjustments will not be easy on either side of the Pacific but both governments are committed to achieving a positive interim SII report, as well as a more comprehensive finished product in July,'' the statement said.

Matsunaga said Japan was pleased to see agreement ''on both sides'' on the three key issues. He said he also had delivered a proposal from his government on the sale of American wood products to Japan but added, ''I can't tell you the content of that proposal.''

''We were very encouraged by the president's firm commitment to fight protectionism,'' Matsunaga said, an oblique reference to calls in the United States for retaliation against Japan.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Video Review:

MOVIES

"LOOK WHO'S TALKING" - Mollie (Kirstie Alley) is an unmarried mother looking for the perfect pop for her son Mikey. His choice is James (John Travolta), a friendly cabbie-baby sitter who makes mommy laugh.

She's foolishly holding out hope that Mikey's real father (George Segal) will divorce his wife and marry her. But, that, of course, is just Mollie's folly - until she wises up.

As engaging as these folks are, though, it's the off-screen jabber of Bruce Willis who voices Mikey's thoughts from fetus to toddler that keeps the laughs coming and makes this film different. His wisecracks and Mikey's expressions are a perfect match. Predictable, sure, and cute, but also charming and very funny. 1989. 96 minutes. RCA/Columbia Pictures Home Video. Rated PG-13.

"COMMUNION" - An intriguing, true story of one man's struggle with the unknown - and his fight to retain his sanity. While spending a weekend at his country cabin, novelist Whitley Strieber (Christopher Walken) has what he thinks is a close brush with a group of aliens - he believes he was kidnapped and subjected to some sort of experiment.

To his wife Anne (Lindsay Crouse) it was just a bad dream and Strieber wants to agree, but it keeps haunting him, increasing his paranoia and instability. To make matters worse, his seven-year-old son says he saw the "little blue men," too.

Strieber, who wrote the screenplay based on his book, displays his "visitors" mostly in dreamlike flashes, looking not quite real. In fact, much of the film is like that and in the end, a lot is left to the imagination. 1989. 103 minutes. MCEG/Virgin Home Entertainment. Rated R. $89.95.

"SECOND SIGHT" - John Larroquette and Bronson Pinchot, a couple of well-known TV sitcom stars, are paired in an oddball comic crime adventure about a private eye and his psychic partner. They join forces and, uh, spirits to solve a mystery surrounding the abduction of a Cardinal. Trouble is, the spooks begin taking over. With Bess Armstrong and Stuart Pankin. 1989. 85 minutes. Warner Home Video. Rated PG. $89.95.

"CONVICTED" - John Larroquette again, this time in an earlier, made-for-TV drama about a mailman falsely accused and convicted of rape. Lindsay Wagner is his wife who wages a relentless five-year struggle to get him freed, battling an equally determined D.A. (Carroll O'Connor). 1986. 94 minutes. Turner Home Entertainment. No MPAA rating. $69.98.

"DEALERS" - A fiesty little high-rolling Wall Street drama involving a couple of top-dollar money merchants from both sides of the coin. Conservative, analytical trader Rebecca DeMornay is paired with and pitted against seemingly reckless, eager-to-gamble dealer Paul McGann, becoming rivals, lovers and rivals again while trying to save their bank. 1989. 92 minutes. Academy Entertainment. Rated R. $89.95.

"TO KILL A PRIEST" - With Solidarity beginning to catch on in Poland, a Communist officer hatches a desperate plot to curb the movement by murdering a young priest who has been profusely supporting the union and human rights.

Based on a true story. The film, which had only limited theatrical release, stars Ed Harris and Christopher Lambert. 1989. 117 minutes. RCA/Columbia Pictures Home Video. Rated R. $89.95.

VIDBITS

"Field Of Dreams," the delightful baseball fantasy starring Kevin Costner, is this week's favorite among the nation's video movie renters, according to Billboard Magazine. "Honey, I Shrunk The Kids" has moved up to second, with "Parenthood" third. "Honey, etc." is the new leader among video sales moving ahead of "Lethal Weapon 2" ...

"In Search Of Historic Jesus" arrives on home video in time for the Easter season to delve into the questions - and some of the answers - about Jesus and his work from both Biblical and secular sources. John Rubenstein has the title role. (Vestron Video, 91 minutes, Rated G, $89.98.)

Also, returning for Easter, "The Robe," a noteworthy 1953 drama about the Roman centurian who presided over Christ's crucifixion, starring Richard Burton, Jean Simmons and Victor Mature. (CBS-Fox, 135 minutes, $29.98) ... And, for the small fry: "The Easter Bunny Comes To Town" (Vestron, 60 minutes, $14.98), an animated fable narrated by Fred Astaire.

World War II buffs take note: The eight-volume documentary collection "Frank Capra's War Years" will hit the video stands on May 23, from RCA-Columbia, priced at $19.95 each or $149.95

"Golden Girl" Rue McClanahan, whose Blanche talks constantly about men, changes the subject to discuss a different kind of petting in two new videos due out in June - "The Dog Care Video Guide" and its companion, "The Cat Care Video Guide"

BEIJING (APRIL 5) UPI - Police sealed off Tiananmen Square again Thursday and clamped tight security on Beijing during a festival honoring the dead, but the city was reported calm despite calls for quiet protests marking last year's pro-democracy movement.

Beijing residents and foreign journalists observed large numbers of uniformed and plainclothes police patrolling neighborhoods throughout the capital, some on foot and some on bicycles. Many carried handguns or electric riot-control prods.

The government has been concerned about renewed unrest between April and June. Several key anniversaries of last year's protests fall during the period leading to June 3-4 when Chinese troops fired on unarmed demonstrators. At least hundreds of people were killed during the crackdown.

Overseas dissident groups distributed leaflets calling for muted protests to mark the anniversaries and quietly mourn the victims on Thursday, the Qing Ming festival to honor the dead.

Chinese traditionally wear white flowers or black armbands and burn paper money and sweep graves as signs of mourning on the festival. Beijing authorities, however, warned residents such public displays were forbidden.

''This is not done that much among city residents, anyway,'' said a young Beijing teacher. ''It's mostly observed in the countryside.''

Chinese Premier Li Peng said Wednesday authorities would take ''all necessary measures'' to secure the city and Tiananmen Square, which students occupied last spring as the center of the protests for greater freedom.

Dozens of uniformed paramilitary police, some with rifles and wearing helmets, closed Tiananmen Square Thursday morning to the public for an official activity by hundreds of brightly clad youngsters.

The same tactic was employed last Sunday when the square was closed until dusk and water cannon kept nearby as a warning.

By late afternoon, police sealed the square and surrounding streets, pushing the curious back and patrolling in motorcycles with sidecars. Lines of unarmed police cordoned off the Great Hall of the People on the square's west side.

A sound truck at the northeast corner of the square blared a government message telling motorists not to turn onto a street ringing the square.

No incidents were reported.

The city's college campuses also were reported quiet.

Students at Beijing University, one of the birthplaces of the democracy movement last April, circulated a letter this week calling for wearing of flowers and armbands as signs of protest.

The letter called those killed last year ''heroes'' but said of China's aging leaders: ''no matter how long they linger, ruling by cruelty ... after their death they will receive endless castigation from the people.''

The next sensitive anniversary date is April 15, the day former Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang, a popular liberal, died of a heart attack, setting off an outpouring of grief among college students that turned into six weeks of pro-democracy protests.

In Hong Kong, about 10,000 people marched to the colony's Victoria Park to commemorate the students killed in the army-led crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

Organizer Lee Wing-tat said the march was called to ensure that the students would be remembered.

Hong Kong is scheduled to revert to Chinese rule in 1997.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (APRIL 5) UPI - Eastman Kodak Co. pleaded guilty Thursday to dumping hazardous chemicals at its giant Kodak Park manufacturing plant and agreed to pay a record $2.15 million in fines and penalties.

Kodak pleaded guilty in Rochester City Court to unlawful dealing in hazardous wastes and failure to properly notify authorities of a chemical spill as part of plea bargain that concluded a two-year investigation.

Judge Herman Waltz accepted the guilty plea to the two misdemeanors, but questioned whether the state attorney general's office and the Department of Environmental Conservation had let a white-collar criminal off the hook.

''I question the wisdom of accepting a plea in proceedings where persons who are criminals will be allowed to go free,'' Walz said. ''Kodak has admitted that it has committed criminal acts.

''It is this court's view that white-collar criminals ought to be punished at least as severely as other types of criminals and perhaps worse because of the greater impact of their crimes.''

But Walz accepted the prosecution's contention the hefty fines ''offer a more beneficial result to the public than serving jail time.''

Kodak agreed to pay a $1 million fine to the state, $1 million in civil penalties and $150,000 to Monroe County and five neighboring counties to use to carry out emergency response plans in case of a toxic chemical accident.

''Kodak's $1 million fine is the largest criminal fine every assessed in the state in an environmental case and the fourth-largest ever paid in the nation,'' Attorney General Robert Abrams said. ''It illustrates the gravity with which my office and the state view improper handling of hazardous substances that can damage the environment.''

Kodak also agreed to pay for an extensive cleanup of the Kodak Park site.

Kodak admitted it illegally shipped 48,900 pounds of contaminated soil excavated from beneath a building near its Kodak Park tank farm. Toxic silver waste from a liquid extraction process had leaked into the soil.

Kodak also admitted it failed to immediately notify the DEC following a 5,100 gallon spill of methylene chloride Feb. 5, 1987. Kodak waited almost a week before notifying authorities of the toxic spill.

Kodak officials had little to say about the guilty plea. ''We believe it is in the best interest of our company, our employees and the community to put any problems behind us,'' spokesman Ron Roberts said.

Abrams said, ''A great deal of work remains to be done to remedy decades of environmental abuse and negligent handling of hazardous chemicals at the facility. For the future, I expect that Kodak will live up to its legal obligations to the state and its moral obligations to the citizens who live near the plant.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - President Bush formally revoked the legal basis Thursday for economic sanctions the United States used for almost two years in its unsuccessful bid to drive Manuel Noriega from power in Panama.

Bush, in an executive order, terminated the state of emergency invoked on April 8, 1988, by President Reagan as a justification for orders blocking Panamanian government assets in the United States and barring payments by U.S. individuals and companies to the Noriega regime.

Though the original order would have lapsed Sunday, the action taken by Bush preserves the government's authority to pursue suspected violations of the sanctions even after their repeal.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 5) UPI - East German deputies got their first taste of parliamentary democracy Thursday as they voted in a new president of the house at the inaugural session of the country's first freely elected assembly.

Shortly after the opening ceremony, deputies elected Sabine Bergmann-Pohl as president of the Parliament. The East Berlin doctor is a member of the conservative Christian-Democratic Union, which with 163 seats is the largest party in the assembly.

The first ballot Thursday morning did not give any of the candidates an absolute majority. Bergmann-Pohl received 214 votes in the second ballot.

The procedure contrasted sharply with the activities of the previous Parliament, which had been little more than a rubber-stamp institution during the four decades of Stalinist rule that ended with the ouster of the hard-line communists last fall.

Many of the 400 deputies, including leading members of the Party of Democratic Socialism - the renamed communists - attended an ecumenical church service before the ceremonial opening of the Volkskammer, the East German Parliament.

Among the delegates at the service in the downtown Gethsemane church were outgoing Communist Prime Minister Hans Modrow and Gregor Gysi, the leader of the PDS, which has 66 parliamentary seats.

''In this hour, not only our own citizens are watching us but also our neighbors and indeed the people of the entire world,'' said Lothar Pinche, 64, the senior member of Parliament.

Pinche, one of the 25 deputies of the center-right German-Social Union, delivered the inaugural speech, saying that ''40 years of a difficult road are coming to an end.''

He ended his address by saying ''God bless our German fatherland,'' a phrase that has become the rallying call for supporters of rapid German reunification.

The March 18 electoral victory by the three-party, conservative Alliance for Germany was widely seen as an endorsement of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's blueprint for unification.

Several deputies said they expected the life of the new-style democratic Parliament to be short and that the role of a still-to-be-formed, broad-based government would be largely restricted to passing legislation needed for reunification.

Parliamentarians are expected to soon start discussion of a planned economic union between the two Germanys - a crucial step toward political reunification.

In Bonn, Cabinet ministers said Thursday that a controversial proposal on the cost of monetary union would be discussed with the new East German Parliament and government.

The powerful West German Bundesbank recently suggested that two East German marks will buy one deutsche mark when the union is established, probably this summer. The central bank also said that individuals would only be able to change savings up to 2,000 marks at a 1-to-1 rate.

The plan drew sharp criticism from virtually all East German political parties and from Kohl's liberal coalition partners.

In addition to electing a house president, Parliament is also expected to abolish the post of chairman of the State Council, held for 18 years by Erich Honecker, the ailing and discredited former communist leader. A president will eventually hold the position of head of state.

The Volkskammer called on Christian Democratic Union leader Lothar de Maiziere, 50, to begin the task of forming a government coalition.

The historic opening of East Germany's first democratically elected Parliament was partly marred by recent allegations some of the 400 deputies were once linked to the hated Stasi, the secret police of the hard-line communist leadership ousted last fall.

A parliamentary commission is to be formed to investigate all 400 Volkskammer delegates for Stasi links.

A somber mood prevailed as 390 deputies from 12 political parties filed into the huge, glass-sheathed Palace of the Republic, which houses Parliament.

On Monday, Ibrahim Boehme resigned his leadership of the SPD, saying he needed time to clear himself of accusations he had worked for the Stasi.

Earlier, de Maiziere had angrily rejected similar accusations leveled against him.

LAVINA, MT (APRIL 5) UPI - Jim Raths wants to get one thing straight - he's not lonely and he's not looking for a wife, although he'd take one if the right woman came along.

But since Feb. 13, when the first of many newspaper articles portraying him as "the loneliest man in the land" was published, Raths has been overwhelmed by letters and telephone calls from about 200 single, divorced or widowed women from all over the country who say they would like to strike up a friendship with him.

Raths admits, in an interview published Thursday in the Billings Gazette, that he has battled loneliness now and then over the course of his 39 years. But he has learned to deal with his solitary life working his family's cattle ranch 60 miles north of Billings. And, all in all, he's fairly happy.

That's basically what he told an East Coast reporter when she came to visit earlier this year. And that's basically what wound up in the story she wrote for her newspaper chain.

But the way the story was played in about 20 newspapers across the country and the "lonely-man-looks-for-wife" headlines topping the stories, gave a much different impression, Raths says.

Raths said he knew when he was approached about the interview that the reporter was looking for a "lonely hearts story." He, on the other hand, saw it as a chance to give people outside Montana an unglamorous look at ranching.

He also wanted to discuss how he has dealt with loneliness. Raths says he has had a happy life, good friends and many interests beyond cattle ranching that keep him from being bored. He is the author of three books of poetry and he designs women's lingerie and evening wear.

The writer included most of that in the article, describing the isolation of the Raths' ranch and a typical day feeding stock. But readers had their own ideas. Their letters and phone calls have ranged from interesting, to sad, to strange.

Some women sent pictures of themselves and their children, or poured out their tragic lives on paper. One man called from New York City, but his call consisted mainly of heavy breathing.

One woman, who took offense at the article, called and began berating Raths. He finally hung up on her but she kept calling. To stop the incessant ringing, he took the phone off the hook - but when he replaced it an hour later the woman was back on the line.

A photo with the article has drawn its share of comments. It shows Raths in jeans, a Western shirt and a cowbow hat holding a rope. People read into the photo what they are looking for in a man, Raths says.

"If they want a God-fearing Christian, you're a God-fearing Christian," he says. "And if they want a hell-bent-for-leather cowboy, they see a hell-bent-for-leather cowboy." "I look at that photo, and see a guy wearing a big cowboy hat to cover his bald head."

GENEVA (APRIL 5) UPI - King Michael of Romania will visit his country next week for the first time since 1947, when the communists forced him to abdicate the throne and go into exile, his personal secretary said Thursday.

''King Michael is, of course, very happy that he can now again visit his country,'' the secretary said. ''The first visit in 43 years will be a very emotional occasion.''

''He has no official appointments,'' she added. ''It will be a private visit and the king will be accompanied by his wife, Queen Ann.''

Michael became king in 1940 when his father, King Carol, abdicated and went into exile after turning over all power to fascist Premier Ion Antonescu. When the Red Army invaded Romania in August 1944, Michael led a coup that overthrew Antonescu.

But the 1946 elections were won by the communists, and Michael abdicated on Dec. 30, 1947, when a ''people's republic'' was declared.

Since the overthrow and execution of Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in December, the former Romanian monarch has said several times that he will not seek to regain the throne.

But Michael, now a private businessman living with his wife and children in a Geneva lakeside suburb, has said he would follow the wishes of the Romanian people and government in doing whatever he can for the country.

The couple's daughters visited Bucharest at the end of January. The former king could have made the earlier visit to Romania but instead chose to go for Easter because it is ''a very special occasion for Orthodox Romanians '' the secretary said.

Michael, 68, and his wife fly to Bucharest April 12, she said. They take Swissair flights from Geneva to Zurich and then from Zurich to Bucharest, arriving in the Romanian capital at 3:50 p.m.

''It is not certain how long the visit will last but it is unlikely to be extended, such as for several months or something like that,'' the secretary said.

She did not disclose where Michael and Ann would be staying in Romania.

LONDON (APRIL 5) UPI - Prices closed slightly higher in lackluster trading Thursday on the London International stock exchange boosted by a stronger British pound.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 9.1 points Wednesday, added 7.9 points to 2,239.5. The narrower top 30 industrial average edged up 6.6 points to 1,756.3.

Volume amounted to around 499 million shares, compared with 506 million shares traded Wednesday.

Analysts noted there was bargain hunting as well as profit taking among a small group of selected issues.

Market watchers said prices edged higher amid the stronger performance of the British pound on global foreign exchanges.

On the London Foreign Exchange the pound climbed to $1.6425 against the U.S. dollar, compared with $1.6415 at the close Wednesday, and posted stronger gains against the West German mark.

Analysts noted, however, that trading sentiment remained cautious, with large institutional investors still sidelined amid uncertainty over the Group of Seven finance ministers meeting in Paris this weekend.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Cables and Wireless slipped 10 cents to $8.21 following reports that Chinese authorities have sealed off Beijing's Tiananmen Square, the site of pro-democracy demonstrations last summer.

GKN, an engineering company, gained 16 cents to $6.52 and Pilkington, a glass maker, added 7 cents to $3.35 due to the stronger pound, analysts said.

In the oil pactch, Premier Oil gained 11 cents to $1.69 on news of an oil find in the Far East.

The news also boosted Burmah Oil, which has an interest in Premier, 26 cents to $9.75.

British Aerospace gained 29 cents to $8.45 in anticipation of a favorable decision by the European Commission about the validity of its deal to buy Rover from the British government.

Among some of the day's other highlights, Sun Alliance, an insurance company, gained 14 cents to $5 and London and Manchester, another insurance company, gained 10 cents to $4.97.

Elsewhere in Europe, prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed slightly lower in sluggish trading.

The German Stock Index, which eased 5.08 points Wednesday, closed down 4.86 points to 1,958.39.

Analysts said prices eased on the weak Tokyo stock market and growing uncertainty over the terms of a monetary union between East and West Germany.

DETROIT (APRIL 5) UPI - The state of Michigan could lose more than 170,000 auto industry jobs by 1993, largely because of intensifying competition from foreign-based carmakers, according to a University of Michigan study.

Michael Flynn, a research scientist at the university's Office for the Study of Automotive Transportation, said Wednesday at a seminar this would represent nearly a quarter of the 700,000 auto-related jobs the state now has.

Over half of the projected job losses would come from a decline in vehicle market share among the nation's Big Three automakers, as relatively new U.S. plants operated by Japanese carmakers steadily raise production levels, the study said.

The prospect of jobs lost to more efficient Japanese-run plants is ''an issue of national harm,'' Flynn said, noting these facilities are heavily based on foreign-built components and do not provide as many jobs as traditional U.S. carmakers.

However, a spokesman for the United Auto Workers union, which represents about 450,000 workers at General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., questioned the study's conclusions.

While aware of the pressures on the domestic industry, the UAW does not necessarily accept the finding's ''doomsday scenario,'' the spokesman said.

A spokeswoman for Gov. James J. Blanchard's office said Michigan has been steadily diversifying its economy so that it is 33 percent less dependent on the Big Three carmakers than it was at the start of the 1980s.

''Our more diversified economy makes it possible for us to better absorb the eventual downsizing of the auto industry,'' spokeswoman Rosemary Freeman told the Detroit News.

Chrysler was the only one of the nation's top U.S. carmakers to comment on the study, saying it has an aggressive plan in place to come to grips with the severe competition the Big Three face in the 1990s.

Chrysler spokesman Steve Harris said the carmaker will increase Michigan employment when it opens a technical center in Auburn Hills. The facility is expected to lead the creation of about 10,000 jobs during the next several years.

Chrysler will also expand employment when it opens the company's Jefferson Avenue assembly complex in Detroit in late 1991. The site's old plant, which once employed 16,500 in the 1950s, was closed last February, idling the remaining 1,700 workers.

The university's findings about job losses follow a study by Flynn last October that predicted there would be a sharp increase in the U.S. trade deficit with Japan by 1993 despite a weaker dollar and greater productivity of American carmakers.

That study forecast the automotive trade deficit between the United States and Japan would increase as much as 36 percent, or roughly $10 billion, by 1993.

BANGKOK, Thailand (APRIL 5) UPI - Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan agreed Thursday to join a new round of Cambodian peace talks and said his guerrilla group would respect the principles for a settlement outlined by the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

On Wednesday resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk proposed an urgent meeting of the four competing Cambodian factions to take place in Bangkok on April 15.

''The Democratic Kampuchea Party (Khmer Rouge) respects Samdech's (Sihanouk's) proposal and is prepared to take part in this new round of talks,'' said a letter to Sihanouk from Khieu Samphan. A copy of the letter was made available to United Press International by the Khmer Rouge.

Khieu Samphan said he hoped Prime Minister Hun Sen, of the Vietnamese-backed government in Phnom Penh, would also join the talks.

He said he hoped for a settlement based either on a five-point proposal made by Sihanouk or the 16 principles outlined by a meeting of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council last month.

Previously the Khmer Rouge has called only for a settlement of the conflict on the basis of the five-point plan, which includes dissolution of the Hun Sen government as well as the resistance coalition.

The Security Council principles emphasize a strong U.N. administrative role during an interim to organize national elections. The exact nature of the U.N. role, however, has not yet been agreed.

The permanent security council members are considered particularly important for a Cambodian settlement because they include China, the main backer of the resistance, and the Soviet Union, the principle arms supplier of the Hun Sen government. Other members are the United States, France and Britain.

The Khmer Rouge decision to participate in new talks came as Cambodian President Heng Samrin praised his troops Thursday for capturing a key town from U.S.-backed rebels in an attack that killed 50 guerrillas, Phnom Penh radio reported.

Heng Samrin, who was installed by Vietnam's army in 1979, said his troops inflicted ''most shameful defeats'' on resistance forces Tuesday at Thmar Puok township in western Cambodia, about 12 miles from the Thai border.

He said the government victory ''smashed enemy attempts to seize a number of areas along the border and use them as a springboard from which to spread the war into the interior of the country.''

The radio quoted the military at the front as saying its forces at Thmar Puok and the nearby town of Banteay Chhmar killed 50 guerrillas and captured 15.

The two guerrilla forces defending the towns were the Khmer People's National Liberation Front and the Sihanoukist National Army of Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The two groups have acknowledged the loss of the towns - the two largest population centers in a ''liberated zone'' captured by the resistance late last year. The zone once had about 60,000 people.

Resistance officials said several thousand residents evacuated the area, including 2,000 who fled to the Thai border where over 300,000 Cambodians have lived in reufgee camps sustained by U.N. aid for up to 11 years.

An international relief official said only about 20 of the Cambodians had reached the U.N.-supplied camp at Site 2. He said the camp's 150,000 people were put on alert because of shelling from fighting about 9 miles away. Another camp, Site K, was also put on alert because of nearby shelling, he said.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (APRIL 5) UPI - Finland's consulate in Leningrad has issued 100 transit visas to Soviet Jews wishing to move to Israel through Helsinki, the Foreign Ministry said Thursday.

Foreign Ministry political spokesman Jaakko Blomberg said more transit visas will be granted in the future.

''This all has to do with the freedom of movement. Finland cannot say it will not allow Jews to come through Helsinki,'' Blomberg told United Press International.

''It is impossible to say how many will come through here in the future but if you look at the number of Jews in the Leningrad region - it is a large, significant number,'' Blomberg said.

Leningrad is the Soviet Union's second largest city with a population of 5 million and is a center for Soviet Jewry.

But in an apparent concession to the Palestine Liberation Organization representative in Finland, Blomberg said his country had asked Israel not to resettle those emigrating through Finland in the occupied territories.

''We have maintained we do not want these settlers who are allowed through Finland to go to the occupied territories,'' he added.

Helsinki PLO office director Zuehir Al-Wazir appealed to the Finnish Foreign Ministry earlier this week not to help settle Soviet Jews in occupied territories annexed by Israel.

NAIROBI, KENYA (APRIL 5) UPI - Rebels fighting in central Ethiopia claimed Thursday they had put more than 5,000 government troops out of action and advanced to within 65 miles of Addis Ababa, the capital.

The Ethiopian People's Democratic Revolutionary Front, an offshoot of the Tigre People's Liberation Front, said in a radio broadcast monitored in Nairobi it had killed more than 3,000 government troops in a week, knocked out many government positions and put a total 5,407 soldiers out of action.

It said its forces had advanced through mountain country parallel to the main road as far as the small town of Alem, only 65 miles north of Addis Ababa. The TPLF began its push March 25 from Guguf, just south of government-held Dessie, the broadcast said.

There was no official comment from Addis Ababa.

The Marxist TPLF has fought the central government, also Marxist, since 1977. Late last year it pushed close to the capital before government troops regained the road as far as Dessie, 160 miles north of Addis Ababa.

Since then, the government has again suffered military reverses, especially in the far north, where rebels of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front in February captured the key port of Massawa, 470 miles from the capital.

Dessie is currently the focus of an international famine relief operation aimed at aiding about 4.5 million people in rebel-held territory to the north.

Harvest failure last year threatens to cause a repeat of the catastrophic Ethiopian famine of 1984-5, the United Nations has said.

Convoys of trucks carrying food and emergency supplies began moving through rebel lines, with rebel permission, two weeks ago.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Five people were killed and one person was critically injured in a shooting at a reputed crackhouse on Detroit's Northeast side. Police say a woman and two armed men stormed the house last night in a drug-related incident. The gunmen and the woman fled in a car waiting outside. It was the worst mass murder in Detroit since the 1971 ''Hazelwood Massacre,'' when seven members of a narcotics ring were shot to death on the city's west side.

I-B-M scientists say they have made a discovery with potentially wide industrial applications. The researchers say they have learned to move atoms around at will, allowing them to build structures one atom at a time. Scientists demonstrated the technique by releasing a photograph of atoms they had re-arranged into the letters, ''I-B-M.'' The technique described in the British journal Nature is still impractical for commercial use.

A Florida atheists' group wants the government to remove the Christ of the Deep statue submerged under 50 feet of water off the coast of Key Largo. An American Atheists' chapter says the nine-foot, two-ton statute is a religious symbol that has NO place in a public park. It was donated to the Key Largo National Marine Sanctuary by the Underwater Society of America in 1964 to commemorate people who died at sea.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - The former curator of a $6 million collection of antique furniture and art bought by Imelda Marcos testified Thursday he found some of it stored in a barn owned by Marcos's daughter in "pitiful" condition.

Taking the stand at the racketeering and fraud trial of the former Philippines first lady, Morton Bernstein said the FBI called him after it tracked the antiques to the estate of Marcos's daughter, Irene Araneta, in Woodside, Calif.

He said he found them in one of the outbuildings on the grounds of the estate - "On a dirt floor - It must have been a barn." The antiques were "in horrible condition ... they were stored in dampness," recounted the elderly, bespectacled Bernstein, appearing upset at the memory.

"These were 17th and 18th century pieces. It was pitiful. When one realizes how much this collection meant to the (philanthropist Leslie and his wife) Samuels, it's heartbreaking."

Marcos is charged with racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice for allegedly plotting with her late husband - ousted Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos - to divert money stolen from the Philippines treasury into real estate and art investments in Manhattan and around the world.

On trial with her in U.S. District Court is former Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi, who is charged with obstruction of justice and fraud for helping the Marcoses in their transactions.

Wednesday, real estate agent Thomas Bryant testified he set up the $14 million sale of an opulent three-floor Manhattan apartment, including its furnishings and art following the death of Samuels and his wife.

The Marcos later were turned down as tenants by the building's committee, but they purchased the furnishings and art for just under $6 million, he said. Bryant testified he later saw some of the art at Mrs. Marcos's Manhattan apartment.

Thursday, Bernstein recounted how he had catalogued all the belongings in the 22-room Park Avenue apartment. Asked how he recognized the antiques in California, replied, "I saw them five days a week for 28 years."

TORONTO (APRIL 5) UPI - Holding company Onex Corp. said Thursday it completed its almost $180 million acquisition of Strasburg, Va.-based Automotive Industries Inc. which makes molded plastic car parts and modules.

The deal, first announced in January, was to be completed in mid-February but financing took longer to arrange.

Tony Johnson, a partner in the deal, said the automotive sector's downturn in January resulted in stretching out financing plans.

Hidden Creek Industries, a partnership between Onex and Johnson, purchased the parts maker from Britain's Tate & Lyle plc as part of an investment strategy to acquire automotive and industrial manufacturers.

Automotive Industries employs 2,000 workers at five plants in the United States and three in Canada.

Parts manufactured at the plants are used principally for original equipment in Ford, Chrysler and General Motors vehicles. Several Japanese transplant operations in the United States are also clients.

Onex said it invested about $25.5 million in the purchase price for a 90 percent ownership interest. The balance was financed through the purchase of preferred shares by Tate & Lyle, the issue of subordinate notes and senior debt financing.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 5) UPI - Beleaguered President Elias Hrawi Thursday welcomed an offer to take over some army barracks controlled by a Christian militia chief and said his pro-Syrian government hoped to extend its authority to all Lebanon.

''We thank all those who call on the legitimate government to deploy its forces and we affirm that we will soon respond,'' Hrawi said.

Wednesday, Samir Geagea, who commands a 10,000-strong militia stationed in two-thirds of the Christian enclave, called on army troops loyal to the president to deploy in territory under his militia's control.

Geagea said army barracks in the Christian areas should be handed over to forces led by pro-Syrian army commander Gen. Emile Lahoud as a prelude to resolving Lebanon's 15-year conflict.

Geagea's 10,000-strong Lebanese Forces militia has been fighting 15,000 army troops loyal to anti-Syrian Gen. Michel Aoun for control of Christian areas since Jan. 31, killing 900 people and wounding more than 2,820.

It was relatively calm Thursday following large-scale artillery exchanges between Aoun's troops and Geagea's militiamen during the night.

Tuesday, Geagea openly recognized Hrawi as the country's legitimate president and expressed readiness to negotiate a peace accord that was worked out in Taif, Saudi Arabia, last October by the Lebanese parliament.

Aoun, however, has refused to recognize Hrawi as president, rebuffing the Taif agreement on the grounds it failed to ensure a speedy and complete withdrawal of Syria's estimated 35,000 troops. Aoun has sworn to continue fighting until the departure of the Syrian troops, which were deployed to stop sectarian wars wracking the country since 1975.

A source close to Hrawi described Geagea's offer to turn over positions as ''positive... but unsufficient.'' He said Hrawi's government should be careful in dealing with Geagea in case the militia chief was maneuvering to boost his stand against Aoun.

Geagea said Lahoud would be able to reunite the divided 35,000-man Lebanese Army. Lahoud commands some 20,000 ill-equipped troops stationed in Syrian-patrolled territory. Lebanese territory has been controlled by Syrian, Israeli, Palestinian and Iranian forces.

Responding to Geagea's proposals, Hrawi said, ''It's only through the army that we could extend state authority over all Lebanese territory.''

Lahoud declared Wednesday that reunification of the divided army brigades has begun, saying ''We want to regain the confidence of the Lebanese people in their army. The army should be used merely as means to end the Lebanese conflict.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp asked the nation's newspaper editors Thursday to support President

Bush's goal of cutting the tax rate on capital gains.

Kemp, in a speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said a cut in the capital gains tax ''is not going to make the rich richer,'' but instead is a way to fight poverty.

''The people who have a stake in this are the poor,'' Kemp argued, saying that a cut in capital gains would help entrepreneurs in the nation's inner cities start businesses and aid the poor in buying their own homes.

And repeating what is becoming a standard administration response to critics of Bush's tax policies, Kemp called it ''outrageous to practice class warfare'' by attacking the capital gains cut proposal.

Kemp said that if Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, would act to ''eliminate the capital gains tax'' for inner cities, then the idea of ''enterprise zones'' for economically depressed areas of major urban centers would take off.

The HUD secretary, who has long been a champion of using the tax code and economic markets as a way of ending poverty, compared Bush's ''visionary'' anti-poverty program to the revolutions in Eastern Europe.

Overall, he said, the U.S. economy was performing well. He cited the large number of new jobs created during the 1980s as well as the ''expansion of the entrepreneurial climate.''

''It is the micro-economy I am worried about,'' he said, blaming the 26-year-old war on poverty initiated by President Lyndon B. Johnson for creating welfare dependency and ''making welfare more attractive than working.''

He said the while the war on poverty began ''with noble intentions ... we got it wrong'' and the answer to the poverty problem lies in ''democratic capitalism'' and ''market-oriented'' strategies that provide incentive for people to work.

''We believe you can modify behavior with property,'' Kemp said, adding that the goal of the administration was give the poor ''access to assets.''

''We need a radical departure from the old war on poverty ... to unleash the potential that is out there,'' Kemp said.

Specifically, he noted that HUD is pushing a program to allow public housing tenants to buy their property. Kemp said he supports doubling if not tripling the Earned Income Tax Credit for low income people and that tax exemption for children should be doubled.

GENEVA (APRIL 5) UPI - A special drawing pen for blind and partially blind people, called a breakthrough comparable to the Braille alphabet, won the Grand Prize Thursday at the 18th Geneva Inventions Show.

Invented by two young Frenchmen, the device resembles a large ball-point pen and contains a special heat-resistant and distending ink.

''After drying for two to three minutes the rubbery texture gives the ink a slight raised relief which is easily detectable by someone with a highly developed sense of touch,'' exhibition organizers said in an award announcement.

''The pen will revolutionize opportunities for better social integration of the blind and partially blind since they now have access to all graphic shapes,'' the statement said.

''This is the greatest breakthrough in this field since the invention of ther Braille alphabet,'' it said.

Louis Braille, a blind French teacher, developed in the early 1850s a system of printing, writing and reading for the blind by means of patterns of raised dots.

The Inventions Exhibition statement said the new pen was originally intended for use in teaching computer science to blind children.

Inventors Gerard Favard and Jack Sagot, of St. Lyphard near the French city of Nantes, then made further uses possible for drawing by hand, making plans from a tracing table and producing documents in ''ink-drop'' Braille.

Officials at the World Health Organization division for blindness and eyesight afflictions said they had not heard about the invention but were ''very interested in such a prospective important development.''

They said there are an estimated 27 to 35 million blind people in the world and many millions more are partially blind.

NADIA'S SHOW: Live from Reno, it's the Nadia Comaneci show. The Romanian defector, the star of the 1976 Olympics, took her new gymnastics stage act to Bally's hotel-casino Thursday night.

Comaneci, who is trying to recover from the public relations conflagration she started by running off with the married man who helped her escape Romania, won't give interviews because of an exclusive contract with "ABC's Wide World of Sports."

But Paul Ziert, the producer of "The Mystery and Magic of Nadia," says Comaneci's spark has returned. "She's so excited and motivated," he said. "After 14 years she still has that ability to move people."

Bart Conner, the three-time U.S. Olympian who is the host of Comaneci's show, says she admits to making some personal mistakes. "But she feels she's been misunderstood, too," he said.

"She knows now that the best way to attack this public relations nightmare is to be candid and honest." ABC planned to film Thursday night's performance, which includes other gymnasts, and will air it along with an in-depth interview later this month.

SILENT JACKSON: As usual, Michael Jackson didn't have much to say Friday at a White House Rose Garden ceremony. In fact, Jackson said nothing as he was honored as the entertainer of the decade by the Capital Children's Museum.

Decked out in a black and red outfit, sunglasses and black gloves, Jackson was introduced by President Bush at the ceremony, which included a number of children and staff. "You've got a few fans over here," Bush told Jackson. As Jackson was leaving the White House in a white limo, he lowered a side window, flashed a peace sign and whispered, "Hi, I love you " to the crowd.

IRS OUTFOXES REDD: Redd Foxx has reached a partial settlement of his taxing problem. The IRS has returned two truckloads of property seized in their raid on his Las Vegas, Nev., home and will auction off some other property to pay off Foxx's $2.9 million tax bill.

The items returned include clothing, furniture, televisions, and personal possessions while those bound for the IRS auction block include eight cars and a watch given to Foxx by Elvis Presley.

"This is basically a one-year solution," an IRS spokesman said. "It will not satisfy the full debt but it will stop the horrendous interest and penalties." The IRS also has been garnishing an estimated $20,000 from Foxx's weekly paycheck for his standup act at the Hacienda Hotel.

LETTERMAN INTRUDER: David Letterman's frequent uninvited guest will have a hearing Friday to determine if she's mentally competent to stand trial for trespassing at Letterman's New Canaan, Conn., home.

Three officials who have examined Margaret M. Ray, 37, of Crawford, Colo., say she's capable of going through a trial but a judge will make the final decision. Ray has been caught at Letterman's home six times in the past two years with the most recent incident on March 18, only a few days after she had been released from prison because of a previous invasion of the Letterman home.

GLIMPSES: Buster Douglas says he's the retiring kind. Douglas, appearing in Chicago Wednesday, said he's enjoying being the heavyweight champion after upsetting Mike Tyson but he intends to fight only two more matches. He wants to retire so he can spend more time with his 12-year-old son. "He's growing up," Douglas said. "He's starting to really look at the opposite sex"

BY GERALD NADLER - UPI

MOSCOW (APRIL 5) UPI - Rapid developments in the Soviet Union may have led President Mikhail Gorbachev to seek an earlier than expected summit in Washington, a Foreign Ministry official intimated Thursday.

''The pace of our life is accelerating,'' Kiril Kasatkin said. ''Life itself put forward new questions and they need new answers.''

Kasatkin stressed the May 30-June 3 summit, the date of which was announced Thursday, will cover a wide range of questions and said the Soviet Union was receptive to a broad forum. Observers had predicted the summit would be held in late June.

Gorbachev will leave for Washington at the end of May with the Soviet Communist Party shorn of its monopoly on power and the Baltic republics openly clamoring for secession.

Lithuania's unilateral declaration of independence March 11 set off a crisis with Moscow that has spilled over into the international arena, with Bush and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher cautioning Gorbachev not to use force against the republic, which was annexed by the Soviet Union 50 years ago.

Kasatkin was adamant that the Lithuanian crisis played no role in setting the summit dates.

''I do not think that scheduling the summit for an earlier date is in any way connected with the Lithuanian issue,'' he said. ''It is not ruled out that the issue will be raised by the American side.''

Reminded that it had been assumed the summit would be in late June, Kasatkin said ''the timing of the agenda was fixed so as to satisfy both sides.''

In Washington, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater refused to pinpoint the reasons why the summit will be begin at the end of May.

The date may have been a product of U.S. desire to dispel any notion that the upcoming summit was threatened by the crisis over Lithuania. The objective, Fitzwater said, was to press ahead even in the face of problems.

''Is Lithuania an issue? Yes. Does it affect our relationship? Yes. Will it have an effect on the summit? It depends on what happens in Lithuania '' Fitzwater said.

Kasatkin indicated that the second summit between Gorbachev and President Bush might focus on the future of Europe.

''It is difficult for me to say which question is going to be the most important one,'' Kasatkin said. ''I think it will be the future of Europe, now that the reunification of Germany is under discussion.

''The agenda will be very wide,'' he said. ''We are open to a very broad discussion. It will be an exchange over a very wide range of issues.

''I think that both the Soviet Union and the United States have got the right and even the obligation to exchange opinions over the widest range of questions related to this matter (of German unity and Europe),'' he said.

Kasatkin said the early summit might provide an impetus for Moscow and Washington to finalize long-awaited accords on chemical weapons and troop reductions.

Officials in Geneva said Thursday that U.S.-Soviet talks on major cuts in chemical arms will resume next week ahead of plans to complete a treaty in time for the Washington summit May 30-June 3.

The new round of chemical weapons negotiations is now expected to begin Tuesday, about two weeks ahead of the original plan.

''The meeting will be a good impetus to accelerate the job,'' Kasatkin said of the summit. ''The documents are being prepared now, and we have sufficient time to prepare thoroughly in all ways.''

The summit will take place about 11 weeks after Gorbachev was elected to a super-presidency he pledged to use to radicalize his economic reforms now stymied because of bureaucratic interference at all levels.

Newspapers have abounded with reports about plans for a transition from the centrally planned economy to what is being called a ''planned market economy'' that will cause unemployment, inflation and the closing of unprofitable plants that survive only on the government dole.

DETROIT (APRIL 5) UPI - An internal General Motors Corp. study ranking 31 of its North American vehicle assembly plants shows the automaker still has a long way to go in raising quality levels at many of its facilities.

The document, issued in late January and obtained by United Press International, is part of GM's CAMIP studies, which stands for Continuous Automotive Marketing Information Program.

Done on a quarterly basis, it is part of a comprehensive effort by the carmaker to monitor customer acceptance of its products by polling tens of thousands of buyers and using technical measurements, industry sources said.

A GM spokesman had no comment on the study, other than to say the carmaker performs daily quality audits at its assembly plants which are compiled on a monthly basis for corporate audits.

The plant study, which ranks its plants in terms of problems per 100 vehicles, showed that in some cases, the quality levels at a certain plant was directly tied to the age of the product being built there.

At the bottom of the list of GM's car plants was its Van Nuys, Calif., facility, which builds the aging Chevrolet Camaro and Pontiac Firebird coupes. That plant had a startling 676 problems per 100 cars.

The GM truck plant with the lowest quality ranking was its Flint, Mich., plant which builds the Suburban and Blazer trucks - vehicles largely unchanged since the early 1970s.

That plant had 848 problems per 100 vehicles, although GM's truck are measured differently from its car plants.

But more disturbing is the fact that several plants which build relatively modern mid-sized cars critical to GM's strategy of raising its U.S. market share from a decade low of 34.7 percent in 1989 ranked among the bottom half of the list.

Those plants include GM's Fairfax plant in Kansas City, Kan., which makes Pontiac Grand Prix coupes and sedans. It ranked 16 out of 21, with 446 problems per 100 cars, according to the study.

GM's Doraville, Ga., plant that builds Oldsmobile Cutlass Supremes ranked No. 17, with 470 problems per 100 vehicles.

Also near the bottom was its Linden, N.J., plant, that since 1987 has been building the Chevrolet Beretta and Corsica sedans, once hailed as the highest quality cars ever built by the GM.

That plant, which ranked 20 out of the 21 car plants on the list and had 511 problems per 100 cars, could be changed over to light truck production.

The internal study concurred with similar outside findings that ranked GM's Buick City plant in Flint, Mich., as GM's top plant, with 250 problems per 100 cars.

Independent researchers J.D. Power & Associates ranked the Buick LeSabre made there as the best built American car in 1989.

The study excluded GM's Willow Run plant in Ypsilanti, Mich., and its North Tarrytown, N.Y., minivan plant because they were in early stages of producing new models.

HAVANA, Cuba (APRIL 5) UPI - The worst problem Cuban President Fidel Castro faces in saving his revolution is the unsure future of the island's vulnerable economy now that massive injections of Soviet aid can no longer be taken for granted.

The Soviet Union, which provides Cuba with more than $10 million a day in economic and military aid, is changing toward a market-oriented economy in steps being followed by other Eastern European governments.

This leaves Castro, whose revolution has depended on these countries for most of its trade and massive aid, with the choice of making similar reforms or swimming against the tide.

So far, Castro has firmly indicated that he will swim against the tide and defend his socialist revolution until death.

''A lover can suffer deception, but a revolutionary can never suffer deception,'' Castro told a group of several hundred foreign journalists at a recent news conference. ''Cuba is a symbol of socialism, a symbol of revolution.''

Castro paused before responding to remarks that many have predicted his downfall within a year.

''I will still be here, a year older ... if I am strong and healthy and I am not here, it would be because I died defending the revolution. If they think revolution will be defeated, they are mistaken,'' he said.

A Western diplomat in Havana noted that it is the economic, and not the political aspects of Cuba's problems that ultimately threaten the 31-year-old revolution. If Castro can survive external economic pressures, he has nothing to fear, the diplomat said.

''At home his (Castro's) position is very secure. He is in full command. No one can dare challenge him here,'' the diplomat said. ''Castro has severely and successfully cracked down on dissidents.''

Since perestroika and glasnost began in Eastern Europe, Castro has become more stubborn and has sent out strong signals.

In August last year, Castro banned Spanish-language editions of Moscow News and Sputnik - two Soviet publications that echoed the philosophy espoused by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and which were widely praised across the West.

In recent days, Castro has repeatedly said that changes in Eastern Europe are a mistake, and has vowed to stick to his socialist principles.

The Soviet Union provides more than $5 billion a year in economic and military aid to the Caribbean island of 10.5 million people. More than 85 percent of Cuba's trade is with the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

But given the urgent need to reconstruct their own economies, the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe may no longer be in a position to funnel so much aid to Cuba.

As an example of Cuban fears, last month Castro halted a shipment of 90,000 metric tons of oil to Nicaragua in case Cuba's own supplies from the Soviet Union dry up.

As Eastern European countries move closer to the West and distance themselves from Cuba, Cuba will need to diversify its trade with a Western Europe reluctant to extend a hand because the Cuban treasury is almost dry.

''Unlike the Soviet bloc, Western European countries want hard currency for trade. They don't exchange commodities,'' the diplomat said.

Cuba's cash-starved economy would desperately need hard currency to pay for imports and to finance its $6.6 billion foreign debt with Western creditors.

Castro has expressed the need for more economic integration in Latin America, and has also begun turning to hardline communist China, signing a series of agreements with Beijing in recent years.

Sino-Cuban relations, troubled in the past over Castro's unmitigated support for Moscow, have improved tremendously in recent months, with trade jumping to almost $500 million in 1989 from $176 million in 1976.

''But China cannot replace the Soviet Union as Cuba's main aid supplier,'' said the Western diplomat.

ATLANTA (APRIL 5) UPI - The Japanese live longest, Hungarians die youngest and Americans rank in the middle in a survey of life expectancy in leading industrialized nations, federal officials said Thursday.

Average life expectancy at birth in Japan was 79.1 years in 1987, the last year for which analysis of death rate figures was available, the Centers for Disease Control said. The United States, where people can expect to live an average of 75 years, ranked 17th among the 33 countries surveyed.

"There is something about the Japanese lifestyle that contributes to longevity," said Robert Hahn, a CDC epidemiologist and author of the study. "I don't know if it's diet or some other lifestyle factor - exercise, lack of hypertension, weight. I imagine it's a combination."

Hungary's mean life expectancy at birth the same year was 69.7 years, the CDC said. In general, the countries of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union had the poorest showing in the study of developed countries that supply annual mortality figures to the World Health Organization.

Russia, where people can expect to live an average of 69.8 years, was second from the bottom in the life expectancy ratings. Romanians do a little better at 69.9 years. Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Poland tied for the next lowest life expectancy level - 71 years.

Kahn said the lower life expectancy figures in Eastern Europe are likely because of poor health habits. "I believe they have very high rates of smoking and I suspect they have poor lifestyle characteristics as well," he said.

Several Scandanavian nations and Western European countries appeared high on the list. Switzerland, Iceland, Sweden and Spain followed Japan at the top of the rankings with 77.6, 77.4, 77.1 and 76.6 years of life expectancy respectively. The Netherlands, Greece and Canada were next in line, tied at 76.5 years.

The report indicated that an increase in a country's per capita expenditure on health does not necessarily lead to greater life expectancy. The United States spent an average of $1,926 per person for health care in 1986 - more than double the average per capita health expenditure for all the other countries. Japan spent $831 per capita the same year.

The three biggest killers in the 33 developed countries were heart disease accounting for 30 percent of deaths; cancer, 21 percent; and stroke, 14 percent.

The report said cigarette smoking also was responsible for 14 percent of the annual deaths, killing an estimated 1.5 million in the 33 countries. "The large number of deaths attributable to cigarette smoking indicates the reduction of this risk factor would substantially increase life expectancy in the developed world," the report said.

The proportions of U.S. deaths caused by cancer and heart disease were higher than for the other 32 countries, the CDC study showed. However, death from the developed world's two biggest killers are on the decline in the United States.

Between 1973 and 1983, mortality from heart disease declined more rapidly in the United States than in any other developed country, the report said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Members of a House Armed Services subcommittee have expressed concerns that South Korea might sell to Iran aircraft parts to be manufactured under a co-production deal with the United States, according to testimony made public Thursday.

A draft memorandum of understanding was sent to Korea last month on the deal to let Korea make parts of and assemble whole F/A-18 warplanes. Concerns of the subcommitee members came at a closed hearing Wednesday and were made available to reporters Thursday.

Investigations Subcommittee Chairman Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., of the Investigations Subcommittee said he supports concluding a deal with South Korea, but is concerned about illegal sales of components to unfriendly nations.

Mavroules cited hearings last year that revealed South Korean companies sold M-16 rifles made under a co-production deal to unidentified unfriendly nations despite a ban on such sales.

He also revealed Thursday that Korean firms have been caught violating other co-production agreements, and said the Seoul government has denied U.S. officials access to the M-16 plant ever since last year's subcommittee hearings.

While the subcommittee did not identify the unfriendly nations or the military products sold to them, apart from the M-16 rifles, it released a page from the 1988 Daewoo Corp. annual report showing the company has sales offices in Libya, Iran and Iraq.

Daewoo violated the M-16 deal, the subcommittee said, and would be involved in the co-production of the F/A-18. Mavroules also said that Libya, Iran and Iraq were the principal buyers of South Korea's military exports from all firms, not just Daewoo, in recent years.

South Korea, said Mavroules, is ''selling to unfriendly countries for a lousy buck.''

''When you negotiate this contract,'' he told administration witnesses, ''make sure you get a tighter provision with tighter controls to prevent more diversions.''

The ranking Republican on the panel, Larry Hopkins of Kentucky, told by witnesses that South Korea could be trusted, said in exasperation, ''We have trusted them. We have caught them. And now we are preparing to sign another deal with them.''

Mavroules and Hopkins expressed concerns that the currently proposed pact had inadequate controls, and Mavroules asked if it were not in South Korea's interest to have weak controls on what components will be made in South Korea and on how much technical data will be transferred to South Korean firms.

''Isn't it in their interest to prove to us that they have cleaned up their act? If we ever have a shootout with Iranian F-4s or F-5s or F-14s, planes for which Tehran is having a devil of a time getting spare parts, folks are going to point suspicious fingers at (South) Korea.''

Under the co-production plan, South Korea would acquire 120 of the McDonnell Douglas jets. The first 12 would be bought directly from the manufacturer and the next 36 would be assembled in Korea from kits supplied by McDonnell Douglas. The final 72 would be built in South Korea with many of the components assembled in South Korea.

The Navy estimates the total value to the United States of the deal at $3 billion, about $400 million less than if all 120 planes were built in the United States.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 5) UPI - Security forces in the nominally independent black homeland of Venda, shaken by protests for ''reincorporation'' into South Africa, seized power in a bloodless coup Thursday - the second homeland to fall to military rule in a month.

The coup d'etat was led by Venda Defense Force Deputy Chief Col. Gabriel Ramushwana, who vowed to establish a ruling council of unity and called for talks with the African National Congress and other anti-apartheid organizations opposed to the homeland policy.

Thousands of residents of Thohoyandou, capital of the tiny homeland near the northern border with Zimbabwe, spilled into the streets and motorists honked their horns in celebration of the overthrow of homeland leader Frank Ravele.

Ramushwana announced the imposition of a curfew from 8 p.m. to 4:30 a.m. and read a statement on behalf of Ravele and his Cabinet saying they were stepping down over their inability to ''restore and maintain law and order.''

The white commander of the local military, on assignment from South Africa ''was compelled to resign and leave Venda,'' Ramushwana said.

An unidentified soldier reached by telephone at the defense headquarters said Ravele was at his home, but the soldier did not know whether he had been placed under house arrest. He said the situation was ''calm'' and no violent incidents were immediately reported.

In Cape Town, President Frederik de Klerk, wrestling with mounting discontent over his government's homelands policy, said steps would be taken to prevent an outbreak of violence similar to the rioting and looting that engulfed the southeastern homeland of Ciskei when it fell to military rule on March 4.

''We have been concerned for some time about the situtation in Venda,'' he said.''Our basic goal will be to give whatever assistance we can... that we will ensure the lives and property of people are protected and that basic stability be maintained in that area.''

Venda, with a population of 500,000, is one of four black homelands that accepted ''independence'' in a policy that has stripped millions of blacks in the country of South African citizenship.

Other than South Africa, no nation recognizes their sovereignty.

The homelands policy has enriched and empowered a small percentage of the country's 28 million blacks and has failed to satisfy the aspirations for a voice in national affairs.

Six other self-governing territories have spurned independence offers.

Since de Klerk lifted a 30-year ban on the ANC in Feburary and released ANC leader Nelson Mandela from 27 years imprisonment, protests for ''reincorporation'' have intensified and led to clashes between demonstrators and homeland security forces.

Some 14 people were said to have been killed in violent incidents in Venda following Mandela's release, and the homeland has been plagued by a series of ritual killings.

''The government failed to meet the people's demands so we hope the new government will do something better for the people of Venda,'' a reporter at the homeland's Radio Thohoyandou said by Telex.

''People here in Venda are very happy. They have gathered at the Thohoyandou Stadium celebrated the new government. Some are chanting and carrying ANC flags,'' the reporter said.

Director of Information and Broadcasting M.S. Muloiwa said Ramushwana announced the coup on the 3 p.m. news broadcast.

''They're celebrating. You can hear the hooting of the passing vehicles here. They are very happy,'' said Muloiwa.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - A lawyer for Leona Helmsley urged a judge Thursday to dismiss state tax evasion charges against the self-styled hotel queen and prove there is not "one law for the wealthy ... and another for everyone else."

Dabbing her eyes and nose with a tissue, Helmsley sobbed softly as her attorney, Sandor Frankel, said his client had been "ground up in the justice machine for nearly five years."

Helmsley, 70, was convicted of federal tax fraud and sentenced last fall to a four-year prison term. The sentence has been stayed pending her appeal.

Helmsley now faces prosecution for allegedly cheating on her state taxes. She is accused of disguising millions of dollars in renovations at her Greenwich, Conn., mansion as business expenses incurred by the hotel empire she and her husband Harry run.

Outside state Supreme Court in Manhattan, Helmsley told reporters she was being unfairly pursued by prosecutors because of her celebrity status. She said she would fight the charges and prove her innocence.

"Enough's enough," said Helmsley, wearing gold earrings and a hunter green suit trimmed in brown nutria fur. She burst into tears again and her team of eight lawyers and a handful of bodyguards rushed her toward her gray limousine. "I am not going to jail. I've done nothing wrong. My only crime is that I'm Leona Helmsley. For that I'm guilty," Helmsley said.

Harry Helmsley, 81, who was ruled mentally incompetent to stand trial in the federal case, is expected to undergo a competency examination in April in the state case. A hearing was slated on April 30.

On Thursday, Frankel urged Justice John Bradley to dismiss charges against Helmsley, saying they were improper because they grew out of immunized testimony she gave to a 1985 grand jury investigating sales tax evasion. He also said the state charges were based on the same allegations as the federal charges and therefore represent double jeopardy.

He said Helmsley's conviction on federal tax charges, combined with her state charges on tax evasion, gives the impression "there is one law for the wealthy, well-known, and villified and another for everyone else."

Frankel said the public has already gotten a clear message that tax evasion is wrong from the ordeal of Helmsley's federal trial and her stiff prison sentence. "I think the public on the outside looking in would say, 'It's not worth it. The destruction of human life - what for?"' Frankel said.

But Assistant Attorney General Alfredo Mendez said it would be in the interest of justice to prosecute Helmsley to the fullest extent of the law.

"We're talking about at least a million dollars. I just think about the number of police officers, teachers and school lunches that New Yorkers go without when people don't pay their taxes," said Mendez. The judge said he would rule on the dismissal motions on May 17.

ROME (APRIL 5) UPI - Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat won the support of Italian political leaders Thursday for a concerted European attempt to persuade Israel to open peace negotiations with the Palestinians.

Leaders of Italy's three main political parties - Christian Democrats, Socialists and Communists - said they supported the idea of a European ''initiative'' in separate talks with the 60-year-old PLO president.

''Arafat's interest in this visit to Italy is aimed principally at the role of Europe,'' Socialist leader Bettino Craxi said after meeting Arafat. ''This is an excellent period for a European initiative to flank the other initiatives already under way.''

Similar support was certain from Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, who was to meet Arafat and his aides over dinner at the prime minister's Chigi Palace late Thursday.

Arafat came to Rome after a successful meeting Wednesday in Paris with former President Jimmy Carter and French President Francois Mitterrand.

Italy assumes the presidency of the 12-nation European Community for a six-month term July 1 and President Francesco Cossiga told Arafat that Italy will do ''whatever it is possible to do'' to get Israeli-Palestinian negotiations started.

''I express for you and your people my best wishes that the peace process can finally get started and that this peace process can result in the achievement of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people,'' Cossiga told the PLO leader during a 40-minute meeting at the Quirinale Palace that launched Arafat's intense day of meetings.

Arafat, dressed in military uniform and wearing his customary checkered Arab headdress, moved swiftly around Rome in a police-escorted limousine to his various appointments with party and Parliamentary leaders.

His movements were kept secret and there were no crowds on the streets waiting to greet him. Some 2,000 police guarded the places he visited and police helicopters clattered overhead throughout the day.

On Wednesday the Israeli government formally protested to the Italian foreign ministry that Arafat's fourth - but first official - visit to Italy was being placed ''on the same level as a state visit.''

Late Thursday the Israeli Embassy issued a statement criticizing Rome's reception of the PLO leader.

''Israel can only express astonishment for the fact that Arafat, after arriving in Rome aboard an Iraqi plane, and who two days ago openly supported in Baghdad the threat of the Iraqi president to use chemical weapons to destroy half of Israel, should be welcomed in Western Europe as a great pacifist,'' the statement said.

Israeli Ambassador Mordechai Drory told reporters that Arafat was a ''terrorist'' who could not be treated as a ''man of peace.''

Italian officials said Arafat cited two main reasons why an attempt to bring Israel to the negotiating table might now be successful, saying that the Bush administration had become ''more critical'' of Israel and that Labor Party leader Shimon Peres might succeed in forming a new government in Israel more inclinced to work for a peace settlement.

Arafat was scheduled to have a private audience with Pope John Paul II at 11 a.m. Friday in the Vatican. In two previous papal audiences - in 1982 and 1988 - the pope told Arafat that he hoped for a Palestinian homeland.

Arafat will round out his two-day visit Friday afternoon by visiting Assisi, the birthplace of St. Francis on which the Catholic Church has centered its campaign for world peace, and nearby Perugia, where a pro-Palestinian rally is expected to draw at least 10,000 supporters.

CUPERTINO, CA (APRIL 5) UPI - Tandem Computers Inc.'s stock was battered Thursday after the company said slowing revenue growth would cause a drop in earnings from the prior quarter.

The price of Tandem stock plunged $4.375 a share to $22.875 by mid-afternoon in extremely heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The computer company said earnings for the second quarter ended Mar. 31 would fall below the $30.7 million, or 29 cents a share, posted in the first quarter but would be above the $16.9 million, or 17 cents a share, recorded in the second quarter of fiscal 1989.

Revenue is expected to increase from $436.5 million in the first quarter but will fall below the company's operating plan, Tandem said.

The second quarter ''has historically been less predictable than others,'' said David Rynne, chief financial officer.

''We believe our business in the quarter may have been affected by possible tightening of budgets by financial institutions in the United Kingdom due to higher interest rates and downsizing of securities market volumes in the United States.''

Tandem's fault-tolerant computers are widely used in banks, stock exchanges and other financial services companies.

(APRIL 5) UPI - With Easter 1990 falling three weeks later than last year, some major U.S. retailers reported soft March sales Thursday as shoppers held off on holiday purchases until April.

Chicago-based Sears, Roebuck & Co. said gross revenues for the month were up just over 1 percent to $2.98 billion from $2.95 billion last March. Same- or comparable-store sales, which exclude receipts from stores that were not open one year earlier, rose 1.6 percent.

Analysts generally view comparable-store sales as the best measure of a retailer's performance. However, March results in this category were fuzzy because of the late Easter holiday this year.

Moreover, not all major retailers reported their March sales Thursday but will instead announce them Apr. 12, making it impossible to interpret broadly what occurred during the month, analysts said.

Even so, some analysts applauded the performance of Sears, which has struggled since switching to an everyday-low-price merchandise strategy last March.

''I'm not at all distressed by their 1.6 percent comparable store gain,'' said Janet Mangano of Josephthal & Co. in New York. ''They were going against some very tough comparisons from a year ago'' when the chain's gross revenues jumped by 11.9 percent immediately after the merchandising shift.

Fast-growing Wal-Mart Stores Inc. of Bentonville, Ark. failed to post the 20 percent to 30 percent comparable store gains that have become its hallmark. But the company, even under the constraints of an unfavorable calendar, turned in a healthy 12 percent same store gain for the month.

Wal-Mart, challenging K mart Corp. to become the nation's second-largest retailer, said net retail sales in March increased 29 percent to $4.38 billion from $3.39 billion.

K mart, of Troy, Mich., is to report its March sales next week.

Among other retailers, Dallas-based J.C. Penney Co. said its department store sales rose 8.7 percent in March, while overall sales climbed 9.7 percent to $1.35 billion from $1.23 billion.

Penney's, which promoted heavily during the month, said men's clothing posted the largest increases, while home furnishings and women's clothing contributed significant gains.

''Generally speaking, most retailers had better than expected gains in apparel, especially coming off exceptional gains in this category in Janurary and February,'' said Monroe Greenstein of Bear Stearns & Co. in New York.

At New York-based Woolworth Corp., same-store domestic sales declined 3.7 percent in March while total domestic sales rose 2.5 percent to $794 million from $774 million.

''While total sales for the period showed only a small gain over the prior year, they were satsifactory considering that last year's March results included the important Easter selling season,'' said Chairman and Chief Executive Harold E. Sells.

Harrison, N.Y.-based Melville Corp., the operator of such specialty stores as Chess King, CVS drug stores and Thom McAn shoes, said March sales rose 2.8 percent to $687.1 million from $668.5 million. The company, which did not release same-store sales, noted its performance was ''adversely impacted'' by this year's late Easter.

Montgomery Ward & Co., based in Chicago, said said March sales were up 1.8 percent to to $399.2 million from $392.3 million. The company did not report same-store results.

Alan Silverman of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. in New York, said the March results revealed ''no underlying weakness'' in the retail industry.

Looking ahead, he said, ''April figures are bound to look good because of Easter, and we won't get a true indication of any trends until May.''

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (APRIL 5) UPI - The Chamber of Deputies Thursday approved a controversial bill to increase the number of members of the Supreme Court from five justices to nine.

Political sources say the measure will indirectly give President Carlos Menem greatly enhanced authority, allowing him to fill the court with justices likely to approve controversial policies he has implemented.

The bill has already passed the Senate and needs only the signature of Menem, who sponsored the measure, to become law.

While the measure was under debate, members of the opposition Radical Civic Union party boycotted several congressional sessions, thereby delaying a vote for lack of a quorum.

At 5:30 a.m., Menem's Peronist Party got the minimum of 158 deputies needed to vote and rushed the bill through the chamber by suprise as opposition members were racing toward the door in a vain attempt to vacate the premises and disrupt the quorum.

When the bill becomes law, Menem will have the power to appoint five new Supreme Court justices, filling one vacancy as well as naming the four new positions.

The new court is likely to rule on several sensitive issues of government concern, such as the validity of a controversial secret decree giving the armed forces authority to intervene in internal security matters.

The court is also expected to rule on important economic issues, such as moves to privatize state-owned companies and a recent government order that forced investors to swap short-term certificates of deposit for medium term government bonds.

Menem and his legal experts have argued that a larger Supreme Court was necessary to deal with a heavy workload.

Opposition members said Menem abused the constitutional system, increasing the number of justices appointed by himself to get a better chance at winning important cases.

Opposition leaders have accused Menem of acting like U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who attempted to pack the U.S. Supreme Court in the 1930s to prevent challenges to his New Deal program.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Presidents Bush and Gorbachev will meet in the United States from May 30th to June 3rd. A one-paragraph statement announcing the super-power summit was released at the White House this morning. It contains NO details of where the summit will occur, and White House aides say Bush personally ordered that the information be omitted. It is believed the summit will be mainly in Washington, D-C.

Bush and Gorbachev agreed to meet in the United States in mid or late June at their December summit in Malta. There is NO word on why the talks were moved to the May 30th-June 3rd period. The duration of the Gorbachev visit apparently was shortened, too... probably because of a forthcoming Soviet Communist Party Congress and the on-going problems Gorbachev faces with independence movements in the Baltic states.

The announcement this morning comes amid talks between Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze . The two discussed the situation in Lithuania yesterday and are to move on to summit agenda questions today. Bush is meeting with Shevardnadze this morning at the White House.

Lithuania's parliament is working on a final draft of a response to Soviet President Gorbachev's demand that the Baltic republic rescind its claim of independence. The official Tass news agency says Lithuania's permanent representative in Moscow concedes that the republic is ready for compromise. Tass adds that the Lithuaniuan official does NOT reject the possibility that a referendum will be held on the question of secession.

The Fatah-Revolutionary Council of Abu Nidal revealed in a statement to a Western news agency in Beirut, Lebanon, that it has opened contacts with what it terms ''concerned parties.''

South African President Frederik de Klerk is meeting with black leaders this morning in Cape Town in the first round of preliminary power-sharing talks. Nelson Mandela was to be among those at the meeting, but two-thirds of the blacks invited decided NOT to attend the talks. Government sources blame the absences on what are termed ''pressure and intimidation'' tactics of Mandela supporters.

Vandals set fire to a Trailways bus in a Greyhound-owned garage in Boston late yesterday, and the strike by Greyhound employees moved into courts in Virginia and New York City. There is NO indication whether the fire that destroyed one bus and damaged another was related to the violence-plagued walkout. The union today won a round in New York Supreme Court, which barred Greyhound from hiring strike-breakers or bringing them into New York from elsewhere. Greyhound is seeking a court order to limit picking at the Star City Terminal in Roanoke, Virginia.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - Philadelphia Electric Co., one of the nation's largest electric utilities that has been dogged by problems financing nuclear power, has warned shareholders it will probably have to cut their dividend substantially, company executives said Thursday.

Chairman and President Joseph Paquette Jr. informed shareholders in letters sent last week that the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission had tentatively decided to grant only about $250 million, or 45 percent, of a requested $549 million rate increase.

If the ruling stands in the commission's April 19 final order, ''the company's future annual earnings will be reduced by almost $1.00 per share and the company will be unable to maintain its common stock dividend at the current level of $2.20 per share.

Earnings in 1989 of the Philadelphia-based utility were $2.36 a share. Revenues were on the order of $3.4 billion.

Edward Tirello Jr., who follows the company for Shearson Lehman Hutton in New York, said he believes the dividend will be cut to $1.45 a share. Shareholders would still be earning a respectable 8 percent on their investment at today's stock price, the analyst said.

The price of Philadelphia Electric stock, which has risen as high as $24.50 a share in the last year, was being quoted at $17.125 a share in early afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Philadelphia Electric has had problems in financing and building the two reactors, which had an estimated cost $1.7 billion when started in 1974.

The cost has grown to $6.7 billion in a period that included the 1979 nuclear accident at the Three Mile Island, Pa., facility of General Public Utilities Corp. of Parsippany, N.J.

Construction of the second reactor was stopped by the Pennsylvania PUC in 1982, he said, because of concern over Philadelphia Electric's ability to finance the building of both reactors simultaneously.

The commission approved the resumption of construction when the first reactor became operational Feb. 1, 1986, the spokesman said.

The cost of the second reactor was then reestimated at $3.2 billion. But McDermott said the company completed the project for $2.8 billion and ahead of schedule.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (APRIL 5) UPI - The powers of Belgium's king, relinquished for two days in protest over a law legalizing abortion, were restored Thursday night at a joint session of Parliament.

Debate over the role of Belgium's monarchy was far from over, however, and the prime minister told the king he seeks a ''structural solution'' to prevent similar constitutional crises in the future.

King Baudouin's powers were restored when Parliament, invoking an obscure clause in the Belgian constitution, declared by a vote of 245-0, with 93 abstentions, that it was no longer ''impossible for the king to reign.''

The same clause was used two nights earlier, with the king's agreement, to suspend Baudouin's powers because he felt morally unable to sign a bill legalizing abortion in the first 12 weeks of pregnancy if a woman is in ''serious distress.''

Prime Minister Wilfried Martens' government took over the 59-year-old king's powers and quickly enacted the law, which was published Thursday in the official government gazette.

The king then informed the government by letter that ''the reason for my impossibility to reign has ceased to exist.''

During a three-hour debate in Parliament, opposition politicians attacked the center-right government for ''constitutional tinkering.'' Three members of Parliament walked out, protesting a ''caricature of democracy.'' The 93 abstentions all came from opposition parties.

''The king never had the impossibility to govern,'' said a Liberal Party leader. ''The government had the impossibility to govern.''

Baudouin's letter, read to the tense parliamentary session, said: ''I am afraid this law will mean a loss of respect for the life of society's weakest. You understand why I do not want to be associated with this law.''

Opinion polls indicated a majority of Belgians supported the devoutly Catholic king's act of conscience, but many politicians and legal experts said the episode dramatized the need to redefine the monarchy's functions.

Newspaper headlines ranged from ''Courageous but Risky'' to ''Population Supports Baudouin'' to ''The Royalty in Question.''

At the very least, said one journal, festivities later this year marking the king's 60th birthday and 40 years in power will have a ''bitter taste.''

Most criticism focused on fancy-footwork use of the ''impossibility to reign'' clause of the Belgian constitution, which was designed for cases of a king's physical or mental incapacity - not moral opposition to a law approved by both houses of Parliament.

''Astonishing, scandalous,'' said Francois Perin, a respected professor of constitutional law at the University of Liege.

The clause had been invoked only once before in the country's 160-year history, when King Leopold III was in captivity in Germany at the time Belgium was liberated by Allied armies.

A few voices called Thursday for Baudouin to abdicate or for the monarchy to be abolished in favor of a republic, but most commentators instead called for constitutional revision allowing bills approved by Parliament to take effect without the king's signature.

Baudouin assumed the throne in 1950 when his father, Leopold III, abdicated in the wake of uncertainty and violent demonstrations over his attitude toward Hitler's regime.

The scholarly-looking Baudouin, respected by the public for his low-profile approach, has consistently spoken out against abortion.

Belgium and Ireland maintained stringent laws against abortion as their European neighbors legalized the procedure. Even the new Belgian law, which legalizes some abortions for the first time, is still far more restrictive than laws in most of Europe.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Americans borrowed $3.4 billion more in installment loans in February for a total of $723.7 billion and an annual growth rate of 5.7 percent, the Federal Reserve said Thursday.

Most of the monthly surge appeared to be in the category of miscellaneous loans where the February total hit $205.2 billion, compared to $203.2 billion in January, on gains by commercial banks, finance companies and credit unions.

That $2 billion increase reflected an annual growth rate of 12.1 percent for the category, the Fed said.

''Growth in automobile credit slowed in February, while growth in revolving credit remained weak for the second consecutive month,'' the nation's central bank said in its monthly report.

The loan rate on new cars, as offered by auto finance companies, edged up to 12.67 percent in February from 12.64 percent in January, the Fed said. On used cars, the rate hopped to 15.91 percent from 15.77 percent.

Credit cards issued by retailers and gasoline companies showed a modest increase in use in February as did charge cards issued by credit unions. But credit cards issued by banks and savings and loan industry showed a decline in use, the report said.

The overall February consumer credit increase follows a January gain of $3.8 billion, which was at an annual rate of 6.4 percent, to a total $720.3 billion, the Fed said. The December total was $716.5 billion.

All the statistics were adjusted for seasonal variations.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - The Senate passed a revamped vocational education program Thursday, breaking with the past to target the neediest students and to give the states more flexibility in spending federal money.

The bill, approved 96-0, and sent to the House, which has approved its own legislation, authorizes $1.9 billion in fiscal 1991 and ''such sums as are necessary'' for fiscal 1992-95.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., floor manager for the bill, said, ''If we want a world class workforce, we must have world class education.''

Nearly 95 percent of the money would be given to the states, apportioned on a state-by-state formula that ensures the money will be for the neediest students. Such a formula is already in effect for other education programs.

Of the total, the states can use a fourth for administration and leadership acivities, including innovative programs such as tech prep projects that cooridnate high school and community college activities.

Of the rest, the states have to allocate 65 percent to 75 percent to high schools and the remainder to post-secondary and adult education. The states may request a waiver, however, to split the money evenly between the two states.

The Senate adopted by voice vote an amendment by Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., which would establish 10 model Community Action Employment Centers in urban and rural areas with high concentrations of children from low-income families.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 5) UPI - The speaker of Israel's parliament asked Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir Thursday to convene the legislature so Labor leader Shimon Peres could put his newly formed coalition to a vote of confidence.

Shamir, who heads the transitional government, said he would consider the request but did not say when he would reply. On Wednesday, Peres informed President Chaim Herzog that a majority of the 120-member parliament, the Knesset, supported his coalition.

Knesset Speaker Dov Shilanksy said if Shamir did not respond he would convene the Parliament, which is in recess, on his own authority. If Shilansky convenes the Knesset during a recess, there could be a legal challenge, whereas Shamir has the authority to convene the legislature at any time.

With the backing of the left-wing and Arab parties and one religious party Peres had the support of 60 Knesset members, but it still was not known which member in the Likud camp had crossed over to give Labor the narrow majority.

Political maneuvering continued throughout Thursday despite Peres' announcement, which many Likud members dismissed as a bluff.

The center-left Shinui Party said it would consider supporting a Likud proposal for a transitional government that would include Labor and Likud and would be committed to electoral reform.

Arab Knesset members pressed Labor for talks with a Palestinian delegation and the release of Palestinian prisoners in return for their support.

The collapse of the Likud-Labor coalition on March 13 and the seemingly endless backroom bargaining to form a new government has angered many Israelis and rejuvenated a movement calling for direct election of the prime minister and Knesset members. Israelis now vote for a party list instead of individual candidates.

After a vote of no confidence led by Peres on March 15 brought down Shamir's government, Herzog gave the Labor leader a mandate to form the new ruling coalition.

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip Thursday, Israeli soldiers shot and killed a 16-year-old Palestinian and wounded at least 11 others, including a 2-year-old boy, Palestinian and military sources said.

Mustafa Al Jura of the West Bank Jalazoun refugee camp was shot during a stone-throwing incident in the town of Ramallah. He later died at Ramallah Hospital, Palestinian officials said. Military sources confirmed that he was wounded by rubber bullets and they were investigating a report that he died.

In the West Bank Tulkarm refugee camp, Ishac A'Tawil, 2, was hit in the head by a rubber bullet and suffered a skull fracture. He was in critical condition at Ramallah Hospital, Palestinian sources said.

Military sources said the army had received a report of the incident and was investigating.

In West Bank Askar refugee camp near Nablus, an Israeli soldier was seriously injured when he was hit by a truck, security sources said. The truck swerved and plowed into a group of soldiers.

The driver was shot as he tried to escape. He was arrested and taken to a hospital. Three passengers also were arrested. The army was investigating whether the driver intentionally drove into the group of soldiers.

At least 649 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli soldiers or civilians since the start of the 27-month-old Palestinian uprising.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (APRIL 5) UPI - Police deactivated 800 pounds of dynamite Thursday in a truck parked in a Bogota residential area favored by Colombian ministers the day after drug lords threatened to bomb an exclusive neighborhood.

Police also reported that 20 people had been killed overnight in a wave of violence in the cartel capital of Medellin along with the director of a Bogota prison, who was vacationing west of the capital, and the mayor of a western city.

The dynamite, formed into two separate bombs of 400 pounds each hidden in toilet paper and soap, was deactivated by an anti-explosive squad of the National Police at 8:20 a.m., some 20 minutes after wary neighbors alerted authorities that the blue truck had been abandoned near the home of Interior Minister Horacio Serpa Uribe, who is running the country while President Vigilio Barco is in Europe.

Barco and ex-president Belisario Betancur also have homes in the area but authorities said the defused bomb was probably meant for security police chief Gen. Miguel Maza Marquez, who lives in the neighborhood.

Maza Marquez has survived two bomb attempts on his life, including a 1,000 pound bomb last December that destroyed his security police headquarters in Bogota and killed 64 people. The general was protected from the blast - which ripped open an 11-foot crater in the ground - by his heavily fortified subterranean office.

On Wednesday the powerful Medellin cocaine cartel stepped up the country's war of nerves by announcing it would detonate a bomb in a neighborhood of the ''oligarchy'' in the north of the capital in retaliation for police actions against drug traffickers.

Among the 20 people killed overnight in Medellin were two doctors, a mathematician, a mechanical engineer, a government bureaucrat and a bar owner, police said. Two Medellin police officers were killed when gunmen in a luxury car sprayed them with gunfire as they sat drinking at a tavern police said.

Medellin Mayor Juan Gomez said Thursday he planned to beef up police security in the besieged city.

Carlos Rincon, the director of Bogota's Modelo Prison, was shot by gunmen riding on a motorcycle as he was having a drink at an outdoor cafe while vacationing west of the capital, police said. The mayor of Rio Sucio, a city about 90 miles west of Bogota, was also gunned down on a street during the same period, police said.

In all, 53 people have been killed - 13 of them police officers - between Sunday and Thursday. Police say the 13 officers died at the hands of drug cartel hitmen but can not positively say the others were victims of the ongoing drug war.

But the escalating violence coincides with a communique issued by the drug lords late last Friday threatening retaliation for the extradition of an alleged drug trafficker to Phoenix, Ariz.

Authorities in Bogota roped off the posh residential area Thursday morning while experts defused the dynamite, hidden in toilet paper, towels and packages of soap in a truck radio reports said was stolen. Police initially said the bombs contained 1,000 pounds of dynamite but later said it was 800.

Authorities said the fuses on the two bombs had been lit, but went out before the dynamite exploded. One suspect was captured and police were searching for another seen fleeing from the scene.

The bomb attempt appears to be a renewal of last year's four month drug cartel bombing spree in Bogota and Medellin that killed more than 200 people between August and December.

The drug lord communique Wednesday that threatened to bomb an exclusive neighborhood also threatened to ''execute'' a senator kidnapped in Medellin on Tuesday.

In the statement released to the news media, the traffickers said they would kill Sen. Federico Estrada Velez, 64, of the ruling Liberal Party unless authorities freed two alleged cartel enforcers arrested outside Medellin.

On Mar. 28, Colombia extradited drug suspect Fernando Gutierrez Perez to face charges in Arizona, ending a two month lull in extraditions that sparked allegations the government had secretly negotiated a cease-fire with the cartel.

The traffickers have said repeatedly they would surrender if the government promised not to send them to face trial in the United States.

Barco on Wednesday insinuated that if Medellin kingpin Escobar surrendered he would face Colombian - not U.S. - justice, but stopped short of making any concessions.

But the presidential candidate for the Social Conservative Party, Rodrigo Lloreda Caicedo, announced Wednesday a drug war peace plan which called on the government to halt extraditions and required the drug lords to stop trafficking and surrender.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Federal anti-drug chief William Bennett plans to issue a one-year update next week on a sputtering federal-local effort to combat the drug crisis in the nation's capital, his office said Thursday.

''It's not pretty,'' an administration official said of the detailed review, which is certain to trigger another round of finger-pointing between the Bush administration and the District of Columbia.

From all indications, the ''test-case'' anti-drug battle plan has been a failure. During the past year, the city's record murder rate has continued unabated, along with heavy drug traffic.

Bennett, a former education secretary, is the director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy. In his first major initiative as anti-drug chief last spring, Bennett promised an extra $100 million to drug programs in Washington, directed military prosecutors to assist in drug cases and offered money for treatment centers.

Bennett's office maintains that the government lived up it its promises, but that the city has failed to make use of the resources. City officials, however, complain that little additional money was actually provided.

Police Chief Isaac Fulwood Jr. recently complained: ''We haven't had a drug war. We've played some foolish games.''

''Isaac Fulwood is not doing drugs. Isaac Fulwood is not shooting people in the streets,'' Fulwood said Thursday.

Fulwood said funds appropriated by Congress for hiring more police officers have not been used because they were appropriated on the condition that the city reach a given number of police recruits beforehand which, he said, it has not.

City Administrator Carol Thompson said Thursday she and other top city officials met with Bennett two weeks ago, and both sides will issue progress reports on the drug fight next week.

In January, Mayor Marion Barry, a frequent target of criticism from Bennett, was charged with using cocaine. Barry, who maintains he is innocent, is awaiting trial and suggests that Bennett has been long on talk and short on dollars.

David Robb, a Bennett spokesman, said the anti-drug chief intends to issue a one-year review of the drug war late next week. He refused to discuss any findings prior to release, but said: ''It will be very detailed.''

Many of the details can be already seen and heard on the streets.

As of Thursday, police reported that there had been 127 homicides in the city this year. That is about the same pace as in 1989, when the district had a record 438 slayings, most drug-related, and the nation's highest murder rate.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, was quoted by The New York Times on Thursday as saying the district provided an ''an opportunity to take the nation's capital and to use it as an experiment to see what could be done on drugs.''

''But everything has gotten worse. We've got more murders, more drug abuse more crime,'' said Rangel.

BRIDGEPORT, CT (APRIL 5) UPI - Academy Award winning actor Paul Newman does not owe a Westport delicatessen owner a share of his charity food businesses, a jury of three men and three women ruled Thursday.

Newman said he felt from the beginning that the lawsuit waged by deli owner Julius Gold ''did not have any merit.''

''It's just tragic that all of this energy and time couldn't have been spent in other, more charitable endeavors,'' said Newman after the verdict was announced at 2:45 p.m.

Jurors began deliberations Wednesday afternoon in Superior Court to decide a civil lawsuit against Newman, co-defendant A.E. Hotchner and Newman's two food companies filed by Gold.

The jury cleared all defendants of all charges.

Gold claimed he was promised an 8 percent share of the profits for helping to develop and market Newman's Own salad dressing and other food products. Newman claimed Gold's role was minimal and that he had no agreement with him to perform services.

The said he was fighting the lawsuit because of the implication that he ''stiffed somebody.''

The jury, which deliberated just under two hours Wednesday, deliberated for about another hour Thursday before asking that the testimony of Leo Nevas, Newman's business attorney, be reread.

Gold claimed he had an oral agreement with Newman through Nevas whom he said was acting as Newman's agent. Newman has denied having any agreement with Gold beyond having the deli owner sell some of his salad dressing in his store.

Earlier in the day, the jury also asked for a copy of the judge's instructions to them on the law as it applied to the case.

CHICAGO (APRIL 5) UPI - Grain futures were mixed and soybeans ended higher Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans closed slightly higher, posting gains in nearby months because of concerns that export shipments out of Brazil may be slow getting started. May and July buying interests were heightened by news that farmer selling in Brazil remained slow.

Soybean futures were boosted by strong soybean meal action, which was strengthened by active commission-house buying.

Corn ended mostly higher in light trading, with professional buying centered on the July contract. Above normal rainfall forecasts in major growing areas kept prices down.

Wheat futures remained mostly lower in choppy trading. The market continued to correct after Wednesday's short-covering rally. Wheat prices were weighed by reports that cold weather in the next few days won't cause much harm.

At the close, corn was up 2 to down 1/2, soybeans up 3 1/2 to 5 1/2, wheat down 3/4 to up 1/2 and oats down 1/4 to up 1/2 cent.

SAN JOSE, CA (APRIL 5) UPI - Computer retailer Businessland Inc., hurt by a sharp and unexpected slowdown in March sales, warned investors Thursday that it would report a loss in the third quarter.

The company, which told analysts in late February that the quarter was right on plan, said sales of Apple and IBM computers dropped off markedly after the two companies introduced new computers in mid-March.

Businessland said it expected revenue for the quarter ended March 31 to slip to $320 million from $375 million in the prior quarter. Revenue in last year's third quarter was $293.3 million.

David Norman, chairman and chief executive officer, said Businessland would have a breakeven quarter on an operating basis, meaning the company would post a quarterly loss because of about $2 million in interest charges. The company will report results April 26.

Businessland's stock dropped $1.25 to $9.125 a share by mid-afternoon in trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

In addition to slow March sales, the company was hurt by slim gross profit margins overseas, particularly in the United Kingdom, and problems with its ComputerCraft chain of stores. Both Businessland U.K. and ComputerCraft lost money in the quarter, Norman said.

Operating income also will be affected by adjustments to the company's inventory of spare service parts, Norman said.

In January, Businessland said it would lay off 195 to 273 people, or 5 percent to 7 percent, of the company's work force.

The company, which has suffered from aggressive price discounting of personal computers, has had only marginal success in trying to stem the price cutting, Norman said.

Businessland scored a coup in the third quarter by winning back computer maker Compaq Computer Corp., which pulled its popular business computers from Businessland shelves last year because of a dispute over pricing.

MOSCOW (APRIL 5) UPI - Soviet troops armed with automatic weapons raided the Lithuanian prosecutor's office Thursday and took over the entire building, the Lithuanian government said in an urgent statement.

The reported raid took place as the Lithuanian Parliament met to finalize a response to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand that the legislature rescind its March 11 unilateral declaration of independence or face ''grave consequences.''

The latest move in Moscow's bid to reimpose control over the Baltic republic brought a sudden escalation of tension two days after preliminary talks had raised hopes that the nearly four-week-long crisis might be easing.

''On April 5 at 4:30 p.m., 50 soldiers and officers armed with automatic weapons forcefully broke into the Republic of Lithuania's public prosecutor's building in Vilnius and occupied all its offices,'' the Lithuanian government said in a statement.

The statement quoted Lithuanian Vice President Kazimieras Motieka as saying that the military personnel were ''dressed in police uniforms and carried boxes of ammunition with them into the building.''

With virtually all foreign correspondents banned from Lithuania by Moscow, the report could not be independently confirmed.

Egidius Bickauskas, head of the Lithuanian mission in Moscow, said before the claimed military action that his government is ready for compromise and may accept a republic-wide referendum on secession.

But Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev, in his first public comment on his meeting Tuesday with three Lithuanian officials, reiterated Gorbachev's insistence that formal negotiations cannot begin unless Vilnius annuls its independence declaration.

Soviet military procurator A. Katusev, answering a telegram from Lithuanian Prime Minister Kasimira Prunskiene, said Lithuanian deserters from the Soviet army will be subject to criminal prosecution.

Katusev, however, added that ''their voluntary return to their place (of) service shall be regarded as a mitigating factor.''

Soviet troops on March 27 raided a Vilnius hospital where 28 Lithuanian deserters had taken refuge. Other soldiers have nabbed deserters from the homes of friends or acquaintances. The precise number of Lithuanian deserters is not known, but it is estimated to be about 1,500.

Yakovlev, a close associate of Gorbachev and now a member of his new Presidential Council, said his meeting Tuesday with Lithuanian Deputy Prime Minister Romualdas Ozolas and two Lithuanian lawmakers was ''frank on both sides.''

''The Lithuanian deputies were told that a normal dialogue on all issues of mutual interest is possible on the basis of the situation that existed March 10,'' the day before the Lithuania Parliament declared independence, Yakovlev told the official Soviet news agency Tass.

''It was stressed that the actions in the first several days after March 10 were actually directed against (Gorbachev's reform program of) perestroika, including in Lithuania - against the historic turn now taking placed in the country,'' Yakovlev said.

Yakovlev said he told his visitors that ''a constructive and responsible approach'' to breaking the Lithuanian impasse had been outlined in a U.S.S.R. Congress of People's Deputies' resolution of March 15 and in Gorbachev's twin appeals Saturday to Lithuania's Parliament and its people.

The congressional measure declared the Lithuanian independence declaration ''null and void,'' and Gorbachev demanded the declaration's annulment as a condition for negotiations.

In an apparent effort to minimize the significance of his meeting Tuesday,

Yakovlev said it ''was held at an urgent request of the Lithuanian deputies, who stressed its unofficial character and said they were not authorized by anybody and were acting in private capacities.''

Gorbachev has also demanded that a referendum be held on Lithuania's separation from the Soviet Union, as required by a draft law on secession passed Tuesday by the Soviet Parliament.

Egidius Bickauskas, Lithuania's permanent representative in Moscow since March 28, told Tass that the Baltic republic may accept a plebiscite. All 15 Soviet republics maintain missions in the capital.

''The republic, according to Bickauskas, is ready for compromise,'' Tass said.

Tass quoted Bickauskas as saying, ''Lithunaia can offer more (in the way of compromises) than the center expects.

Bronius Kuzmickas, the vice president of the Lithuanian Parliament, said Thursday in Canada that the republic might be willing to make such concessions as allowing the Soviet Union to keep troops on Lithuanian soil.

''A fundamental point would be the Soviet army in Lithuania,'' said Kuzmickas, who was in Canada to drum up support for the independence movement. ''The Lithuanian government believes the Soviet Army could remain if a treaty was signed that defined the role and the location of the army.''

JERUSALEM (APRIL 5) UPI - Nothing ever is final in the Israeli political game of bluffs and bargaining, and the question remains whether Shimon Peres, Yitzhak Shamir or a dark horse will emerge in this round.

Peres appeared confident enough when he informed Israelis he had the support to win a vote of confidence from Israel's Parliament and form a government.

But Peres merely may be holding a few of the cards he needs to complete his full house, gambling on a hunch that more legislators will join him and at the same time increase the stakes. His leadership of the Labor Party could be one of those stakes.

As the left-wing newspaper Al Hamishmar said rhetorically in its editorial Thursday, ''Is there a government?''

''The speech by which Peres announced to the state president his success at setting up a government can be understood perhaps in light of the pressures and threats of the Likud on its partners,'' Al Hamishmar said.

''It is possible that Shimon Peres has another vote in addition to the 60 mandates that he had up until now, but he still has a lot of loose ends to tie up and to negotiate with different parties'' allied with Labor but which want assurances from Peres on his policies, Al Hamishmar wrote.

Peres' veil of secrecy over the membership of a Labor-led coalition and who would support it in the Parliament prompted speculation he only announced he could form a government as a gambit to gain the backing of factions initially opposed to his leadership.

He only needs 61 votes of confidence to sit in the prime minister's office and replace Shamir's transitional government with his own coalition. But the breakdown in Israel's 120-member Parliament, the Knesset, has stood firm at 60-60 during the weeks of intense political haggling.

Most recently, the focus concentrated on a breakway Likud faction, which way it would vote and at what price. But by perhaps gaining one of those politicians, Peres' was threatened with the loss of some of his natural allies from the smaller left-wing parties. They had fussed over the thought of a ''defector'' within their midst.

From day to day, hour to hour, the Israeli coalition negotiations change.

Shamir still holds hopes of keeping the prime minister's office. If Peres' gamble fails, other Labor leaders, including former Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, wait to take over the helm.

Another idea has been thrown into the pot. Likud and several smaller parties are backing a proposal to maintain transitional coalition with Likud and Labor for several months, during which the government would change the electoral system to a direct vote for prime minister.

Now, the public votes for party lists and the president picks a Knesset member he believes has the best chance of setting up a coalition.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 5) UPI - East Germany's first freely elected Parliament convened Thursday and deputies faced an immediate challenge as about 200,000 people protested against plans for a monetary union that could mean financial losses for East Germans.

Huge rallies were held in several East German cities to protest a proposal by the West German Bundesbank, the central bank, under which two East German marks will be needed to buy one Deutsche Mark when monetary unification between the two states is completed, probably this summer.

A few hours after the inaugural session of the new, 400-seat Parliament, tens of thousands of people attended a rally at East Berlin's Alexander Plaza - the scene of massive demonstrations that precipitated the ouster of the hard-line communist leadership last fall.

''Have we freed ourselves from the old communists just to become a plaything for the West German central bank?'' a trade unionist asked the crowd.

''I am very afraid,'' said Helga Dieffenbach, 73. ''I lived through the war and then the communist dictatorship and now this, at my age,'' said one of the protesters.

In Halle, 20,000 people took to the streets, chanting, ''We are no half Germans'' while the number of demonstrators in Dresden was estimated at 70,000. In the southern city of Leipzig, about 50,000 people gathered at the downtown Karl Marx Plaza, calling for a 1-to-1 exchange rate.

The East German mark is virtually worthless outside East Germany.

The total number of demostrators in the various cities was estimated at 200,000.

Several speakers condemned the Bundesbank proposal, under which individual East Germans would only be able to change savings up to 2,000 marks at a 1-to-1 rate.

The plan, unveiled last week, drew sharp criticism from virtually all East German political parties and from West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's liberal coalition partners.

The Volkskammer, the East German Parliament, is expected to start discussion of the planned economic union - a crucial step toward political reunification.

The March 18 electoral victory by East Germany's three-party, conservative Alliance for Germany was widely seen as an endorsement of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's blueprint for swift unity.

Several deputies said Thursday they expected the democratic Parliament to have a short life and that it will soon become part of an all-German assembly.

Volkskammer deputies Thursday entrusted Christian-Democratic Union Chairman Lothar de Maiziere, 50, with the task of forming a new government which he is likely to head, He led the CDU to electoral victory, winning 163 seats for the party.

Sabine Bergmann-Pohl, another CDU delegate was elected parliamentary president, gaining the backing of 214 deputies in a second ballot, held after the first failed to give any of the candidates an absolute majority.

The voting contrasted sharply with procedure in the previous Parliament, which had been little more than a rubber-stamp institution during the four decades of Stalinist rule.

Before the inauguration of the new Parliament, many deputies, including Gregor Gysi, the leader of the Party of Democratic Socialism - the renamed Communist Party - attended an ecumenical church service.

Lothar Pinche, one of the 25 deputies of the center-right German-Social Union, said in the inaugural speech that ''40 years of a difficult road are coming to an end.''

''In this hour, not only our own citizens are watching us, but also our neighbors and indeed the people of the entire world,'' said Pinche, 64, the parliamentary doyen.

But the mood of many deputies appeared subdued, following recent claims that as many as 1 out of 10 of them were once linked to the hated secret police of the hard-line Communist leadership.

(APRIL 5) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev will hold their next summit from May 30th to June 3rd in the United States. Most of the talks are expected to take place in Washington, D-C, although today's statement gave NO details on other locations. Gorbachev had been expected to stay longer in the United States, but apparently cannot because of problems in the Soviet Baltic states.

Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat is in Rome on a two-day official visit to Italy. Arafat will meet with Pope John Paul and a wide range of Italian political leaders to seek their support for Arab-Israeli negotiations. Israel's ambassador to Italy says presenting Arafat as a man of peace- in his words- ''NOT only does NOT help peace, but perverts the political debate.''

The Tass news agency says Lithuania is NOT rejecting a referendum on its declaration of independence from the Soviet Union. The Baltic republic's permanent representative to Moscow says Lithuania is ready to compromise on the issue of immediate succession.

Soldiers are in control of the black South African homeland of Venda today after an apparently bloodless coup. The takeover was reported by the territory's radio. The coup is the second military takeover in one of South Africa's four nominally independent homelands in two months.

East Germany's new NON-Communist parliament got its first taste of democracy today as deputies elected a new president of the body. The parliament leader is an East Berlin doctor who belongs to the conservative Christian Democratic Union, the largest bloc.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - The majority-owned foreign affiliates of American companies plan to increase capital spending by 13 percent in 1990 a slower pace than the last two years of growth, the government said Thursday.

The $54.9 billion advance in capital expenditures abroad compared with increases of 14 percent, or $48.4 billion, in 1989 and 24 percent, or $42.6 billion, in 1988, the Commerce Department said.

A report by the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said the increases are ''widespread by area and by industry, and reflect U.S. parent companies' growing emphasis on overseas operations.''

''Petroleum firms have been slowing their domestic capital spending for exploration and development, and they have been shifting these activities overseas, partly in response to environmental concerns in the United States,'' the report said.

Total capital spending by the foreign affiliates owned by American petroleum producers is expected to reach $15.6 billion this year.

''Along with the continuing shift towards overseas exploration and development, the increase reflects rising world oil prices resulting from increasing worldwide demand and declining production in the United States and the Soviet Union,'' the report said.

In the manufacturing sector, total capital spending by foreign affiliates owned by American companies is expected to reach $27.4 billion.

''Manufacturers have been attracted by favorable conditions abroad, including increasing European economic integration and rapid growth in East Asia,'' the report said.

Affiliates in developed countries plan to increase expenditures by 13 percent in 1990 to $42.3 billion after a 10-percent boost in 1989, while affiliates in non-developing countries plan to increase spending by 15 percent, to $11.7 billion, following a 28-percent surge last year, the report said.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 5) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk met African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela and top aides Thursday but vowed to oppose any attempts by the ANC to ride roughshod over power-sharing negotiations and exclude the opinions of other black leaders.

The first face-to-face encounter between an ANC delegation and a South African president in 42 years of National Party rule began shortly after 6 p.m., as de Klerk's government grappled with a military coup in the black homeland of Venda - the second homeland to fall to rebellious black soldiers in a month.

Mandela arrived at the presidential offices shortly after de Klerk concluded preliminary power-sharing talks with two moderate black leaders of self-governing territories, including Mandela's arch rival Mangosuthu Buthlezi.

Four other black leaders of self-governing territories failed to attend. De Klerk accused the ANC of involvement ''in one way or another'' in pressuring the four to skip the meeting.

''We are not thinking in terms of bloc forming, of excluding some people from the negotiating process,'' de Klerk told reporters after his first round of talks. ''There is no question of there just being two parties involved.

''There is a strategy to try and form just one umbrella and polarize the discussions into just two main groups. We are against that,'' he said.

Mandela - along with ANC intelligence chief Jacob Zuma, the most senior ANC leader to return from exile, and other officials - intended to discuss with de Klerk the ANC's decision to suspend a formal meeting scheduled for April 11. ANC leaders suspended the meeting in protest after 11 blacks were killed by when police opened fire during anti-government rally last week.

The white opposition Democratic Party slammed the government for suggesting the ANC had intimidated the four leaders into boycotting the meeting and said a number of the territory chiefs had requested the talks be postponed because of the ANC's suspension of the April negotiations.

''The government and the ANC leadership must first break the political ice before meaningful preliminary negotiations can be successful,'' Democratic Party co-leader Wynand Malan said in a statement.

Mandela said the outcome of the meeting with de Klerk could determine when a new date for the talks would be set.

Thursday's meeting was the first face-to-face encounter between de Klerk and Mandela since his Feb. 11 release from prison, where he served 27 years on sabotage charges, and represented the highest-level ANC-government talks since the National Party swept to power in 1948.

The meeting with the homeland leaders, and the April 11 talks with the ANC were intended to discuss obstacles standing in the way of formal power-sharing negotiations to end the country's racial crisis.

Buthelezi, one of the two self-governing territory leaders who attended, declared he was present as president of the Zulu movement Inkatha and not as chief minister of the KwaZulu self-governing territory in Natal province.

Buthelezi, whose followers are at war with ANC-linked supporters in strife-torn Natal, said in a statement that de Klerk has ''gone past all points of no return in his moves away from apartheid'' and said he is prepared to negotiate.

Security forces in the nominally independent black homeland of Venda, shaken by protests for ''reincorporation'' into South Africa, seized power in a bloodless coup earlier Thursday.

The coup d'etat was led by Venda Defense Force Deputy Chief Col. Gabriel Ramushwana, who vowed to establish a ruling council of unity and called for talks with the African National Congress and other anti-apartheid organizations opposed to the homeland policy.

Thousands of residents of Thohoyandou, capital of the tiny homeland near the northern border with Zimbabwe, spilled into the streets and motorists honked their horns in celebration of the overthrow of homeland leader Frank Ravele.

The southeastern homeland of Ciskei fell to military rule on March 4.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Some 112 million Americans were exposed to excessive smog in the scorching summer of 1988, when record high temperatures drove up pollution levels by 8 percent from 1987, the government reported Thursday.

Environmental Protection Agency officials said, however, that preliminary monitoring information shows smog decreased in 1989, again because of weather factors, specifically cooler, damper conditions less conducive to the formation of ozone, the primary component of smog.

Ozone is helpful in the upper atmosphere, where it screens out the sun's ultraviolet rays, but harmful in ground-level smog.

While ozone levels were down in 1989, EPA officials said about 70 million Americans still were exposed to smog above federal health standards, showing that even in ''good'' years the nation suffers air pollution problems.

The officials said the same weather-related fluctuations in smog levels have been observed over the past 10 years, with ozone rising in the hotter sunnier summers of 1979, 1980, 1983 and 1988.

Despite better pollution controls on automobiles and factories, the nation has not reduced its pervasive smog problem, they said.

''This is the profile of a problem that is not getting solved,'' said Jerry Emerson, director of the EPA's Office of Air Quality Planning and Statistics. ''We are not getting the kinds of reductions we need. We still need to do more.''

William Rosenberg, assistant EPA administrator for air and radiation, said the clean air bill now in Congress would substantially tighten emission controls, but he acknowledged it would still take decades for the smoggiest cities to come into compliance.

Currently, 101 cities violate federal health standards for smog. Officials said they did not yet know how many cities would be found in noncompliance when 1989 monitoring data is gathered.

The smog problem was outlined in the EPA's annual report on air pollution trends, which estimates levels of the six priority air pollutants regulated by the agency to protect human health - ozone, sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, nitrogen dioxide, lead and particulates such as soot and dust.

Overall, EPA officials said 121 million of the nation's 240 million residents were exposed to excessive levels of at least one of those six pollutants in 1988.

The report did not cover the hundreds of toxic and cancer-causing pollutants emitted by industry and cars, many of which remain unregulated.

The report said that, with the exception of ozone smog, levels of the priority pollutants have fallen over the period 1979 to 1988, ranging from a 89 percent drop in lead to a 7 percent reduction in nitrogen dioxide. Smog has increased by 2 percent.

The report said the most significant reductions were achieved in the early 1980's and much less, if any, progress has been made in recent years, except for lead.

That is reflected in the trends from 1987 to 1988. In addition to the 8 percent increase in smog, the report said sulfur dioxide increased 1 percent; nitrogen dioxide rose 1 percent; particulates fell 4 percent; carbon monoxide decreased 3 percent and lead fell 15 percent.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney sent to Congress Thursday a package of legislative reforms that would make it easier to cut troop strength at the officer level and to award contracts for major weapons purchases.

The proposed legislation also seeks permission for the Defense Department to receive half the money generated by sale or lease of real property, such as military bases, rather than having it all go to the Treasury's general fund.

''I have asked the speaker of the House and the president of the Senate to introduce (these proposals),'' Cheney said at a Pentagon news conference.

''I think overall this will be well received on Capitol Hill,'' said Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., of the Senate Armed Services Committee. ''I think Secretary Cheney is absolutely correct when he said we have to have cooperation, not confrontation between Congress and the Department of Defense.''

Cheney also sent Capitol Hill a second document, an advisory ''white paper '' recommending changes Congress may want to consider in its own process, including shifting to a two-year defense budget cycle.

The legislative reform package, named the Defense Management Improvement Act, and the white paper are the result of Cheney's defense management review last summer that sought ways to cut costs and red tape.

''We can do much to improve defense management by ourselves,'' Cheney said. ''We could accomplish far more with the cooperation of Capitol Hill.''

The proposed legislation would retain existing provisions that allow for discharge of regular officers with less than five years active commissioned service, but it would add a key provision allowing the military service secretaries to release from active duty and transfer to the reserves any regular officer with less than eight years of commissioned service.

''Any officer who declines the tenured reserve appointment will be transferred to the reserve component in an enlisted status under existing provisions of law,'' according to the Pentagon's analysis of the legislation.

Deputy Defense Secretary Donald Atwood said at the news conference that there is a need to cut troop levels ''across the whole spectrum'' and restrictions on releasing officers is ''causing some difficulty'' in meeting the Pentagon's goal of reducing military strength by up to 90,000 men and women in 1990-91.

Atwood said he was also seeking to offer additional financial benefits as an incentive for military personnel to voluntarily leave.

This proposed legislation, he said, would ''make it easier for our people to withdraw from those ranks, for us to offer them an easy out.''

The Pentagon's legislative package would also allow it to award weapons contracts ''on the basis of greatest benefit to the government and a supplier's proven performance, rather than simply the lowest bid.''

The package would also allow the Defense Department to make greater use of multi-year weapons contracts, ''allowing better long-term planning for both the Pentagon and the companies for which it contracts.''

Atwood said, ''Perhaps the most important item that we're seeking legislative help on is to enable us to run a pilot program on up to six major weapons systems in which we actually operate those as though they are a commercial operation.'' The six programs have not been chosen yet, he said.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - The Health and Human Services Department has authorized publication of a controversial pamphlet about how condoms can protect against AIDS - nearly two years after the education effort was first proposed, a spokesman said Thursday.

Jim Brown, a spokesman for the Public Health Service, said 583,000 copies of the 14-page condom booklet should be printed by May 1. The pamphlets will be distributed through the federal Centers for Disease Control's AIDS Information Clearing House, as well as at clinics to treat sexually transmitted diseases and drug abuse, Brown said.

The booklet, which answers questions about how condoms can reduce the risk of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, how to use them and what problems may arise, was first proposed by the Food and Drug Administration in May 1988. The CDC submitted a proposal for a similar booklet about a month later - creating a bureaucratic tangle in which HHS eventually concluded that only one version of the booklet was needed, Brown said.

''The delay had nothing to do with ideological reasons,'' said Brown, noting the Public Health Service has repeatedly supported the use of condoms as one way to help stem the AIDS epidemic.

''If you are not going to be (sexually) abstinent or have a faithful, monogamous relationship, condoms are the only things that would prevent transmission of AIDS or other sexually transmited diseases, although they are not 100 percent safe,'' Brown said.

AIDS activists have criticized some editorial changes that HHS officials asked the FDA to make in the original version of the booklet, especially a change that emphasizes the possiblity that condoms can fail.

Jean McGuire, executive director of the AIDS Action Council, said the booklet is not very aggressive in conveying condoms' protective benefits, but ''it qualifies as a first step.'' McGuire also said she found it ''horrifying'' that bureaucratic wrangling could prevent potentially life-saving information from quickly reaching the American public.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - ABC will try out two new half-hour "reality" programs in May in its search for a compatible show to follow its hugely successful "America's Funniest Home Videos," it was announced Thursday.

One of the new shows focuses on the antics of "drive time" disc jockeys; the other sounds as if the producers are going out to make their own home videos.

The comedy team of Mack (Dryden) & Jamie (Alcroft) will team up on Sunday, May 6, 8:30-9 p.m. Eastern time for "Anything But Laughs," a show that examines such drive-time deejays as Frazer Smith of KLSX-Los Angeles, who "car-pools" in a $350,000 limousine.

Also on the show will be Jay Thomas, of Power 106 (KPWR) in Los Angeles, Ross & Wilson of Z100, New York, Terry Dorsey of KSCS, Dallas and Tom Joyner and Doug Banks of WGCI, Chicago.

The following week in the same time period, it will be "America's Funniest...Part II." Vin Di Bona, the moving force behind "Home Videos," will act as executive producer of the show, which will take its cameras around the country to record just plain folks and their kids delivering one-liners, excuses and impressions of celebrities, animals and inamimate objects.

LONDON (APRIL 5) UPI - A prisoner who claimed he began an uprising at a crowded jail denied there were any bodies inside the Victorian-era facility Thursday on the fifth day of a siege that has left at least one dead and dozens wounded.

Numerous inmates who have emerged since the rebellion began on Sunday have reported witnessing up to 12 murders within the imposing red-brick Strangeways Prison in Manchester, 200 miles northwest of London.

Governor Brendan O'Friel said guards had not found any bodies in areas of the building they have recaptured, but he did not discount the possibility of further fatalities in what he has called the most destructive uprising in British penal history.

The Home Office said negotiators were pressing on with their efforts to woo the remaining rebels, two of whom surrendered Thursday. O'Friel estimated less than 40 inmates were still occupying the prison's central rotunda, from which they control upper floors of five main wings.

The office would not reveal the demands of the rebels. Negotiators have said the convicts were assured their surrenders would be witnessed by photographers, church officials and magistrates, and promised they would not be beaten.

An inmate who identified himself as Paul Taylor ventured onto the roof and for two hours used a traffic cone as an impromptu bullhorn to bellow out messages to assembled reporters.

Taylor, his hair shaved in a mohawk haircut, said he started the riot on Sunday, when about 300 prisoners overwhelmed guards in the chapel to protest living conditions in the facility, which was built in 1868 for 970 inmates but now houses about 1,600.

''As far as we have been possibly able to ascertain, of course, there are no deceased prisoners within the establishment,'' said Taylor, whose speech was later drowned out by a police helicopter.

Prisoners braving freeezing weather on the roof of the jail were more somber than on previous days, and authorities are reported to have cut off all food, water and power in their bid to break the siege.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Two GOP senators proposed Thursday doubling the defense cuts recommended by the administration, and outlined a program to kill or curtail a variety of expensive weapons like the B-2 stealth bomber.

Sens. William Cohen of Maine and John McCain of Arizona, both members of the Armed Services Committee, joined in a proposal for post-inflation cuts in defense spending of 4 percent a year, rather than the 2 percent suggested by the administration.

Airing their proposals at a news conference, they said this additional reduction would put fiscal 1995 defense spending about $50 billion under the $303 billion proposed for fiscal 1991. An extra 2 percent in 1991 would be about $6 billion under the $303 billion in spending now proposed.

''We have to recognize the emerging realities, both military and political and we have to reshape our defense structure,'' said Cohen, adding that it must be ''in a way that will support our three basic goals'' of deterring nuclear war, keeping Moscow from dominating the Eurasian land mass and maintaining open access to the seas.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., Armed Services Committee chairman, praised the Cohen-McCain proposal, saying: ''It's a very good report. They have pointed out a number of areas of change. I think the debate on strategy is certainly furthered by their report.'

Nunn, however, differed with them on the need for the B-2 stealth bomber, saying he still favors it. But he sent a warning to Northrop, the plane's builder, saying that ''the cost has to come down.''

Both Cohen and McCain said the administration and Congress so far had failed to provide a national security strategy; Congress in part because consensus does not come until late in the process, and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney in part because he has to hold a huge bureaucracy together and wants to prevent budget ''freefall.''

The two had slight differences on major systems, Cohen preferring to kill off the B-2 stealth bomber and McCain now leaning toward building some, although he said he might be persuaded to eliminate the bomber.

Cohen also preferred to junk the rail-mobile MX missile and build the one-warhead Midgetman, while McCain said he wanted to get away from land-based missiles entirely, reducing the ''triad'' of sea, air and land forces to a ''diad'' of bombers and submarines.

They agreed that the advanced tactical fighter should be deferred and the modernized short-range nuclear missile proposed for Europe should be killed. They said the C-17 cargo plane and an advanced tactical aircraft, a modernized fighter-bomber, should be continued, but might be slowed. They also suggested the current fleet of 14 aircraft carrier battle groups might be cut back to 12.

And, they said, Europeans must now assume more of the responsibility for defending Western Europe, operating under the U.S. nuclear umbrella.

The chairmen of the House and Senate Budget committees have been suggesting deep spending cuts for the Pentagon, but Cohen and McCain criticized their approach.

''I think what we're witnessing is the Budget committees undertaking their analysis of how much should be spent. We think that's the wrong approach. ... Don't pick the number first and then try to tailor your forces to fit the number.

''Rather decide upon strategy, what should be our role .. and once we arrive at a consensus on the shape of things to come, then we can start tailoring that by cutting back on programs that no longer fit in the strategy,'' said Cohen.

(APRIL 5) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev will meet for summit talks May 30th to June 3rd in the United States. Today's one-paragraph announcement gave NO details, but most of their talks probably will be held in Washington. Bush and Gorbachev last met four months ago in Malta. Gorbachev had been expected to stay in the United States longer, but problems at home and a coming Communist Party Congress apparently will keep his schedule tight.

President Bush met with visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze today to discuss plans for the summit agenda. Shevardnadze carried a personal letter from Gorbachev to Bush. The Soviet diplomat is holding three days of pre-summit talks with Secretary of State Baker in Washington. This morning, he told Baker the two ''must make significant headway with respect to bilateral relations.''

After a series of accidents and unplanned delays, technicians at Cape Canaveral today completed critical tests on the one and one-half-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope. NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone says- ''We're go. We're on schedule for April 10th. It's looking good.'' The countdown for the year's third shuttle flight begins Saturday afternoon. Discovery's five-member crew plans to arrive at the Kennedy Space Center before then.

Another of South Africa's nominally independent black homelands has fallen under military rule... the second in the past two months. Soldiers in the homeland of Venda seized power today in a bloodless coup that sparked celebrations in the street. South African President Frederik de Klerk says steps will be taken to prevent an outbreak of violence similar to rioting that spread through the homeland of Ciskei last month.

(APRIL 5) UPI - A police bomb squad in Colombia today deactivated one-thousand pounds of dynamite found in a truck parked in a residential area of Bogota that's home to several government officials. The discovery of the two 500-pound bombs comes one day after drug lords threatened to bomb an exclusive neighborhood. Authorities also report that 20 people were killed in an overnight wave of violence in the drug capital of Medellin.

The eight women and four men deliberating the guilt or innocence of former national security adviser John Poindexter are back at it for a fourth day. ATLANTA (APRIL 5) UPI - The chances are poor for global eradication of measles, rabies, tuberculosis, and leprosy, but good for polio, river blindness, and another parasitic illness common in developing counties, officials said Thursday.

Inspired by the virtual eradication of smallpox in 1977, the International Task Force for Disease Eradication initiated by the Carter Center of Emory University set out last year to assess the potential for eliminating eight other infectious diseases. The results of the task force's latest findings were summarized in the Centers for Disease Control's Mortality and Morbidity Weekly Report.

In its investigation of measles - blamed for two million worldwide deaths in 1989 - the task force determined that a vaccine must be developed for young infants before the childhood disease can be completely eliminated.

The large number of measle deaths are among children in developing countries, where health care is poor and existing vaccines are not widely administered. About 14,000 measles cases and a 20-year record of 42 deaths from the disease were reported in the United States last year.

A similar prognosis was made for tuberculosis, a bacterial infection that largely attacks the lungs and kills between two million and three million people a year worldwide.

"Better tools for diagnosis, case-finding, prevention, and treatment need to be developed and the application of current short-course therapy in developing countries needs to be greatly increased," the report said.

The lack of sophisticated diagnostic tests and chemotherapy were cited as the reasons why the elimination of leprosy, or Hansen's disease, is nowhere in sight, the CDC said.

The disease that destroys the nerves, creating skin patches insensitive to pain, heat and cold infects between 11 million and 12 million people a year, largely in Mexico, Southeast Asia, and the Pacific Islands.

The report said that while rabies could be eliminated in urban areas, it is less controllable in the wild because there is no effective way of delivering the vaccine to wild-animal disease carriers. Rabies, which is almost always fatal, kills an estimated 52,000 people a year worldwide who have come in contact with animals infected with the virus.

The eradication of another disease called yaws is unlikely because health officials are unable to accurately identify the organisms that causes it, the report said.

The news was better for sufferers of paralytic poliomyelitis, or polio, the crippling viral disease that still afflicts some 250,000 people a year and kills about 25,000 largely in developing countries.

Though the task force found "no insurmountable obstacles" to worldwide eradiaction of poliomyelitis, it said, "increased national and international commitment is needed."

Specifically, an improved vaccine administered in infancy in developing countries is needed to eradicate polio worldwide by the year 2000, the report said.

Guinea worm disease, found mostly in India, Central Africa and Pakistan, is caused by an organism in the larval stage entering the human body through contaminated drinking water.

Eradication of the worm that invades an estimated ten million people a year - causing extreme pain when it burrows its way out through the skin - is possible through the chemical treatment of water systems, the CDC said.

Elimination of onchocerciasis or so-called "river blindness," common in Latin America and Africa, may be possible through drug treatment. The disease is caused by another kind of worm in the larval stage and afflicts an estimated 18 million per year, causing blindness in 340,000 people.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - Stocks closed narrowly mixed in light trading Thursday after some late computerized program selling just about erased the gains sparked by the Tokyo market's rebound from an early plunge.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 17.34 Wednesday, inched up 1.80 to close at 2721.17.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 0.16 to 187.15 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 0.36 to close at 340.73. The price of an average share fell 3 cents.

Declines nosed out advances 728-718 among the 1,984 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 144,170,000 shares, compared with 159,540,000 shares traded Wednesday.

A late bout of computerized program selling virtually erased earlier gains in the Dow industrials and brought advancing and declining issues almost even, analysts said.

Prices were higher for most of the day, bolstered by the Tokyo market's rebound from sharp losses, before the program selling pushed the market down to a mixed close.

Heavy buying late in the session helped prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange recover most of their early decline, blamed on rumors about securities firms being in financial trouble, rumors which were denied by the exchange.

The blue-chip Nikkei index closed down 193.88 points to 28,249.06, but at one point in early trading it was down more than 1,000 points.

The rumors of turmoil at Japanese investment firms sent stocks down Wednesday but sent bonds up sharply as investors sought a safe haven. Don Hays, director of investment strategy at Wheat, First Securities Inc. in Richmond, Va., thought the bond market's ability to hold most of those gains Thursday was somewhat encouraging to stock market players.

''People credited that rally entirely to the fears of a collapse in the Tokyo market,'' said Hays. ''Today, fears of a Japanese collapse abated, but rates didn't go up. I think that encouraged some bulls.''

''But basically it was a low-volume,7/8lat day,'' he said. ''People are waiting on the unemployment numbers. That was enough to keep them from buying too much.''

March employment figures due out Friday are expected to show that the pace of creation of jobs slowed last month, with non-farm payrolls anticipated up 178,000. The average rise for January and February was 352,000.

On the trading floor, Tandem Computers was the most active issue, sinking 4 5/8 to 22 5/8 after saying slowing revenue growth would cause a drop in earnings for its March quarter compared with the prior three months.

Baxter International followed, off 1 1/2 to 22 7/8 after saying Wednesday it would close or sell 31 plants and eliminate some 6,400 jobs under a restructuring plan to reduce overhead and improve cash flow and earnings.

Citicorp was third, off 1/4 to 22 1/2 as bank issues came up against selling amid signs that regulatory reviews of lending practices may put pressure on their earnings.

Among the blue chips, AT&T added 3/8 to 41 5/8, IBM lost 3/8 to 106 1/8, Philip Morris gained 1/2 to 41 1/8 in active trading, and Merck rose 3/4 to 72.

Elsewhere, Bank of New England extended its plunge, down 3/8 to 3 7/8. In a major restructuring to remain solvent, the troubled bank holding company said Wednesday it would eliminate 5,600 jobs, representing one-third of its work force, by year's end.

Computer retailer Businessland, hurt by a sharp and unexpected slowdown in March sales, plunged 1 1/2 to 8 7/8 after warning investors that it would report a loss in the third quarter.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 175,910,440 shares, compared with 192,337,930 shares traded Wednesday.

Prices closed narrowly mixed in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index rose 0.11 to close at 361.23. The price of an average share was unchanged. Declines led advances 284-262 among the 810 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 17,570,350 shares, compared with 22,578,700 traded Wednesday.

Salomon's put warrants on Tokyo's Nikkei index led the Amex issues, down 1 3/8 to 11.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 2.00 to 433.42.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - Deutsche Lufthansa AG said Thursday it has signed a $440 million joint-venture agreement with the Soviet airline Aeroflot to expand the Moscow airport, the first stage of a plan in which the West German carrier hopes to gain a strong presence in the Soviet air transportation sector.

The agreement to develop Sheremetyevo airport was signed in Moscow by Lufthansa Chairman Heinz Ruhnau and by Vladimir Potapov, Aeroflot's executive for international flight services, Lufthansa said in a statement.

The joint venture will be financed on a 50-50 basis by the Soviet carrier and by a Lufthansa-led West German consortium.

Most of the financing of the venture will come from Dresdner Bank, a partner in the project.

The agreement gives Lufthansa's a strong representation in the government-controlled air transportation sector in the Soviet Union.

Lufthansa also separately signed another agreement with Aeroflot to maintain the Soviet carrier's fleet of European-made Airbus passenger jets.

The maintenance agreement will cover five planes in a first stage and another10 later on.

Lufthansa, which is 51 percent-owned by the West German government, announced earlier this year it had signed a letter of intent with Aeroflot to develop Sheremetyevo. Lufthansa said it has already conducted the technical survey for the airport's expansion.

The Lufthansa-led consortium, representing the West German side of the joint venture, includes four other companies: AEG AG, an electronics company; Flughafen Frankfurt am Main, an airport company; Noell GmbH, a subsidiary of the steel concern Salzgitter AG; and Dresdner Bank.

Dresdner Bank will provide the financing for the joint venture and lend funds, mostly in German marks, to both the German and the Soviet sides.

The project calls for the construction of a new passenger terminal, an international freight terminal, a maintenance hangar, a Penta hotel and new handling facilities.

Lufthansa, which has been flying to Moscow since 1972, offers 18 weekly flights to the Soviet capital, mostly out of its Frankfurt hub. The airline also operates two weekly flights to Leningrad.

Lufthansa has a long history of technical cooperation with Eastern European carriers. The carrier has technical and maintenance agreements with Interflug of East Germany, Czechoslovakia's CSA, Hungary's Malev, Romania's Tarom, and three airlines or charters lines in Yugoslavia.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Gasoline led oil prices down Thursday with a drop of better than 1.5 cents a gallon as the market suddenly discovered there is no danger of a gas shortage despite a 12.9 million barrel drawdown of reserves over the past two weeks.

''After Wednesday's market decline, some people expected at least a little bounce. But, the market finally realized there's no gasoline shortage,'' said James Steel, energy analyst at Refco Inc. in New York.

There was selling of products and crude by large refiners, which Steel said ''means they're more than happy with the supplies they've got on hand and are speculating with their reserves.''

''The pipelines are filled with crude and there are a lot of (tanker) cargos on the way to the East Coast,'' the analyst added.

Unleaded gasoline for May delivery fell 1.57 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange to end the day at 63.29 cents a gallon. It had lost 1.02 cents a gallon Wednesday.

On the New York Harbor cash market, prompt delivery unleaded gasoline dropped 1.25 cents to 63.30 cents a gallon.

The American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday that the nation's gasoline stocks dropped 12.9 million barrels over the previous two weeks, a situation that would normally be expected to have an upward pressure on prices.

Steel said a good portion of the decline could be accounted for by a large amount of driving during this period by college students on spring break and by a fall-off in imports to an average of 217,000 barrels a day from last year's 431,000 barrels daily.

The market had feared a tight market for May delivery gasoline because it is the first month in which governors in the Northeast will require lower vapor pressure at the pump to lessen air pollution during the summer driving months.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for May delivery plunged 35 cents to $19.43 a barrel, bringing its two-day loss to 87 cents a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, prompt delivery WTI dropped 35 cents to $19.45 a barrel.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent lost 40 cents to $17.35 a barrel.

United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - slipped 20 cents to $15.20 a barrel.

On the Merc, heating oil for May delivery finished the day at 53.31 cents a gallon, a decline of 0.71 cents.

Prompt delivery heating oil fell 0.50 cents to 57.05 cents a gallon on the New York Harbor cash market.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Members of a House committee working on a clean air bill searched for a compromise Thursday on a plan to help pay for acid rain cleanup efforts in the Midwest.

Members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee appeared to have crafted language to address the concerns of Midwestern lawmakers, who fear voters in the region will faces huge increase in electricity bills because of costly acid rain reduction requirements.

However, after nearly round-the-clock negotiations over the past two days, committee aides said some details were still unresolved, raising the possibility the deal could unravel.

Numerous proposals have been circulating but there were no authoritative statements from committee leaders confirming any major elements.

Deliberations in the House committee follow Senate approval of clean air legislation earlier this week, the first major congressional action since 1977 to update and strengthen the Clean Air Act.

Both the House and Senate bills would require 107 coal-burning power plants, primarily in the Midwest and South, to cut sulfur dioxide emissions by 10 million tons by the turn of the century.

Sulfur dioxide is the primary component of acid rain, which is blamed for damage to lakes, streams and forests in the Northeast and Canada.

Midwestern legislators contend the bill would make their states do more than their share to ease acid rain. They say the region accounts for only 50 percent of emissions but would have to achieve 75 percent of the reductions.

They maintain they are taking up the slack for states such as Texas, where there are substantial sulfur dioxide emissions from industry. Factories are exempt from sulfur dioxide cutbacks because they would face expensive steps to cut toxic and smog-causing pollution.

In recent months, the Midwesterners, led by Rep. Philip Sharp, R-Ind., have pushed for emission fees on industry as a way of generating ''cost-sharing'' money to ease pollution control costs for Midwwestern utilities.

That proposal and others have failed to gain much support, partly due to strong opposition from President Bush.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - The dollar ended mixed against the key currencies in thin, directionless New York trading Wednesday as players shunned exposure before a U.S. employment report and a weekend Group of Seven huddle.

Currency traders always assume defensive postures before the release of Labor Department job creation data, which gauge U.S. economic strength and can move the dollar up or down. A G-7 meeting Saturday in Paris, likely to focus on yen weakness, was one more reason to stay on the sidelines.

''It was an extremely quiet, lackluster, pre-employment figure day,'' said one New York trader. ''On a one-to-10 (scale) in volume, it was a two.''

''There haven't even been any stupid rumors today,'' said Barclays Bank trader David Jaques, citing a lack of market-moving information.

He said his organization is looking for a strong nonfarm U.S. payroll hike of about 215,000 jobs, including 30,000 census workers - but acknowledged most of the market is expecting a lesser gain of around 175,000 jobs.

But even if a healthy employment rise moves the dollar up, that move could be nipped in the bud by rising anxiety over the G-7 meeting, he said.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.7005 West German marks, slightly up from 1.70 marks Wednesday. It was fetching 157.40 Japanese yen, well down from 159 on Wednesday, on dollar unloading in Tokyo and New York.

Participants weren't expecting the G-7 meeting to produce any major monetary policy shifts or statements, except some final declaration in favor of yen stability, to be followed by coordinated intervention.

But Jaques said he suspected the central banks might want to lull the market into a false sense of security and let it run the dollar up next week - then pounce with heavy dollar-selling to drive it down.

''Sentiment is that central banks are encouraging the market to get long (buy up dollars) by not giving any signals at all at the moment,'' Jaques said.

Other dollar rates: 1.5005 Swiss francs, off from 1.5055; 5.7185 French francs, up from 5.7110; and 1,250.25 Italian lire, up from 1,249.25.

The British pound was at $1.6415, up from $1.6400.

In Europe the dollar traded mixed in directionless dealings ahead of the G-7 meeting. It rose in Frankfurt to close at 1.6995 deutsche marks against 1.6958 Wednesday but fell in Zurich, to 1.5035 Swiss francs against 1.5050.

In London, the pound closed higher at $1.6420 compared to $1.6415, gaining for the third straight day on recovering confidence.

The dollar closed higher in Paris, Mhlmn and Brussels at 5.7140 French francs against 5.7070, 1,251.30 Italian lire against 1,248.60, and 35.1750 Belgian francs against 35.1150.

In Tokyo, the dollar slid against the yen as institutional investors sold the U.S. currency to square books ahead of the weekend G-7 meeting. The dollar closed at 157.90 yen, off 1 yen from Wednesday's close of 158.90.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $375 an ounce, off from $377.25 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $374.80 an ounce, down from $377.10. In Zurich, gold moved up to $378.50 an ounce from $374.50. London gold also rose, to $377.25 an ounce from $374.50.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.155 an ounce, off from $5.17. The Comex closed spot silver at $5.141 an ounce, down from $5.16. Zurich silver moved up to $5.20 an ounce from $5. London silver rose to $5.20 an ounce from $5.03.

NEW YORK (APRIL 5) UPI - The narrow definition of the nation's basic money supply known as M1 rose $2.3 billion in the latest reporting week, while the broader aggregates M2 and M3 also grew, the Federal Reserve Board said Thursday.

M2 gained $5.1 billion and M3 rose $3.2 billion.

M1, which is made up of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money that is available for immediate spending - rose to a seasonally adjusted average of $804.8 billion in the week ended March 26 from a revised $802.5 billion the week before.

For the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $799.8 billion, a 5.0 percent rate of increase from the previous 13 weeks, the Fed reported.

The broader measure of money, M2, averaged an estimated $3,273.4 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $3,268.3 billion. M2 includes M1, plus passbook savings, small time deposits including money market deposit accounts, consumer money market mutual funds and certain other short-term assets.

M3, which includes M2 plus large time deposits, repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts, and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,070.3 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $4,067.1 billion, the Fed said.

CHICAGO (APRIL 5) UPI - UAL Corp. directors considered a beefed-up, $4.6 billion buyout offer from United Airlines employees Thursday at a special board meeting - their third such session in a week.

A source familiar with the negotiations said the meeting was prompted by an employee offer to replace non-voting common stock included in their offer with a security tied to proceeds from the sale of UAL's stake in the Covia computer reservations system.

At least three of UAL's 15 directors were said to be strongly in favor of the plan, but UAL Chairman Stephen Wolf was leading the opposition and had solid support from a small group of directors, according to the source.

Wolf, who was a participant in last fall's failed, $6.75 billion bid, was denied a role in the new buyout effort, and the United employee unions have indicated he will be fired if their takeover succeeds.

Most directors, however, went into the meeting uncommitted, the source said. The meeting began around midafternoon and continued past 4 p.m. CDT.

UAL spokesmen would not comment, refusing even to confirm that a board meeting was scheduled.

All three unions and Condor Partners - UAL's biggest stockholder, with 11.8 percent of the company's outstanding common stock - joined forces last month behind the employee bid.

The original proposal offered UAL shareholders $150 a share in cash, $25 a share in 10-year senior subordinated notes bearing 15 percent interest, and non-voting common stock constituting 25 percent of the new company's total common equity. The remaining 75 percent would have been held by an Employee Stock Ownership Plan.

Under the new plan, the ESOP would hold 100 percent of UAL, while shareholders would receive $150 in cash, the same $25 in senior subordinated 10-year notes and a proportional stake in the proceeds from the sale of the Covia system in exchange for each share of stock.

Analysts estimated the deal to be worth as much as $210 a share, or $4.6 billion. UAL closed at $165.50 - off $1 - in trading Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange.

While the employee group and Condor refused to estimate the value of the initial offer, Robert Decker, airline industry analyst for the Chicago-based investment-rating firm Duff & Phelps, estimated the combination of cash, debt and equity to be worth about $230 a share, or $5.2 billion.

Other analysts, however, gave little or no value to the non-voting equity portion of the deal and assessed the value at about $185 a share, or around $4.2 billion.

UAL directors reluctantly agreed March 22 to begin negotiations with United's three employee unions - the Association of Flight Attendants, the Air Line Pilots Association and the International Association of Machinists - on the buyout proposal.

The board said at the time the bid was inadequate. Directors have since pressed the employee group to put more cash into the deal - at least $200 a share, according to one investment banker.

Directors, however, are under some pressure to strike a deal.

Condor has threatened a proxy battle to unseat UAL directors at the company's April 26 annual meeting and pave the way for employee acquisition of the company.

Condor agreed to put off launching the proxy contest for a reasonable period while negotiations between the employees continued but has indicated it would proceed with the battle if progress proved unsatisfactory.

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 6) UPI - Actress Michele Scarabelli wants her career to move beyond TV, and she isn't too concerned about being typecast. The Montreal native's long blonde hair and shell-like ears are usually covered by a latex helmet that distorts her natural beauty to fit someone's notion of an extraterrestrial immigrant on TV's "Alien Nation."

It takes two hours each morning for makeup artists at 20th Century Fox to apply the mottled, melon-shaped noggin. Scarabelli's thick mane is pulled back and pinned flat to accommodate the prosthesis, which is glued down over her ears and across her forehead, slightly changing the shape of her eyes.

As a "Newcomer," she also has two hearts, but the production company does not implant an extra one in her every morning. And unless the script calls for a backless wardrobe, it is usually unnecessary for body makeup specialists to apply spots all the way down her spine.

"Maybe the strangest characteristic of the Newcomers in 'Alien Nation' is that the female requires the services of two males to become impregnated," she said. "It's sort of a religious rite and the husband incubates the pod that delivers the baby. It sounds like a pretty good arrangement to me."

Scarabelli finds it somewhat ironic that she has worked hard to establish herself in Hollywood only to go unrecognized in her first major starring role.

"I really think I play an attractive alien," she said. "But it's not me. I don't see myself on screen and ask, 'Oh my God, what am I doing to my career?' Not at this point."

Before accepting her role in the Fox Network series, Scarabelli appeared in the cable movie "Age-Old Friends" and in small roles in six or seven movies, including "Hotel New Hampshire" and "Cover Girl." She probably is best known for her role as a knife-wielding psychopath in a brief stint with the "Dallas" TV series.

"I didn't hesitate when the opportunity came to play an alien," she said. "There was an initial concern when I saw myself in makeup. In this town where there is such a premium on beauty - maybe the only thing that matters - it gave me a moment's pause.

"I had never seen the movie version of 'Alien Nation,' so I had no idea how I'd look. I was already committed to making the pilot when I finally saw the movie.

"Less important than my appearance is that Susan's a character of substance, which gave me an opportunity to act. I wasn't thinking about what it would do to my career."

The greatest challenge for Scarabelli, of course, is behaving like an alien who finds herself living on Earth. Inasmuch as there are no visitors from other galaxies hanging around Hollywood and Vine - that she knows of anyhow - Scarabelli wings it.

"Wearing the headpiece puts me completely into the character," she said. "When I come out of makeup I'm no longer conscious of how I look to other people. It is a very freeing experience.

"I feel very much a wife, mother, career woman, and Newcomer. The makeup converts me into Susan Francisco. It's as if my face and head determine who I am. Maybe it's that way with everyone.

"When we did the pilot I was concerned I wasn't being alien or different enough, but who knows what an alien is supposed to be? Who can question it?

"Actually, the series is involved with showing similarities between human beings and creatures from elsewhere in the universe - our feelings, our souls and values.

"Next season we'll deal with the possibility of aliens interbreeding with humans. I don't know how far they will go with that, but the idea is fascinating."

Scarabelli isn't concerned that she will become too closely associated with the role of Susan because she seldom is identified with the character off screen.

"Once in awhile someone will recognize me," she said. "But when it's time to move on, I don't think audiences will think of me as the actress who played an alien."

PROVIDENCE, RI (APRIL 5) UPI - A jury Thursday convicted a paroled Massachusetts rapist of fatally stabbing two children with a screwdriver and recommended that he be sentenced to life imprisonment without parole.

A 12-person Superior Court jury deliberated about six hours over two days before finding Alvin M. Smith, 28, guilty of first-degree murder in the September 1988 slayings of Pershi Pena, 8, and his sister Kelly Ann, 4.

After convicting Smith, the jury took less than 15 minutes to conclude the crimes were gruesome enough to warrant sentencing him to life in prison without chance of parole.

If Judge Americo Campanella goes along with the recommendation, Smith will become only the fifth person to receive a life-without-parole sentence since Rhode Island's heinous crime law took effect in 1984.

Smith, who was a handyman in the apartment house where the Pena children lived with their mother, Angela Urena, showed no emotion when the jury announced the verdict.

As the judge instructed jurors on the life-without-parole law, Smith bowed his head and rubbed his eyes.

Prosecutors said Smith broke into the Urena apartment Sept. 3, 1988, and attacked Urena. The woman ran nude from the apartment to a neighbor.

Authorities found the children dead in the apartment. The boy was stabbed 17 times, his sister 20 times. The state proved that Smith, along with stabbing the youngsters repeatedly, stomped them so hard he left the imprint of his size 12 Pony ''Warrior'' sneakers on their bodies.

Police initially charged Urena with the slayings because she admitted to the crimes when she ran from her home. But they later found out the mother suffered from paranoid schizophrenia, and her falsely incriminating statements stemmed from her illness, Assistant Attorney General Gerard B. Sullivan said.

In 1982, Smith was sentenced in Massachusetts to 20 years in prison for rape. He was paroled in 1986 and allowed to live in Providence under an interstate agreement.

Campanella continued the case to April 17, when a sentencing date could be set.

(APRIL 5) UPI - Defense Secretary Cheney is recommending that Congress change the way it acts on defense budgets. Cheney sent a package of proposed legislative reforms to Capitol Hill today designed to change the way the Pentagon buys major weapons systems, sells military property and manages personnel. He proposes that the government shift to a two-year budget cycle for defense spending and end yearly reviews of all weapons procurement programs.

Fears of spreading unrest in Nepal sparked a run on banks in the capital of Katmandu today. That, as thousands of civil servants staged two-hour strikes at seven government ministries and 14 state-run corporations, including Royal Nepal Airlines. The king of Nepal, one of the world's last absolute monarchs, held talks on the pro-democracy crisis with former prime ministers and parliament leaders. Street clashes have killed 23 demonstrators in Nepal since mid-February.

MOSCOW (APRIL 5) UPI - Lithuania's parliament, overlooking a Soviet army raid on the local prosecutor's office, acknowledged for the first time Thursday that Soviet constitutional requirements should be considered in any independence talks with Moscow.

The concession was contained in a conciliatory statement, adopted nearly unanimously late Thursday, responding to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand that the legislature annul its March 11 declaration of independence.

Deputies voted hours after Soviet troops armed with automatic weapons took over the Lithuanian prosecutor's office, according to an urgent dispatch by the Lithuanian government.

''The Supreme Council of Lithuania is ready through dialogue to discuss the spirit and the letter of the acts and resolutions adopted by (it), from the point of view of international law and the constitution of the U.S.S.R.,'' the parliament statement said.

Even before its independence declaration, the Baltic republic had steadfastly maintained that Soviet laws were not valid in Lithuania because it was forcefully annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940.

Parliament spokesman Edward Tuneskis said the lawmakers approved the more conciliatory of two draft statements after a long and at times heated debate.

Though the parliament's statement, approved by a 82-0 vote with seven abstentions, failed to meet Gorbachev's demand to rescind the independence declaration, it was the first of many communiques sent to Moscow in recent weeks that did not insist on the declaration was irreversible.

The statement, dictated by phone from Vilnius, did not even mention the independence declaration, saying only that ''Lithuania is just realizing its ancient right.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - Jurors deliberated for a fourth day without reaching a verdict Thursday on five Iran-Contra felony charges against former national security adviser John Poindexter.

The jury began deliberating shortly after 10 a.m. EDT and quit for the day at about 5 p.m. EDT. Members of the panel are accompanied by federal marshals, who supervise their nights at an undisclosed hotel.

The jury asked for a dictionary Thursday afternoon and the judge held a brief hearing on the request, which was conveyed in a note. In a written reply the judge said he could not define legal terms beyond the scope of his instructions, but he would send in the definition of any ''common usage term.''

The jury sent back a new note that read ''Thank you. The definition we required before is no longer needed.'' The courtroom erupted with laughter.

The eight women and four men have been sequestered since Tuesday after two of them were contacted by reporters Monday night. No substantive conversation occurred because the jurors hung up their telephones, preventing a mistrial.

Poindexter, 53, the last of the original Iran-Contra defendants, is the highest Reagan administration official to stand trial in the Iran-Contra scandal.

The retired Navy rear admiral is accused of five felonies involving obstruction of Congress, conspiracy and the destruction of official government documents.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene late Wednesday rejected a defense motion asking that jurors be given an additional instruction about more than 5,000 White House computer messages that were deleted from Poindexter's files as the Iran-Contra scandal erupted in late November 1986.

Greene said he rejected the jurors' request for copies of the messages because most of the White House communications had not been entered into evidence.

The messages, which were recreated from backup tapes at the White House, form part of the Iran-Contra special prosecutor's case against Poindexter.

Poindexter's lawyers had asked the judge to tell the jury that the messages were not introduced into evidence because of national security concerns, but that the panel may consider the White House notes that did become evidence.

Greene denied the defense request late Wednesday.

His opinion, released Thursday, said: ''The court's response to a straightforward jury inquiry was equally straightforward: the PROF notes were not in evidence.''

Further explanations, Greene ruled, ''would more likely confuse the jury than enlighten it.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 5) UPI - The Senate voted Thursday to authorize $770 million in economic aid for Panama and Nicaragua but put off action on providing the money President Bush requested for the two Central American nations.

The Senate bill, approved by voice vote, authorized $470 million for Panama, $30 million less than asked by the administration, and the full $300 million for Nicaragua.

But the Senate failed to meet Bush's request for the actual money by Thursday. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said he did not want to act on an appropriation bill - allocating money from the Treasury - until the administration submits a long-range foreign aid plan.

The administration's request also is threatened by demands among some of the Democrats who consider the amounts for Panama and Nicaragua excessive. Further, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the foreign aid appropriation subcommittee, wants some of the money shifted to Eastern Europe.

The House approved the money bill earlier this week, providing $420 million for Panama and $300 million for Nicaragua as part of an omnibus $2.4 billion emergency supplemental appropriation bill. Attempts to reduce or eliminate money were rejected by the House.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said, ''Freedom for Panama and Nicaragua comes with a price, part of which we have to pay. We are in a great part responsible for the destruction of their economices.''

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said, ''The urgency of the situation in Panama and Nicaragua cannot be understated,'' adding that the United States must prove to the two nations ''our commitment both in war and in peace'' and let them know ''we will not neglect'' their economic problems.

The Senate also included two other major items, both requested by the administration, authorizing $70 million to help refugees, mostly from the Soviet Union and Eastern bloc countries, and $30 million for sub-Sahara countries in Africa.

The bill also provides $400 million in loan guarantees to erect housing for refugees in Israel with no proviso that the housing cannot be built in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

The Senate earmarked for Panama $170 million for the private sector to restore business and recoup inventories looted in the December U.S. invasion, up to $125 million to revitalize public investment, up to $130 million to help Panama pay back debts to international lending institutions, and up to $45 million for strengthening the government structure such as administration, justice and police.

For Nicaragua, the Senate earmarked up to $128 million to restore the economy, up to $50 million to pay past debts to international financial institutions, up to $75 million to assist in long-term growth and development, up to $47 million to demobilize the Contra rebels and help integrate them and refugees back into the country's normal life.

The bill does not require demobilization of armed Sandinistas not loyal to the new U.S.-backed Chamorro government who might seek revenge against Contra rebels, but allows the Contras to keep their weapons for defense against possible reprisals.

DEARBORN, Mich. (APRIL 6) UPI - The nation's Big Three automakers and 14 oil companies Thursday officially began a massive joint research effort to evaluate a wide range of fuels for use in both current and future vehicles.

During a ceremony at Ford Motor Co.'s testing labs in Dearborn, Mich., representatives from automakers and oil companies said data should start becoming available as early as this summer to determine what benefits, if any, such fuels have to air quality.

The Auto/Oil Air Quality Improvement Research Program is virtually the first of its kind between General Motors Corp., Chrysler Corp. and Ford as allowed under pre-competitive guidelines of antitrust law.

It also involves major oil companies, among them Exxon Corp., Shell Oil Co., Atlantic Richfield Co., Chevron Corp., Sun Co., Texaco Inc. and BP America Inc.

The program, whose results will be made available to all interested parties, also is viewed as a signal from the auto and oil industries to clean air legislators in Washington that much has yet to be learned about alternative fuels before any mass manufacturing commitments can be made.

''We want to be ready with scientific data on which the country can base its air quality strategy,'' said Helen O. Petrauskas, Ford's vice president of Environmental and Safety Engineering.

''There is currently no data about these fuels that any sensible rulemaking can be based on,'' said Joe Colucci, head of GM's Fuel and Lubricants division. ''Such rules have to be based on data, not perception.''

The marketing of such cars also is a major concern as automakers press the government for some sort of consumer incentives to promote their sale if they are forced to build them in mass numbers.

''People are traditionally afraid of the unknown,'' said Ford spokeswoman Joy Stinson.

Although a methanol/gasoline mix seems to be among the front-runners in most alternative fuel programs, a wide array of gasoline formulations will be examined, said Donald Buist, director of Ford's Automotive Emissions and Fuel Economy Office.

That includes reformulated gasoline, which appears to be less polluting but also less efficient on a miles-per-gallon basis and potentially more expensive than the current unleaded gasoline, he said.

Phase One of the program, financed at $15 million, will try to identify optimal combinations of fuels and vehicle equipment over the next year, with more than 2,300 tests to evaluate 23 fuel formulations in both current and older vehicles at Ford and GM facilities.

Results will be compared with those obtained from testing various blends of methanol and gasoline now being used in alternative fuel vehicles.

Phase Two will narrow the fuel selections and concentrate on emission control systems under a program that could last several years.

The joint collaboration began about six months ago, GM's Colucci said, with engineers working nearly around the clock to build suitable testing facilities.

When asked if the joint program may be too late in yielding results to be used in formulating clean air legislation, both Colucci and Buist acknowledged that efforts should have begun earlier if they had the foresight.

''We will now have to scramble to pull it off,'' Buist said.

President Bush Wednesday gave qualified praise to the Senate's clean air bill, calling it a ''major step forward.''

But while administration officials promised there would be efforts in the House to water down some sections, White House officials declined to say whether Bush might seek to change highly controversial provisions concerning automobile tailpipe emissions that cause ozone smog.

AUGUSTA, GA (APRIL 5) UPI - The new guys on the block shoved all the big names off the marquee at the Masters Thursday.

The old guys hastened to point out, however, that one day does not a tournament make.

With 21 rookies in the Masters field this year, it figured some of them would play fairly well. But nobody expected this.

Mike Donald, playing in his first Masters after spending 11 years on the PGA Tour, equaled the opening round record with an 8-under 64. John Huston who tried and failed four times to earn his playing rights and who made the Masters field only last month with a win in the Honda Classic, shot a 66.

Bill Britton, yet another of the first timers, eagled the par-4 14th hole en route to a 68 - one shot behind the only veteran among the front runners, 14-year pro Peter Jacobsen. And Jacobsen has never claimed a major title.

That group left the game's big names gasping to stay in the fight for the year's first major championship.

''But those few scores don't tell the story of what the day was,'' said Jack Nicklaus, winner of his first senior's event last week and still very much in the hunt following an even-par 72 Thursday. ''If those guys keep getting those scores, no one will catch them. But that's not the history of this tournament.''

Even Donald, who seemed shocked by ''the round of my life,'' admitted things might change. Nevertheless, he was extraordinarly proud of his achievement.

''We've still got a lot more golf to play this week,'' said Donald, a 34-year-old journeyman who has won only a single tournament in 11 years of trying. ''But no matter what happens I believe for a little while people will remember Mike Donald at the Masters.''

Donald, Huston, Jacobsen and Britton were the only players who could break 70.

''A number of first-year guys do seem to play well here,'' said former champion Larry Mize, one of seven players tied for fourth at 2-under 70.

''But they don't win.''

Joining Mize at 70 were fellow former champions George Archer, Raymond Floyd and Bernhard Langer along with Bill Glasson, Jumbo Ozaki and two-time defending U.S. Open champ Curtis Strange.

The group at 71 included defending champion Nick Faldo and the man he beat in sudden death last year, Scott Hoch. Also at that score were Tom Purtzer Andy North, Payne Stewart, Mike Hulbert, Donnie Hammond and U.S. Amateur champion Chris Patton.

Nicklaus was joined at 72 by Bob Tway, Chip Beck, Ian Woosnam, Jose-Maria Olazabal and Ben Crenshaw.

Gary Player shot a 73, beating the likes of Seve Ballesteros and Mark Calcavecchia (both at 74), Tom Kite (75), Arnold Palmer (whose 76 was his best opening round at the Masters in seven years), Tom Watson (77) and Lee Trevino (whose 78 will likely be the next-to-last round he ever plays at the Masters).

Also shooting 78 was Greg Norman, the pre-tournament favorite whose tradition of slow starts in the major events was maintained. His start was so slow, in fact, that he is danger of missing Friday's 36-hole cut.

The opening round of the tournament began in clear, mild conditions. But the late starters were forced to deal with blustery winds that in Nicklaus' estimation made the course four strokes tougher than it was in the morning.

The scores did show that those with late tee times suffered - all except Donald's.

''All I can say is that it is the round of my life,'' Donald said. ''It is beyond my dreams to think about coming here for so long a time and then play like this. I played a lot of rounds of golf as a kid thinking I was at Augusta and I never played as good as this.''

Lloyd Mangrum shot a 64 to lead the Masters 50 years ago and that mark had stood unequaled until Thursday. Donald, with only one victory to his credit, narrowly missed tying Nick Price's all-time, single-round record of 63.

Donald, who qualified for the Masters by finishing among the tour's top 30 money winners in 1989, birdied six holes in a seven-hole stretch beginning at the par-3 fourth. Among those birdies was a 40-foot chip-in at the par-4 ninth. His final birdie came at the par-5 15th where he laid up short of the pond in front of the green and then hit a wedge to within four feet.

A 30-foot birdie attempt at the par-3 16th came up just short and he almost holed a shot from just off the 18th green that would have tied Price's record. In addition, Donald came close to a hole-in-one at the par-3 12th, eventually tapping in from a foot away for birdie.

Huston, 28, needed five tries to qualify for the PGA Tour and has one victory in three years on the circuit.

His round contained only one errant shot - a wild drive into the trees alongside the 18th fairway. From there, however, Huston took advantage of an opening in the pines to rocket a 6-iron to within 15 feet and then made the putt for his sixth birdie.

''To me, I'd rather win this tournament than the U.S. Open,'' said Huston, who earned his tour playing privileges on his fifth try in 1987. ''This is the No. 1 tournament. I was certainly excited when I got here Sunday, but I tried not to get too excited.

''I played extremely well all day and felt like I had control of myself.''

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) UPI - Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. executives have been holding preliminary talks with investors in Japan about raising funds to back movie production, a spokesman said Thursday.

''We're just trying to be opportunistic,'' said Fox spokesman Dennis Petroskey. ''All of this is at a very preliminary stage.''

Petroskey said that Chase Carey, Fox executive vice president, recently spent a week in Japan talking to companies about investing in films.

The Japanese began making major moves in Hollywood last August, after years of exploration, with JVC Corp.investing $100 million in Largo Productions, a company formed by producer Larry Gordon.

Sony Corp. then stunned the movie industry in September with the $3.4 billion acquisition of Columbia Pictures Entertainment. And late last year Morgan Creek Productions formed a film-financing joint venture with the Nomura Babcock & Brown unit of Nomura Securities Co. of Tokyo.

Analysts say the interest by Japanese investors is logical since Japan is the largest foreign market for U.S. films and videocassette sales there have been growing quickly.

OTTAWA (APRIL 5) UPI - West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said Thursday a united Germany can contribute to European stability only if it is part of the Western military alliance.

Genscher, in Ottawa for talks with Foreign Minister Joe Clark, said he was confident that Germany's continued membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would gain support.

The position is opposed by the Soviet Union but has been endorsed by several members of the Warsaw Pact, including Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

''A neutralized Germany would not make a contribution to the stability of Europe, but rather would increase instability and unpredictability in Europe,'' Genscher said.

Genscher also outlined his vision for an expanded role of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which includes nations from NATO and the Warsaw Pact and several non-aligned countries, and the establishment of new institutions under the organization's framework.

Specifically, Genscher wants the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe expanded to a ''crisis management center'' that would ''avoid and settle conflicts by political means.'' He also suggested that various agencies dealing with the environment, European telecommunications and transport be established under the framework of the conference.

Genscher said there is a common view among NATO and Warsaw Pact countries - including the Soviet Union and that United States - that the European conference must provide stability amid the revolutionary changes sweeping Eastern Europe.

Genscher also repeated suggestions made Wednesday in meetings with President Bush for a ''trans-Atlantic declaration'' between an integrated Europe and North America outlining the economic, ecologicial, political and technological challnges to be faced in the next decade.

Genscher said the question of Poland's border with a reunified Germany also was discussed with Canadian officials.

''The existing border between Poland and Germany is of a final nature,'' Genscher said, adding that the two neighbors will resolve the issue through a bilateral treaty.

SEATTLE (APRIL 6) UPI - The Washington State Investment Board voted Thursday to use its Exxon Corp. stock in an effort to pressure the giant oil company into improving environmental policies in the wake of the Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska last year.

The action followed similar moves Wednesday by public pension fund managers from New York City, California and Massachusetts, who met with top Exxon officers seeking a new commitment to environmental protdcxion from the accident-plagued company.

Those pension leaders, who control more than 21 million shares of Exxon stock, reported little success following their discussion with Chairman Lawrence Rawl, President Lee Raymond and Vice President for Environment and Safety Edwin Hess.

The Washington State Investment Board said it would send a letter asking

Exxon to hire an ''independent environmental auditor'' to investigate the company's facilities, management and plans for handling oil spills.

Exxon issued a statement following Wednesday's meeting stating that it took place but did not offer further comment. A company spokesman was not available to comment on Washington's proposal.

The Washington investment board holds more than 1 million shares of Exxon stock but only manages 164,600 shares - a tiny fraction of Exxon's 1.25 billion outstanding shares. The bulk of Washington's shares are contained in separately managed mutual funds.

State Treasurer Dan Grimm acknowledged that Washington's weight as a voting shareholder in Exxon was miniscule but said the point was to judge the company's willingness to overhaul its environmental policies in the wake of the March 1989 oil spill.

The spill - the worst in U.S. history - dumped about 11 million gallons of heavy crude oil into pristine Alaskan waters. Exxon already has spent more than $2 billion to clean up the spill, but much of the oil remains.

Exxon also had a major oil spill in January in the Arthur Kill waterway between New Jersey and Staten Island, N.Y. That and subsequent spills in the area have led Exxon to suspend all activity in New York Harbor.

Grimm said there are several possibilities for action if Exxon ignores or rejects the suggestion in the investment board's letter.

''The first is to develop a consortium with other shareholders, especially with the trustees of major institutions,'' Grimm said. ''Perhaps we can work together to make changes in the (Exxon) board so that management changes its attitude.

''The second course of action is to make sure that everyone, especially people in Congress and in state legislatures, are aware of Exxon's response,'' he said.

''Our purpose is to enter into this in a cooperative spirit. We don't just want a bunch of environmentalists investigating it. This is a reasonable request, but if they say the status quo is fine, that will not be sufficient,'' he said.

''A major recourse is to make sure (Exxon's response) is used as a basis of legislative proposals that will mandate changes.''

MIAMI BEACH, FL. (APRIL 5) UPI - Some hotels and restaurants have discriminated in hiring practices, offering blacks menial jobs while offering similarly qualified whites higher-paying positions, the NAACP said Thursday.

The civil rights group plans to file discrimination complaints with federal and county officials Friday against several Miami Beach hotels and restaurants, said Johnnie R. McMillian, president of the Miami-Dade County NAACP branch.

The discriminatory practices were found during a six-month test using white and black University of Miami students as job applicants, McMillian said. Blacks and whites with similar qualifications applied at the same establishments to provide test cases.

The testing technique is similar to one used for years to substantiate complaints about housing discrimation, said David Honig, a civil rights lawyer who serves as general counsel for the NAACP in Miami. But the procedure has not been used to detect employment discrimination in the United States in 21 years, he said.

In the test, the black person applies for the job first, and the white person goes to the same establishment seeking employment within an hour or two to see if the two are given consistent information, Honig said.

The testers have similar qualifications, dress and age and are trained to have the same demeanor.

''The only difference is race, so if the black does not get the same treatment as the white, it's almost certainly attributable to the fact the employer discriminated,'' Honig said.

Honig and McMillian declined to discuss the specifics or name the establishments until after the complaints are filed with the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Dade County Human Rights Appeals Board.

McMillian, an admistrator for Dade County schools, said the results of the tests were ''startling.''

''What happened was when they applied for jobs, blacks were offered jobs as dishwashers, maids and other menial jobs, and the whites were offered jobs as desk managers, maitre d's and desk clerks,'' McMillian said. ''In some places, blacks were not even hired.''

If there are no results from the complaints, McMillian said, the NAACP may filed lawsuits against the establishments. ''We have to take it one step at a time,'' she said.

The NAACP hopes the complaints will call attention to the beach, which has been the site of numerous conventions and meetings of black organizations.

''The country ought to be aware that those establishments are not being supportive of this entire community,'' McMillian said. ''We've got to start sharing the information, if in fact they are not going to be sensitive to our needs.''

The group does not plan to call for a boycott of Miami Beach hotels and restaurants.

''What we will do is use the court system to ensure that some relief is given,'' McMillian said. ''But at all times, we do say that blacks ought to spend their money only where people do respect them and to stay away from all places that do not hire us.''

(APRIL 5) UPI - Police in Beijing, China, today sealed off Tiananmen Square to prevent any pro-democracy demonstrations during a festival honoring the dead.

Authorities are worried that such anniversaries will lead to a resurrection of anti-government dissent. But there was little sign of unrest.

Numerous plainclothes and uniformed police patrolled neighborhoods, many carrying handguns or electric riot-control prods.

Several key anniversaries of last year's protests fall from now through June, when Chinese troops overran and killed hundreds of unarmed demonstrators.

Overseas dissident groups distributed leaflets calling for muted protests to mourn the victims today, on the Qing Ming festival of the dead.

Chinese traditionally wear white flowers or black armbands, and burn paper money and sweep graves as signs of mourning. But Beijing authorities warned that such displays are forbidden.

One Beijing teacher said the practice is primarily a rural custom.

In Hong Kong, about 10-thousand people marched to commemorate the students killed last year.

(APRIL 5) UPI - The Lithuanian government says Soviet soldiers wearing police uniforms and armed with automatic weapons today raided and took over the Lithuanian prosecutor's office in Vilnius.

In an urgent statement, the government said 50 Soviets dressed as police officers broke into the office, carrying boxes of ammunition.

The reported raid escalated tension two days after talks had raised hopes that the independence crisis might be easing.

With virtually all foreign correspondents banned from Lithuania by Moscow, the report could NOT be confirmed.

The reported raid took place as the Lithuanian parliament met to finalize a response to Soviet President Gorbachev's demand to rescind last month's declaration of independence or face ''grave consequences.''

The head of the Lithuanian mission in Moscow said before the claimed military action that his government may accept a republic-wide referendum on secession.

But a Soviet Politburo member repeated that negotiations canNOT begin unless Vilnius annuls its independence declaration.

An agreement to improve the trade situation between the United States and Japan was announced today in Washington, but some members of Congress are skeptical.

The agreement is the result of three days of trade talks between Japanese and U-S negotiators. Conference sources say it will allow more American companies to enter Japanese retail markets.

The pact will remove some of the ''structural impediments'' in Japan's laws and society that effectively bar foreign competition. Japan committed itself to revise the laws within one year, and to totally abolish them in three years.

On Capitol Hill, Texas Senator Lloyd Bentsen says he's skeptical about the agreement. Bentsen says he's seen too many earlier agreements ''in which the results didn't match the rhetoric.''

The Bush administration has been working against the clock to avoid tough trade sanctions against Japan, which annually sells 49-BILLION dollars more goods in the United States than Americans sell in Japan.

Engineers this morning completed critical testing of the Hubble Space Telescope that will be put into orbit by the Discovery crew. The testing had been delayed because a ruptured air conditioner cooling water pipe caused an electrical outage on Monday.

The testing of the telescope's sensitive instruments and electronic gear resumed late Tuesday, and by today NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone was able to say the situation is a ''go'' for the April 10th launch. Forecasters predict an 80 percent chance of favorable weather.

Discovery was initially scheduled for launch on April 12th, but the date was moved up last weekend because work was going ahead of schedule.

The one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope is a highly sensitive instrument that's expected to give astronomers a much clearer view of the heavens.

Police in Colombia today de-fused a truck loaded with 800 pounds of dynamite in an exclusive neighborhood of Bogota.

The incident comes one day after the Medellin drug cartel threatened such a bombing to retaliate for police actions against drug dealers.

Neighbors warned police that the truck had been abandoned near the home of the interior minister, who is running the country while President Vigilio Barco is in Europe.

Police also report that 20 people were killed overnight in a wave of violence in the cocaine capital of Medellin.

Two Medellin police officers were killed when gunmen in a luxury car sprayed gunfire as they sat drinking at a tavern.

Police say the director of Bogota's Modelo Prison was shot and killed by gunmen on a motorcycle as he was having a drink at an outdoor cafe, about 120 miles west of the capital.

The mayor of a town 90 miles west of Bogota also was gunned down.

(APRIL 5) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev are to meet in the United States on May 30th for the start of their second summit. But it's NOT likely a major arms control treaty will be signed. Soviet and American arms control experts say seven weeks probably isn't enough time to get a treaty ready. In Moscow, a Foreign Ministry official said the five-day summit will cover a wide range of issues, possibly including German unification and the future of Europe.

South Africa's President Frederik de Klerk met with African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela today in Cape Town, but four other black leaders of self-governing territories failed to attend. (APRIL 5) UPI - Bush and Gorbachev set May 30th to begin their second summit... Lithuania eases up on its drive for independence... those top stories and more from the round-the-clock wires of United Press International.

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev have set a date for their next meeting, but aside from that the next superpower summit remains up in the air.

U-S and Soviet officials confirmed today the two leaders will meet for five days beginning May 30th. Where they'll meet is NOT yet certain, although Washington, D-C, continues to be the expected site.

Secretary of State Baker and his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, are meeting in Washington through tomorrow, discussing a place and agenda for the summit in addition to other issues. There was NO news on their meetings today, except for President Bush's comment that their talks- in his words- ''are going reasonably well.''

The summit agenda is NOT likely to include any major treaty signings on arms control. U-S and Soviet diplomats say it's unlikely that ongoing negotiations could be complete by the end of next month.

Moscow got tough today, and Lithuania responded- politely.

The Lithuanian Parliament approved a conciliatory statement on the issue of secession today. The government of the republic affirmed that Soviet constitutional requirements should be met in any move toward independence.

The legislative action came only hours after Soviet troops armed with automatic weapons took over the Lithuanian prosecutor's office.

The statement passed almost unanimously by the parliament did NOT annul its previous declaration of independence. But it agreed to establish ''a dialogue'' with Moscow on the ramifications of that declaration. It also stated that any moves toward independence would have to meet the requirements- quoting here- ''of international law and the constitution of the U-S-S-R.''

Lithuania was annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940 as part of the non-aggression pact with Nazi Germany. The other Baltic republics seized by the Soviets at that time have also made recent moves toward independence- in the face of increasingly harsh Soviet threats.

But democracy again overflowed into the streets as hundreds of thousands of East Germans staged protests against one of the first ramifications of the move toward a unified Germany- a unified currency.

The East German Parliament was to discuss a proposal by West Germany's central bank establishing an exchange rate of two East German marks for one Deutsche mark.

That did NOT go over well with the East German people. One Berlin protester asked... ''Have we freed ourselves from the old communists just to become a plaything for the West German central bank?''

And in another East German city, protesters chanted... ''We are NO half Germans.''

The parliament opened discussion of the currency plan with almost all East German political parties opposed to it.

A B-52 bomber dropped its payload over the Pacific Ocean near California today, but the rocket didn't plunge to earth- it took off into space.

The Pegasus rocket carried a small Navy satellite... the first object ever to be put into orbit after being launched from a plane.

Vice President Quayle... chairman of the National Space Council... said in a telegram that the launch- quote- ''marks an important achievement for the emerging commercial launch industry.''

The Pegasus is meant to be a relatively cheap way to put a satellite into space. More conventional rockets can cost from 30-Million dollars to more than 100-Million, while the Pegasus booster is to sell for six-Million or seven-Million dollars.

By launching in flight, Pegasus could be built out of lighter materials, allowing heavier payloads.

Orbital Sciences Corporation and Hercules Aerospace Company developed the rocket.

(APRIL 5) UPI - U-S and Soviet officials today moved up their talks on reducing chemical weapons in an effort to reach an agreement in time for the Washington summit, beginning May 30th.

One American diplomat says negotiators on both sides are ''confident they can do the job.''

The new round of chemical weapons negotiations is expected to begin Tuesday, about two weeks ahead of the original plan.

President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev instructed negotiators in Geneva late last year to complete a chemical weapons treaty in time for the next summit.

Under the projected accord, the two big powers would destroy 80 percent of their chemical weapon stockpiles.

They would go down to just two percent of their arsenals if an international ban is agreed on, but eliminate them only when all other countries obeyed the ban.

Lawyers for Leona Helmsley argued today in a New York City court that state tax-evasion charges should be dismissed because the embattled real-estate magnate has been penalized enough on federal charges.

The lawyers argued that Helmsley's pending four-year prison term and heavy fines were justice enough. They suggested that Helmsley was being treated harshly because of her celebrity status and that there should NOT be- quote- ''one law for the wealthy and another for everyone else.''

Outside the courtroom, Helmsley told reporters ''enough's enough.'' But she went on to say that she was NOT going to jail because she had done nothing wrong. She said... ''My only crime is that I'm Leona Helmsley. For that I'm guilty.''

She is appealing her federal convictions.

State prosecutors argued that the case involved at least one-Million dollars in unpaid taxes, and that it deserved to be seen through.

The judge will rule on the dismissal next month.

(APRIL 5) UPI - The former sister-in-law of accused murderer John List testified today that List's wife dominated the couple's relationship.

List is charged with murdering his wife, mother, and three children in 1971. After his family's death, he disappeared for 17 years, took a new name and remarried.

In a court in Elizabeth, New Jersey, Betty Jean Syfert testified that her sister Helen List was a semi-invalid who could NOT walk and was living in unclean conditions.

She described List as a man overwhelmed by family troubles.

A Lutheran pastor told the jury he overheard Helen List taunting her husband 10 years before the killings, telling him that he was only ''half the man'' her first husband was.

List's lawyer is trying to introduce evidence that 45-year-old Helen List was dying from syphilis, but the judge won't allow it.

Public defender Elijah Miller Junior argues that List is legally innocent of the killings because he thought he was saving his family from damnation.

Where does a woman with 171-thousand dollars in parking tickets put her car? Apparently, wherever she wants.

The article places Matos at the head of the pack among the city's top 10 scofflaws who owe a total of more than one-Million dollars.

But the city Parking Violations Bureau hasn't collected one cent from Matos.

According to city records, Matos eluded authorities by registering her car under 19 different addresses and 39 different license plates.

Parking officials say intensive credit checks and efforts by collection agents have gone nowhere.

Matos reportedly has NOT had a ticket since 1988, and officials believe she may have quit while she was ahead and fled the city.

SANTA CLARA, CA (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Boeing Defense and Space Group, Huntsville Division, Friday announced a $4.7 million order for specialized software development products which will be used by the company and its subcontractors for design of real-time controls for the life-support systems for NASA's space station FREEDOM.

The order was awarded to Integrated Systems Inc. (ISI) of Santa Clara, a leading supplier of engineering productivity products for real-time control systems design and development.

Known as the Application Generator (AG), it is the Ada version of ISI's new AC-100 software development and implementation system. Ada is the computer language developed and used by the Department of Defense.

The ISI system provides a rapid prototyping capability that offers an alternative to conventional real-time application software development. The principle behind the AG is that process control engineers create control strategies and represent them in a ''graphical'' format.

Typically, software engineers would then take this information and convert it to code suitable for a control computer. Process engineers then evaluate the performance, take corrective action and improve the control strategies. The result is resubmitted to software engineers and this lengthy cycle continues until a desired system result is obtained.

The AG can simplify the procedure by allowing the process control engineers to enter their ideas directly into the computer via block diagrams, simulate performance, and obtain immediate response from the system that they may then use to modify their algorithms.

The AG automatically generates embedded Ada application code that allows immediate testing of control strategies in a computer environment similar to the space station.

The AG includes ISI's control design, simulation and code generation software and validated commercial Ada compiler hosted on a DEC workstation linked to a target controller based on Multi Bus II and Intel 80386 technology with various I/O options for connection to actual Space Station hardware.

This unique rapid prototyping capability is achieved by combining our existing software design products with all necessary hardware and run-time software,'' said Mills. The AG and AC-100 are available today from $135,000.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) plans to place a permanent space station in orbit in the mid-1990s. Boeing's role as contractor for work package 1 includes building the habitation and laboratory modules where astronauts will live and work for three- to six-month periods, or even longer, plus supply modules and connecting nodes between modules.

Boeing's space station efforts have headquarters in new company-owned facilities in Huntsville, Ala., near Marshall Space Flight Center.

Integrated Systems Inc. merges CAE and CASE capabilities by providing control system engineering development tools for complete project life cycle support. Additionally, Integrated Systems offers specialized control systems development engineering services for the robotics, automotive, aerospace and industrial automation industries.

ARLINGTON, TX (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - BizMart Inc., (NASDAQ: BZMT) one of the nation's fastest-growing office products superstore retailers, Friday announced that Harold Toppel, founder of food retailer Pueblo International Inc., has been named to BizMart's board of directors.

Toppel, of Boca Raton, Fla., replaces Pat Hopf of St. Paul Venture Capital who was one of BizMart's early venture capital investors.

''We expect that Mr. Toppel's considerable experience in building and operating a chain of superstores will be a very valuable asset as we continue to expand BizMart into a major retailing chain,'' said Ron Stegall, president and chief executive officer of BizMart.

''While we regret to see Pat Hopf leave the board, he felt that BizMart has progressed to the point that it was time to turn his attention to other ventures,'' said Stegall. ''This is the first of several changes we expect will occur as BizMart's board adds outside directors with extensive retailing experience.''

Pueblo International, a private company with annual sales exceeding $1 billion, operates 22 Xtra Super Food Centers and 28 conventional Pueblo Supermarkets in Florida, the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. A recipient of the prestigious ''Horatio Alger Award'' from the American Schools and Colleges Association, Toppel opened the first Pueblo Supermarket in San Juan in 1955.

In 1983 Pueblo opened its first Xtra Super Food Center in Hialeah near Miami and now operates 10 of the superstore format units in the Florida market.

BizMart Inc., operates a chain of high-volume office products superstores in Texas, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah. Over 7,000 brand-name, high-quality products are sold to small and large businesses at everyday low prices that are discounted 40 to 60 percent from manufacturers' suggested retail prices.

AKRON, OH (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Goodyear Friday announced a major reorganization of its North American tire operations to support the new distribution strategy communicated in February.

''Changing competitive conditions demand a more flexible and customer-responsive organization to improve profitability and maintain leadership in the North American market,'' said Eugene R. Culler, executive vice president, North American Tire Division.

The reorganization creates two new business units -- a consumer tire group and a commercial tire group -- that will be closer to customers. The new sales and marketing groups will report through two new vice presidents.

Donald E. Salyers, formerly general manager sales, is appointed vice president consumer division, with responsibility for sales and marketing of passenger tires through dealer marketing channels.

H.J. Wilson, formerly vice president Asia-Africa, is named vice president commercial division, and is given responsibility for sales and marketing tires to commercial accounts such as trucking companies and other fleets as well as truck, farm and off-road tire dealers.

In addition, R.M. ''Mel'' Morrison, formerly general manager, retail outlets, becomes a vice president with responsibility for company-owned retail operations. These company-owned operations were restructured earlier this year.

The three vice presidents will report to Louis DiPasqua, vice president tire sales and marketing.

Each of the new divisions will have 28 region managers providing sales support for the field. The region managers will report through four general managers, based in Goodyear's Akron headquarters. The general managers will be responsible for eastern and western U.S. regions for each division.

Once these management changes are in place, determinations will be made on the required structure to attain sales growth, quality, service and cost objectives, Culler said. These plans will be in place by midyear, he said.

SEATTLE (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Portland General Corp. and Weyerhaeuser Real Estate Co. have announced plans to sell Cornerstone Columbia Development Co. (CCDC), the commercial development and hotel management company they have jointly owned since 1985.

Headquartered in Seattle, Cornerstone Columbia is active throughout the Pacific Northwest where it has established a reputation for landmark mixed-use developments.

These include Waterfront Place, a seven-block redevelopment of Seattle's central waterfront district; the RiverPlace community on the Willamette River at Portland; and Tacoma Center, a multi-block mixture of office and commercial space in Tacoma.

Through its subsidiary, Cornerstone Hospitality Management, Cornerstone Columbia Development Co. operates nationally acclaimed hotels, including the Alexis group in Seattle and Portland, the Inn at the Market in Seattle and the Tacoma Sheraton in Tacoma.

The announcement to divest Cornerstone Columbia confirms the direction set by Portland General (PGC) earlier this year when it announced its intention to exit the real estate market to concentrate more fully on the energy business, according to President Richard Reiten.

Weyerhaeuser Real Estate Co. (WRECO) President Stephen Lewis said WRECO based its decision on the determination that recent changes in Cornerstone Columbia's basic direction have resulted in duplication of building and development activities with other WRECO subsidiaries in the Northwest.

The search has begun for a new owner for Cornerstone Columbia that will assure continuity for the company and its projects. Both WRECO and PGC have said they will continue to support CCDC's development activities until a new owner is found and are prepared to retain a minor interest in the company to fulfill its obligations under current partnership agreements.

Cornerstone Columbia President Bill Weisfield said Cornerstone Columbia expects to continue as a substantial participant in the Northwest real estate market with the goal of continuing its development activities in Seattle, Portland and Tacoma, and expanding its hotel group.

He said the company plans to develop projects valued at over $100 million annually, including Seaway Center, a 212 acre master planned business park in Everett, Wash. In addition, Cornerstone Columbia is managing a number of projects and properties in the greater Portland area in addition to RiverPlace.

ENGLEWOOD, CO (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of U.S. West (NYSE: USW) Friday authorized a two-for-one stock split of the company's common shares.

Shareowners of record on April 19, 1990 will receive an additional share of stock for each share they now own. The new certificates will be issued in early May.

The previously announced May 1, 1990 cash dividend of $1 per share will be paid on pre-split shares. The stock split is the second in U S West's six-year history. The company previously split its stock two-for-one in May 1986.

The U.S. West board also authorized a common stock offering of an expected 14 million post-split shares (seven million pre-split) to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in mid-April. The additional shares are expected to be offered for sale in mid-May through a syndicate of underwriters. The offering will be made only by means of a prospectus.

The proceeds from the offering will be added to the company's available funds and used over the next several years to fund investments in:

- U.S. West Communications, to speed the growth and modernization of the company's core telecommunications business;
- U.S. West Capital Corp., the company's financial services business; and
- The company's international communications activities, including cable television franchises in the United Kingdom and Hong Kong and a Personal Communications Network in the United Kingdom.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Silverstone Partners, a closely held corporation, through its shareholder and president, David A. Gaon, announced Friday to Lincoln N.C. Realty Fund Inc. that, despite the recent termination of the letter agreement between Silverstone and Lincoln N.C. Realty Fund Inc. (LNCRF) (ASE, PSE:LRF), Silverstone is still willing to proceed with an offer to acquire, on an all cash basis, up to all of the issued and outstanding shares of the common stock and warrants of LNCRF, without the recommendation of LNCRF's board of directors.

Silverstone believes that such recommendation will prove unnecessary to LNCRF's shareholders in light of the fairness of Silverstone's prior offer. The offer to purchase the outstanding shares and warrants would be conditioned upon the board of directors of LNCRF waiving the existing poison pill provisions applicable to the proposed transaction. Silverstone urges the board of directors of LNCRF to take such action prior to the further deterioration in LNCRF's financial position.

The previously announced letter agreement between Silverstone and LNCRF provided for an offer price which would have been substantially in excess of the discount at which the market values REITs in general. In particular Silverstone's offer price would be more than fair in light of LNCRF's current market price.

As contemplated in the original letter agreement, Silverstone has made substantial progress in its due diligence investigation of LNCRF and its portfolio of properties, including the assessment of the presence of potentially toxic or hazardous wastes.

Based upon the due diligence completed at the termination of the letter agreement, Silverstone was read to proceed with the proposed transaction. In addition, Gaon has confirmed that Silverstone had lined up acceptable financing for the transaction, subject to Silverstone reaching an acceptable arrangement regarding the poison pill provisions.

LNCRF tentatively has scheduled a meeting of its board of directors for Apr 19. Gaon has expressed his desire that the board consider at that time adoption of a resolution which would waive or modify the poison pill provisions and allow the shareholders of LNCRF to determine for themselves the fairness of Silverstone's proposed offer.

Silverstone Partners is a closely held corporation located in Los Angeles of which Gaon is the sole shareholder and president. It owns approximately 8.6 percent of the outstanding shares of LNCRF.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - For the first time, a major U.S. bank is offering one combined monthly statement that links a customer's primary checking account to other accounts of his or her choosing -- and waives regular monthly checking charges for customers whose combined deposits and loans meet a required minimum.

First Interstate Bank of California has announced statewide introduction of the new program, called Pacesetter: The Next Step in Banking, effective April 2.

Pacesetter is the first program to be offered by a commercial bank in California that provides a single unified statement of a customer's checking, savings, credit card, credit line, loan, certificate of deposit and IRA activity -- complete with a one-page, at-a-glance overview of a customer's various financial relationships with the bank (a).

It is the first time a commercial bank has allowed customers to choose for themselves which of their eligible bank accounts are to be reported on a single monthly statement.

It is also the first time that outstanding loan, credit line and credit card balances, in addition to checking, savings and most other deposit accounts, can be linked together to create a combined balance used to waive the regular monthly service charge on a designated checking account.

According to William E.B. Siart, First Interstate's chairman and chief executive officer, Pacesetter represents the bank's commitment to focusing on the individual customer's total relationship with First Interstate.

''In the past, banks have typically viewed customers' checking accounts, for instance, as completely distinct and unrelated to their loans or certificates of deposit,'' Siart said. ''However, customers do not view their financial relationships as distinct and unrelated.

''Our new Pacesetter program reflects that customer perspective,'' Siart explained. ''With Pacesetter, we can now report the balance and interest data on a customer's various deposit and loan accounts in one very easy-to-read, unified statement. And we can then give the customer credit for his total financial relationship with First Interstate Bank.''

Pacesetter allows a customer to link any number of eligible accounts to his or her primary checking account. Signing up for Pacesetter costs customers nothing and takes just minutes by phone or through any First Interstate branch.

First Interstate Bank of California is the principal subsidiary of First Interstate Bancorp, the nation's largest retail and business banking organization with 28 wholly owned banks in 14 states and 1,180 offices. First Interstate Bank of California serves customers statewide through 329 offices.

HOUSTON (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - On Apr. 5, the Exxon Long Beach grounded on soft mud while moving from the authorized deepwater anchorage to a berth in the Long Beach, Calif., Harbor.

There was no damage to the ship or any threat of pollution.

At the time of the grounding, the vessel was under total navigational control of a local harbor pilot and the normal complement of three berthing tugs were in attendance. Use of pilots who are familiar with the most recent navigational information is required in this area by federal law.

About 1-1/2 hours after the grounding, the vessel with additional tug assistance was refloated and returned to the anchorage to conduct an underwater survey. After diver inspection confirmed there was no damage to the vessel, the Coast Guard released the ship to resume normal operations. The vessel docked normally and began unloading cargo on Friday (April 6) morning.

The Coast Guard is conducting an investigation into the incident as it does in all groundings of U.S. ships.

Exxon is cooperating fully with the Coast Guard in this investigation.

MCLEAN, VA (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Unisys announced Thursday that its new Systems Management Group (SMG) has been awarded a $20 million contract to provide software maintenance and development support services for the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) in Portland, Ore.

''This contract is a strategic win for SMG. It establishes a Unisys SMG professional services presence in the Northwest and a relationship with the U.S. Department of Energy,'' said vice president Art Slotkin, who heads up SMG's Support Services Division.

''We are very proud to have been chosen to be a part of the BPA team, and we're looking forward to the challenges of the future and the establishment of a long-term relationship based on delivery of our commitments to quality, excellence, and productivity.''

Unisys will provide the professional services needed to expand and maintain the critical software systems that BPA uses to support the operations and management of the Northwest power grid.

Bob Adkisson, SMG Project Manager for the BPA contract, said that experience with other contracts of this type and a good knowledge of BPA's information technology and systems environment are the key factors to building a successful business relationship.

''BPA views advanced computer technology as a strategic asset that can help them build on the performance of their legislated missions and preserve and enhance BPA's valued integrity in the business and technical communities,'' said Adkisson.

BPA is known worldwide for its contribution to the Northwest region by advancing state-of-the-art, power-related modeling, power system design, and other innovations with computer technology.

Systems Management Group provides professional services, systems and network integration, and facilities management to users of large information systems in government and commercial enterprises. Headquarted in McLean, Va., SMG is part of Unisys United States Information Systems (USIS).

CAMBRIDGE, MA (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Bolt Beranek and Newman Inc. (BBN) Friday announced a strategic restructuring and cost-cutting program designed to further the company's efforts to return to profitability.

The program calls for a series of consolidation and cost-reduction moves aimed at dramatically reducing the operating losses at BBN Advanced Computers Inc.; and intensifying the effort, begun last year, to re-focus BBN Communications Corp. on its core strengths in large-scale interconnected networks, network software, and systems integration. In addition, manufacturing operations are being further downsized, and BBN's corporate structure is being streamlined.

Under the plan, BBN Advanced Computers is undergoing a major staff reduction. The downsized unit will now focus primarily on the parallel processing supercomputer market. BBN Communications' staff is being reduced by approximately 10 percent, and BBN's manufacturing operations are being substantially scaled back. BBN's current corporate subsidiary structure is being changed to a divisional organization to improve management control and to further reduce operating costs.

The restructuring will reduce the total number of employees company-wide by approximately 300. The company expects to take a substantial third quarter charge related to the restructuring and other costs.

''While user reaction to the TC2000 system marketed by BBN Advanced Computers remains quite positive, the pace of orders does not justify our continuing to incur the substantial operating losses of this subsidiary,'' said Stephen R. Levy, BBN chairman of the board and chief executive officer. ''We will focus our efforts on opportunities in the parallel supercomputing market, where we believe we can operate at substantially reduced costs.

''The recent $4.5 million order from Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory for a 126-processor TC2000 computer is a good example of this type of opportunity. We will also continue to seek a partner to help us exploit what we believe to be the potential of this technology.''

Headquartered in Cambridge, Mass., Bolt Beranek and Newman is a diversified high technology corporation. BBN develops, manufactures, sells, and supports products including private wide-area communication networks, data analysis software, and parallel processing computers; provides research and development services in the computer and physical sciences; and builds advanced simulation and sensor and surveillance systems. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1989, BBN had sales of $292 million.

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - NFC plc, a leading international transport, logistics, property and services group, Friday listed its American Depositary Receipts (ADRs) on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol ''NFC''.

The company's chairman designate, James Watson, made the first trade, with a $160,000 purchase on behalf of NFC's US employees, buying shares through the company's US Employee Stock Purchase Plan.

NFC, which employs more than 33,000 persons worldwide, over 70 percent of whom own NFC shares, said that a major motivation for listing its ADRs is to increase the convenience of share ownership for its over 3,000 existing employee shareholders in North America --in keeping with NFC's traditional commitment to employee ownership --as well as to internationalize its non-employee shareholder base.

As U.S. holders convert their ordinary shares into ADRs, the AMEX listing will enable them to monitor the share price more easily, buy and sell shares on a U.S. exchange in U.S. currency, and receive dividends in U.S. currency with the benefit of the U.S.-U.K. tax treaty, which provides for the non-deduction of part of the U.K. tax currently withheld.

The Bank of New York has been selected as the depositary for NFC's ADRs. One ADR represents one NFC ordinary share.

With annual sales of some 1.5 billion (about $2.5 billion at 1989 fiscal year average exchange rates) and a current market capitalization of over $1.3 billion, NFC is active in five business areas: transport; logistics; home delivery services; travel; and property. Its U.S. interests include: Allied Van Lines, Naperville, Illinois; Merchants Home Delivery Service, Oxnard, California; Exel Logistics-Dauphin, Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania; and Exel Logistics-DCI, Columbus, Ohio.

In addition to the ADR listing on the American Stock Exchange, NFC shares trade on London's International Stock Exchange and are quoted on the SEAQ International System. Prices may be accessed on the Reuters Equities 2000 service under the symbol NFCL.L and on Quotron under the symbol NFCU.EU.

MEMPHIS, TN (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Schering-Plough HealthCare Products will deliver improved account services to all trade channels because of a dual approach by the company's field sales organizations.

''Each of these two important but distinct sales arms will have its own national accounts, field sales and merchandising capabilities,'' said Raymond L. Modjeski, senior vice president sales.

Two management positions were created to help direct the new emphasis on service to the more than 100,000 trade outlets throughout North America which stock such company brands as ''Coppertone,'' ''Shade,'' ''Tropical Blend,'' and ''Solarcaine'' sun care lines and such leading OTC products as ''Afrin'' and ''Duration'' nasal sprays, ''Coricidin'' and ''Drixoral'' cold and decongestant tablets, ''Correctol'' laxatives, ''Chlor-Trimeton'' antihistamine and ''Paas'' holiday products.

Appointed to the new positions in the OTC/Seasonal organization were Jim Anglin, director of field sales, and Steve Hicks, director of merchandising. Both are residents of Memphis.

Anglin will be responsible for the activities of five regional sales operations, including regional and district managers, broker managers, van sales managers and support personnel. The graduate of Fairmont State College in Fairmont, W.Va., joined the company in 1985.

Hicks will be responsible for the activities of four regional merchandising operations, including regional and district merchandising managers and support personnel. The graduate of Mississippi State University joined the company in 1984.

Schering-Plough HealthCare Products, with 1989 sales of $600 million, has facilities in Memphis, New Jersey and other locations. It is a unit of Schering-Plough, a Madison, N.J.-based company engaged primarily in the discovery, development, manufacture and marketing of pharmaceutical products and health care products worldwide.

HOUSTON (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Seitel Inc. (ASE:SEI) Friday announced it has formed a joint venture with Digicon Geophysical Corp. of Houston to acquire Digicon's existing proprietary seismic data library.

The venture, which will be known as Digitel Data, will be funded with a $4 million non-recourse loan from Seitel collateralized by the joint venture's data bank. Using the proceeds of this loan, the venture will purchase all of Digicon's rights to a seismic data bank consisting of approximately 9,500 miles of U.S. onshore seismic data and 155,000 miles of data offshore the U.S. East Coast, Alaska and the Gulf of Mexico.

Seitel, a leading seismic data company with in excess of 6,000 miles of data, will act as the joint venture's operating manager, while Digicon will be the primary marketing representitive. Both companies may act in sales capacities.

During the past three years, the data being acquired by the joint venture generated licensing revenues in excess of $20 million.

Seitel's $4 million loan and interest will be repaid through revenues obtained from the licensing of this data. All subsequent revenues will be shared according to each venture partner's respective interest, which will not be less than 50 percent for Seitel.

Digicon is presently re-organizing under Chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code. Therefore, the approval of the bankruptcy court is a necessary prerequisite to completing the transaction, as well as the consent from the company's principal lender. Necessary approval will be sought immeidately and, if obtained, a closing is expected by May 31, 1990.

Seitel also announced today that it is filing a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Comission in anticipation of a proposed public offering of 1 million shares of its common stock, - 500,000 shares of which will be newly issued shares, 350,000 shares of which will be offered by it principal stockholder Helm Resources Inc., (ASE:H), and 150,000 shares that will be offered by three individual stockholders.

The offering will be made through an underwriting syndicate only by means of a prospectus.

Proceeds to Seitel from the sale of its shares will be used to fund its proposed joint venture with Digicon, to acquire additional seismic data to supplement its data library, and for other general corporate purposes.

Seitel is engaged in the development of proprietary seismic data bank and arranging the acquisition and marketing of seismic data.

PHILADELPHIA (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - International Mill Service Inc. (IMS) announced that Thomas A. Compton will become president and CEO of the company, effective April 9, 1990.

Compton will assume the position from Jack Bayer, IMS' current president, who is retiring from that position after 49 years with the company. Bayer will remain with IMS as vice chairman.

Compton joins IMS from Armco Inc. where he held several management positions over the past 20 years at Armco's facilities in Middletown, Ohio and Butler, Pa. He held his most recent position as vice president of operations for Armco's Advanced Materials Corp. in Butler, where he was responsible for all production, engineering, materials management, purchasing and quality assurance at Armco's two specialty steelmaking plants.

Compton holds a B.S. in Metallurgical Engineering from Purdue University and an M.B.A. in Advanced Business Economics from Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio.

IMS, with headquarters in Philadelphia, provides slag processing and metal reclamation, EAF dust processing, surface conditioning and other industrial services to approximately 50 steel mills in North America.

IMS is a subsidiary of EnviroSource Inc., a company based in Stamford, Conn., which supplies industrial customers with long-term, specialized services, primarily the recycling, handling, stabilization or landfilling of environmentally sensitive wastes or by-products.

CHICAGO (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Hyatt Friday announced its entry into the event management and production market with the formation of a new company, Regency Productions by Hyatt Inc.

Based in Chicago, Regency Productions will coordinate national and large local events as well as major sales meetings, new product introductions, incentive promotions and meetings and customer appreciation programs for corporate and sports clients in the U.S., Canada and the Caribbean.

Darryl Hartley-Leonard, president of Hyatt Hotels Corp., has been named president of the new venture. Hartley-Leonard will oversee operations of the new company while continuing his role at Hyatt. James E. Jones, formerly director of sales development for Hyatt Hotels Corp., has been named vice president of sales and marketing. Anne Hanch, formerly director of corporate meetings and convention services for Hyatt Hotels Corp., will serve as general manager.

''Regency Productions will have the capability to create, coordinate and produce events that achieve the goals set by our clients,'' Hartley-Leonard said.

As an events management company, Hyatt hopes to tap into the expanding events production market. According to the Special Events Report newsletter, the amount of money spent by U.S. corporations on sponsorships and special events has grown from $171 million in 1982 to $4.2 billion in 1989.

''Our expertise in dealing with major meetings, conventions and trade shows as well as suppliers and food and beverage production will give us an advantage over all our competitors,'' Hartley-Leonard said.

When coordinating an event, Regency Productions will handle all facets of the event including security, housing, ticket distribution or sales, entertainment, catering, merchandising and staffing.

Regency Productions by Hyatt Inc., is an event management company providing event planning, marketing and merchandising for major sporting and corporate events.

WAYNE, NJ (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Union Camp Corp., a leading manufacturer of paper, packaging and chemicals, has announced plans to begin construction of a major corrugated container manufacturing plant in Chile.

Union Camp is building the $20 million plant south of Santiago, in one of Chile's most productive agricultural regions. The plant will serve Chile's burgeoning fresh fruit industry as well as the nation's export-oriented manufacturers.

It will produce a full line of corrugated packaging, including high performance containers with enhanced full-color package graphics.

Union Camp will build a 170,000-square-foot plant and eventually employ over 100 local workers. The plant will be fully equipped with a state-of-the-art corrugator and four-color printing and die cutting capability. The plant will also be able to manufacture corrugated packaging from preprinted linerboard produced at Union Camp's Ultragraphics printing plant in Savannah, Ga.

Union Camp is already a major supplier of corrugated packaging to Chilean exporters. During the construction period, Union Camp will continue to supply its Chilean customers from its U.S. container plants.

Upon completion, the company will supply the plant with linerboard, the raw material of corrugated containers, from its mills in Savannah and Prattville, Ala.

Union Camp is a leading supplier of linerboard and corrugated packaging to major agricultrual and industrial regions in Latin America, the Caribbean and Europe, as well as in the United States.

The company's current capital program includes the expansion of the capacity of its mills to produce high performance linerboard for export markets.

The company's packaging operations include two linerboard and kraft paper mills, 27 container plants in the United States and container plants in Ireland, Spain and the Canary Islands.

Earlier this year the company expanded its packaging operations with the acquisition of a leading producer of full color corrugated containers.

The company is also a leading manufacturer of uncoated business papers and through its Bush Boake Allen Division, a major producer of flavors, fragrances and aroma chemicals. Bush Boake Allen has operations in 24 countries and recently established a sales office in Chile to meet the growing demand for flavors and fragrances.

WASHINGTON, DC (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Arthur Sando is joining ComSat Video Enterprises as vice president - marketing and communications, announced Friday by CVE President and Chief Executive Officer, Robert J. Wussler. Sando leaves a similar position at Turner Broadcasting System Inc., where he has been for nine years. He assumes his new duties on May 1.

"In our eight and a half years together at TBS," said Wussler, "I saw Arthur build the company's international public relations department and reorganize and strengthen its advertising and promotion department. His talent, experience and leadership will add invaluably to CVE's senior management."

"Turner Broadcasting has afforded me fabulous opportunities and I have nothing but the highest respect and admiration for Ted Turner and his company. But now, personally and professionally, I believe it's time to move on. I've talked with Bob Wussler at great length about his plans for the future, and I think the 1990s at CVE will be as exhilarating as the 1980s were at TBS."

Sando established the TBS Public Relations Department when he joined the company as public relations director in March 1981. He was named director of corporate communications in July 1981 and was appointed vice president of corporate communications in May 1984.

Under his direction, the department established offices in Atlanta, New York, Washington, Los Angeles, London and Hong Kong. In February 1989, he was given the additional responsibility for the advertising and promotion department.

Sando has devoted considerable time and energy to promotion of the cable industry. Serving for four years as chairman of the National Academy of Cable Programming Promotion Committee, he was co-founder of the National Cable Forum amd serves on the National Cable Month Promotion Committee. In 1987, he received the National Cable Television Association President's Award for outstanding contribution to the cable industry.

Prior to joining TBS, Sando was press secretary to U.S. Congressional Representative James M. Hanley (N.Y.), a position he held from 1977-1981. He began his broadcasting career in the news department of WBNR and WSPK-FM, Beacon-Newburgh & Poughkeepsie, N.Y. in 1970, later moving to positions at WFIL-AM Radio in Philadelphia and serving as a television news reporter for WSYR (now WSTM), the NBC affiliate in Syracuse, N.Y. from 1973 to 1977.

ComSat Video Enterprises is the nation's second largest provider of hotel entertainment services to the lodging industry. The company services 1,700 hotels nationwide (about 300,000 rooms), with pay-per-view and free-to-guest programming and provides interactive guest services and videoconferencing.

LOUISVILLE, KY (APRIL 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Union employees of Middlewest Freightways Inc., a subsidiary of Falls City Industries Inc., have accepted a new profit sharing plan in exchange for a 10 percent wage reduction.

Representatives of Middlewest's union employees notified Middlewest that they have voted to approve an addendum to their collective bargaining agreement that provides for establishing the plan for the benefit of Middlewest's employees covered by the collective bargaining agreement in exchange for the wage reduction.

The wage reduction also applies to Middlewest's salaried non-union employees. The addendum became effective April 1 and will remain in effect until March 31, 1991, or until a replacement collective bargaining agreement is signed.

It calls for the company to retain the first 3 percent of net operating profits as defined in the addendum, with any remaining profits divided evenly among Middlewest Freightways and the profit sharing plan's profit pool.

Had the plan been in effect in 1989, Falls City Industries would have reported a profit rather than a loss for the year, due to a net wage reduction of approximately $2 million.

BONN (APRIL 6) - West Germany will resume its guarantees for exports to China on a case-by-case basis, the secretary of state for economic cooperation said on Thursday.

Speaking before a meeting of a West German industrialists' association in Cologne, Siegfried Lengl said the resumption of some so-called Hermes loans to China did not mean a return to the situation before June 1989.

Last June the West German government ended all export guarantees following Beijing's crackdown on a pro-democracy movement. Bonn was the sole Western government to adopt such a position.

The state-guaranteed Hermes loans assured West German exporters to China of being paid in the event their Chinese clients failed to settle.

Mr. Lengl said the government reserved the right to decide on a case-by-case basis, and had not decided a full-scale resumption of the Hermes loans.

According to a poll conducted by the association's committee for Eastern Europe, nearly all firms with representation in China planned to increase their presence there in the next three years, if the economic situation permitted.

MANILA (APRIL 6) - Benguet Corp., one of the country's top gold and copper producers, posted 342.3 million pesos (15.06 million dollars) in profits last year, a 27 per cent decline from the previous year, the company said in its annual report.

The company posted a net income of 470 million pesos (20.67 million dollars) in 1988, but gold operations in two major sites posted a total net loss of 149.1 million pesos (6.56 million dollars) last year.

A company spokesman said that a 12-day strike in September and a spate of typhoons which disrupted operations, as well as lower grade ore, accounted for the losses.

Benguet's operating revenue totalled 3.976 billion pesos (174.85 million dollars) last year, a six per cent decline from the year previous. Current liabilities amounted to 1.329 billion pesos (58.44 million dollars), a six per cent increase from 1988.

JOHANNESBURG (APRIL 6) - The South African Chamber of Business (SACOB) has urged the African National Congress (ANC) to make a clear-cut declaration of its economic policies, the Star newspaper reported Friday.

Complaining of widespread "business jitters" in South Africa, SACOB economist Keith Lockwood said the lack of precision about ANC policies was feeding a sense of uncertainty in the business world.

"It is important that the ANC gets the message that now they are operating freely, they must take responsibility for the actions and statements of their leaders," he said.

"The ANC must co-ordinate and set out a precise set of policies to end the political tension. It's vital for economic stability."

Economic consultant Roelof Botha said uncertainty was also delaying a potential reversal of capital outflows to a surge of new capital inflows.

Overseas investors were putting off decisions until there was more clarification about the political outlook.

Uncertainty about prospects was also hitting the level of new job opportunities, with the number of vacancies advertised in local newspapers now running at the lowest in three years, he said.

TOKYO (APRIL 6) - Iraq hopes to boost its crude oil output and invite Japanese and other foreign investors to develop its dormant oil fields, Iraqi Oil Minister Issam Abd ar-Rahim al-Chalabi said here Friday.

"So far the response has been very positive" from Japanese companies he has consulted on possible joint oil development, he told a press conference.

"We have met almost every oil company and oil refiner," he said, adding that "They have shown keen interest in the scheme and estalished task forces."

Mr. Chalabi, who arrived here Tuesday for a six-day visit, said he had met with Japanese government and business leaders on bilateral relations, particularly economic cooperation, since Iraq ended a war with Iran in 1988.

He said Iraq had been asking companies in Japan to develop Iraqi oil fields in exchange for products from these fields on "long-term supply contracts."

He said companies in the United States and Europe had also shown an interest in the scheme to boost Iraq's oil output by developing oil fields discovered in the late 1970's but not exploited due to the financial constraints of the war.

Mr. Chalabi refused to give the size or number of these oil fields, but said Iraq wanted to increase its oil output "As soon as possible. With no limit."

But he was quoted by the Japanese economic newspaper Nihon Keizai as saying Iraq wanted to boost its output from 4.5 million to about six million barrels per day.

The newspaper reported Friday, quoting Japanese oil industry sources, that Iraq is hoping to use Japan's assistance worth 2-3 billion dollars for developing four oil fields in Iraq's southeastern district.

Mr. Chalabi told the press conference Iraq wanted to increase its share of Japan's daily oil imports totaling three million barrels. Iraq's oil exports to Japan account for six per cent of its total daily export quota and it is "extremely low", he said.

NEW DELHI (APRIL 6) - India will not return the 470 million dollars Union Carbide has paid under a 1989 settlement for the Bhopal gas disaster even if the Supreme Court were to strike down the deal, Attorney General Soli Sorabjee said here Friday.

Mr. Sorabjee told the Supreme Court that the government cannot consent to returning the money, which the U.S. multinational has deposited with the Reserve Bank of India pending a "full and final settlement" for the 1984 disaster.

He added that New Delhi would hold the money, but not distribute it to the thousands of Bhopal victims, until an original three-billion-dollar suit for damages was decided.

That suit in the Bhopal district court was automatically cancelled by the settlement reached in February 1989 between the then-Indian government of prime minister Rajiv Gandhi and Union Carbide Corp.

Mr. Sorabjee's statement came during the second day of hearings in the Supreme Court on petitions challenging the settlement, which many voluntary groups in Bhopal have said did not go far enough to compensate the victims.

The groups want the original suit reinstated to prove that Union Carbide was criminally liable for the disaster.

Some 1,750 people died outright and thousands more were maimed for life after inhaling a deadly gas which escaped from a Union Carbide pesticides plant in Bhopal, capital of central Madhya Pradesh state, on the night of December 2-3, 1984.

The death toll from the gas leak, the world's worst industrial disaster, had mounted to 3,350 when the Supreme Court transferred the case to itself last year and intervened to order the February settlement.

TOKYO (APRIL 6) - Moody's Investors Service Inc. said Friday it was reviewing its credit rating for Orix Corp., Japan's biggest leasing company, due to its growing exposure to real-estate risk and overseas investments.

"This action was prompted by Orix's growing real estate-related business and the company's high sensitivity to interest-rate risk," the Japanese unit of the U.S. rating agency said.

Orix, which has four trillion yen (26 billion dollars) in assets, has recently diversified its activities to include lending, securities and real-estate brokerage, marine transport and managing baseball teams.

"Moody's considers Orix's aggressive development of real-estate and international investment activities to be risk factors," the agency said.

The review of the current A-3 rating, affecting 250 milliion dollars in long-term debt, will focus on exposure to domestic and foreign real-estate activities and highly-leverage companies overseas.

The company's balance sheet will also be examined. "Orix has typically managed it interest-rate risk by adjusting its ratio of long- and short-term debt according to its interest-rate expectations. This makes its balance sheet highly sensitive to rising interest rates," Moody's said.

RABAT (APRIL 6) - Representatives from 14 countries in the Jerusalem Committee of the Organization of the Islamic Conference met in the Moroccan capital Friday to discuss Jewish immigration to Israel and the occupied territories from the Soviet Union.

King Hassan Ii chaired the Jerusalem Committee session, called to map out a strategy of opposition to the resettlement of Soviet Jewish emigres in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. The group was also due to consider a reaction to a recent United States Senate resolution describing Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

Among those in attendance was Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Parallel to that meeting, the foreign ministers of Morocco, Algeria and Saudi Arabia conferred in Rabat with three Lebanese legislators, Morocco's Map news agency said.

No official announcement was forthcoming, though analysts said the main purpose of the gathering was almost certainly to review progress toward implementing the October 1989 Taif agreement on a reform of power-sharing structures in Lebanon.

TOKYO (APRIL 6) - Japan's financial officials headed for Paris for Saturday's meeting of the Group of Seven (G-7) industrialised countries resigned to the fact that little will be done to stabilise the yen.

Having lost much of its financial pride since the markets began to fall in January, Bank of Japan Governor Yasushi Mieno left for Paris Friday expecting little support from the other G-7 central bankers and financial officials in Paris at the weekend.

Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto was also due to leave later Friday to attend the Paris meeting Saturday with the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Italy and West Germany, ministry officials said.

Japan fears the other countries at the meeting will be more interested in other subjects, such as the Bank for Reconstruction and Development in Eastern Europe (BERD), German unification and the recapitalisation of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), than in current Japanese concerns.

Faced with inflationary pressures due to German reunification, Tokyo above all wants to avoid interest rate hikes and could be supported by Washington, analysts here said. Japan's concessions during this week's trade talks with the United States should also create an atmosphere of cooperation.

Washington and Tokyo should also be in relative agreement on the BERD, which they want to bar from initially giving credit to the Soviet Union.

Japan wants to increase its representation in the IMF to reflect its economic power. Agreement has been reached in principal to raise Japan to second place behind the United States but other countries are still in dispute over the remaining places.

Japan also plans to raise the issue of resuming loans to China.

ATHENS (APRIL 6) - Campaigning for Greek parliamentary elections ended Friday with pundits divided over whether the Conservatives or Socialists would win, and if either could muster the majority needed to avoid a new round.

Some eight million voters are expected to go to the polls Sunday.

Parliament, which earlier this month failed for a third time to a elect a new head of state to replace outgoing president Christos Sartzetakis, will try again after Sunday's election.

Conservative leader Constantin Mitsotakis and former prime minister Andreas Papandreou, head of the PASOK Socialists, meanwhile both predicted victory.

Mr. Mitsotakis estimated his New Democracy party needed at least 150 seats in parliament to form an administration whose goal, he said, would be to lead the country out of economic crisis over the next four years.

However, if they won fewer than that, he said, the Conservatives would refuse to collaborate with any other party because previous governments "of cooperation" had failed. This would force a new round of elections, he added.

Mr. Papandreou predicted "there will be a government" and said he believed a third party, the Communist-led Coalition of the Left and For Progress, would join a coalition with PASOK.

However the Coalition has promised to clean up the government, which during Mr. Papandreou's tenure was racked by financial scandals. Analysts say it would be hard for the party to back him, in light of his still unresolved role in the affairs.

PARIS (APRIL 6) - French aviation firm Aerospatiale and West Germany's MBB are to set up a holding company before the end of the year for cooperating in the helicopter business, the French group announced here on Friday.

The announcement said Aerospatiale and Messerschmidt-Bolkow-Blohm (MBB) had signed a memorandum of understanding to have their respective helicopter divisions work together.

They are already doing so under the "Tigre" Franco-German combat helicopter program, and they are to work together in connection with the European program (involving France, Italy, West Germany and The Netherlands) for development of the NH 90 transport helicopter as soon as the West German government gives official approval (which French aeronautical sources consider certain).

The Aerospatiale-MBB agreement has been under discussion for two years with an eye on creating a helicopter constructor large enough to compete efficiently worldwide. The holding company to be set up will be called Eurocopter SA.

The announcement did not state the two groups' respective shares in the holding company, but in view of their respective sales in the helicopter field, informed sources said Aerospatiale could be expected to hold about 60 percent.

The announcement said: "The holding company will coordinate and control two companies, one French and the other German, which will take over the two partners' industrial and commercial activities in the helicopter field - each partner thus keeping its national identity".

French sources said the holding company might be based in Strasbourg, in eastern France on the German border. It is likely to have a Frenchman as chairman and a German as chief executive officer, they said.

Aerospatiale says that together, the two firms' helicopter activities account for around 30 percent of the world market (excluding Eastern countries and U.S. military orders), and the two partners are aiming at annual sales of around 10 billion French francs (about 1.8 billion dollars). That would put the new unit second worldwide, behind Sikorksy of the United States but ahead of current second-placer Bell of the same country.

RENO, NV (APRIL 6) - A Soviet clown who vanished from his circus troupe here wants to defect, claiming Moscow -- even under President Mikhail Gorbachev's glasnost -- doesn't like his political views, the clown's attorney said Friday.

The lawyer, Michael Ross, said Sergei Uhanov, 28, was "applying for political asylum because he fears reprisals from expressing his political views."

Mr. Ross declined to elaborate on the clown's views.

Mr. Uhanov vanished late Sunday or Monday after performing with the Moscow Circus at Bally's Resort Casino here.

Bally publicist Brian Lawson said the rest of the more than 100 members of the circus troupe had flown to New York where they were staying a few days before returning home.

LUANDA (APRIL 6) - Angolan discontent with Zaire's perceived partiality in the Angolan war, despite its formal role as principal African mediator, was voiced here Friday by the semi-official paper O Jornal de Angola.

The comment came as a new mini-summit to discuss peace moves got under way in the Sao Tome and Principe islands.

In a front page editorial, the paper cited foreign news agency reports about arms and fuel for the guerrilla movement UNITA being shipped through Zaire's international airport at Kinshasa.

The war supplies were from the United States, which had never hidden its support for the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA), and therefore the government here expected no explanations, O Jornal said.

But Zairean leader Mobutu Sese Seko, as mediator in the 15-year war, "has a moral obligation to say clearly which side he is on".

Silence from the Kinshasa authorities produced the deduction that Marshal Mobutu "is taking the part of one of the belligerents" in his mediation, the paper charged.

It said the mini-summit was "very important", as new strategies might be outlined to speed up a settlement, with the Angolan government keen on "direct" talks with UNITA.

Summit participants were to be Angolan leader Jose Eduardo dos Santos, who left for Sao Tome Friday morning, island chief Manuel Pinto da Costa, Congo's President Denis Sassou-Nguesso and Gabon's President Omar Bongo.

BATH, ENGLAND (APRIL 6) - A 37-year-old man was pinned against a wall and killed here Friday after being struck by a motorcycle whose rider had been flung off earlier after colliding with a car, police said.

"Unfortunately the bike kept going down the street, hitting the pedestrian " a police spokesman said.

The motorcyclist and the car driver were both taken to hospital with minor injuries.

The victim was not named.

HONG KONG (APRIL 6) - Hong Kong will retain its place as a key financial hub in Asia despite a local confidence crisis caused by China's scheduled 1997 takeover of the British colony, business figures and analysts here say.

Cited as supporting factors are Hong Kong's strategic location and close links to China, its still-expanding infrastructure and its traditionally laissez-faire economy.

The optimism comes despite several recent reports that the colony, facing soaring rents, the prospect of communist rule and a steady "brain drain" of professionals emigrating to beat the 1997 deadline, could be losing its edge as a foothold for foreign businessmen.

"That's not true," said Robert Sheppard, general secretary of the local French Business Association, who labelled Hong Kong "still a good risk."

Phillip Chan, research manager of local brokerage Mansion House Securities, agreed.

Mr. Sheppard noted that except for Singapore, three of the four Asian dragons - Hong Kong, Taiwan and South Korea - are in East Asia and "we have, for instance, a lot of Taiwan investments going through here."

Mr. Chan meanwhile said in the long-term "anyone who is not based here will be losing out on China," which he said was still a coveted market despite the June 4 Beijing massacre.

And Americans, whose investments in Hong Kong are estimated at six billion U.S. dollars, second only to mainland Chinese, have yet to call it a day.

"We haven't heard any definite relocating plans from any firm," said Daniel Sreebny, spokesman for the U.S. Consulate.

A Japanese banker who preferred anonymity said: "We have been a top investor in Hong Kong banking and property sectors. Hong Kong is a place to make money, we will stay on for quite some time yet."

Ray Guy, Canada's senior trade commissioner to the colony, said the majority of Canadian firms here have business links with China.

MAE AI, THAILAND (APRIL 6) - International heroin kingpin Khun Sa is under attack from rival ethnic guerrillas in Burma and under indictment in a U.S. court, but neither threat is expected to diminish his drug trafficking.

Thai, U.S. and guerrilla sources all acknowledge that the developments are unlikely to affect the booming heroin flow from the jungles of the "golden triangle" to the streets of Western cities.

In "The Politics of Heroin in Southeast Asia," a phrase coined by Alfred McCoy in his book of the same title, people such as Khun Sa still live beyond the norms of national politics and even national boundaries, they said.

Khun Sa, who is from the Shan ethnic minority, is facing his greatest-ever military threat from the Wa, an ethnic group emboldened by support from Rangoon as they seek to break his control of lucrative opium and heroin smuggling on the border with Thailand.

This comes as Washington is gearing up for an anti-heroin campaign to follow on the success of its anti-cocaine offensive which included invading Panama to topple strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega, who is now awaiting trial on drug trafficking charges in the United States.

Washington has targeted as a symbol of the heroin trade the robust Khun Sa, a man with flair who has frequently greeted reporters at his headquarters near the Thai border from atop a white horse. He was indicted in a New York court in December as an alleged source of illegal drugs reaching the United States.

But the only ones actually battling Khun Sa are the Was, who are on the march after breaking free last year from the ethnic Chinese-led Burma Communist Party (BCP) in their opium-rich territory, some 400 kms (240 miles) north of the Thai border in Burma's Shan state.

A force of some 3,000 from Khun Sa's Mong Thai Army (MTA), over half its troop strength, is cornered on three sides by a Wa force of about the same size.

The MTA has its back to the Thai border where it relies on cross-border trade for food and other supplies, Khun Sa aide Khernsai Jaiyane said last week near the northern Thai town of Mae Ai, 700 kms (620 miles) north of Bangkok.

Reliable sources said the MTA is in fact having problems with munitions and arms supplies.

But Khun Sa is confident he will continue to get supplies for his beleaguered troops.

Thailand, a U.S. ally, also wants to arrest Khun Sa but many Shans live along the border and the crossings in difficult-to-monitor mountains are done by local people, Thailand's leading anti-narcotics official Chaowalit Yodmani said this week.

Washington has ruled out direct military action as this would involve invading Burma, a sovereign country.

But Mr. Khernsai said he was not overly concerned about possible U.S. pressure on Thailand to crack down on Khun Sa.

Khun Sa is the most powerful figure in the golden triangle, where the borders of Burma, Laos and Thailand converge in the region that is the source of half of the heroin consumed in the United States.

GENEVA (APRIL 6) - Canada wants an agreement on reducing farm subsidies, Canadian minister for Western diversification and grains Charles Mayer said here Friday.

Mr. Mayer visited the headquarters of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) to press for an agreement during the current Uruguay Round of multilateral trade negotiations.

He said Canadian farmers, who are heavily dependent on exports, "find it difficult to compete against the EEC and the United States who are subsidizing exports".

Canada exports 80 percent of its wheat, whereas the European Economic Community exports only 20 percent, he said.

"55 cents of every dollar that a Canadian farmer earns comes from exports."

Mr. Mayer said Canada was "reasonably optimistic" that the issue could be settled before the Uruguay Round ends in December, but added that "we don't expect to get rid of all subsidies on the 1st of January 1991".

"My belief is we are going to succeed collectively," he said.

More than 100 countries have now signed GATT, the nearest thing the world has to a set of laws on international trade.

BRUSSELS (APRIL 6) - Belgian Defense Minister Guy Coeme, in a move likely to fuel a difficult debate within NATO, on Friday called on the alliance to negotiate a massive reduction in its short-range nuclear forces (SNF).

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's nuclear planning group (NPG), gathering defense ministers in Alberta, Canada on May 9 and 10, must "review the doctrines relating to nuclear weapons in NATO's strategy," he said in a letter to NATO secretary-general Manfred Woerner.

Mr. Coeme "confirms the Belgian government's wish for the rapid opening of negotiations on short-range nuclear weapons," according to a defense ministry statement that disclosed the letter.

SNF are a weapons category that comprises artillery shells, gravity bombs and missiles with a range of less than 500 kilometers (310 miles).

NATO has roughly 4,000 such arms, most of them deployed in West Germany as a means of dissuading the Soviet Union from launching an all-out armored offensive that could be unstoppable by conventional forces.

The negotiations "can result in the elimination of certain categories of Soviet and U.S. nuclear arms," Mr. Coeme said.

"These arms, artillery and land-based missiles, in fact can only reach countries where democracy has just been established," he observed, pointing to last year's upheavals in eastern Europe that ousted hardline communist regimes.

The debate over SNF caused a serious rift in NATO in 1988 and early 1989 that was only resolved, and in dramatic fashion, by the alliance's 40th-anniversary summit last May.

The United States and Britain had argued that the alliance's ageing stock of 88 Lance missile launchers needed to be modernized.

West Germany, supported by a majority of NATO members, said that the decision could wait and that SNF reductions should be opened immediately.

Under the summit compromise, NATO leaders agreed that nuclear arms would remain an indispensable part of their arsenal.

But they agreed to postpone any decision on the Lance update until 1992, and tied two conditions to opening SNF negotiations. These were that a future treaty for reducing conventional arms, currently being negotiated in Vienna, be concluded and start to be applied; and that SNF not be completely eliminated.

Senior alliance officials, in a meeting here last month, agreed a negotiations scenario under which NATO would slash its SNF arsenal by at least half, diplomats said.

West Germany was the driving force behind the move, arguing that the big cut would reassure the Soviet Union about the impact of German unification on Soviet security, they said.

DHAKA (APRIL 6) - More than 1,000 people have died in ten years of fighting in the tribal separatist war in south eastern Bangladesh, interior ministry officials said here Friday.

Another 530 persons remained untraceable and 5,000 were injured.

Officials said Chakma tribal guerrillas have killed 16 people since January this year. The victims were mostly non-tribal Bengali settlers.

The death toll did not include casualties suffered by the Bangladesh army and border forces in fighting the 13-year insurgency.

The outlawed Shanti Bahini tribal army is fighting for an independent homeland for the Chakma tribe in the Chittagong Hill Tracts province bordering India and Burma.

Diplomatic sources estimate that about 30,000 Chakmas have fled the country to the Indian states of Tripura and Mizoram.

JAMMU, INDIA (APRIL 6) - Indian security forces launched a house-to-house hunt for a university vice-chancellor and a senior company executive kidnapped by Moslem Kashmiri militants Friday as troops killed six suspected militants.

Army and paramilitary soldiers virtually sealed Srinagar, the summer capital of Kashmir, cut short a curfew break and launched a house-to-house search for the two men held hostage by the militants campaigning for Kashmir's secession from India.

Official sources said a maximum alert had been sounded all over the state. Police were searching all cars in the city limits and access roads.

Mashir ul-Haq, vice-chancellor of Kashmir University, and H.L. Khera, general manager of the Indian government-owned watch manufacturer Hindustan Machine Tools (HMT), were kidnapped from different Srinagar neighborhoods.

Mr. Mashir was on his way to the mosque to offer Friday prayers when he was kidnapped. Mr. Khera was abducted as he drove to work with a bodyguard, who was released afterwards.

The Press Trust of India (PTI) news agency said the secessionist Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front (JKLF) had claimed responsibility for the kidnappings and threatened to kill both men if three prominent front members were not set free by April 9.

The three included G.N. Butt, brother of late JKLF founder Maqbool Butt who was executed by the Indian government.

In December, the JKLF kidnapped and released unharmed the daughter of federal Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed in exchange for the release of five members of the front.

On March 25, the militants murdered an abducted Kashmir legislator and hung his corpse from a tree here after the government failed to meet a deadline to set free 10 jailed militants.

The kidnappings came after border troops shot dead six suspected Moslem militants trying to cross clandestinely into Pakistan-controlled Kashmir in the northern frontier town of Kupwara, a Kashmir administration spokesman said.

BRUSSELS (APRIL 6) - The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has launched a full inquiry to assess security damage, after a West German diplomat at NATO was arrested Tuesday on suspicion of spying for East Germany, NATO sources said Friday.

They identified the suspect as Heinz Werner, 45, who worked in the coding department of the West German mission to the alliance since September 1987 and may have handed top-classification material to East German espionage.

"An inquiry has been opened to see the extent of any damage," a German diplomat said, describing such a move as "routine" in cases of suspected security breaches.

The federal public prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe, West Germany on Wednesday announced that the diplomat had been arrested at a location that it did not identify.

The office described it "as a particularly serious case," saying the diplomat may have been working for the East German espionage service for more than 20 years.

He may have disclosed NATO's position at the Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) talks in Vienna, the alliance's relations with the Warsaw Pact, as well as domestic West German political secrets, the prosecutor's office said.

The Bundeskriminalamt, the federal criminal investigation agency, is conducting the inquiry.

Belgian investigators found that Mr. Werner had transformed his apartment at Sterrebeek, a Brussels suburb close to NATO headquarters, "into a veritable James Bond den," an official at the Brussels public prosector's office said Friday.

They found a short-wave radio transmitter and other state-of-the-art communications material, as well as an attache case stuffed with NATO documents, he told Agence France-Presse.

A reliable NATO source, speaking on condition that he not be identified, expressed concern at the affair, noting West Germany's position at the heart of the alliance's military and political strategy.

The inquiry "is likely to take months, perhaps a year," he said.

The West German delegation has previously been hit by two spying scandals, both of them involving secretaries.

PARIS (APRIL 6) - A court here on Friday ordered British journalist Tom Bauer and his French publisher Presses de la Cite to pay British press baron Robert Maxwell damages of 100,000 francs (17,500 dollars) for defamation of character.

Legal sources said that the court accepted Mr. Maxwell's complaint that Mr. Bauer's book was "a serious intrusion" into his private life and contained "systematic denigration" of Mr. Maxwell's character.

But the court dismissed a claim for damages for the unauthorized use of Mr. Maxwell's name as the book's title and the publication of information about the size and origin of his personal fortune.

BONN (APRIL 6) - The West German government pledged Friday that it would offer "reasonable solutions" in connection with inter-German monetary union.

It was seeking to reassure East Germans, tens of thousands of whom had demonstrated on Thursday for conversion of their Ost mark assets and incomes into Deutsche marks at a one-for-one rate.

Government spokesman Hans Klein told correspondents that "We want the negotiations with East Germany to get under way as soon as possible". Bonn hopes that a meeting of the two Germanies at expert level can take place next week.

Klein also emphasized that the planned treaty of monetary union between the two Germanies, which Bonn wants to sign in early May, does not constitute a "Diktat" vis-a-vis East Germany, or a "document of submission", as was charged by Liberal Party President Otto Lamsdorff.

"This is what the East German people are requesting", Klein commented. "I don't see how the fact of wanting a market economy and a strong mark constitutes submission".

The draft treaty, published Thursday by the newspaper Sueddeutsche Zeitung and confirmed by government sources, calls for East Germany to give up sovereignty in the economic, financial, budgetary and social fields as soon as monetary union goes into effect this year.

MOSCOW (APRIL 6) - A price reform will take effect in the Soviet Union as of Jan. 1 next year, according to Ivan Gorbachev, the deputy head of the Soviet state commission on prices.

Gorbachev, quoted Friday by Interfax, a Moscow Radio publication, said that wholesale and purchasing prices had already been agreed by ministries and that the government was currently looking into ways of compensating low-income earners for rising prices.

Inflation, he said, reached 7.5 percent last year and could increase initially next year. This would however not be too bad a problem providing there were enough consumer goods on the market to satisfy demand, he added.

Finance Minister Valentin Pavlov recently aknowledged in an interview with Interfax that price increases were on the way.

The oil and gas ministry recently acknowledged that petrol prices would be increased starting next year.

AMSTERDAM (APRIL 6) - An attacker sprayed sulphuric acid Friday on The Nightwatch, the best-known of 17th-century Dutch artist Rembrandt van Rijn's paintings, but damage to the masterpiece was limited thanks to quick action by museum guards.

Officials at Amsterdam's Rijksmuseum said the assailant, a 31-year-old Dutch man, was standing among a group viewing the picture when he squirted two jets of acid at the painting.

The acid damaged the famous 1642 group portrait but failed to eat into the painting's colours themselves. To the untrained eye it appeared that someone had splatted the piece with white paint, one official said.

The assailant was subdued by museum guards and turned over to the police, the official added.

The attack was the third on The Nightwatch since 1915, when a mentally deranged cobbler scratched the surface of the painting. In a second assault in 1975, an unemployed teacher claiming to act ''on orders from God'' slashed the picture with a bread knife.

Rijksmuseum experts placed the painting behind glass after its half-year restoration, but removed the protective plate in 1981.

KATHMANDU (APRIL 6) - At least 10 people were killed, including two Britons and a Dutchman, and some 160 injured when riot police opened fire Friday on anti-government protestors here, hospital sources said.

The death toll could be much higher, doctors said, because many of the shooting victims were reportedly taken away by truck and not brought to hospitals.

Opposition sources put the death toll at 60 to 100, but this could not be confirmed.

Reliable reports reaching Kathmandu from at least six other cities hit by protests Friday, including Butwal and Palpa, said more than 10 protestors died from bullet wounds and scores were wounded.

Witnesses said police opened fire on a peaceful protest march by some 200,000 demonstrators heading towards the Royal Palace.

The three foreigners killed in the shooting, were tentatively identified by doctors as Richard Williams of Ireland, Andrew Reid of Britian and Dick Booguard of the Netherlands.

The Dutchman was shot in the back, they said.

Eyewitness reports said a Japanese was also killed, but there was no immediate confirmation.

The foreigners were apparently tourists who were following the protest.

COLOMBO (APRIL 6) - President Ranasinghe Premadasa will take up a number of outstanding issues with the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) when he meets an Ltte delegation in Colombo on Saturday.

The Ltte delegation, which will be meeting Premadasa for the first time since Indian troops left Sri Lanka, will discuss several key issues including its demand to repeal the sixth amendment to the constitution.

The government's request for the Tigers to lay down arms and desist from collecting taxes and the law and order situation in the north-east are among other key issues to be discussed.

The sixth amendment which the Ltte is requesting to be repealed was introduced after the July 1983 violence and requires parliamentarians to swear allegiance to a unitary Sri Lanka and eschew separatism.

Tamil separatist guerrilla leader Velupillai Prabhakaran in his first public appearance last week said that the Ltte would not surrender its weapons until the Tamils won all their rights regardless of disarmament demands by the Sinhala government.

BUCHAREST (APRIL 6) - Ion Ratiu, chairman and founder of the World Union of Free Romanians, has been chosen by the National Peasant Party (PNP) as its candidate for a presidential election to be held May 20, sources close to him said Friday.

Aged 77 and a reputed dollar millionaire, Mr. Ratiu spent 50 years in exile before returning to Romania in January following the overthrow and execution of President Nicolae Ceaucescu.

His is the fourth officially announced candidacy for the election. The National Liberal Party is putting forward Radu Campeanua, Ion Bratianu has been chosen by the Liberal Union, which split off from the Liberal Party in February, and Nicu Stanescu is the candidate of the small Democratic Unity Party.

Ion Iliescu, chairman of the ruling Provisional Council of National Unity, is expected to announce his candidacy shortly for the National Salvation Front which he heads.

Mr. Ratiu is an experienced journalist. For many years he also ran a shipping line which he founded in London, together with a news agency.

He is a founder-member of Amnesty International.

He set up the World Union of Free Romanians in Geneva in 1984.

Mr. Ratiu married a Briton, Elizabeth Pilkington, heiress to the fortune of the Pilkington glass company.

The National Peasant Party was founded in 1917 in the house where he was born, at Turda in Transylvania.

He latterly resided at Zermatt in Switzerland before returning to Romania, where he received his Romanian citizenship papers on March 29.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) - West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher met U.S. Defence Secretary Dick Cheney here Friday to discuss a 35-nation European summit planned for November.

A west German spokesman said Genscher had argued the summit of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (Csce) could deal with vital security policy decisions affecting the continent.

Genscher, who is here on a three-day visit, later called on the U.S., Canada and the 12 European Community members to adopt a joint declaration of ''Trans-Atlantic partnership''.

In a speech to U.S. newspaper editors, Genscher said the declaration should cover ''all political, economic, technological and cultural aspects''.

The object of a Trans-Atlantic partnership, Genscher said, was to ''involve the United States in building the European house''.

He again sought support for his idea of a ''more lively and active community'' of the 35 Csce member states, suggesting regular foreign ministers' and summit conferences. The Csce is an east-west forum that has been meeting for over 16 years.

FRANKFURT (APRIL 6) - West German officials briefed reporters Friday on the role of Frankfurt airport for Third World people seeking political asylum, saying more than 2,100 children and nearly 19,000 adults used Frankfurt last year to try to gain a foothold in Europe.

Klaus Severin, head of the Frankfurt office of the Border Protection Agency, said the largest group of children arriving without accompanying adults was from Sri Lanka, from where 1,724 minors flew to West Germany.

The overall total for children flown into West Germany as part of a growing industry of ''refugee tourism'' was 2,156 last year, he said.

The chief reason for sending Third World children to West Germany was the state-guaranteed education system here, Severin added. Beyond that, he said, Frankfurt was a favorite entry point for shady agencies out to circumvent adoption laws and sell infants from developing countries to childless European couples, he said.

Severin said Sri Lankan Tamils also formed the largest adult group trying to enter West Germany via Frankfurt airport - 4,698 of an overall total of 18,816.

Another major problem facing airport authorities was the organized trade in illegal drugs, he said. Searches last year netted 800 grams of heroin, 4,100 grams of cocaine and 55 kilograms of marijuana, and officials arrested 750 suspected smugglers.

ALGIERS (APRIL 6) - Tribal clashes have swept a town in eastern Algeria for three days since the publication of the names of election candidates by the ruling National Liberation Front (FLN), reliable sources said.

The sources in Chrea, a town near the Tunisian border, said the fighting on Friday turned into a violent confrontation with riot police, who used tear gas on people throwing stones at them.

Official sources have not confirmed the reports.

The sources said that the local FLN was rumoured to have chosen unpopular candidates for June 12 local and regional elections, including people who had been discredited in previous terms of office.

The fighting broke out Wednesday between the Nememcha tribe, whence several members of the Algerian government come, and their opponents in the Ouled Sidi Yahya tribe.

A police car was wrecked Friday, the sources said.

Demonstrators shouted slogans in favour of Islamic Salvation Front leader Abbasi Madani, who Thursday held a rally gathering some 3,000 people in the nearby border town of Tebessa.

Similar recent clashes over an electoral list left eight people wounded at Ain Defla, west of Algiers.

At Souk Ahras, not far from Tebessa, 600 FLN militants withdrew their support from local lists and went over to the National Social-Democratic Party (PNSD).

The Islamic Salvation Front is one of the country's fastest growing opposition groups.

PARIS (APRIL 6) - South African President Frederik De Klerk is to make a tour of Europe in May, reliable sources here said Friday.

They said Mr. De Klerk would visit Britain, France, West Germany, Belgium and Switzerland.

While in France he would have talks with President Francois Mitterrand, whom he had asked to see, the sources said. According to Radio France Internationale, that meeting would take place May 11.

It would be Mr. Mitterrand's first meeting with a top South African leader. Pieter Botha, Mr. De Klerk's predecessor, made private visits to France in 1984 and 1986 but did not see his French counterpart.

In Pretoria, a spokesman for Mr. De Klerk said he was "in no position to comment" on Mr. De Klerk's itinerary nor could he or any other government source divulge whether the president would meet Mr. Mitterrand.

Sources in Paris also said Friday that Irish Foreign Minister Gerard Collins would be heading an European Economic Community fact-finding delegation to South Africa April 11-14.

ON BOARD AN AN-26, AFGHANISTAN (APRIL 6) - The rank smell of death hung heavy in this Soviet-made Antonov transport plane carrying critically hurt Afghan government generals shot Friday at a ceremony where the mujahedeen resistance pulled a grisly surprise instead of surrendering weapons.

On the metal floor lay Herat province governor Fazle Haq Khaliq Yaar, seriously wounded by gunshots in the stomach, scrotum and hand.

Military doctors battled to save his life, and the lives of other seriously wounded victims littered in the plane.

Lying groaning on a metal bench on the Antonov's starboard side could be seen an unidentified general shot several times a few hours earlier in Herat's Pushtoon Jargon village by the assassins.

Medium machine guns and AK-47s littered the planes's cold floor soaked with the blood of military brass and some civilians as the plane hurtled on its 80-minute flight to Kabul.

Four more people, all with gaping bullet wounds, lay across the aisle of the tiny twin-engined plane as personal guards of the governor, generals and commanders stripped to their trousers worked to save their masters.

"These were the men who tried to give rebels a new life," a junior government officer cried in reference to Soviet-backed Afghan President Najibullah's attempts to persuade mujahedeen resistance fighters that his government had a national base and was not just a Soviet puppet.

Suddenly a soldier cried in anguish. His general had died, bleeding from torn arteries. Shocked journalists, most of them stained with blood, watched as the sobbing soldier threw down his weapon and covered his master's face with a cloth.

At least two generals died and three other top ranking military commanders were shot at close range by the rebels who had earlier vowed to lay down their weapons at the ceremony.

More than a dozen others were killed in the 20-minute fight in which government tanks sprayed bullets at an estimated 10,000 strong crowd fleeing the fighting.

A second rasping gasp from the rear of the plane told passengers that another man, a civilian, had died of bullet wounds, as a general with bleeding cheeks harassed pilots to fly faster.

A man with a shattered knee lay with his head on the lap of journalists while reporters fanned an officer with body wounds.

The aircraft was flying above resistance missile range at 30,000 feet (9,000 meters).

The generals and commanders were flown in earlier from Kabul to Herat, scene of Afghanistan's first uprising against the Soviets 12 years ago, to organize the surrender ceremony, one of the largest yet.

They hoped it would attract international publicity and bolster the government's hopes and claims that the mujahedeen too were tired of the 11-year-long war.

In the 1979 uprising, in which more than 2,000 Afghans died, government troops duped the resistance fighters by entering the city in tanks draped with green resistance flags.

The flags were a blind and the gunners on board the tanks massacred the fighters who came out to meet them.

Friday the Antonov bearing its cargo landed in heavy rain in Kabul with grim-faced Afghan generals waiting to escort their dead and wounded colleagues to hospitals and morgues.

The waiting officers refused to comment on the military casualties. When a reporter tried to snap a picture, an officer said: "Please, no photographs."

BANGKOK (APRIL 6) - Religious and human rights groups have asked Thai Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan to allow a private visit here by Tibet's spiritual leader in exile, the Dalai Lama, a government official said Friday.

A letter signed by representatives of 12 religious and social non-governmental organizations (NGO) was taken to the prime minister's office Thursday after rumors circulated that the government would indefinitely postpone the visit because of pressure from Beijing, the official said.

The letter expressed support for a Foreign Ministry decision earlier this year approving the visit in principle, provided the Dalai Lama abstain from political activities during his visit.

The Dalai Lama, who fled Tibet after an abortive uprising against Chinese rule there in 1959 and now lives in exile in India, was expected to visit Thailand in May as the guest of a private scholarly foundation, Sathirakoses-Nakhaprateep.

He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize last year for his non-violent struggle against Chinese rule in Tibet.

The proposed visit became a major political issue here after several parties including former prime minister Kukrit Pramote registered strong protest against it.

Mr. Kukrit, regarded as a political guru here, earlier called for Foreign Minister Siddhi Sawetasila to resign if he issued an entry visa to the Dalai Lama, who was banned from visiting Thailand in 1987.

The issue was subsequently referred to the National Security Council (NSC).

A well-placed official source who asked not to be identified said the NSC recommended to Mr. Chatichai on Wednesday that the visit be postponed.

Following heated public debate, Mr. Chatichai on Thursday referred the matter to the NSC plenary session, of which he is the chair.

NSC Chief Suvit Sutanukool told reporters as he left on an official visit to Tokyo that the issue would be discussed again soon.

MOSCOW (APRIL 6) - The Soviet parliament on Friday accused the U.S. Congress of interfering in internal Soviet affairs when it urged President Bush to recognize an independent Lithuania as soon as possible.

The foreign affairs committee of the Supreme Soviet, the country's standing legislature, hit back at what it called "the peremptory tone" of the U.S. Congress resolution, passed on Wednesday.

"Attempts to show the Soviet Union when and how it should act to resolve its internal problems" were "presumptuous in view of the sovereign rights of the Soviet people and their constitutional institutions," the statement said.

In all, 416 members of Congress voted for the resolution, which urged Mr. Bush "to plan for and take those steps, at the earliest possible time, that would normalize diplomatic relations with the new government of Lithuania."

Only three voted against the resolution, which also congratulated the newly elected Lithuanian parliament on its declaration of independence and asked Moscow to negotiate with Lithuania on an equal basis.

The Soviet statement dismissed the resolution as "interference in the internal affairs" of the Soviet government, and regretted that it had come at a moment when the two countries and their parliaments were anxious "to deepen mutual understanding."

CHITTAGONG, BANGLADESH (APRIL 6) - At least 12 Bangladeshi Shanti Bahini tribal rebels were killed and four injured during a gunbattle between rival factions in India's Tripura state, reports reaching here said Friday.

The fight late Wednesday over leadership and policy matters between the old and new cadres of the outlawed group took place at Takumbari camp in Sublum district of Tripura state, bordering southeastern Bangladesh's Khagrachari hill district, the reports said.

It added that tension was running high among the rank and file of the insurgents, who for the past 16 years have been fighting Bangladesh security forces, reportedly operating from across the border.

The rebels are demanding autonomy for the scenic hill tracts region, bordering India and Burma.

BEIRUT (APRIL 6) - Rival Christian factions Friday fought intermittent artillery and rocket duels with shells crashing into one another's positions as the head of the Maronite Church sought an end to the two-month-old onslaught.

Maronite Patriarch Nasrallah Sfeir sent envoys to Lebanese Forces (LF) chief Samir Geagea and military leader Michel Aoun as part of efforts to secure a cease-fire.

Hours later his initiative apparently paid with the two sides reporting that heavy bombardment had given way to sporadic exchanges.

At dawn General Aoun's troops shelled LF headquarters on the northeastern edges of Beirut after a fierce four hours of artillery shelling Thursday set off a massive explosion at a militia munition deport north of here.

The violence erupted Thursday after Mr. Geagea invited Syrian-backed President Elias Hrawi -- whose authority is totally rejected by Gen. Aoun -- to take control of army barracks located in areas controlled by the militia.

Mr. Hrawi said he would favorably meet this request but he did not elaborate.

Eight people were killed and 25 others wounded Thursday, according to the latest figures released Friday by security sources, raising the toll since fighting erupted January 31 to at least 919 dead and 2,533 wounded.

Pro-Syrian sources said negotiations were under way between Mr. Geagea and Mr. Hrawi to consolidate their newly secured rapprochement.

Mr. Geagea announced support of Mr. Hrawi earlier this week and said he could endorse an Arab peace plan for Lebanon known as the Taif accord after certain changes were made to it.

Gen. Aoun has rejected the plan for failing to call for a Syrian military withdrawal from Lebanon.

But in statements published by most dailies Friday he said his position on the accord was not "absolute" and he also warned of more fighting.

"I am here, and they have the choice: to get rid of be by force or negotiate with me ... The military solution is the most probable one and we are waiting but this decision is in the hands of Mr. Geagea," he said.

Foreign ministers of a special three-nation Arab triumvirate on Lebanon met Friday in Rabat with a Lebanese delegation for a five-hour briefing on the developments in Lebanon.

Saudi Arabia, Morocco and Algeria drafted the Taif accord which allowed the election in November of President Hrawi.

TOKYO (APRIL 6) - The international human rights organization Amnesty International Friday requested Japanese court protection for a suspected Chinese hijacker, Kyodo News Service said.

Zhang Zhenhai, who allegedly hijacked a New York-bound Air China Boeing 747 jet and forced it to land at Fukuoka airport in December, should not be regarded as a hijacker and extradited, Amnesty was quoted as saying in a plea to the Tokyo High Court handling the case.

He was in possession of no weapons at the time and should be accepted as a political refugee in accordance with the refugee clause of Japan's immigration control law, the London-based group was quoted as saying.

It said Mr. Zhang wanted to dramatize his struggle against Chinese authorities for the killing of dissidents who participated in the pro-democracy movement at Beijing's Tiananmen Square last June.

Chinese authorities have demanded that Mr. Zhang be extradited from Japan to China, officials said.

In the first hearing on March 23, Mr. Zhang told the court that he was seeking political asylum overseas because he had taken part in the pro-democracy protests that swept China last year.

In the second hearing Monday, Mr. Zhang showed scars on his arms and legs as evidence that he was subjected to torture for his pro-democracy activities.

Mr. Zhang was trying to refute charges by Tokyo public prosecutors that he was only seeking better employment abroad and was not a true political defector.

The Chinese government has called Mr. Zhang a criminal out on bail facing embezzlement charges and has been demanding his extradition.

Mr. Zhang's wife and son came to Japan with him and have already been repatriated.

MONROVIA (APRIL 6) - Rebels fighting government troops in Liberia have ambushed an iron ore train and four people including a journalist have since gone missing, acting Information Minister Moses Washington said here Friday.

The rebels stopped the train in the strife-torn northeastern Nimba county, ordering the conductors and three passengers including a correspondent for the London Financial Times correspondent, Mark Huband, to provide them with food.

The minister said one conductor escaped while the whereabouts of the other conductor and the three passengers are unknown.

The empty train was moving from the port of Buchanan to Yekepa when it was intercepted five miles (eight kilometers) south of Ganta.

In another development, a U.S. citizen, Martin Joseph Millay, died here Friday of "cardiac arrest" following gunshot wounds he received here late Thursday night.

A U.S. Embassy statement said Mr. Millay, an employee of Gibacol Air Services here, was driving shortly after midnight Thursday when soldiers manning a checkpoint near the executive mansion of President Samuel Doe fired at his vehicle.

The statement said one of the shots wounded Mr. Millay in the lower leg. He died following an operation at a local hospital.

Rebels led by a Liberian former government official Charles Taylor, who is wanted here on charges of embezzlement, launched an incursion into Nimba County on December 24.

NEW DELHI (APRIL 6) - Five people died Friday bringing to 20 the number of people killed in communal violence in western Gujarat state's textile town of Ahmedabad, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said Friday.

Police quoted by PTI said Friday that some 200 people had been arrested, 54 charged with stabbings, after the disturbances involving two unidentified communities erupted four days ago.

An indefinite curfew has been imposed on affected areas of Ahmedabad, the former capital of the coastal state, PTI said.

Police reportedly said four people were stabbed to death in different areas in renewed violence Friday, as one was killed elsewhere in the city when police opened fire to break up a violent crowd.

A number of shops were burnt in Ahmedabad's violence-hit Mannagar, Bapunagar, Saraspur and Raipur areas, police quoted by the news agency said.

STRASBOURG (APRIL 6) - The European parliament Friday passed a resolution calling on Brussels to take effective measures to stop the dumping of radioactive and other toxic waste in the North Sea.

The European law-makers demanded tighter controls on the dumping of waste "on the North Sea bed" from British and French nuclear plants, and urged London immediately to stop industrial waste being poured into coastal waters.

The resolution called on the 12 member states of the European Economic Community to "greatly reduce, or ban in the nearest future" the use of pesticides and fertilizers.

It also recommended stepped up aerial monitoring of oil slicks in the North Sea as a means of reducing pollution.

In its resolution addressed to the EEC's executive arm, the European Commission, the assembly complained that stricter norms had not been adopted by a special conference on the North Sea at The Hague last month.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 6) - The wife of a Palestinian deported from Israel eight months ago said Friday that the Israeli authorities had refused grant her an exit visa to see her husband.

"In the name of humanity I appeal to you to join your voices with mine to force the Israel military authorities to permit me to visit my husband," said In'am Zagout al-Labadi in a statement to the press.

"I ask the women and wives in the world and specially inside Israel to help me achieve this essential justice," she added.

Majed al-Labadi, a 30-year-old union leader from the West Bank, was deported from his home by the Israeli authorities in August 1989 on charges of belonging to the banned Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

He and four other Palestinian deportees were sent to Lebanon.

The Israeli authorities have also accused him of anti-Israeli activities.

The couple were married just over a month before his deportation, Mrs. Labadi said.

JOHANNESBURG (APRIL 6) - Colonel Gabriel Ramushwana was sworn in Friday as the new head of state of the South African homeland Venda, one day after taking power in a bloodless coup, South African Radio reported.

Ramushwana, 49, the former deputy army chief, was sworn in as head of state by Venda Chief Justice B.J.H. Le Roux. The radio described him as chairman of the National Unity Council.

Ramushwana told a news conference earlier Friday that he was the sole member of the national council and that other members would be appointed within the next two weeks to form a cabinet.

The army officer took power Thursday after announcing the resignation of President Frank Ravhele and his cabinet. Ravhele was quoted as saying he was stepping down because the government could no longer maintain law and order.

The radio said Ramushwana promised to lift the state of emergency and curfew imposed when he seized control as soon as the situation in the country stabilized.

Ramushwana earlier told a news conference that elections would be held in the territory if demanded by the people. He said his immediate task would be to restore law and order.

The military ruler said the takeover had not been prompted by similar actions in other homelands. Venda is the third of four homelands to experience a coup after Ciskei and Transkei.

Homelands are self-governing territories for ethnic minorities created under apartheid policy to effectively isolate blacks from ''white'' South Africa and whose sovereignty is recognized only by Pretoria.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 6) - Israel's deputy chief of staff Friday said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein will "think twice" before carrying out his threat to attack Israel with chemical weapons.

"Saddam Hussein is a reasonnable man who knows his limits after the experience of the war with Iran. He knows perfectly well that we could strike 10 times more in case of an Iraqi aggression," General Ehoud Barak told Israel television.

The Iraqi president "will think twice before launching an attack against Israel," said Gen. Barak, adding it was no secret that Iraq had chemical weapons.

"This, however, should not be taken lightly nor should it throw the Israelis into a panic," because of Israel's offensive and defensive military potention, he added.

Mr. Hussein has threatened to launch a chemical attack on Israel that would set ablaze half of the country if Israeli forces attack Iraq. In 1981 Israeli warplanes bombed an Iraqi nuclear reactor north of Baghdad.

WARSAW (APRIL 6) - The Polish parliament on Friday re-established May 3 as a public holiday to celebrate democracy, 45 years after the communists abolished the festival, PAP news agency reported.

The day, which commemorated Poland's 1791 constitution, the most democratic the country has ever known, was celebrated after independence in 1918 and until the communists came to power in 1945.

Parliament meanwhile threw out a proposal from President Wojciech Jaruzelski that July 22, the celebration day which replaced May 3 under the communists, should be declared a public holiday.

A Solidarity MP said that July 22 was a reminder of "painful events", namely the Polish people's domination by Stalin and deportations to Siberia.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) - The United States Friday deplored the deaths of anti-government demonstrators in Nepal and called on Nepalese authorities to show restraint in restoring order.

At least 10 people were killed and 160 wounded in Kathmandu Friday when riot police opened fire on a crowd of 200,000 anti-government demonstrators.

"The U.S. Government deplores the deaths which have occurred in the violence that has taken place. The United States urgently calls on the government of Nepal to exercise restraint in restoring order," said State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty.

"As a step towards this goal, we urge that a dialogue with opposition leaders begin immediately," she added.

Hospital sources in the Nepalese capital said three of the 10 dead were foreigners -- a Briton, an Irishman and a Dutchman --, apparently caught up in the demonstrations.

An estimated 450 non-official Americans are in Nepal. There were no reports of Americans being injured in Friday's violence, the worst since Nepal's pro-democracy campaign began seven weeks ago.

In a March 28 travel advisory, the State Department advised U.S. citizens to exercise caution when traveling to Nepal because of persisting political tension there.

KABUL (APRIL 6) - Afghan's state-controlled media blotted out Friday's massacre during a ceremony billed as the largest surrender of arms by anti-government guerrillas to government forces.

The national television showed clips of mujahedeen fighters standing patiently in a square in western Herat province waiting for government generals.

But it did not broadcast the shooting that broke out when guerrillas fired on generals and political leaders of Afghanistan's ruling People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA) and when government tanks responded by firing into a crowd of some 10,000.

The state radio, often quoted by Islamabad, said several people including senior Afghan officials were injured during the arms surrender ceremony in the village, which is more than 1,200 kilometers (720 miles) from the capital.

PRAGUE (APRIL 6) - The Czechoslovak attorney-general launched legal proceedings Friday to identify those responsible for the 1968 Soviet-led invasion to crush the Prague Spring reform movement.

Those who called in Soviet and other Warsaw Pact troops to crush the short-lived reforms will be prosecuted under a 1950 law on defending peace introduced by the former hardline communist regime, CTK news agency said.

But they will not be charged with high treason as the statute of limitations stipulates that treason charges cannot be brought more than 20 years after the alleged crime, deputy attorney general Lubomir Velet said.

Most of the suspects are still alive and occupied high government posts until the fall of the communist regime in November.

They were named as Vasil Bilak, Alois Indra, Karel Hoffmann and Bohuslav Chnoupek.

Investigators will rely on documents in government and communist party files.

President Vaclav Havel set up a committee of historians and lawyers to study the crushing of the Prague Spring. The committee's findings, which have not yet been released, will also be used in the investigation.

CAPE TOWN (APRIL 6) - Pan Africanist Congress leader Zeph Mothopeng on Friday scorned the rival African National Congress for holding talks with the Pretoria government.

Speaking at Mitchell's Plein mixed-race township near here, Mr. Mothopeng said the PAC was "not a talker but a pacesetter". He warned that the hardline group was preparing to take "positive action".

"We are now preparing to enter the last lap," he said without elaborating.

The PAC, which broke away from the ANC in 1959, claims it is attracting thousands of militant black youths disillusioned with the ANC's decision to conditionally join President Frederik de Klerk at the negotiating table.

"We must free ourselves, we must get back our land," Mr. Mothopeng said.

Backing him, PAC's co-ordinator for the Western Cape, Barney Desai, said: "The smell of appeasement is thick in the air".

"Negotiations now is selling out. What you have won in battle you will never win again on the negotiating table. At this moment the cards are stacked against us," Mr. Desai said.

On Thursday, ANC deputy president Nelson Mandela took the organization into informal talks with Pretoria when he sat down for a three-hour session in Cape Town with a powerful government team led by Mr. De Klerk.

After the meeting, Mr. De Klerk and Mr. Mandela separately announced that the ANC and the government would soon hold the official "talks about talks" which were scheduled for April 11 but cancelled last weekend by the ANC.

Mr. Mandela has listed as conditions for the ANC joining full-scale negotiations with the government the ending of the state of emergency, the return of all exiles under a general amnesty, the end to political trials and the release of all political prisoners.

But the PAC has rejected negotiations out of hand until there is one person, one vote in a unitary state.

"It smells. It smells awfully," Mr. Desai said of the ANC's position. "Truly it would appear that the ANC is well on its way to a transformation to the Anglo National Congress."

The PAC and the ANC, which also differ over the role of whites in the anti-apartheid struggle, were outlawed in 1960 after committing themselves to the violent overthrow of the white minority Pretoria government.

Political analysts say that the unbanning of the two organizations by Mr. De Klerk on February 2 has increased competitiveness in resistance politics and has accentuated differences.

South African Institute of International Affairs researcher Gary van Staden says that ANC supporters are confused by the organization's talk of negotiations on the one hand and armed struggle on the other.

The PAC, conversely has been single-minded in its commitment to the armed struggle.

"An unwavering, unambiguous, uncompromising voice will ... strongly appeal to radical blacks," Mr. Van Staden said of the PAC's stance.

He said while it was impossible to measure the PAC's support on the ground, there was no denying the organization was enjoying a "significant revival".

At the launch Friday, PAC general secretary Bennie Alexander scoffed at the ANC's cited reason for withdrawing from the April 11 talks -- the shooting dead by police of between nine and 11 protestors in Sebokeng black township, south of Johannesburg.

He said the real reason the talks were postponed was that the masses on the ground were creating their own climate, a climate of revolution, and that disgruntled ANC members were joining the PAC in droves.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) - President George Bush called on Israel Friday to enter into negotiations with Palestinian leaders on the future of the occupied territories, but said U.S. aid to Israel would not be tied to such talks.

The president also gave an assurance that the United States would not force Israel's leaders to talk to the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) under the "Baker Plan," named for Secretary of State James Baker.

The plan calls for initial talks among the United States, Israel and Egypt, followed by an Israeli-Palestinian dialogue to prepare for elections in the West Bank and Gaza Strip of Palestinian delegates who would discuss the territories' future with Israel.

"What I would like Israel to do is to meet under the Baker plan and discuss peace," Mr. Bush told a meeting of newspaper editors. "I have no intention to tying aid with that."

One of the Israeli leaders' fears was that they would be compelled to talk to the PLO, Mr. Bush said. "We have made very clear to them, in detailed negotiations, that that was not the case."

Mr. Bush said former president Jimmy Carter was acting on his initiative when he met PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat in Paris Wednesday in a bid to reinvigorate the peace process.

"He was not acting with the blessing of nor the disapproval ... of the administration," the president said.

LIMA (APRIL 6) EFE - Up to ten million Peruvians are to brave leftist rebel threats Sunday when they vote in general elections amid concerns of the inadequacy of an archaic electoral system.

All members of the security forces are to be mobilized for the poll, following the Maoist "Shining Path" rebel groups' pre-election increase in attacks and threats to kill candidates and voters.

The government has taken out life insurance policies for the 250,000 vote-counters and electoral officials and for bus drivers who fear reprisals from Shining Path who have called an "armed strike" for election day.

Opinion polls forecast a second-round run off between favored presidential candidate and novelist Mario Vargas Llosa and one of eight other contenders, raising fears that the archaic ballot system could delay the naming of a new president for months. Votes are still being tallied from municipal elections in November.

Observers say that an interim government might have to take over when President Alan Garcia steps down July 28 for want of a conclusive result.

Novelist-turned-politician Vargas Llosa of the center-right FREDEMO coalition has been forecast to garner up to 45 percent of the vote in recent opinion polls.

But the figure is still short of the constitutionally-required absolute majority and he may have to contest the run off which would probably be held in June.

Darkhorse independent candidate Alberto Fujimoro of the recently-formed "Cambio 90" party, backed by the Evangelist church, has emerged as a likely second-round contender with a recent poll predicting up to 20 percent of votes in his favor.

Economic recovery has featured prominently in the campaign, with Vargas

Llosa promising to slash state bureaucracy and subsidized industries and institute emergency reform projects to relieve extreme poverty.

APRA has countered Vargas Llosa's free market proposals with promises of tax reductions and guaranteed labor stability, but are expected to lose out heavily to FREDEMO in the poll.

Peru's ten million registered voters, about half the population, are required by law to cast their vote Sunday to elect a president, two vice presidents, 180 deputies, 60 senators and, for the first time, regional assembly representatives.

The poll, the most contested in Peru's history with some 3,500 candidates taking part, will be the third since 12 years of military rule ended in 1980, and the third democratic election to be held in succession for the first time in 50 years. Peru was governed by military dictatorships between 1968 and 1980.

An average of four security force members have been provided for the protection of each candidate and all military and police staff are to be mobilized Sunday to protect 52,000 polling stations around the country.

Large numbers of troops and police are to be concentrated in the Andean rebel stronghold departments of Ayacucho, Huncavelica, Apurimac, and Junin.

President Alan Garcia has imposed a state of emergency in these departments and in the capital and the neighboring port city of Callao where Shining Path has threatened to kill candidates and voters.

Shining Path has killed at least 800 people this year while some 19,000 people have died in fighting since the group took up arms in 1980.

Hundreds of people died in rebel attacks during 1985 general elections and the municipal polls last November when Shining Path threatened to cut off voter's fingers.

MADRID (APRIL 6) EFE - Bus workers in the Spanish capital agreed Friday to call off a 22-day-long strike after winning a pay raise five percent above what they had originally demanded, union officials said. It was Madrid's longest municipal bus strike in ten years.

Bus workers at the Municipal Transport Company voted to end the strike called on March 16 after the city council offered a 12.5 percent pay rise and promises of further hikes over the next two years.

The stoppage, called by an unofficial strike committee and criticized as undemocratic by the main labor unions, affected daily about 1.5 million commuters who use buses in the capital.

PALMA (APRIL 6) EFE - A British girl and her Spanish boyfriend were arrested Friday following the stabbing deaths of two brothers on the holiday island of Majorca in a fight over a football match, authorities said.

The suspects, Tracey Hankes, 28, of Liverpool, and Pedro Chavez, 34, were caught and arrested by police working on a description of their car from witnesses to the fight.

Chavez is suspected of stabbing to death the two brothers, Jesus and Jose Lagos Ramos, aged 22 and 27 respectively, following a row over the Spanish Cup final between Real Madrid and Barcelona played Thursday night.

Hankes was arrested as a suspected accomplice in the murders. She allegedly kicked and jumped on one of the victims as he lay bleeding in the street.

Blood was found both on the inside and outside of Chaves' car.

Chavez was thought to be a Real Madrid fan while the two brothers were supporters of Barcelona, who won the cup final 2-0.

LUSAKA (APRIL 6) XINHUA - INFLATION HITS 122 PERCENT IN ZAMBIA BY THE END OF LAST YEAR LARGELY AS A RESULT OF PRICE DECONTROL AND DEVALUATION OF THE KWACHA, THE NATION'S CURRENCY, ACCORDING TO OFFICIAL STATISTICS ISSUED

HERE TODAY.

THE CENTRAL STATISTICS OFFICE OF ZAMBIA SAID IN A REPORT THAT THE HIGH INFLATION RATE HAS REDUCED THE PURCHASING POWER OF THE KWACHA TREMENDOUSLY AND CAUSED SEVERE HARDSHIPS TO THE COUNTRY'S LOW-INCOME GROUP.

THE CONSUMER PRICE INDEX FOR THE LOW INCOME BRACKET ROSE BY 123.9 PERCENT BETWEEN JANUARY AND NOVEMBER LAST YEAR WHILE IT REGISTERED A 49.5 PERCENT INCREASE FOR THE HIGH-INCOME BRA- CKET DURING THE THIRD QUARTER AS COMPARED WITH THE SECOND QUAR- TER.

IN ADDITION, THE KWACHA WAS DEPRECIATED SEVERAL TIMES LAST YEAR FROM 8 KWACHA EQUALLING ONE DOLLAR TO ABOUT 40 KWACHA EQUALLING ONE DOLLAR.

MEANWHILE, A STUDY CARRIED OUT AT THE BEGINNING OF THIS YEAR BY ZAMBIAN CENTRAL STATISTICE OFFICE IN FOUR MAJOR CITIES AND ALSO SHOWED THAT PRICES FOR MOST COMMODITIES HAVE SHOT UP BY MORE THAN 60 PERCENT.

HOUSTON (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Granada BioSciences, Inc. (AMEX: GBI) today reported a narrowing of its losses and a significant increase in revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Margins widened in the final 1989 quarter as the net loss declined 76 percent on a sales increase of 72 percent.

The Texas-based biotechnology company's net loss for the year was $16,077,000, or $3.03 per common share, 61 percent less than the net loss of $41,218,000, or $7.78 per common share, in 1988. Both 1988 and 1989 results were based on 5,300,000 average common shares outstanding.

Revenues for the year were $14,303,000, up 84 percent from $7,769,000 in the prior year.

In the 1989 fourth quarter, the company reported a net loss of $4,878,000, or 92 cents per share, compared to a loss of $20,048,000, or $3.78 per share in the same period in 1988.

Revenues for the fourth quarter of 1989 were $3,224,000, a 72 percent increase over revenues of $1,876,000 in the 1988 period.

The company also announced that certain key executives intend to purchase approximately 50,000 shares of the company's common stock for investment purposes over the next three to four months.

The company had previously announced that it would make financing available to the executives for the purchase of up to 100,000 shares of common stock, of which 50,000 shares has been acquired to date.

Granada BioSciences, Inc. is a biotechnology and genetic engineering company which focuses its technologies on improving the quality of food products. WICHITA, KS (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Brite Voice Systems Inc. (NASDAQ: BVSI) has announced the sale of its first Cellular Information Network (CIN) system to GTE Mobilnet of San Francisco. Brite and GTE Mobilnet are working together to jointly develop specific audio applications for GTE's market under the terms of the sale.

CIN is a customized audiotex system designed to enhance the services offered by a cellular network provider to its subscribers.

Audiotex technology allows a variety of information to be stored in a computer, then accessed and heard through a touch-tone telephone. CIN makes the cellular telephone subscriber more productive by providing instant access to local, national and international information ranging from securities, financial reports, news, traffic reports, sports, recreation and other information.

GTE Mobilenet will be the exclusive provider of the service to the cellular market of the San Francisco Bay Area's 11 counties. GTE Mobilnet has customized all information categories it has selected to meet local needs and cellular interests. In addition, GTE Mobilnet has integrated the service directly into its switch for close control of the operation, format, and quality of the service to its market. Integration into switch operations also allows the company to give customers direct connection to reservation desks of airlines, entertainment box offices, and recreation services.

GTE Mobilnet customers will access the system, which the company is calling the Information Network, by dialing " INFO" and pressing the "Send" button. Service will begin April 2. Customers will be charged only for the airtime they use.

"Information Network is an innovative addition to other exclusive, value-added services we currently provide our subscribers," said Tony Frank, marketing and sales manager for GTE Mobilnet's Pacific Region. "It is an important step in our continuing efforts to increase the productivity of our subscribers and differentiate us from other carriers. It is one of the most innovative tools I've seen."

Other programs which have been popular with GTE Mobilnet's subscribers are Mr. Rescue, a 24 hour-a-day emergency road assistance service, and DriverGuide service, an operator-assisted program which provides detailed directions to the user's destination. "GTE Mobilnet's customers are able to access these programs directly from the Information Network," said

Frank.

Local information on this service includes traffic information updated every 15 minutes during the morning and afternoon drive times, news, weather, sports and local entertainment features, such as movie, theatre and restaurant reviews.

GTE Mobilnet will also provide a variety of business information, including securities data on over 9,500 stocks, options and mutual funds traded on the New York, American and OTC exchanges. This information will be updated routinely throughout the trading day. Subscribers will even be able to program in their personal portfolio of up to 10 securities for easy review of their current positions.

"Cellular Information Network is another example of our commitment to develop new and successful vertical market applications of our technology " said Stan Brannan, president and CEO of Brite Voice Systems. "We're pleased to have GTE Mobilnet of San Francisco as our initial customer. We look forward to developing additional exculsive features for their application which will further enhance the services they provide."

Brite's technology allows cellular service providers to customize their applications to suit their customer and market needs. Carriers have maximum flexibility to create new information categories or change existing ones with little effort.

GTE Mobilnet is one of the nation's largest cellular telephone service providers. They provide cellular service to over 34 major metropolitan cities. In the Bay Area, GTE Mobilnet was the first to provide cellular telephone service and is the largest toll-free carrier. GTE Mobilnet emphasizes service and innovation in winning subscribers.

DANBURY, CT (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The need for a well managed, systematic approach to meet the challenge of environmental excellence in the worldwide operations of corporations was stressed yesterday by Cornelius C. Smith, Jr., Union Carbide Corporation's vice president for health, safety and environmental protection, at the international conference, "Environment: Another Challenge for Industry," in Rome, Italy.

Smith said the foundation of an effective corporate environmental program is strong management support. "Management must demonstrate by actions rather than words that environmental excellence is an essential ingredient in the corporation," he said. "All of the basic management principles of planning, leading, organizing and controlling must be applied." Among the key elements of the program he cited are:

- Comprehensive, clearly understood worldwide environmental performance standards.
- An effective management system that includes quality training, internal and external communications, and expert skill center support.
- A structure and resources to measure performance and monitor progress, including an independent, corporate-level environmental auditing function.

Smith stressed the importance of companies making progressive environmental commitments. "It is ethically and morally the correct thing to do," he said. He said that, throughout the world, industry is making efforts to meet the challenge of environmental excellence.

"In 1988, the U.S. Chemical Manufacturers Association (CMA) began aggressive implementation of a Responsible Care initiative modeled after the Canadian commitment," he explained. "Robert D. Kennedy, chairman of Union Carbide Corporation and current chairman of CMA, has been discussing with chemical industry leaders the possibility of extending the Responsible Care initiative worldwide.

"This initiative would have a charter that establishes leading edge, worldwide environmental, health and safety objectives supportive of sustainable economic development. It would be a voluntary effort that would work toward achieving its objectives by encouraging individual trade associations and industry group initiatives, like Responsible Care, that are tailored to specific industries."

Smith added that industry leaders who have made the commitment to improve environmental performance know it will result in long-term benefits for the public and industry. "I believe that the worldwide chemical industry is well positioned to ride the crest of the new wave of global environmentalism," he said.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Copperweld Corp. (NYSE: COS) today announced that it was calling for redemption of its 9.92 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2008 ("subordinated debentures").

The redemption date has been set for Monday, April 23. The corporation stated that it is mailing today to each holder of record as of April 6, 1990, the notice of redemption of its subordinated debentures.

The notice of redemption explains the terms of the redemption call and the instructions for the subordinated debenture holder to follow if he selects to redeem his securities. The alternative to redemption is for the subordinated debenture holder to convert his securities into the corporation's $.83-1/3 par value common stock. These instructions are also included as part of the notice of redemption package mailed to the subordinated debenture holders.

According to Douglas E. Young, vice president and chief financial officer of the corporation, "The agreement and plan of merger by and among Copperweld Corp., Imetal and Copperweld q?uisition Corp., dated March 28, 1990, requires that unless otherwise agreed to between Copperweld and Imetal, Copperweld would send notice of redemption within 10 business days of the date of the agreement and thereafter redeem its then outstanding 9.92 percent convertible subordinated debentures at the earliest possible date."

Young stated, "Pursuant to the merger agreement and assuming its consummation, holders of shares of the corporation's $.83-1/3 par value common stock, other than Imetal, would receive $17 net in cash per share. However, the merger agreement may be terminated upon the occurrence of certain events and, should this happen, the market value of the corporation's $.83-1/3 par value common stock, including those shares that a holder of subordinated debentures would own after the conversion of his subordinated debentures, may be substantially less than the $17 per share to be paid pursuant to the merger ageement. Although the corporation does not believe that any such termination is likely, there can be no absolute assurance as to such matters."

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Beard Oil Co. (AMEX: BOC) announced today that it has signed a letter of intent with American First Corp. (OTC) (AFCO), its wholly-owned subisidiary, Tricon America Corp. ("Tricon") and ML Oklahoma Venture Partners, Limited Partnership ("ML") to provide interim and permanent financing to Tricon.

At the conclusion of the transaction, Tricon will be owned 60 percent by Beard Oil, 20 percent by ML and its co-investors, and 20 percent by AFCO. The completion of the transaction is subject to the execution of a definitive agreement and board approval by the respective companies.

Tricon manufactures and installs enclosures for the telecommunications industry. It has the world-wide license to manufacture and install a patented below-ground fiberglass composite controlled environment vault. It leases a 150,000 square foot manufacturing facility located on a 40-acre plant site in Burlington, Kan.

Pending the contemplated closing of the transaction, Beard Oil and ML have agreed to provide an additional $500,000 secured loan from Tricon's primary bank which will be used for working capital purposes by Tricon, and the bank will extend the term of Tricon's $1.5 million revolving credit facility to July 2, 1990.

Herb Mee, Jr., president, stated, "We believe that Tricon has come up with a state-of-the-art product line to meet the growing needs of the major equipment purchasers in the telecommunications industry. We also feel that, with adequate working capital, Tricon will emerge as one of the leading suppliers of enclosures to the industry.

"As a result of Beard Oil's $60,000,000 Shared Appreciation Debenture financing in November 1989, the company was reorganized into two segments. The oil and gas division is the basic segment, with three major institutional investors currently sharing in any appreciation in the net asset value of this division. Beard Oil's non-oil and gas businesses and properties comprise the other segment. If the Tricon transaction is consummated, this would be the first major investment made by the company's non-oil and gas segment since the reorganization."

Beard Oil is a diversified, natural resource development company headquartered in Oklahoma City. Its principal business is oil and gas exploration and production, with an emphasis on secondary recovery operations. The company is also involved in carbon dioxide (CO_2) and iodine production. Beard Oil's common stock is traded on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol BOC.

EAST AURORA, NY (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Fisher-Price today announced that it is conducting a safety campaign involving approximately 20,000 Fisher-Price Car Seats (model number 9101) sold to consumers since Feb. 1, 1990 which require modification by consumers. Some of the car seats may have metal tongues which could break during a crash. Fisher-Price discovered this problem during car seat testing.

The modification affects only car seat number 9101 sold to consumers since

Feb. 1, 1990. According to Fisher-Price, some of the metal tongues to which the car seat shield is secured are defective. Therefore, these seats do not meet Federal Motor Vehicle Standard No. 213, which governs child restraint systems. Fisher-price will provide owners with a free modification kit to be used to repair their car seats to meet safety standards.

Seats with an inspection sticker on the package dated April 1990 or later meet or exceed all government safety standards and do not require modifying.

Fisher-Price urges owners of seats purchased since Feb. 1, 1990 to call the company toll-free at 1-800-327-9980 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. to request a free modification kit. Consumers should have the car seat nearby when calling Fisher-Price. Seats should not be returned to the stores where they were purchased.

TAMPA, FL (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Link-Miles Simulation Corporation ("LMSC"), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bicoastal Corporation, today announced it signed a contract on April 4, 1990, with SYPRO of Sweden to provide hardware updates and full software replacement services for KSU's B-1 nuclear power plant simulator. LMSC has been supplying nuclear power plant simulators and services to Sweden since 1980, representing one of their largest software development programs.

On April 5, 1990, Pennsylvania Power & Light Company (PP&L) awarded LMSC a contract to provide a state-of-the-art nuclear power plant control room simulator for the training and qualification of operators for its Susquehanna Steam Electric Station. The simulator, to be delivered in July 1992, will replace the simulator developed in the 70's with the sophistication made available by advances in computer and simulation technology. It will provide comprehensive operator training to assure PP&L of achieving its nuclear mission of providing reliable and efficient maximum power generation with no compromise to public or employee safety.

Dean Crawford, president of LMSC, reported that the PP&L simulator, LMSC's most comprehensive trainer to date, will be the first to be developed and completed in LMSC's new expanded headquarters facility in Columbia, Md.

Link-Miles Simulation Corporation offers a full line of simulator systems and software for both nuclear and fossil fuel power plants and petrochemical process plants.

NEW HYDE PARK, NY (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Designatronics, Inc. (AMEX: DSG) announced today that for the second quarter ended Feb. 28, 1990, net sales were $8,949,000, compared to $6,338,000 which represents a 41.2 percent increase as compared to the same period last year. The net profit for the second quarter was $193,000 as compared to $115,000 in fiscal 1989. Earnings per share were $.07, compared to $.04 for the year earlier.

For the six months ended Feb. 28, 1990, net sales were $16,047,000 compared to $12,260,000 which represents a 30.9 percent increase as compared to the same period last year. The net profit for the six months was $322,000 as compared to $176,000 in fiscal 1989. Earnings per share were $.11, compared to $.06 for the year earlier.

The gross profit margin for the three and six month periods ended Feb. 28, 1990 have decreased to 23.5 percent and 26.3 percent, respectively, as compared to the prior year figures of 30.6 percent and 31.0 percent. This change was mainly due to a less favorable product mix.

Selling, general and administrative expenses as a percentage of sales, were 20.1 percent in the current quarter and 22.8 percent on a year to date basis as compared to 25.7 percent and 27.0 percent, respectively, for the comparable prior year periods. This change was caused by the additional sales pertaining to scheduled government contract shipments.

Interest expense has increased 26.5 percent for the current quarter and 47.1 percent on a year to date basis, as compared to their respective prior year periods. This increase was caused by the additional borrowing under the company's bank credit line.

The company's working capital position increased to $11.4 million as of

Feb. 28, 1990 as compared to $10.4 million as of the year ended Aug. 31, 1989. The current ratio at Feb. 28, 1990 has increased to 5.9:1 from the 4.5:1 ratio at Aug. 31, 1989.

The company's unused credit line of $3,160,000 at Feb. 28, 1990 ensures the availability of financial resources for operational flexibility and expansion. There are no material commitments for capital expenditures at February 28, 1990.

Designatronics, Inc. designs, manufactures and markets a wide array of mechanical, electromechanical and electronic components and sub-assemblies. Its products are distributed worldwide for use in factory automation, robotics, computers, computer peripherals and telecommunications equipment.

Total sales for the quarter were $691.1 million, up 23 percent from $563.5 million in the final quarter of fiscal 1989. Comparable store sales rose 2 percent.

March 1990 sales increased 28 percent to $159.3 million from $124.2 million in March 1989. Comparable stores sales rose 6 percent for the month.

Circuit City's gross profit margin for the fiscal year rose to 29.5 percent of sales compared with 29.2 percent in the preceding fiscal year.

As expected, selling, general and administrative expenses increased for the fiscal year to 23.0 percent of sales from 22.0 percent in fiscal 1989. The expense ratio was impacted principally by continued investments in customer service, store expansion and the lower comparable sales growth.

The rise in Circuit City's gross profit margin partially offset the increase in the expense ratio, producing a pre-tax profit margin of 6.1 percent. A lower effective tax rate, which resulted from lower state taxes in fiscal 1990 versus fiscal 1989, yielded a net profit margin of 3.7 percent.

Circuit City Stores Inc. is the nation's largest specialty retailer of brand-name consumer electronics and major appliances. With headquarters in Richmond, Va., it operates 125 Superstores, 20 Circuit City stores and four Impulse mall stores in the Eastern United States and in California, Nevada and Arizona.

HARRINGTON PARK, NJ (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Officials of United Water Resources (NYSE: UWR), NUI Corporation (NYSE: NUI), and Pennsylvania Enterprises, Inc. (NASDAQ: PENT), have announced they will continue negotiations toward the merger of PEI into NUI and United Water's purchase of the water operations and related assets of Pennsylvania Gas and Water Company (PG&W), a PEI subsidiary, even though definitive agreements were not signed by today's deadline, earlier established.

The letter of intent reached in December expired by its terms today. An original signing deadline of Feb. 28 was extended twice to allow the parties time to complete the negotiation of the definitive documentation for the complex transaction.

The preliminary agreement announced Dec. 14 calls for stockholders of PEI to receive from NUI approximately $52.05 for each share of PEI common stock in the merger. Thirty percent of the aggregate purchase price will be payable in cash and the remainder in shares of NUI common stock, valued at the average price over 20 trading days prior to the merger. In no event will PEI stockholders receive more than 3.0 shares or fewer than 2.6 shares for each full share of PEI common stock exchanged for NUI common stock. NUI has the right to pay up to an additional 20 percent of the merger consideration in cash.

The December preliminary agreement also calls for the acquisition by United Water of the water operations and related assets of PG&W for $222 million, subject to adjustment for several factors, including among others the level of expenditures associated with the construction program currently under way by PG&W.

United Water's purchase of PG&W's water operations would be subject to consummation of the PEI/NUI merger, termination of the waiting periods under federal anti-trust laws, receipt of regulatory approvals and certain other conditions.

Pennsylvania Gas and Water Company provides water service to a population of about 425,000 in northeastern Pennsylvania, including the cities of Scranton and Wilkes-Barre.

ADA, MI (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Amway Corporation, one of the world's largest network marketing companies, is distributing the new BreakMate compact fountain soft-drink dispenser under a recent agreement with The Coca-Cola Company (NYSE: KO).

BreakMate is specifically designed to satisfy refreshment needs of small offices and businesses. Independent Amway distributors install BreakMate machines for customers and can provide a total refreshment program.

In addition to delivering one-liter cartridges of soft-drink syrup for the BreakMate, Amway distributors can service the same office or small business account with other refreshments, including Amway's line of NINE TO FIVE coffee products, Critic's Choice snacks, POSITRIM Food Bars and ACTIVE 8 Fruit Squeeze Juice Drinks.

Coca-Cola USA, the domestic soft drink division of The Coca-Cola Company, began test marketing BreakMate in 1987 and launched a national introduction in the fall of 1988. The revolutionary, high-tech soft drink dispensing system has been available primarily through office coffee service and bottled water operators, vending companies, bottlers of Coca-Cola, and new companies specializing in BreakMate distribution.

BreakMate is the result of one of the most significant research and development projects in the history of The Coca-Cola Company. About the size of a microwave oven, it was designed to meet the daily soft drink needs of low-volume locations -- specifically workplaces with up to 75 employees.

The machine make Coca-Cola affordable and available to approximately 1 million small- to medium-sized companies that do not have soft drinks available on site. BreakMate can dispense up to three soft drink products from Coca-Cola USA in one of two pre-programmed drink sizes.

BreakMate becomes the latest in a range of products and services available from independent Amway distributors. In addition, more than 300 items carry the Amway name, in product categories including home care, personal care, hometech, health and fitness, and commercial business.

BOSTON, MA (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Joseph D. Pellegrino, acting regional administrator for the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) Region I, announced the recent appointment of Kenneth Wong as the Regional International Trade Officer for SBA in New England. Wong assumed this position March 25, 1990.

As the regional international trade officer, Wong is responsible for overseeing and coordinating international trade assistance to current and potential small or minority exporters through financial and business development activities. The SBA's international trade assistance includes the export revolving line of credit program and international trade loans as well as business development counseling, business management training and referrals and publications.

Prior to this appointment, Wong was a business development specialist and district international trade officer with SBA's Boston District Office from 1987 to 1990. From January to November 1987, he was a program development coordinator with Tufts University China Executive Development Program in Medford, Mass.

Wong worked with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in Boston from 1979 to 1987 where he served as a Presidential Management Intern, then as an administrative officer then as a contractor budget specialist. A native of Boston, Wong earned a masters degree in business adminstration in 1979 from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. He earned a masters degree in Asian studies in 1973 and was a doctoral candidate in Chinese history also from the University of Michigan. In 1970, he was awarded a bachelor's degree cum laude from Tufts University.

Wong is a member of the International Business Advisory Committee of Bunker Hill Community College in Boston and is a member of the Smaller Business Association of New England's International Trade Committee.

Region I, one of 10 SBA regions, is responsible for assisting, counseling and championing small business in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. Created by Congress in 1953, SBA's mission is to help people get into business, help them stay in business, help small firms win federal procurement contracts, help victims of natural disasters, and to act as a strong advocate for small business.

DALLAS (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - American Airlines announced today that it will establish a museum to honor aviation pioneer and long-time American Airlines President C.R. Smith.

"On behalf of the entire American Airlines family, it gives me great satisfaction to announce the American Airlines C.R. Smith Museum," said Robert L. Crandall, American's chairman and chief executive officer.

C.R. Smith was appointed chief executive of American Airlines in 1934 and served in that capacity for more than 30 years. Smith died April 4 in Bethesda, Md., after a lengthy illness. He was 90.

The museum will chronicle the history of American, which has become the largest commercial airline in the Western world. The collection will include permanent and changing exhibits featuring artifacts, equipment, uniforms, documents and photographs from American's colorful past.

A special section of the museum will be devoted to the life and times of "Mr. C.R." -- as he was affectionately known to American employees -- and will document his career as a leading U.S. businessman, innovator, military officer and cabinet member.

One major exhibit will be a refurbished DC-3, the internationally known aircraft that Smith inspired. Under his guidance, development of the DC-3 became a joint project between American and Douglas Aircraft. Smith purchased the first 25 of the planes, introduced in 1936, and the DC-3 became the most famous piston engine transport ever built.

The museum will be housed in a 24,000-square-foot facility at the American Airlines Flight Academy in AMR Corp.'s headquarters complex near DFW International Airport. American will build an 8,000-foot addition and remodel a vacant 16,000-square-foot wing of the academy to provide the necessary space.

Crandall called it appropriate that the museum is being built in the center of American's training complex, where it will perpetuate the legacy of C.R. Smith and show new employees what Smith meant to the company.

American Airlines employees, as well as aircraft manufacturers and other aviation interests, will be invited to contribute memorabilia and to support the museum in other ways.

Construction of the museum is scheduled to begin later this year and will be completed by the end of 1991. The museum will be open to the public.

BUZZARDS BAY, MA (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Rear Admiral John F. Aylmer, president of Massachusetts Maritime Academy, yesterday informed the school's board of trustees of his plans to step down. He will continue to serve as president pending the appointment of his successor, recommended by a search committee selected by the trustees. Aylmer said he shall remain president no later than July 1991.

Aylmer was appointed president of the Academy in February 1981 by Trustees of the Massachusetts State College System. Chosen from among 54 candidates, Aylmer succeeded Rear Admiral Lee Harrington for the position.

During Aylmer's tenure, the Academy set new standards in academic excellence, scoring highest on the rigorous U.S. Coast Guard exams for the past four years -- better than any other state academy, or the U.S. Maritime Academy at King's Point, N.Y. The school has also expanded its state-of-the-art training equipment and scholarship resources under his leadership.

On February 13, 1989 the Board of Regents of Higher Education voted unanimously to continue the Academy as a freestanding institution. Chancellor Franklyn G. Jenifer had previously recommended to the board that Massachusetts Maritime Academy should be neither closed nor merged with Southeastern Massachusetts University, to avoid the loss of valuable educational resources for Massachusetts residents.

Prior to his appointment to the Academy, he was elected to the State Senate, serving the Cape and Islands district for 12 years. He had also been Selectman-Assessor for the town of Barnstable from 1966 to 1970.

Founded in 1891, Massachusetts Maritime Academy is the oldest continuously operating maritime academy in the United States.

COSTA MESA, CA (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Viratek Inc. (NASDAQ: VIRA) today reported that first quarter net income of $182,000, or 2 cents a share, compared to net income of $440,000, or 5 cents a share, in the first quarter of 1989.

The first quarter of 1989 benefited from a one-time gain of $2 million related to a reduction in anticipated costs associated with the completion of certain studies.

Revenues in the quarter totaled $1.2 million, compared to $1.4 million in last year's first quarter. Viratek receives royalties from the sale of Virazole (ribavirin) by SPI Pharmaceuticals Inc. Royalties in the first quarter were net of SPI marketing and selling expenses of $3.3 million, versus $1.8 million in the comparable 1989 quarter.

Virazole is authorized for marketing in the United States for the aerosolized treatment of infants and young children hospitalized with severe respiratory tract infection caused by respiratory syncytial. virus. Patient treatments with ribavirin for RSV in the U.S. increased 60 percent in the first quarter over last year's first quarter. In addition, ribavirin treatments outside the U.S. for other indications were also ahead, such as in Mexico, where ribavirin sales were 38 percent ahead of last year's first quarter as the result of increased medical usage for measles, herpes simplex virus and herpes zoster.

TULSA, OK (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Kinark Corporation (AMEX, PSE: KIN) announced today that it has executed a mutual contract to sell the Camelot Hotels for $12 million cash in a private transaction. The contract provides for appropriate transfer of title after completing review of real estate elements. The transfer of funds for final payment is expected within 90 days.

The transaction will be included in the fourth quarter of 1989 as a net charge to discontinued operations of $6.7 million, or $1.89 per share, to recognize net realizable value at closing. On Feb. 16, 1990, the company announced preliminary earnings of $2.0 million or 56 cents per share from its continuing operations for 1989. After giving effect to the hotel transaction, the company expects to report a net loss of $4.7 million, or $1.33 per share, for 1989.

"Capital released by the hotel sale will pay essentially all bank debt," said Walker. "Writing down the hotel value to support the selling price is consistent with the past strategy communicated to investors:

redeployment of assets to achieve growth objectives."

The systematic expansion of earnings demonstrated by chemicals and galvanizing is expected to continue following completion of the hotel sale. In the year just concluded, the company's core galvanizing and chemical businesses generated a record $2.0 million net earnings. It is significant that the earnings per share from these continuing operations have increased from 19 cents in 1986 to 56 cents in 1989. Walker indicated, "The value of our company will be enhanced in the future by the growing earning power of these operations."

Kinark Corporation, with corporate headquarters in Tulsa, operates chemical facilities in Chicago and Montgomery, Ala., and supports industrial/commercial construction and metals corrosion protection with galvanizing plants in Denver; Louisville, Ky.; Nashville, Tenn.; St. Louis; Houston and Hurst, Texas.

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - "United Air Lines will be the largest employee-owned corporation in the world but it will face unique challenges," said employee ownership analyst and business professor Joseph R. Blasi of Rutgers University's Institute of Management and Labor Relation. He is author of "Employee Ownership: Revolution or Ripoff?" which is being released by Harper and Row this month.

"United is a profitable company that has been plagued by labor- management problems, high costs, and uncertainty in the takeover market. Compensation and work rule concessions, a five-year no-strike agreement, and labor-management cooperation on the board will give the company a big push in getting its house in order," Blasi added.

However, this ESOP expert sounded a cautionary note. "Employee ownership does not automatically lead to increased productivity and profitability. Workers will now have increased expectations about their involvement in the company. If United does not develop the most far- reaching employee communication program and labor-management problem- solving team program in corporate America, these expectations may end up being frustrated," said Blasi, who has studied employee-owned firms for a decade and is an employee representative on the board of directors of Northwestern Steel & Wire, the country's 10th largest steel company.

On the positive side, Blasi emphasized the positive track record of employee ownership in America. "The U.S. has over 10 million workers in over 10,000 companies with some employee ownership. About 1,500 companies are majority-owned by their employees and another 2,000 are 25 percent-50 percent owned by their employees. As a whole, research shows that these companies have been as financially successful as profitable as firms in comparable businesses that are not employee- owned.

Blasi pointed out the unique characteristics of the United deal. "United's employees will have real employee ownership including voting rights on their stock, board representatives, and through the board a say in hiring management. This is different than many other ESOP companies."

As for the broader impact, he said, "In the last three years over 300 public companies have sold 10 percent-50 percent of their stock to their employees. United will crystallize the public perception that employee ownership is legitimate and challenge worn out notions of the roles of management and labor in the corporation. This may be a hint of an American version of the so-called 'Japanese management'."

WHITE PLAINS, NY (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The United Kingdom Cable

Authority has awarded NYNEX Corporation (NYSE: NYN) and Cross Country Cable of New Jersey the cable television franchise for Bournemouth in the United Kingdom. Located on the south coast of England, the franchise contains the borough of Bournemouth and four towns in Dorset County -- Poole, Christchurch, Corfe Mullen and Upton. The franchise area contains 140,000 households. The announcement was made Apr. 5.

The franchise marks NYNEX's second cable franchise award in the United Kingdom. The first award was announced Mar. 16 for the London borough of Bromley.

The cable franchise enables NYNEX and Cross Country Cable to provide cable services to the Bournemouth area for 23 years. In addition, NYNEX and Cross Country Cable can now apply for a 23-year telecommunications license to provide voice services to area customers. Construction of the cable network is expected to begin in the fall.

NYNEX Corporation, based in New York, is the fourth largest telecommunications company in the United States ranking in sales. The company provides information products and systems to a diverse base of customers from offices in 13 countries and across the United States. Through New England Telephone and New York Telephone, NYNEX delivers quality telecommunications services to more than 13 million customers in the Northeastern United States.

Cross Country Cable, located in Warren, N.J., is a privately held company that has twelve years of experience developing cable television systems across North America and Puerto Rico. The Bournemouth/Poole award marks Cross Country Cable's third cable franchise award in the United Kingdom.

PONTIAC, MI (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The Oakland County, Mich., board of commissioners has contracted with Westinghouse Electric Corp. (NYSE: WX) to expand the capacity of its planned resource recovery plant here, it was announced today.

The plant capacity has been increased to 2,000 tons of municipal solid waste per day from the 1,500 tons originally planned in 1988. The project construction cost is $170.2 million.

Present plans call for the plant to be built on a site located at Brown and Giddings Roads, in Auburn Hills, Mich. The facility will fuel a 62-megawatt power plant. Construction could begin as early as the summer of 1990. Commercial operation is scheduled for the spring of 1993.

Westinghouse's resource energy systems division will design, build and operate the plant. The facility will be equipped with four Westinghouse O'Connor water-cooled rotary combustors. Eighteen such combustors are presently in operation at nine locations worldwide.

The facility will include four acid gas scrubbers and baghouses designed to meet all applicable air quality regulations. This equipment complies with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's "best available" control criteria.

The plant will reduce the volume of waste entering its combustors by about 90 percent. The remaining residue will be disposed of at a landfill to be designated by the county.

The county is negotiating with Detroit Edison for a power purchase agreement for electricity generated at the plant.

Westinghouse currently has resource recovery plants in operation, construction, under contract or negotiation in Panama City, Fla., Dutchess County, N.Y., York County, Pa., Delaware County, Pa., San Juan, Puerto Rico, Mercer County, N.J., Monmouth County, N.J., and Gaston County, N.C.

BALTIMORE (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Plans to attract biotechnology companies at The Johns Hopkins Bayview Research Campus in Baltimore have become a reality as two additional "start-up" companies leased space at the campus' Alpha Center, Baltimore's first biomedical incubator facility.

Paragon Biotech Inc. and Molecular Tool Inc. will occupy approximately 20 percent of the 30,000-square-foot incubator facility which houses office space, conference rooms, chemistry and biology labs and space for computer and electronics research and small scale manufacturing. They will join Antech Inc., and earlier tenant.

Alpha Center was developed with the help of a $1.3 million Maryland Industrial and Commercial Redevelopment Fund (MICRF) loan and a ten percent match from the City of Baltimore. This loan enabled Nova Pharmaceutical Corp. to move to Bayview's Triad Technology Center from the Alpha Center.

"Maryland has become a mecca for biotechnology and the new Alpha Center is a powerful magnet for small biotech companies," said J. Randall Evans,

Maryland secretary of Economic and Employment Development. "We congratulate the new tenants for being the first in the door."

Each company, starting with a handful of employees, is expected to help create a new job base in the area of biotechnology for the City of Baltimore. Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke stated, "Biotechnology is an important part of our economic development program for the 21st century. We are developing the infrastructure, financing mechanisms and human resources necessary to cultivate this burgeoning industry."

The city is investing $10 million over ten years to provide for roads and other infrastructure at Bayview, formerly the site of Baltimore City Hospitals.

Paragon Biotech Inc., founded a few months ago by Marco A. Chacon, Ph.D. and James M. Beshara, will develop a new cell culture medium to aid in the diagnosis of congenital abnormalities. The company also will research alternative methods for the purification of human chromosomes.

"We are determined to play an active role in support of national research projects, particularly in the field of human genetics," said Chacon. To support its research efforts, Paragon will manufacture and market cell culture products and contract services.

In addition, the company will offer electron microscopy services, a collection of hybrid cell lines expressing human chromosomes and a library of monoclonal antibodies applicable to the field of neurobiology.

DALLAS (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Soft Warehouse, the nation's largest operator of "one-stop" Computer Superstores, announced today the April 22 opening of a 28,000-square-foot facility located in the Kearney Mesa area of San Diego, with a planned grand opening celebration on Saturday, April 28.

Kearney Mesa will be the ninth Superstore to open coast-to-coast in a national expansion roll-out that has scheduled one new location a month for the next 18 months. "The San Diego store will not only serve as a retail outlet and corporate sale location, but also as the regional headquarters for the entire West coast," stated Nathan Morton, president and CEO of the company.

Soft Warehouse offers a huge variety of microcomputers, computer peripherals, software, supplies, accessories, and furniture. These stores make it possible for the first time for a corporation or an individual to purchase the complete selection of hardware and software products they need from a single source at prices between 30 and 80 percent below retail. In addition, direct-to-corporate telemarketing is conducted from different locations throughout the country.

Soft Warehouse, whose annual sales currently exceed $300 million, has achieved remarkable growth in the last four years. Each Superstore stocks over 5,000 computer related products and offers the most competitive pricing, together with the largest selection of computer related products, in America.

A full technical department in each store provides complete systems configuration, repair, maintenance and support. Service at the customer's own premise is also available.

"San Diego is a special market for us," said Morton, "since it is the home of warehouse retailing and a recognized center for computer companies and end users."

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - In what may be the most aggressive move into the insurance field any California bank has made since Proposition 103 permitted financial institutions to sell insurance products, First Interstate Bank of California has secured licenses for employees at 12 branches to sell annuities.

Before the close of 1990, 65 more First Interstate branches will have managers and personal banking officers trained and licensed to sell the interest-earning insurance product, which is designed to supplement retirement income.

An exclusive two-year agreement between First Interstate Bank of California and New York-based Essex Corp., the nation's largest independent third party vendor of annuities, provides that Essex will train selected bank employees to sell the annuities, and secure insurance licenses as well as offer marketing support. Essex provides products from a wide range of underwriters.

Cynthia Torres, the First Interstate vice president overseeing the bank's entry into the insurance product arena, explains, "Our branch managers and personal banking officers are already speaking with customers about their personal financial needs. We believe that offering annuities to those same customers is another way we can help meet customer needs for a tax-deferred, interest earning product."

First Interstate's fixed-rate annuities are long-term, interest- earning contracts primarily targeted to customers over 50 who are planning for supplemental retirement income. Unlike certificates of deposit, interest is tax-deferred until the holder withdraws interest from the annuity. Payment options are also available and are calculated based on the holder's anticipated life expectancy and insurance risk.

First Interstate Bank of California is a subsidiary of First Interstate Bancorp (NYSE: I), the nation's largest retail banking organization with 28 wholly owned banks in 14 states and 1,180 offices. First Interstate Bank of California services customers statewide through 329 offices.

DALLAS (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Recognition Equipment Inc. announced today that discussions are continuing with the Federal Reserve Banks (FRB) concerning the status of the contract between the company and the FRB for supply of second generation currency systems, commonly called the Automated Currency Processing System (ACPS).

During those discussions, and pursuant to mutual agreement with the FRB, Recognition ceased any further work under the contract.

The focus of the discussions is the terms under which the contract would be terminated. As previously announced, Recognition had received a notice of default under the ACPS contract from the FRB which the company believes is inappropriate. The company said it will continue to resist any attempted termination of the contract by the FRB on the basis of the alleged default.

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The Horn & Hardart Company (AMEX: HOR) today reported a net loss for fiscal 1989 of $8,959,000 or $0.63 per share as compared to a net loss of $32,501,000 or $2.29 per share, for fiscal 1988. The 1988 results included a $17 million restructuring charge.

The company reported that 1989 revenues increased 8 percent to $537,716,000 from $499,037,000 in fiscal 1988. The Hanover Companies', Horn & Hardart's direct marketing group, segment profit increased to $19,030,000 from $6,824,000 a year ago. The improvement at Hanover was offset by losses in the restaurant group and higher interest expense company-wide.

In the 1989 fourth quarter, Horn & Hardart reported a net loss of $3,873,000 or $0.27 per share, compared with net income of $1,080,000 or $0.08 per share reported a year ago. The 1989 fourth-quarter loss includes one-time expenses of $839,000 related to the company's restructuring activities and an income tax charge of $300,000. The 1988 period included a $1,510,000 gain on sale of marketable securities and an income tax benefit of $410,000. Revenues for the 1989 fourth quarter rose to $144,413,000 from $138,596,000 in the comparable 1988 period, reflecting the strong performance of The Hanover Companies.

The Hanover Companies reported a 21 percent increase in fourth- quarter revenues to $107,779,000 from $89,100,000 in the same 1988 period. Segment profit reached $5,687,000 in the quarter compared to $4,543,000 a year ago, primarily due to higher response rates on catalog circulation.

WATERBURY, CT (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Eagle Financial Corp. (AMEX: EAG) and Webster Financial Corporation (NASDAQ: WBST) jointly announced their mutual agreement to terminate their proposed merger.

The Boards of Directors of both companies have concluded that it is not in the best interests of their respective shareholders to proceed with the merger at this time. In light of the deterioration in the region's economy and the uncertainties of the regulatory environment in which both Webster and Eagle operate, the anticipated benefits to the shareholders resulting from the merger are not likely to be achieved. At the same time each party acknowledged that the other remains in strong financial condition with capital substantially exceeding all fully phased-in regulatory capital requirements. In making their respective decisions, the boards of directors of both Eagle and Webster emphasized the high regard which they continue to have for the other and for the management of each company.

Their merger, previously announced on Dec. 14, 1989 after execution of a definitive merger agreement, was structured as a tax-free, stock-for-stock merger of equals. In the merger, each shareholder of Eagle would have received .95 of a share of the merged holding company, with no change in the holdings of the Webster shareholders.

At Dec. 31, 1989, Webster reported total assets of $708.5 million and shareholder equity of $68.6 million, or $19.47 per share based on 3,525,559 outstanding shares. At the same date, Eagle reported total assets of $472.3 million and shareholder equity of $47.3 million, or $17.60 per share based on 2,689,335 outstanding shares. Webster is the holding company of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Waterbury with 10 banking offices in Connecticut. Eagle is the holding company of Bristol Federal Savings Bank and First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Torrington, with a total of nine banking offices in Connecticut.

RENO, NV (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Athena Gold Corp. (Vancouver: AGC) today announced that its wholly owned subsidiary, Athena Gold Inc., and Placer Dome U.S. Inc. (PDUS) (NYSE: PDG) will enter into a joint venture agreement for the exploration and development of the company's Talapoosa property. The terms of the Letter Agreement will allow PDUS to earn up to a 51 percent working interest in Athena's Talapoosa project in exchange for contributions, advances and work commitments over several stages that could reach $34,000,000 U.S. In addition, PDUS will also commit to make open market purchases of Athena's existing common stock in stages totalling another $5,000,000 U.S. and commencing with the prefeasibility study.

An exploration stage is planned that will precede the prefeasibility study. PDUS has committed up to an additional $1,000,000 U.S. to be spent exploring promising targets outside the Bear Creek Zone as well as an extension of the Bear Creek trend that has been identified from recently completed geophysical surveys of the Talapoosa. Metallurgical work will begin on both flotation and carbon-in-pulp processing. The exploration phase will be carried out in two steps and will be completed within 12 months. Work will begin immediately. $100,000 of the exploration phase budget will be allocated to Athena for its corporate use beginning the ninth month of the exploration program.

PDUS drilled 15 holes during the recently completed initial inspection phase. Five of the holes are core (TC series) and 10 of the drill holes are rotary reverse circulation (TAL series). The results of the PDUS drilling are reported below.

It is expected that the formal joint venture agreement between Athena and PDUS will be signed within 30 days.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Advanced Medical Technologies Inc. (AMEX: AMA), a company with diverse holdings in drug delivery technologies and novel therapeutics, today announced a net loss of $4,647,000 for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989. This compares to a loss of $2,068,000 for the fourth quarter of 1988.

Advanced Medical became operational in March 1989 when it acquired Fidata Corp. and Controlled Therapeutics Corp. Since then, Advanced Medical has acquired significant interest in five additional entities which have products with unique or complementary approaches to drug delivery.

On April 2, Advanced Medical announced its purchase of IMED, the leading U.S. infusion pump company, from the Fisher Scientific Group. The IMED transaction provided Advanced Medical with a business which had annual revenues in excess of $115 million in 1989.

The net loss for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, was $13,884,000 or ($1.59) per share compared to $6,450,000 or ($2.47) per share for the previous year. The weighted number of common shares outstanding increased from 2,626,000 in 1988 to 8,718,000 in 1989.

On a quarter to quarter basis, the loss per share was (44 cents) for the fourth quarter of 1989 compared to (79 cents) in the same quarter in 1988.

WATERBURY, CT (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Webster Financial Corporation (NASDAQ: WBST) holding company for First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Waterbury, Conn., announced today that it expects to report a first quarter profit of approximately $600,000 or 17 cents per share, after increasing its allowance for loan losses by $800,000 and charging off expenses relating to the terminated merger with Eagle Financial Corp. The allowance for loan losses at March 31, 1990 is estimated to be $3.8 million and will equal 29 percent of non-performing assets. Webster earned $1,208,000 or 34 cents per share in the first quarter of 1989.

Webster expects to charge off $450,000 ($270,000 net after taxes) of noninterest expense relating to the cost of the proposed merger with Eagle Financial Corp. which was terminated by mutual agreement on April 6, 1990.

Webster announced that it's non-performing assests increased to $13.0 million at March 31, 1990 from $8.0 million at December 31, 1989, due to a single commercial construction loan in the amount of $5.2 million which became due and was not paid in February 1990. The ratio of non-performing assets to total assets was 1.86 percent at March 31, compared to 1.13 percent at year end.

The $13.0 million of non-performing assets consists of $11.5 million of commercial real estate loans and $1.5 million of residential mortgage loans, consumer loans and real estate owned. The non-performing commercial loans consisted of two subdivision land loans and the commercial construction loan. Reserves totalling $2.5 million have been provided for the three properties based on independent appraisals which were obtained in the first quarter.

Webster had $508.5 million of total net loans receivable at March 31, of which $44.5 million were commercial real estate loans. The commercial portfolio had 22 loans on income producing properties totalling $23.0 million. In addition, the portfolio had 11 commercial construction loans totalling $8.9 million, three of which, in the amount of $1.6 million are on interest reserves. The portfolio also had three subdivision land loans totalling $9.3 million, two of which totalling $6.3 million are classified as nonperforming. Although the third land loan in the amount of $3.0 million is not classified as a non-performing loan, a specific reserve has been provided based on recent appraisal.

James C. Smith, president, said, "The continuing weakness in the region's real estate economy, including the slowdown in absorption rates for new commercial properties, has contributed to the increase in nonperforming assets. Given our relatively small commercial loan portfolio, and the fact that our commercial loans are secured by quality real estate properties, we believe that over time, potential losses can be minimized through careful management of the problem loans. We believe that the allowance for loan losses at March 31, is adequate given the current exposure to potential losses."

At December 31, 1989, Webster reported total assets of $708.5 million and shareholder equity of $68.6 million, or $19.47 per share based on 3,525,559 outstanding shares.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Logicon Inc. (NYSE: LGN) today announced that the board of directors has established a Stockholder Rights Plan, effective April 9, 1990, under which stockholders will be entitled to purchase additional shares of common stock upon the occurrence of certain specified events.

The Rights are designed to protect stockholder interests by encouraging parties seeking control of the company to negotiate with the board of directors. More than 1,000 public corporations have adopted such Stockholder Rights Plans in recent years in response to the large number of hostile, often abusive takeover attempts according to the company. The board has been considering the Stockholder Rights Plan for several months and its review has included consultation with outside financial and legal advisers.

The Rights to acquire additional shares of Logicon common stock would become exercisable only if a person, group or other outside organization acquires or tenders for 20 percent, or in certain circumstances 15 percent or more of Logicon's common stock. The Rights will be issued to stockholders of record as of May 15, 1990. Full details of the Plan will be mailed to stockholders in the next few weeks.

MIAMI (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastern Airlines today filed a petition in U.S. Bankruptcy Court seeking approval for an $80 million quarterly withdrawal from its over $800 million escrow accounts to supports its second quarter operations and make payments to various classes of creditors for both pre- and post-petition obligations during the same period.

Eastern said that, unlike previous monthly requests for cash, the company is requesting for the entire quarter "to avoid further repetition of the 'doomsday' scenario which enemies of the reorganization have attempted to create each time Eastern makes a request for cash."

The company reiterated its belief that much of the shortfall in revenues it revealed on March 27 is attributable to reduced public and travel agent confidence resulting from confusion surrounding its reorganization.

Eastern also expressed confidence that the company can successfully reorganize and that it plans to file its own reorganization plan next week with the court.

Eastern also called for the Court to stem the tide of leaked rumors from confidential deliberations of the Unsecured Creditors Committee that suggest Eastern is in imminent danger of liquidation. The airline said additional cash may be required if such rumors continue to damage its advance bookings.

Eastern asserted in its filing that the Committee has responded unreasonably to the company's good faith efforts to disclose modifications to its earlier revenue projections.

Eastern emphasized that a liquidation is clearly not in the best interest of any group involved in the bankruptcy -- particularly the unsecured creditors who would end up with very little in a liquidation and was pleased the committee apparently retreated from that course this week.

The company said the proposed reorganization plan presented to and rejected by the unsecured creditors committee last week would have paid creditors a 25 percent distribution, with $50 million in cash on confirmation with the remaining $190 million in 15 percent notes -- half from Continental and half from Eastern, but both of which would be guaranteed by Texas Air or Continental.

In that proposed plan Texas Air had said it would stand by its agreement with the court-appointed Examiner announced earlier this month that would provide over $280 million in consideration to Eastern, including over $130 million in cash.

Further financial, marketing and other support was to be provided to Eastern in conjunction with its reorganization, under the plan presented last week. This support included up to $40 million cash from Texas Air, with an immediate $13 million to support Eastern's April operations. An additional $25 million would be available if Eastern's losses exceeded most recent projections for the May 1 through August 1, 1990 period.

The company did not indicate the items to be contained in the plan to be filed next week, but said the plan would "fully address the economic realities presently confronting" the airline, "including any adverse affects" caused by the committee leaks.

Eastern called the committee's resolution to seek appointment of a trustee to oversee the sale of the airline a "ruse," since Eastern and Texas Air in early January and again this month gave their consent to the committee's financial advisors to seek a legitimate buyer that would preserve Eastern as a going concern.

Eastern said its reorganization objective to preserve Eastern as a going concern is fully attainable. That would preserve 18,000 jobs and Eastern's viability as a competitive air carrier and maximize returns for creditors. Eastern said it carried over 2 million passengers last month.

MIAMI (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - General Development (NYSE: GDV) announced today that it has filed petitions for relief under Chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code. The petitions, filed in the United States Bankruptcy Court in Miami, placed General Development and certain of its subsidiaries under the protection of the Bankruptcy Court while the company prepares a plan of reorganization.

General Development is one of the oldest and largest community developers in Florida and is a major company in the vacation timesharing industry.

The company's Vistana Resort and Glen Ivy subsidiaries, which operate timeshare resorts in Florida and the Western United States, did not seek Chapter 11 protection.

Under the provisions of Chapter 11, the current management will continue to operate the company under the supervision of the Bankruptcy Court. Certain major actions, such as borrowing money, undertaking major expenditures or selling major assets, will be subject to the approval of the Bankruptcy Court. The day-to-day decisions concerning the operations of the company's business will remain under the control of the company.

The company intends to seek debtor-in-possession financing for its cash needs during the reorganization. The company will be preparing a plan of reorganization to restructure its debts to put the company on a sound financial footing. The development of a plan will likely take a number of months and will be done in consultation with the committee of creditors that will be appointed to represent the interests of creditors in the case.

The company asked the court for approval to pay its current employees their regular paychecks. Since the filing took place in the middle of a pay period, the company needs approval of the court to make its regular payroll and to continue its employee benefit programs so that none of its employees is adversely affected by the filing.

The company also asked the court for authority to retain accountants and counsel to represent it during the Chapter 11 case. The accountants are the firm of Deloitte & Touche. Counsel to the company will be the Washington, D.C. law firm of Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering, and the Miami firm of Greenberg, Traurig, Hoffman, Lipoff, Rosen & Quentel, P.A.

MIAMI (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - A federal court jury here Friday denied claims of unfair competition by electronics giant Philips N.V. and its U.S. subsidiary, North American Philips, found them guilty of anti-trust activities, and awarded $29 million to Windmere Corp., which had sold rotary shavers in competition with Philips' Norelco line.

Under federal law, monetary damages in antitrust cases are automatically trebled, giving Windmere $87 million.

"The rotary shaver war was started by Philips in 1984 as part of an attempt to drive Windmere out of the rotary business," said Gary Hoffman of Washington's Dickstein, Shapiro and Morin, one of the team of attorneys representing Windmere.

"The jury verdict declares Philips' action illegal and will serve to help re-establish competition in the rotary shaver business. The $87 million verdict gives Windmere the funds that it needs to re-enter the market and provide effective competition against the Philips companies," he said.

The jury found for Windmere on all counts. Hoffman and DS&M's Charles Saber represented Windmere in connection with claims of unfair competition. Edward Foote and Mark McCariens of Chicago's Winston and Strawn represented the company on anti-trust matters.

The Philips companies originally sued Windmere to stop it from selling rotary shavers, which were being sold under the Ronson brand name. Windmere counter-claimed, but went out of the rotary shaver business in December, 1985, after less than two years.

The jury found that Philips had "no protectable rights" in the general design of rotary-head shavers, Hoffman said.

"Philips' claim would have prevented any effective competition in the rotary shaver market, which it dominates," Hoffman said. Philips sells $165 million worth of rotary shavers in the United States every year and holds more than 95 percent of the market.

Philips has also brought suit against one of its few remaining competitors Sears, Roebuck & Co., which is also represented by DS&M's Hoffman.

ARLINGTON, Va. (APRIL 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Bell Atlantic (NYSE: BEL) said today it will contest Treasury's most recent action in the company's dispute with the U.S. Department of Treasury over a contract for a digital communications system.

"Treasury's recent suspension letter to Bell Atlantic and C&P is part of a continuing effort by lower-level employees to award the contract to AT&T," said Tony Murray, Bell Atlantic vice president, Federal Systems Division.

"C&P has successfully overturned two awards by Treasury of its contract to AT&T in the last four years. Each time an independent authority has found that AT&T's representations concerning the commercial availability of some of its equipment and software were wrong. Treasury did not suspend AT&T for these repeated acts, but it has taken that action against C&P for alleged similar misrepresentations. It took this action in the absence of any finding by an independent reviewing agency that C&P had acted improperly."

"C&P and Bell Atlantic emphatically deny any misrepresentations were made " said Murray. "C&P will not be harassed out of this competition and it is confident that once the true facts are brought to the attention of responsible officials, they will recognize that an error has been made, will withdraw this suspension and award the contract to C&P."

This is the latest round in a long-running dispute over a digital telephone system contract to serve the Treasury. The dispute centers on a contract for a digital communications switching system. The system was to serve 16 locations in Washington, D.C., with more than 20,000 lines.

The Treasury Department initially awarded the contract for a digital communications switching system to AT&T in 1987. The award was set aside as a result of protests by C&P, and new bids were submitted to Treasury in 1988. Treasury awarded the digital system contract for a second time to AT&T in November 1989. C&P protested and the GSA Board of Contract Appeals again set aside the award to AT&T, on the same ground that the ISDN sets AT&T had bid were not commercially available. Treasury was directed to continue evaluating C&P's bid.

On April 4, Treasury claimed that the Northern Telecom ISDN set bid by C&P was not commercially available either and that Bell Atlantic had misrepresented the facts. It also notified Bell Atlantic that both the Bell Atlantic Corp. and C&P of Washington are suspended from all future government contracts for a "temporary period," pending completion of Treasury's current investigation into the allegations.

Northern Telecom maintains that the telephone sets it bid to C&P Telephone met the requirements of the request for proposal.

ST. PAUL, MN (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Northwest Airlines passengers will enjoy complimentary drinks and free in-flight entertainment on all trans-Pacific, trans-Atlantic and Hawaii flights.

The move to complimentary cabin amenities begins today on all flights across the Pacific and to and from Hawaii. It will extend to all trans-Atlantic flights May 1. The action is part of a $422 million program announced in January to enhance Northwest customer service.

"Northwest is the first U.S. airline to offer this customer friendly approach on all its trans-oceanic services," said A.B. Magary, executive vice president of marketing.

Magary said the cost of this service enhancement will be several million dollars each year but the cost would be offset by the customer preference that such a move will generate.

Northwest flies more passengers between Asia and America than any other U.S. airline. It serves 12 destinations in Asia from eight U.S. gateway cities. Northwest serves Honolulu from Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle/Tacoma and Minneapolis/St. Paul.

Northwest flies to five European destinations with nonstop service from Boston, Detroit and Minneapolis/St. Paul.

More than 200 U.S. cities are linked to Northwest's Asia, Europe and Hawaii flights via connecting services of Northwest and Northwest Airlink, its regional airline partners.

FORT WORTH, TX (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Snyder Oil Corporation (NYSE: SNY) (SOCO) declared a dividend to holders of its common shares for the first quarter of 1990 at the rate of $.04 per share.

The dividend is payable May 15, 1990 to stockholders of record on April 30, 1990.

These payment and record dates are 15 days later than would ordinarily have been declared at this time because, with the shares currently trading on a "when issued" basis, the New York Stock Exchange suggested, and SOCO concurred, that it would be advisable to allow additional time to facilitate the transfer agent's accurate determination of stock ownership on the record date.

For future dividends, the company has decided to follow a policy of setting the last business day of the month following each quarter as the record date with the dividend payable the 15th day of the second month following each quarter.

SOCO is an independent oil corporation engaged in the acquisition, production, development and exploration of domestic oil and gas properties and in natural gas processing and transportation.

HOUSTON (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - A new 600-million-pound capacity polyethylene plant is under construction 20 hours a day, six days a week at Phillips 66 Houston Chemical Complex (HCC).

The first train of Plant Six, with 300-million-pounds capacity, is scheduled to come on-stream during the summer of 1990.

In the fourth quarter, a second train, also with 300-million-pounds capacity, will be completed at the HCC site in Pasadena, Texas.

"Our re-entry into the commercial production of high density polyethylene will begin this summer," said John R. VanBuskirk, senior vice president of Phillips 66, who heads the plastics division. "This will mark our re-establishment in the polyethylene (PE) business." Phillips 66 main PE plant in Pasadena was destroyed in October 1989.

The company's K-Resin(R) copolymer and Marlex(R) polypropylene facilities, also located in the complex, were not substantially damaged and are fully operational.

Phillips 66 uses its own loop process to produce its brand of Marlex high density polyethylene at plants in Houston and Singapore. The process is also widely licensed.

According to VanBuskirk, the new plant will incorporate the latest technological developments that will permit the company to tighten even further quality tolerances. "This plant, and the ones that will follow, will provide the plastics processing industry with PE unmatched for conformity to purchaser specifications," he said.

Other Phillips 66 plastics products such as Ryton(R) polyphenylene sulfide (PPS), Ryton(R) S polyphenylene sulfide sulfone (PPSS), ASPECT(R) thermoplastic polyester, and Crystalor(TM) polymethylpentene, manufactured in facilities in Borger, Texas, and Bartlesville, Okla., were unaffected by the PE plant explosion. The company's advanced composites center in Bartlesville was also unaffected.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - PNC Financial Corp (NYSE: PNC) today announced that its first quarter provision will be adjusted upward to reflect the results of a recent examination of one of its affiliates, and a continuing softness in the commercial real estate market.

It is estimated that the provision for loan losses will be increased approximately $70-80 million over the provision taken in the first quarter of 1989. This action will cause earnings to be down 35-40 percent in the comparison.

Thomas H. O'Brien, chairman, president and chief executive officer stated, "Given the recent examination of one of our affiliates, and continued concern over the depressed state of the commercial real estate market, we believed it appropriate to apply similar examination criteria in the evaluation of our other banking affiliates."

Based on these reviews, PNC anticipates that nonperforming assets will increase approximately $250 million from $581 million at year-end, and will represent approximately 3 percent of total loans and other real estate owned (OREO) at March 31, 1990. A majority of the increase was reported as potential problem loans at Dec. 31, 1989, and over one-half of the increase is current as to the payment of principal and interest.

At March 31, 1990, the allowance for credit losses is expected to total approximately $620 million, representing 100 percent of nonaccrual loans and 90 percent of total nonperforming loans.

Shareholders' equity totaled approximately $2.7 billion at March 31, 1990. PNC estimates that first quarter risk-based capital ratios will be approximately 7.25 percent for Tier 1 and 9.50 percent for total capital, as compared with the minimum required ratios of 3.625 percent and 7.25 percent, respectively.

According to O'Brien, "Our capital ratios will continue to greatly exceed all required levels and clearly there is no need to consider reducing the current dividend.

"The current environment has fostered a change in the composition of nonperforming assets. Until more uniform disclosures about nonperforming assets occur, it may be difficult to compare the asset quality information of individual banking institutions. "We believe we are responding to the operational and financial challenges this environment poses. We anticipate examinations of our other affiliate banks and will continue to monitor the level of our reserves."

PNC Financial Corp, headquartered in Pittsburgh, is the nation's 14th-largest bank holding company with assets of $45.7 billion.

NORCROSS, GA (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Colorocs Corp. (NASDAQ: CLRX) today announced that it has signed product supply agreements with both Savin Corp. (NYSE: SVB) and HCS Technology N.V.

These agreements provide for the long-term distribution of Colorocs' full color copier under the Prism I label in the U.S., Canadian and European markets.

These agreements set a minimum target of 5,000 copiers in the aggregate to be purchased by Savin and HCS per year from Colorocs.

Charles Muench, president and CEO of Colorocs, said, "These agreements serve to formalize our existing relationship with Savin and HCS, which has resulted in purchase orders of approximately 2,400 copiers since June 1989.

"We are pleased by the demand for the copier," Muench said. "Savin's dealers and branches have provided an important outlet for the copier, supplemented where necessary by our own direct sales and leasing programs."

The purchase agreement also provides a basis for the possible distribution of related products that Colorocs may introduce in the future.

Under a master agreement, Savin began marketing and distributing the Prism I model copier nearly a year ago.

HOUSTON (APRIL 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Granada Foods Corporation (AMEX: GNF) today reported a seven percent increase in revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, although net income for the period declined sharply.

According to David G. Eller, chairman and chief executive officer, "Operating margins of our turkey and meat processing divisions improved in the fourth quarter of 1989 and, along with our cost containment efforts, should have a positive impact on 1990 performance."

As a result of measures taken in 1989 to improve operating results, he said the company expects to see a continuing increase in revenues for 1990 followed by enhanced pre-tax profitability and a significant improvement in net earnings by 1991.

The leading Texas meat purveyor's revenues for the year were $134,865,000, compared to $125,772,000 for 1988.

Eller attributed the gain in revenues to increased meat product sales, principally resulting from 1989 sales growth of a Houston-based purveying operation acquired in the prior year, and expanded export sales in Japan.

Net income was $94,000, compared to $3,948,000 for 1988. Earnings per share were four cents, vs. $1.79 in 1988. Included in the 1988 results was a non-recurring gain of $2,154,000, or 97 cents per share, attributable to the cumulative effect of an accounting method change for income taxes adopting the provisions of FAS No. 96. Both 1988 and 1989 were based on having 2,200,000 average common shares outstanding.

Fourth Quarter Results In the fourth quarter of 1989, the company reported revenues of $40,718,000, compared to $42,269,000 in the 1988 period, a decline of 3.7 percent.

Net income for the fourth quarter of 1989 was $79,000, a 93 percent increase from third quarter 1989 net income of $41,000, but a 67 percent decrease from the fourth quarter in 1988. Earnings per share were three cents in the fourth quarter of 1989, vs. 10 cents in the same period in 1988.

Board Authorizes Loans For Stock Purchase On April 2, 1990, the company announced key executives intend to purchase up to 100,000 shares of Granada Foods Corporation common stock on the open market for investment purposes. The company has agreed to make loans available to the key executives for the purchases. This offer is extended to executives who currently are not primary holders of shares in the company.

Granada Foods Corporation, headquartered in Houston, is the largest meat purveyor in Texas and the largest smoker of whole body turkeys in the nation. LOS ANGELES (APRIL 6) UPI - A subsidiary of First Executive Corp. filed suit Thursday accusing Merv Griffin, Donald Trump and Drexel Burnham Lambert of inflating the value of Resorts International Hotel in documents filed to promote the sale of junk bonds Griffin used to buy the hotel.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court, names Griffin; Resorts International Hotel; Trump, who was vying with Griffin for purchase of the hotel; Drexel which underwrote the securities; and Houlihan, Lokey, Howard & Zukin, investment bankers in the offering.

First Executive's subsidiary, Executive Life Insurance Co., bought the notes in November 1988, and said it suffered serious losses when their market price ''fell precipitiously.''

The suit alleges the defendants misrepresented the cash flow, assets and collateral of Resorts International in registration statements in connection with the issuance of $325 million in notes, the proceeds of which.

According to the lawsuit, the individual defendants ''inflated publicly reported assets, earnings, the net worth of Resorts International Inc. and its subsidiaries'' to conceal adverse facts such as ''management deficiencies, cash flow shortfalls and over-valued assets.''

Trump was accused of participating so ''that the sale of his shares would go forward and that other lucrative payments and assets would be distributed to him ....''

Resorts International was reorganized under federal bankruptcy laws in December 1989.

Statements in the registration statement and prospectus concerning cash flow, assets and the ability to make interest payments ''were, in fact, false and misleading,'' the lawsuit says. ''Further, the value of assets ... and collateral were substantially overstated.''

First Executive itself is the target of at least two shareholders' suits stemming from its purchase of junk bonds.

Last January, the Los Angeles holding company was named in a class-action suit brought by investors who accused First Executive of aiding and participating in a scheme by Drexel Burnham and junk bond chief Michael Milken to artificially inflate the junk bond market.

And in December 1989, First Executive was sued by shareholders who alleged that the company transferred $700 million in junk bonds from its own portfolio to six shell corporations.

In January, First Executive announced that it expected to take a year-end charge of $515 million for losses in the bond market.

Thursday's lawsuit asks for an unstated amount of damages.

(APRIL 6) UPI - The American and National leagues were slapped with a gender discrimination suit Thursday by Pam Postema, five months after she was released as a minor league umpire.

Postema, the only female umpire to advance to Triple A baseball, was fired because she had worked three years in Triple A without advancing to the major leagues.

Postema, 36, is the third woman to become a professional umpire.

The complaint was filed with the federal Equal Opportunity Employment Commission in Los Angeles by her attorney Gloria Allred.

In exhibition games Thursday, Houston defeated Kansas City 3-2, New York Yankees edged New York Mets 2-1, Milwaukee beat San Francisco 4-2, St. Louis pounded Detroit 8-4, Baltimore decked Atlanta 6-4, Chicago White Sox beat Toronto 5-4, Boston beaned Minnesota 8-5, Seattle walloped Oakland 14-8, Philadelphia defeated Cincinnati 6-3, San Diego edged California 8-7 Cleveland defeated Chicago Cubs 8-7, and Pittsburgh trimmed Texas 9-7.

At Kissimmee, Fla., Gerald Young scored from third base on a two-out, ninth-inning wild pitch by 1989 National League Cy Young winner Mark Davis with Houtson's winning run.

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Deion Sanders doubled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning to help the New York Yankees end a five-game losing streak against the New York Mets. After the game, Yankees Manager Bucky Dent announced that Sanders had made the team.

At Lakeland, Fla., Todd Zeile capped a five-run first inning with a two-run homer to help St. Louis defeat Detroit.

At Miami, Baltimore defeated Atlanta, but suffered two losses. Pitcher Ben McDonald left after two innings with a muscle strain in his side. Second baseman Tim Hulett will be out up to six weeks with a fractured hammate bone in his left hand. Hulett broke the bone making a head-first slide earlier in the week, but the fracture wasn't detected until today.

At Dunedin, Fla., Dan Pasqua and Ron Kittle clubbed back-to-back home runs in the fifth inning to lead Chicago White Sox to a victory over Toronto. The Blue Jays clocked 13 hits, but still came up short.

At Orlando, Fla., the Boston Red Sox got five doubles and five runs in the ninth inning to post a victory over Minnesota. Lee Smith got the win for the Sox, throwing two innings, allowing one run and two hits on four strike outs. Rick Aguilera took the loss for the Twins.

At Clearwater, Fla., Philadelphia defeated Cincinnati. Steve Lake swatted a double scoring Sil Campusano and Charlie Hayes to put the Phils out in front. Cincinnati committed eight errors making all of the Phillies runs unearned.

At Port Charlotte, Fla., Pittsburgh and Texas both clocked 10 hits but the Pirates outscored the Rangers. Jeff King hit two homers for Pittsburgh, and Rafael Palmiero and Jeff Kunkel homered for Texas.

At Palm Springs, Calif., San Diego capitalized on four California errors to rally for their eighth consecutive victory. California Manager Doug Rader said Mark McLemore will start at shortstop on Opening Day. Starter Dick Schofield and third baseman Jack Howell will open the season on the disabled list.

At Tucson, Ariz., Joel Skinner drove in the winning run with a double off the wall in left-center field as Cleveland scored twice in the bottom of the ninth inning to beat the Chicago Cubs.

At Phoenix, Randy Johnson pitched five shutout innings and four Mariners clocked homers to defeat Oakland. But Seattle outfielder Henry Cotto suffered a wrist injury when he was hit by a pitch in the first inning. He was removed from the game and taken to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital for X-rays.

At Scottsdale, Ariz., Greg Vaughn's two-run single was the key blow in a three-run, seventh-inning that lifted Mikwaukee to a victory over San Francisco. The Giants invited outfielder Rick Leach to camp as a non-roster player. He was released by the Atlanta Braves.

MEXICO CITY (APRIL 6) UPI - Judicial police and army soldiers ousted opposition militants Thursday from 14 western Mexico town halls that they had occupied since December to protest alleged election fraud, official sources said.

There were no reports of violent incidents in the western state of Michoacan, but the official news agency Notimex said 80 people were arrested for misdemeanors and illegal arms possession.

''The state judicial police today cleared out the town halls of Chavinda, Cuidad Hidalgo, Apatzingan, Coalcoman, San Lucas, Irimbo, Cotija, Jungapeo Taretan, Ocampo and Jacona without any incidents breaking out,'' Notimex said.

Militants of the Party of the Democratic Revolution, the second-largest political force in the country, gave up voluntarily in three other towns and were still holding six town halls in the state, Notimex said.

The opposition militants occupied 20 town halls in Michoacan in December to protest alleged fraud by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party in mayoral elections.

Official results for the elections give 52 mayorships to the opposition party, 56 to the ruling party and four to other parties.

An Interior Ministry communique confirmed the raids, saying the opposition militants have used high-caliber automatic weapons in their sieges of government offices.

''Federal forces were sent to Michoacan to avoid repetitions of confrontations between militants of the rival political parties that have even caused the deaths of a number of people,'' it said.

''The arms used by members of the (Party of the Democratic Revolution) correspond to ... those reserved for the army and, in a few cases, include high-caliber weapons that pose a serious threat to public security,'' the communique said.

''Such is the case of AK-47 automatic rifles ... used by narcotics traffickers of the region, whose high cost could not be covered by the peasant farmers carrying them,'' it said.

Michoacan remained under a tense calm as army units patrolled politically volatile areas. A Defense Ministry official told United Press International the military presence was only ''routine movements of the Mexican army.''

The official said he did not know how many troops were in the area.

''It is up to the judgment of the commander,'' he said.

In ongoing political unrest since December, opposition militants in the neighboring state of Guerrero have taken town halls, blocked highways and temporarily closed the airports at the Pacific resorts of Acapulco and Zihuatanejo.

Last month, judicial police evicted militants from eight town halls in Guerrero. Five people, including two policemen, were killed in the town of Santa Cruz, and dozens of others were reported injured.

The militants said 20 of their members were detained during the Guerrero evictions and that others had gone missing.

(APRIL 6) UPI - American officials in Washington say Japan is making moves to improve the trade situation with the United States. Officials say Japan promises to make changes in six key areas, including saving and investment patterns, and exclusionary business practices. In Tokyo, Prime Minister Kaifu confirmed the measures and added Japan must bear the pain of opening its closed markets.

A major earthquake rocked the Northern Mariana Islands in the Pacific Ocean Friday morning and seismologists in Guam say it measured seven-point-four on the Richter Scale. They say the epicenter is just off Anatahan Island, deep in the Marianas Trench, one of the world's deepest ocean chasms. There are NO immediate reports of any damage or injuries. There is concern that an increasingly active volcano on Anatahan Island will erupt.

Hungry Eskimo hunters in Alaska began a court-ordered hunt Thursday for 50 caribou from a protected herd. A judge federally sanctioned the hunt because the needs of a southwestern Alaskan village outweighed state desires to protect the herd until it grew big enough to support such hunts in the future. The tiny town of Kwethluk, population 454, has been running low on food and money. The village council vice president says- ''We can't afford to buy anything and we hate to ask for more government assistance.''

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) UPI - Brent Musburger Thursday night claimed CBS never intended to re-sign him and said his firing was a ''personal vendetta'' on the part of CBS executives Neal Pilson and Ted Shaker.

In his first interview since his stunning firing Sunday, Musburger told Sam Donaldson on ABC's ''Primetime Live'' his CBS bosses conspired to drive him out.

''In my opinion, CBS didn't fire me,'' Musburger said. ''It was not a network firing. It was a personal vendetta on the part of two people ... President of the (Sports) Division, Neal Pilson, and the Executive Director Ted Shaker. They conspired to get me out of CBS.

''These two men had decided I was just too big for my britches and that they were just going to take me down a peg or two.''

Musburger said he only took on a heavy workload because the network officials wanted him too. He also said Pilson and Shaker led on Musburger's brother, Todd, who is also his attorney, during contract negotiations with no intention of extending his $2 million-per-year contract.

''This is not the saga of a whining, whimpering ex-sportscaster who lost his cushy job and his limos and his American Express card and is unhappy about it,'' he said. ''Those things happen. A network has the right to fire me anytime they want.

''Not to renew my contract, which is what they say they did. That's fine. What they don't have a right to do is turn around and attempt to defame me. I've got to go back to work again. I don't want executives in Atlanta, New York and Los Angeles sitting there and talking about the possibility of hiring me and then having one say, 'He's a bad guy.'''

As for his future, Musburger said, ''I'll sit back and take a look at the offers.''

Donaldson asked him about joining ABC.

''I'd go to ABC in a minute,'' Musburger said. ''I'd go to work for anybody else. ...

''I want everybody to know that you don't have to pay me $2 million a year.''

(APRIL 6) UPI - King Birendra of Nepal, the world's only Hindu king and one of its last absolute monarchs, represents the first line of Western-educated rulers in Nepal.

He was born Dec. 28, 1945, and the turbulence of the first postwar decade shaped his life immediately.

When he was 5 years old, a revolution overthrew Nepal's feudal-style leaders, and one of Birendra's earliest memories is of accompanying his father and grandfather to neighboring India, where they waited for the uprising to end.

After they returned, his father, King Mahendra, took the throne in 1955 and he determined Birendra, his eldest son, would be the first member of Nepal's royal family to be educated in the West.

The young prince attended school at Eton in Britain and during the holidays worked on a farm in France. He enrolled for a year at Tokyo University and later went to Harvard, where he studied business administration and attended lectures by Henry Kissinger.

When Birendra ascended to the throne in January 1972 as Nepal's 10th ruler of the Phah Dynasty he inherited absolute decision-making powers in the executive, legislative and judicial spheres.

The young king faced his severest test in 1979 when a seven-week student revolt threatened to engulf Nepal's 14 million people and topple his absolute powers.

Birendra mollified the reformists by calling for an unprecedented referendum in which the majority of people voted for the ''panchayat'' system that gave him absolute control.

His large extended family's businesses - the biggest and best in Nepal - draw both wealth and public criticism, but Birendra detaches himself and his family by leading a modest and quiet life.

Birendra and Queen Aishwarya have two sons and a daughter. Prince Dipendra who was born in 1971, is the successor to the throne.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Even without one of their main cogs, the Detroit Pistons are making a strong run at repeating as NBA champions.

Joe Dumars has been out since March 24 with a broken hand, but Detroit has enough balance to cover his loss. Mark Aguirre scored a team-high 25 points off the bench Thursday night and Vinnie Johnson added 20 to lift the Pistons to a 104-99 victory over the Hawks in Atlanta.

At 54-19, the Pistons have the NBA's second best record behind the Los Angeles Lakers.

Center James Edwards said even without Dumars, the Detroit Pistons are a great team because the rest of the team is picking up his slack. Edwards scored 17 points against Atlanta.

''He does so many things,'' Edwards said. ''But even without him, we're still a great team. But without him, everyone has to pick up the slack.''

Isiah Thomas added 17 points for Detroit and Bill Laimbeer grabbled 11 rebounds and scored 10 points. Dennis Rodman hit two free throws with 1:11 left to seal the victory.

Dominique Wilkins scored 17 to lead Atlanta, 35-39, and Kevin Willis added 15 points and 15 rebounds.

The Hawks' loss dropped them out of an eighth place tie with the Cleveland Cavaliers in the race for the remaining playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Elsewhere in the NBA, Chicago topped Orlando 111-104, Seattle upset Utah 101-91, and the LA Lakers stymied Sacramento 110-103.

BULLS 111, MAGIC 104

At Chicago, Michael Jordan led a balanced attack with 38 points, including 16 in the fourth quarter, helping the Bulls reach 50 victories for the sixth time in franchise history. The Bulls' sixth-straight win kept them four games behind first-place Detroit in the Central Division. The Magic lost their seventh straight and their 23rd in 25 games. Otis Smith paced Orlando with 21 points, while Sidney Green added 20, Scott Skiles 19 and rookie Nick Anderson 15. Bill Cartwright scored 15 and Grant and rookie B.J. Armstrong 14 each for Chicago.

SUPERSONICS 101, JAZZ 91

At Seattle, reserve guards Dana Barros and Sedale Threatt scored 13 points in the final four minutes to deny Utah its club-record 52nd triumph. Seattle, 37-36, moved into a seventh-place tie with the Denver Nuggets, 37-36, in the Western Conference playoff race. Threatt led Seattle with 19 points and Barros added 17. NBA scoring leader Karl Malone led Utah with 26 points and 17 rebounds.

LAKERS 110, KINGS 103

At Inglewood, Calif., Magic Johnson and Orlando Woolridge scored 21 points each to lead the Lakers over the Kings, who have not won at Los Angeles since 1974. James Worthy hit all nine of his shots from the field to finish with 18 points. Byron Scott also had 18 for Lakers and Johnson dished off 16 assists. Antoine Carr came off the bench to lead the Kings with 26 points. The Lakers won their fourth straight while handing Sacramento its sixth straight defeat.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (APRIL 6) UPI - The following is the full text of King Birendra's message to the nation, announcing the resignation of the government and plans for democratic reforms:

Beloved countrymen,

Respect for the ideals and values of democracy has always guided us in the conduct of the affairs of state. It was in this spirit that we held a national referendum in 1980 to allow the people to choose the kind of changes they wanted in the polity of the country.

It is the government duty also to maintain law and order. Regrettably, since the present Council of Ministers has not been able to do so resulting in the loss of life and property. We have in consonance with the popular will in accordance with the Constitution of Nepal dissolved the present Council of Ministers. In view of the special circumstances arising in the country, we have through this proclomation in accordance with ... the Constitution of Nepal entrusted honorable Mr. Lokendra Bahadur Chand to form a Council of Ministers.

This Council of Ministers will also consult people holding different political views. The Rashtriya Panchayat will also be summoned into session.

No polity can be an end in itself. Rather, it should serve as the institutional framework to promote rights, interests and welfare of the people. As it is the popular will which has always guided the nature of our polity, we will accordingly be constituting a constitutional reforms commission to make recommendations for political reforms which the Nepali people desire.

A commission will also be set up to investigate the unfortunate incidents that have taken place in different parts of the country involving the loss of life and property.

Finally, at a time when the country has yet to recover from the economic hardships inflicted over the course of the past year, the Nepalese more than ever have to act in unison and in self-discipline to help maintain peace and tranquility in the country.

May Lord Pashupatinath bless us all.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (APRIL 6) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela emerged from three hours of talks declaring the negotiation process back on course after settling differences that led to the suspension of peace talks.

The first face-to-face encounter between an ANC delegation and a South African president in 42 years of National Party rule began Thursday just hours after another crisis for the government: a bloodless military coup in the northern black homeland of Venda.

It was the second homeland in a month to fall to rebellious black soldiers with the blessing of the ANC.

Meeting at the presidential offices, Mandela and de Klerk agreed on a new date for talks originally scheduled for April 11 that were intended to clear obstacles to formal power-sharing negotiations. They said a date would be announced soon.

The ANC suspended the talks last week to protest the deaths of at least 11 blacks in police gunfire and the wounding of 450 others during an anti-government demonstration in the township of Sebokeng, near Johannesburg.

Both men, each accompanied by three senior aides during the talks, emerged expressing satisfaction. De Klerk said the meeting was ''very fruitful'' and sealed an agreement that peace in the violence-torn country was essential to negotiations. Mandela described the three-hour meeting as ''productive.''

''The meeting will have exactly the same aims as that of April 11,'' de Klerk said. He described the killings in Sebokeng as ''a matter of concern'' and announced that a judge would handle the inquest - a task normally assigned to a magistrate. He also said the Cabinet would consider appointing a judicial inquiry.

''I and my delegation got the impression that the government would address the problems which led to the suspension of the meeting,'' Mandela told a news conference later. ''Generally speaking, we welcome the steps the government is taking.''

De Klerk, who tried to meet earlier Thursday with moderate black leaders of six self-governing territories but faced a boycott by four who canceled after seeing Mandela Wednesday, accused the ANC of trying to ride roughshod over the power-sharing negotiations.

De Klerk rejected ANC efforts to ''form just one umbrella and polarize the discussions'' and said he was ''disappointed'' by Mandela's intervention. The issue was raised during the talks Thursday night but Mandela denied government's charge.

''Nothing could be further from the truth,'' Mandela said. ''Negotiation is our basic policy. We do not intend excluding anybody.''

Mandela's arch rival, Mangosuthu Buthelezi, whose followers in the strife-torn province of Natal are locked in battle with ANC supporters, was one of the two self-governing territory leaders to meet with de Klerk earlier Thursday.

De Klerk told reporters he was ''gravely concerned that the 'black-on-black violence' is becoming itself a stumbling block to peaceful negotiations.''

''I emphasized the absolute necessity that we must have an atmosphere in our country conducive toward negotiations in a stable surrounding,'' he said.

In Venda, gripped by demonstrations for ''reincorpoation'' into South Africa since Mandela's release following 27 years in prison and the lifting of a 30-year ban on the ANC in February, thousands celebrated the overthrow of homeland President Frank Ravele.

The coup d'etat was led by Venda Defense Force Deputy Chief Col. Gabriel Ramushwana, who vowed to establish a ruling council of unity and called for talks with the ANC and other anti-apartheid organizations opposed to the homelands policy.

Venda, with a population of 500,000 is one of four black homelands that accepted ''independence'' in a policy that has stripped millions of blacks in the country of South African citizenship.

(APRIL 6) UPI - The first playoff matchup of the NHL's New England teams produced the biggest upset to cap two nights of opening-game surprises.

The Hartford Whalers, who finished fourth in the Adams Division, went into Boston Garden and knocked off the regular-season champion Bruins Thursday night 4-3 in one of four matches between Wales Conference opponents.

In the other series, the Buffalo Sabres defeated the Montreal Canadiens 4-1, the New York Rangers nipped the New York Islanders 2-1, and the Washington Capitals upended the New Jersey Devils 5-4 in overtime.

The Campbell Conference resumes its series Friday with the Los Angeles Kings at the Calgary Flames, Winnipeg Jets at Edmonton Oilers, Minnesota North Stars at Chicago Blackhawks and Toronto Maple Leafs at St. Louis Blues.

All series are best-of-seven.

ADAMS DIVISION

HARTFORD 4, BRUINS 3

At Boston, despite being outshot 36-17, Hartford continued the tenacious road form that gave them the league's second-best record as a visiting team during the regular season.

In the first post-season pairing of New England's NHL teams, Todd Krygier scored a goal and assisted on another to lead the Whalers, while goaltenderPeter Sidorkiewicz stopped 33 shots, controlling rebounds effectively and making several superb saves, including two on Dave Christian shots from the top of the crease midway through the third when Hartford led 4-2.

''I felt like I was playing a good positional game,'' said Sidorkiewicz, who became the team' No. 1 goaltender when Mike Liut was traded March 5 to Washington.

''We were very fortunate, as you can see by the shots,'' Whalers Coach Rick Ley said. ''If we're to be successful, we have to mount more of an offense. I thought we were both a little nervous and apprehensive at the start.''

The Whalers played a solid defensive game and scored the first three goals. Hartford, 11-5-2 since Feb. 28, is 4-4-1 this season against the Bruins, who knew what to expect.

''There were no suprises,'' Bruins defenseman Ray Bourque said. ''It was exactly the kind of game we expected.''

SABRES 4, CANADIENS 1

At Buffalo, N.Y., Daren Puppa made 34 saves, but Montreal's Patrick Roy onlystopped 24 shots and was overpowered by the Buffalo offense.

''Everyone knows how great Patrick Roy is, and he is,'' Buffalo Coach Rick Dudley said. ''But I think a lot of people have underestimated how great (Puppa) is. That kid won us a lot of hockey games this season.''

Dean Kennedy, Rick Vaive and Dave Andreychuk each beat Roy for second-period goals to lift Buffalo.

''We had to set a tone,'' remarked Puppa. ''We had to get some momentum and confidence our way and that's what made the difference.''

''We buried the puck and they didn't - that's the difference,'' added Kennedy, who gave Buffalo a 1-0 lead with a wrist shot between Roy's pads 6:28 into the second period.

PATRICK DIVISION

RANGERS 2, ISLANDERS 1

At New York, goaltender Mike Richter stymied the Islanders with 28 saves, including a penalty shot, and held a one-goal lead through a hard-hitting third period to enable the Rangers to become the only divisional regular-season champion to win the first playoff game.

Richter's save on a Randy Wood penalty shot at 9:35 of the second period was the turning point of the game. With the Rangers leading 1-0 on a first-period goal by Bernie Nicholls, Wood drew the penalty shot when he skated over the blue line on a breakaway and defenseman Normand Rochefort threw his stick at him.

Wood skated in to Richter's left and tried to slip the puck between his legs from 10 feet out, but Richter made a left pad save.

''Wood is a very fast skater,'' said Richter. ''I just wanted to come out and get in front of him and not fall down.''

It was the first penalty shot the Rangers ever faced in post-season play, but Richter, who has stopped all three against him this year, was ready.

Islanders star center Pat LaFontaine suffered a concussion late in the game after an open-ice collision with Rangers defenseman James Patrick. LaFontaine spent the night at Lennox Hill hospital, where he was held for observation, and his status for Game 2 is uncertain.

CAPITALS 5, DEVILS 4, OT

At East Rutherford, N.J., Dino Ciccarelli completed a hat trick 5:34 into overtime to lift Washington after New Jersey twice rallied from two-goal deficits.

Referee Denis Morel assessed 129 penalty minutes in regulation and four more in overtime. Three players - two Capitals - were cut by high sticks. In their 1988 previous playoff meeting, the teams set NHL records with 654 penalty minutes in a seven-game series and 62 penalties in a game.

''Look at the people involved, what's at stake,'' Washington veteran defenseman Rod Langway said. ''Sticks go up but if you don't protect yourself, someone's going to get hurt.''

Ciccarelli had provided a two-goal lead by 1:47 of the first period before the Devils tied it 2-2 in the second period, and Washington led 4-2 entering the third.

''You're down 2-0 before you even get the jitters out,'' New Jersey goaltender Sean Burke said. ''But I think we showed excellent character by coming back.''

Population: 18,760,000 (est. 1989) Area: 54,362 square miles Capital: Katmandu King Birendra (Jan. 31, 1972-) Prime Minister: Lokendra Bahadur Chand

History - Closed for centuries to the outside world, Nepal now is linked by roads to India, Pakistan and Tibet. A cabinet system of government was established in 1951 under the king, regarded as the reincarnation of the Hindu god Vishnu. Nepal got its first elected government in June 1959, but King Birendra re-established absolute power 18 months later. General elections were held again in May 1981 and Prime Minister Lokendra Bahadur Chand served from June 1983 to March 1986. Following a caretaker government, Marich Man Singh Shrestha became prime minister in mid-1986 until he was succeeded Friday by Chand.

Geography - Slightly larger than Arkansas, Nepal covers 54,362 square miles astride the Himalayas. Its flatlands adjoin India and its northern foothills lead to the lofty Himalayas and China. Eight of the world's highest peaks - including 29,028-foot Mount Everest - are in Nepal, once called ''the forbidden kingdom.'' The capital is Katmandu.

People - Tribal descendants of Indian, Tibetan and Central Asian migrants make up the population of nearly 19 million. Nepali is the official language. The population is 90 percent Hindu, 7 percent Buddhist. Literacy is 20 percent.

Government - The Himalayan kingdom is ruled by one of the world's last absolute monarchs, Harvard-educated King Birendra, who assumed the throne when his father King Mahendra died in 1972. The king can void any legislative act, remove members of Parliament, and amend the constitution by fiat. The Panchayat elects a prime minister only after Birendra makes his choice known. On May 12, 1986, Nepalese elected 108 members to the 140-member Panchayat, or Parliament, with a record 60 percent of the 9 million registered voters casting ballots. Twenty-eight seats were filled by appointees of the king. Political parties are banned.

Economy - Hides, drugs and tourism are principal factors in impoverished Nepal's economy.

MOSCOW (APRIL 6) UPI - Lithuania's Parliament, in a conciliatory statement, overlooked the Soviet army's seizure of the local prosecutor's office and for the first time acknowledged the Soviet constitution should be considered in any independence talks with Moscow.

The concession was contained in a statement, adopted nearly unanimously late Thursday, responding to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand that the legislature annul its March 11 declaration of independence.

Deputies voted hours after Soviet troops toting automatic weapons seized the Lithuanian prosecutor's office, according to an urgent dispatch by the Lithuanian government.

''The Supreme Council of Lithuania is ready through dialogue to discuss the spirit and the letter of the acts and resolutions adopted by (it), from the point of view of international law and the constitution of the U.S.S.R.,'' the Parliament statement said.

Even before its independence declaration, the Baltic republic had steadfastly maintained that Soviet laws were invalid in Lithuania because it was forcefully annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940 along with Estonia and Latvia.

Parliament spokesman Edward Tuneskis said the lawmakers approved the more conciliatory of two draft statements after long, and at times, heated debate.

Though the Parliament's statement - approved by an 82-0 vote with seven abstentions - failed to meet Gorbachev's demand to rescind the independence declaration, it was the first of many messages sent to Moscow in recent weeks that did not insist that the declaration was irreversible.

The statement, dictated by phone from Vilnius, did not even mention the independence declaration, saying only that ''Lithuania is just realizing its ancient right.''

''We realize that Lithuania's self-determination to return to the family of independent states raises serious concerns for the Soviet Union and personally for you, highly esteemed president,'' the statement from Vilnius said.

''You correctly evaluate the situation as complicated, demanding reasoned discussion and acceptable decisions,'' it said. ''We highly value all your efforts directed toward a peaceful solution of the problem.''

The earlier raid on the prosecutor's office, an apparent new step in Moscow's bid to reimpose control over Lithuania, brought a sudden escalation of tension two days after preliminary talks had raised hopes that the nearly 4-week-old crisis might be easing.

''On April 5 at 4:30 p.m., 50 soldiers and officers armed with automatic weapons forcefully broke into the Republic of Lithuania's public prosecutor's building in Vilnius and occupied all its offices,'' a Lithuanian government statement announced.

The statement quoted Lithuanian Vice President Kazimieras Motieka as saying the military personnel were ''dressed in police uniforms and carried boxes of ammunition with them into the building.''

With virtually all foreign correspondents banned from Lithuania by Moscow, the report could not be confirmed independently.

The army raid came six days after Moscow sent Antanas Petrauskas, an ethnic Lithuanian who had served as a military prosecutor in the Latvian capital of Riga, to Vilnius to replace Lithuania's prosecutor, Arturas Taulauskas.

Both men have been working in the prosecutor's office, although the Lithuanian government maintains that nearly its entire staff remains loyal to Taulauskas.

Egidius Bickauskas, head of the Lithuanian mission in Moscow, said before the claimed military action that his government is ready for compromise and may accept a republic-wide referendum on secession.

But Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev, in his first public comment on his meeting Tuesday with three Lithuanian officials, reiterated Gorbachev's insistence that formal negotiations cannot begin unless Vilnius annuls its independence declaration.

(APRIL 6) UPI - President Bush meets with the Soviet foreign minister... a House committee okays clean air legislation... Nepal's king fires the government... and Japan agrees to trade reform. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

President Bush... saying ''dialogue is important''... will personally enter summit planning talks today.

Bush will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze ... following the last of the meetings between Shevardnadze and Secretary of State Baker.

Baker and his Soviet counterpart set dates for a spring summit conference between Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev yesterday. The summit will be held May 30th to June 3rd.

Still UNdecided is just which dates the two will meet. But there's strong speculation Gorbachev and Bush will meet on three of the five days... and that Washington will be the site.

Bush says he is very pleased the dates have been set. He says the meetings are very important.

Bush says the talks between Baker and Shevardnadze ''are going reasonably well,'' and that he looks forward to meeting with the Soviet official today.

Baker and Shevardnadze say arms control has been a major topic during their three days of discussions. Baker says they still have a lot of work to do. The Soviet official describes the talks as ''very constructive and substantive.''

Both sides doubt that a strategic arms agreement will be ready for signing at the summit. But a Soviet negotiator says Bush and Gorbachev could resolve outstanding issues at the summit, leading to a later signing.

An American arms control expert predicts the treaty will be signed later in the year.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Die-hard spring snowstorms whitened states from the southern Plains to northern New England early Friday, while Texas and Arkansas were hammered by hail and powerful thunderstorms whipped across the Gulf Coast.

The National Weather Service said light snow fell Friday in the northern mountains of Vermont, and in parts of West Virginia, Wisconsin, Michigan, Colorado, Arkansas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

Most of New England was under dense clouds, and temperatures dipped into the 20s in the north and the 30s in the south. A cold front from the Midwest drifted into the region Friday, bringing clouds and inclement weather after a one-day reprieve from about a week of rain.

In the mid-Atlantic states, rain and wet snow fell in the wee hours on most of West Virginia and parts of Maryland and western Pennsylvania, with accumulations of up to 2 inches in the mountains of West Virginia. Temperature lows were mostly in the 30s throughout the region.

Eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey saw mostly clear skies and lows in the uppers 30s to lower 40s overnight.

A Canadian cold front pushed rain and thunderstorms into portions of the South. Temperatures were dropping, but Atlanta, Jacksonville, Fla., and Miami hovered in the low and mid 60s.

In the Midwest, a upper-level low-pressure system was moving from Duluth, Minn., which measured an inch of snow by late Thursday, into northern Wisconsin and Upper Michigan. Wausau, in north-central Wisconsin, reported snow and 24 degrees. In Upper Michigan, Sault Ste. Marie reported snow and 20 degrees. Lansing also had flurries.

To the south, through Illinois to central Missouri, skies were mostly clear and temperatures ranged from the mid 20s to mid 30s. Skies were cloudy in southern Missouri. St. Louis had 40 degrees.

Texas proved to be a state of extremes, as severe weather punished much of state. Golfball-size hail was reported near Fort Hood early Friday, while thunderstorms buffeted much of the rest of the state. A few hours earlier, three tornadoes touched ground in various spots, snow fell on Dalhart in the Panhandle and Lajitas, near the Mexican border, posted 95 degrees, the nation's high.

Hail 6 inches deep was reported at Bodcaw in southwestern Arkansas.

Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana all experienced thunderstorms as a cold front moved through early Friday. Temperatures dropped to near the freezing mark in northern Oklahoma and Arkansas, producing scattered snow flurries and wind-chill factors in the teens.

Scattered snow showers were also reported in northeast New Mexico.

In the West, thunderstorms hovered over much of the Sierra Nevada range and over the northern mountains of California. Skies were mostly cloudy over the Los Angeles area, where the highs reached only into the upper 60s.

Oregon turned sunny late Thursday, but with persistent onshore coatal winds, temperatures only climbed into the mid 50s.

A high-pressure system continued over Washington late Thursday. Afternoon temperatures ranged from the 60s across Western Washington and from the upper 60s into the 70s east of the Cascades.

For weeks, people across the country that is home to Mount Everest, have been marching in the streets in pro-democracy demonstrations.

King Birendra responded today by firing his government... and authorizing officials to meet with Nepal's growing opposition to re-write the constitution. The 44-year-old monarch announced broad new democratic reforms.

Birendra also promised an investigation into events leading to the deaths of at least 23 demonstrators during the pro-democracy movement. He called for a special session of parliament and appointed a new prime minister.

After the announcement, several thousand people took to the streets of Katmandu city, shouting, ''Long live democracy.'' Witnesses say police stood by without intervening.

But opposition leaders are skeptical. They say the king has made NO mention of opposition demands for restoration of a multi-party system. Nepal's first popularly elected government was fired in 1960 after 18 months in office by King Mahendra... Birendra's father.

Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said in a nationally broadcast news conference in Japan today that opening his nation's closed markets to the world may be painful to Japanese, but is necessary to combat protectionist sentiment.

U-S and Japanese trade negotiators reached an interim agreement in Washington yesterday on several steps to open Japan's markets and improve American competitiveness.

Kaifu said the measures- in his words- ''may, in some cases, be painful,'' but he added that they ''are the kind of duties Japan must discharge as a responsible member of the international community.''

Kaifu warned that failure to implement the agreement could lead to the United States closing its markets to Japanese goods.

Kaifu said the agreement will promote consumer interests in Japan by making more imported goods available and improve the quality of life.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Lithuania's nationalist parliament made a concession to the Soviet Union last night for the first time.

The Lithuanian parliament acknowledged that Soviet constitutional requirements should be considered in any independence talks with Moscow. The concession is in a conciliatory statement sent to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev... who has demanded that Lithuania's legislature annul its March 11th declaration of independence.

Even before its independence declaration, Vilnius had insisted that Soviet laws were NOT valid in Lithuania because it was forcefully annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940.

A parliament spokesman said the lawmakers approved the more conciliatory of two draft statements after a long, and at times heated debate. The statement was approved by a 82-0 vote with seven abstentions.

The statement does NOT meet Gorbachev's demand to rescind the independence declaration. But it is the first of many communiques sent to Moscow in recent weeks that does NOT insist that the declaration of independence is irreversible.

Deputies voted just hours after Soviet troops took over the Lithuanian prosecutor's office. Six days earlier, Moscow sent a new prosecutor. Both the new and old ones had been working in the prosecutor's office since then.

The jury sent back a new note that read ''Thank you. The definition we required before is NO longer needed.'' People in the courtroom burst into laughter.

LIMA, Peru (APRIL 6) UPI - Campaigning closed in presidential and congressional elections under the threat from communist guerrillas who killed four people to enforce their call for a boycott.

The major candidates held huge rallies Thursday night, ending the official campaign period leading to Sunday's balloting.

Shining Path guerrillas shot to death two people because identification documents they carried showed they had voted in earlier elections despite the group's boycott, police said.

Guerrillas left a sign on the bodies of Filomeno Janampa Gomez, 26, and his mother, 48-year-old Marcelina Gomez Ochoa, saying, ''If you return to vote, your loved ones will die,'' said police in Ayacucho, a guerrilla stronghold 200 miles southeast of Lima.

Some 13 miles north of Ayacucho, Cecarea Laurente Aybar, 26, was killed, police said. Pamphlets were scattered throughout Ayacucho Thursday, saying ''To vote is to validate the system and elect a more pro-hunger government,'' police said.

In the city of Cajamarca, union leader Marcos Crinesto Ruiz, 46, was shot to death by Shining Path guerrillas, police said.

Polls have consistently shown that novelist Mario Vargas Llosa will likely win the most votes Sunday with the backing of an alliance. But he likely will not have enough votes to win the election outright, prompting a second round.

Vargas Llosa, an advocate of trimming government and regulations, ended his campaign in the the city where he was born, Arequipa, 620 miles southeast of Lima, criticizing President Alan Garcia for inflation running at more than 2,000 percent a year.

''We do not want another five years with unleashed inflation and the destruction of salaries,'' Vargas Llosa said. ''We do not want another five years of growing political and social violence. We want a great transformation.''

Luis Alva Castro, candidate of Garcia's American Popular Revolutionary Alliance party, closed his campaign in Lima before thousands of flag-waving, slogan-shouting people at a downtown rally. Garcia is not allowed to succeed himself.

Lima was put under a state of emergency March 23 after one of six congressional candidates was killed. Eight other districts out of 24 also were under the state of emergency, covering more than 50 percent of the population.

More than 18,000 people have died in political violence in the decade since the Shining Path surfaced. Another guerrilla group, the Tupac Amaru, also carries out terrorist acts.

Analysis By: Arnold Sawislak

WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - The Democrats seem to have composed a new version of the old ditty in which the girl asks her mother if she can go swimming and is told, "Yes, my darling daughter, but don't go near the water."

Meeting last month in Indianapolis, the Democratic National Committee adopted a lengthy resolution abhoring "negative political attacks" by Democrats against other Democrats during the presidential primaries.

Starting with 1968, the resolution said, such "internecine warfare" has done the eventual Democratc candidate more harm than any Republican and had "the net effect" of electing Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan and George Bush and of driving "millions of former Democrats from our ranks."

All that having been said, the resolution called on the chairman of the Democratic National Committee to find ways to conduct primaries that will ensure open and vigorous debate among the candidates without producing "the type of self-defeating results that have hurt our nominee and our party during the past generation."

This conflicting directive to national Chairman Ron Brown to foster energetic but harmless campaigning for the presidential nomination is the "don't go near the water" feature of the resolution, but there is something else about it that begs examination.

That is the resolution's underlying premise - that intramural Democratic disagreement has had a major role in the party's loss of all but one of the last six presidential elections.

On the other side of the ballot, it is true that GOP candidates frequently claim to subscribe to an "Eleventh Commandment" - "One Republican does not attack another Republican."

But that injunction certainly was violated in 1980, when Bush, seeking the GOP nomination, referred to Reagan's ideas as "voodoo economics." and much more recently in 1988 when Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas accused Bush of telling lies about him. As we all saw, both Reagan and Bush went on to win the presidency after these knocks by fellow Republicans.

Nor have all Democrats who had to survive attacks by their fellows gone down to defeat. Way back in 1960, John Kennedy was the target of liberals who wanted Adlai Stevenson to have another shot at the White House, and who pictured the Massachusetts senator as a lightweight who had nothing going for him but his father's money.

Fifteen years later, Democrats organized against Jimmy Carter as he rolled up 1976 convention delegates, coalescing at one point into an ABC movement - "Anybody but Carter."

Carter was criticized as a Southerner by Northern Democrats and as a conservative by liberal Democrats, but he won the nomination and the election anyway. It might be argued that these attacks did hurt his presidency, but they did not keep him out of the White House.

The point of all this is not to argue that internal bickering has no harmful effect on political parties. It surely does hurt some, but if the Democrats start believing that is what beat them in 1968, 1972, 1980, 1984 and 1988, they probably are doomed to keep on losing.

Their problem, and it does not take a rocket scientist to define, is that they have failed to combine good enough candidates and issues to attract the votes needed to win the presidency.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 6) UPI - East Germany's major political parties intensified efforts Friday to form a governing coalition amid growing public outrage over the proposed cost of monetary unification with West Germany.

More than 200,000 people demonstrated in several cities Thursday night to protest a proposal by the West German Bundesbank, or central bank, for a 2-to-1 exchange rate of the East German mark against the deutsche mark when the economic union is implemented later this year.

The protests coincided with the inauguration of the country's first freely elected Volkskammer, or parliament, and presented the 400 new deputies with an immediate challenge.

East Germany's prime-minister designate, Lothar de Maiziere, spearheading the drive to negotiate a broad coalition to become the first non-communist government in the country's 40-year history, warned that ''serious tensions may develop if citizens do not receive a 1-to-1 exchange rate.''

''I understand the feelings of East Germans, even if they are protesting against a decision that has not yet been taken,'' the conservative leader said in an interview with West German television.

Other leading East and West German politicians have also condemned the Bundesbank proposal that would permit East Germans to exchange up to 2,000 marks at a 1-to-1 rate.

The East German mark is virtually worthless outside East Germany and a monetary union is seen as a major step both toward modernizing the East German economy and achieving political union with West Germany.

The growing protest over the exchange rate has increased pressure on de Maiziere to speed up the formation of a new administration.

Seven political parties are involved in the current talks. They include the three-party conservative Alliance for Germany, the Social-Democratic Party and the Alliance of Free Democrats.

De Maiziere's Christian-Democratic Union is the largest party, with 163 of the Alliance for Germany's 192 seats. The SPD has 88 deputies and the liberals 23.

The Alliance for Germany's winning of a near-majority in March 18 elections was widely seen as an endorsement of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's blueprint for swift unification.

On Friday, the East German parties speeded up efforts to form a coalition, naming five groups of experts to thrash out details of a policy agreement, particularly on issues relating to unification.

''The discussions are chiefly related to complicated matters affecting economic and social union,'' a CDU spokesman said.

Party sources said that, beyond minor party squabbling, there appeared to be no major obstacles to the formation of the new administration.

The sources said the SPD buried its differences with the conservative German-Social Union after accusing it of defamation during the campaign leading to the March 18 elections.

A relieved de Maiziere said he was confident that he will present a cabinet list for approval at the second sitting of the new parliament April 11.

Analysis By: David E. Anderson

(APRIL 6) UPI - During a symposium last fall at the Woodstock Theological Center, Russell Train, chairman of the World Wildlife Fund and The Conservation Foundation, observed that the churches have said little about the environment.

They have, he said, "been quite ready, even eager, to embrace a whole range of social issues of our time: poverty, problems of the aged, homelessness, women's rights, minority rights of all kinds, apartheid. ... Yet here on this issue, one that seems to go to the very heart of the human condition on this earth, the church has had very little to say."

Train was at least half right. While a number of theologians and religious thinkers, beginning perhaps as early as St. Francis, have thought, worried and written about the relationship between humanity and the creation, as institutions the churches have not spoken in any consistent, well-organized manner.

There are, for example, pastoral letter from U.S. Catholic bishops on nuclear arms, the American economy, racism and, soon, on the concerns of women. But to date, nothing on the environment.

As the 20th anniversary of the first observance of Earth Day approaches, however, there are some signs the nation's religious institutions may be trying to amend their past neglect of the issue.

Leaders of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the fourth largest Protestant denomination, have appointed a task force on "justice for the creation" that will study the environment and its impact on health and survival. Officials of the church say the task force will look at more than "national parks and pristine streams."

Although it is likely to be sometime before the Lutheran body takes a full-fledged position on environmental issues, one church group - the 155,000-member Church of the Brethren - has already acted. The General Board of the tiny but influential denomination has adopted a 16-page statement, "Creation: Called to Care."

"Planet Earth is in danger," the statement begins. "The accelerating ecological crisis that threatens the survival of life on Earth is evident now not only to professional biologists, botanists, environmental scientists, but to all."

And, it argues, "Any counsel that suggests that Christians can simply ignore the desecration of the Earth, believing it will be destroyed anyway or that God only saves people's souls, flatly denies the truth of the Bible."

In elements of the paper directed to the public policy area, the Brethren urged the federal government to look for safer sources of energy, to expand the Superfund program to clean up toxic wastes, to act on reducing acid rain and to generously support the U.N. Environmental Program.

Another denomination, the Presbyterian Church (USA), will consider an 87-page statement, "Restoring Creation," when it meets in general assembly in June.

The statement calls on members of the church "to follow Christ in the work of restoring creation" and urges creation of a special environmental office in the denomination's Social Justice and Peacemaking Ministry Unit.

Task force member John Moeser of Richmond, Va., praised the report and said he hoped it marked "the beginning of a sustained effort by our church rather than simply the final presentation of a report."

Indeed, the challenge to the religious community will be to move beyond Earth Day statements to ways of making creation theology part of institutional life.

LONDON (APRIL 6) UPI - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's popularity is at a record low and her ruling Conservative Party, beset by anger over interest rates, inflation and a new tax scheme, is 24 points behind the Labor Party, a survey indicated Friday.

The latest Gallup poll published in the Daily Telegraph showed 24 percent of Britons supported Thatcher, the lowest standing of any British leader since the authoritative survey began monitoring the public mood in 1937.

The previous record low rating belonged to Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who had a 27 percent standing in 1968 due to inflation, industrial disputes and protests over the Vietnam War.

''The Conservatives are trailing so far behind that only a spectacular turnaround of the government's fortunes, either as a result of a marked improvement in the economy or a collapse in Labor's popularity, is likely to avert the risk of Tory (Conservative) defeat at the next general election,'' the Daily Telegraph said.

Anthony Meyer, the Conservative who last December led an easily defeated challenge of Thatcher's party leadership, predicted she will resign this year.

''Pressure for a change, sooner than later, is becoming difficult to resist,'' he said.

Low-ranking Conservative members have expressed alarm at their dwindling chances of re-election in balloting that must be held before mid-1992. The concern intensified after a landlside Labor win in a special election two weeks ago.

Thatcher has pledged to go ''on and on'' and not step down. Her low standing is attributed largely to her new head tax, a flat per-adult levy set by local councils to cover spending previously funded by property taxes.

Thatcher argues that local costs should be paid by all residents, not just property owners.

The annual fee set by some councils has been as high as the equivalent of $940, far beyond what the government had initially projected. Critics say the scheme is unfair because wealthy landowners will now pay the same as earners of low wages. The tax was imposed in England and Wales last Sunday one day after an anti-tax demonstration erupted into a riot in central London and left scores injured and hundreds arrested.

Dissatisfaction over the economy is a double-edged mix over an inflation rate of 7.5 percent and Thatcher's refusal to ease her anti-inflationary policies and lower interest rates.

Gallup interviewed more than 10,000 Britons in March and 1,000 others last week to conclude that 52.5 percent support Labor and 28 percent the Conservatives.

Thatcher has time before the next elections to revive the economy and whittle away at the lead of Labor leader Neil Kinnock.

But the Daily Telegraph said the only two times a Conservative administration had lagged more than 20 points behind the Labor opposition - in 1963 and 1971 - it was ousted in the next election.

''The swing to Labor of 17.7 percent since the last general election is twice the size needed to wipe out Mrs. Thatcher's 100-seat majority and put Mr. Kinnock comfortably into Downing Street,'' the newspaper said.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed broadly higher Friday as the key Nikkei Average shot up more than 1,000 points on bargain hunting, a stronger yen and news of an agreement in U.S.-Japanese trade talks.

The blue-chip Nikkei average of 225 selected shares, which lost 193.88 points Thursday and has dropped more than 25 percent since Jan. 1, catapulted 1,029.72 points, or 3.6 percent, to end the week at 29,278.78.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index surged 90.44 points to 2,149.26.

Advances hammered declines by better than a 10-1 margin as 732 issues rang up gains, and only 75 eased in price, while 30 were unchanged.

An estimated 800 million shares changed hands, compared with 658 million shares Thursday.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices eased slightly in lackluster trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange as many investors chose to ignore the rebound on the Tokyo Stock Exchange.

The key Hang Seng Index, which eased 1.57 points on Wednesday, lost 4.88 points to 2,956.00.

Markets in Hong Kong were closed on Thursday for the Ching Ming Festival holiday.

Turnover amounted to 1.12 billion shares, compared with 1.18 billion shares Wednesday.

The narrower All Singapore Index fell 2.54 points to 415.04.

Turnover amounted to 73.2 million shares, compared with 66.2 million shares Thursday.

Analysts said the volume remained thin with buyers refusing to be drawn into the market.

In Australia, stock prices closed out the week higher on the Sydney Sharemarket boosted by the strong performance in Tokyo.

The blue-chip All Ordinaries Index, which lost 11.2 points Thursday, gained 7.1 points to 1,512.7.

Turnover amounted to around 70.2 million shares, compared with 78.6 million shares Thursday.

BEIJING (APRIL 6) UPI - China will attempt to join the international space-trucking business Saturday with its first commercial satellite launch, using a Chinese rocket to lift a U.S.-made satellite into orbit to provide communications for Asian countries.

A successful launch and insertion into orbit would represent a major triumph for China's 2-decade-old space program and enter the country into the race for space business, currently dominated by the United States and the European Ariane program.

The satellite, known as Asiasat 1 and manufactured by the Hughes Aircraft Co. of Los Angeles, is owned by a $120 million consortium of British, Hong Kong and Chinese companies that plans to sell television and telecommunications relay services in Asia.

A Chinese ''Long March 3'' rocket is scheduled to blast skyward with the 1-ton satellite aboard at 7:49 p.m. (7:49 a.m. EDT) Saturday, from the launch pad at the space center in Xichang, a remote area in southwest China's Sichuan Province.

The launch is to be broadcast live on state television and a small contingent of foreign observers and journalists will be flown to Xichang to watch the launch. Among those expected to attend is U.S. Ambassador James R. Lilley.

As China's first commercial launch, Asiasat 1 is critical to the nation's goal of earning badly needed hard currency by providing an alternative to the U.S. and European space programs.

But it was nearly derailed by disputes with the U.S. government over an export license for the satellite. Asiasat was originally Westar 4, which malfunctioned after a space shuttle launch in 1984 and was retrieved by a later shuttle mission.

U.S. officials negotiated for months before agreeing in 1988 to the Chinese re-launch of the satellite, winning China's assurances that it would safeguard U.S. technology. The United States was also concerned that China, through government subsidies, would unfairly offer bargain-basement launch prices.

The license was again held up last spring following China's violent crackdown on the pro-democracy movement. But President Bush approved the license last December, citing U.S. commercial concerns.

Asiasat reportedly paid nearly $50 million for the satellite. The consortium has declined to disclose the launch charge but sources have estimated the cost at around $30 million. The U.S. and Ariane programs have charged an average of about $45 million.

The launch is being insured through the Chinese government's national insurance firm, with participation of several dozen international carriers for more than $100 million.

China has launched 26 satellites, including weather, communications and spy vehicles, since the first small, 380-pound satellite went up on April 24, 1970, and circled the Earth broadcasting the Chinese Communist song, ''The East is Red.''

The Chinese have already contracted to launch two more Hughes satellites for Australia's Aussat telecommunications concern in 1991 and 1992 and recently won a bid to launch a communications satellite for a consortium of Arab nations.

The Asiasat consortium, consisting of Britain's Cable and Wireless PLC, Hutchison Whampoa of Hong Kong and the China International Trust and Investment Corp., has signed contracts or letters of intent with seven Asian nations for services.

The satellite, with a 10-year lifespan, has 24 transponders for television and telecommunications relay and is capable of reaching 30 Asian nations. The launch is to place it in geostationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator.

HARTFORD, CT (APRIL 6) UPI - Former Sen. Lowell Weicker has a more than 3-1 lead over Republican and Democratic rivals in his independent bid for governor, a poll released Friday showed.

The University of Connecticut survey was the first since Gov. William O'Neill announced March 20 he would not run for re-election, and Weicker apparently gained from the Democratic governor's withdrawal.

UConn's Institute for Social Inquiry polled 500 adults in Connecticut at random and found 39 percent preferred Weicker, even though the former three-term Republican senator has not begun active campaigning.

Another 12 percent preferred Rep. John Rowland, the Republican front-runner; nine percent preferred Rep. Bruce Morrison, the Democratic front-runner; and 40 percent were undecided. The survey was conducted between March 27 and April 3 for The Hartford Courant and had a margin of error of plus five percent.

The last UConn poll taken a month ago when O'Neill was considered the Democratic front-runner showed Weicker was favored by 29 percent of the voters, Rowland 18 percent and Morrison 12 percent.

Weicker - a maverick Republican who gained national fame during the Watergate hearings but angered many GOP leaders with his liberal stands - benefitted from high name recognition, pollsters said.

About half those responding to the latest survey said they did not know enough about either Morrison, a four-term congressman, or Rowland, a three-term congressman, to offer an opinion.

(APRIL 6) UPI - Anti-government demonstrations have NOT stopped in Nepal... even though King Birendra announced democratic reforms today.

After the king's announcement, two people died when police fired on protesters in a town about 120 miles from the palace. In another city, police shot and wounded eight demonstrators.

President Bush will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze later this morning. They will wrap up summit conference plans made by Shevardnadze and Secretary of State Baker. The summit between Presidents Bush and Gorbachev will open May 30th, probably in Washington.

President Bush formally ended the economic sanctions against Panama yesterday. The White House also announced that Bush plans to visit Latin America in the fall. Bush hopes to visit Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Canada's Ontario government has announced what it calls ''the largest rapid-transit undertaking on the table in North America.'' Ontario plans to build a five-BILLION-dollar subway system in the Toronto area.

The privately developed Pegasus rocket sent a military research satellite into orbit yesterday. Officials say the launch paves the way for low-cost access to space for small military, commercial and scientific satellites.

Police in New York City are trying to find out if the murders of four people in a Lower East Side apartment are drug-related. One of the dead was a two-and-one-half year old child. The four were found shot in the head this morning.

Detroit police say the shooting deaths of six people in a reputed crack house occurred in a robbery for drugs or money. Two men and one woman stormed the house on the Northeast side Wednesday night.

PROVIDENCE, RI (APRIL 6) UPI - Providence College basketball Coach Rick Barnes told cheering students he will stay at their Big East school, ending days of speculation he would leave for the University of Virginia.

''Obviously, I've decided to stay at PC,'' Barnes said at the start of a hastily called news conference Thursday night. The announcement ignited several minutes of applause from students crowded into a small auditorium, some with tears in their eyes.

''I went home today and it was probably the first time in three days I've been by myself,'' said Barnes, 35, himself choking back tears. ''I looked up and saw a picture of my son. I simply said, 'There's going to be a day I gotta talk to him about commitment, loyalty, and sacrifice, and sometimes not getting what you want when you want it ... Sometimes you gotta wait.'''

The announcement ended speculation that Barnes was heading south, the region of the country he is from. Thursday, the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch and the Providence Journal-Bulletin reported Barnes had been offered the coaching job at Virginia and was leaning toward taking the job.

The newspapers also quoted sources as saying Providence College was reluctant to release him from the remaining two years on his four-year contract.

Barnes said Virginia never formally offered him the job of replacing long-time head basketball Coach Terry Holland, who is leaving to become athletic director at Davidson.

He also said he had no doubt that Providence College would have released him from his contract if he had asked.

Virginia Athletic Director Jim Copeland confirmed he had held ''serious discussions'' with Barnes, but did not say whether he had formally offered him Holland's job.

Copeland said Barnes' ''sense of loyalty and ethics were among the things that made him attractive to me, and I believe he determined that he had a commitment to Providence College.''

Copeland appears to have few options left. Stanford coach Mike Montgomery, the only other candidate to visit Charlottesville, and Penn State's Bruce Parkhill, reportedly Copeland's third choice, both withdrew their names from contention on Wednesday after learning Barnes would be offered the job.

Montgomery, reached at his home in Palo Alto, Calif., said the turn of events didn't change matters for him. ''No sir,'' he said late Thursday when asked if he would agree to talk to Copeland about the opening. ''We're staying at Stanford.''

A quick solution would be Jeff Jones, Holland's top assistant coach and a former Virginia player. He has interviewed for the job and said Thursday he would accept the position if it was offered.

''I don't know the details of what has happened,'' Jones said. ''I haven't heard from Jim Copeland. Right now, you know as much as I do.''

Barnes was not specific on what his talks at Virginia and with Providence College administrators entailed. He said he spoke at length Thursday with Providence Athletic Director John Marinatto about the future of the program, and changes that may be made.

''I just know that as I stand here before you I did the right thing (in staying),'' Barnes said.

Many students on campus and residents of the city had resigned themselves to Barnes' departure, and expressed anger that basketball coaches were not more loyal to their contracts.

In 1987, Rick Pitino broke his contract when he announced he would leave Providence for the New York Knicks just weeks after promising he would stay.

Gordie Chiesa replaced Pitino, but lasted only one season, opening the way for Barnes. The former coach at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., Barnes led the Friars to NCAA tournament berths in 1989 and 1990, though they lost in the opening round both times.

TILLAMOOK, OR (APRIL 6) UPI - A mild earthquake shook the northern Oregon coast Thursday night, prompting dozens of calls to authorities from anxious residents but no reports of damage or injuries.

The quake occurred just before 10 p.m and measured 3.0 on the Richter scale, the U.S. Geological Survey's Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., reported Friday.

In a populated area, a quake of 3.5 magnitude could cause slight damage. But officials said the epicenter was in a sparsely populated area 15 miles south of Tillamook, which is about 50 miles west of Portland.

A Tillamook County sheriff's deputy said "we got some calls" from residents who felt the quake but that no one reported any damage.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 6) UPI - A major holder of bankrupt Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp.'s debt has agreed in principle to support a management-backed reorganization plan, possibly jeopardizing a bank's proposal.

"It's very significant," attorney Robert Sable said of the decision announced Thursday by Oppenheimer & Co., which holds more than $142 million in the steelmaker's debt.

Sable, who represents Wheeling-Pittsburgh's unsecured creditors, said the move could damage chances for an alternative proposal from Goldman Sachs & Co., a New York investment bank that purchased a large stake in the company's stock.

Attorneys for Goldman Sachs urged Bankruptcy Judge Warren Bentz not to rule on a motion that would kill the stockholders' reorganization proposal. There was no immediate court ruling.

Meawnhile, the steelmaker's bankruptcy case is nearing its fifth anniversary. Wheeling-Pitt was the nation's seventh largest steelmaker before it filed for protection against its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in 1985.

Bentz said Thursday that legal and other professional fees billed to the case total nearly $45 million. He said the money is justified since at least half of it is for accountants who are needed to get accurate figures.

The largest bills have been submitted by the company's counsel, Buchanan Ingersoll, which was paid $7.25 million at the end of 1989, and Price Waterhouse, the steelmaker's accountants, which was paid $6.16 million through last December.

Bentz met Thursday morning with United Steelworkers union representatives frustrated over the delay in the case and lack of progress in negotiating a new contract.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (APRIL 6) UPI - Trade ministers of major industrial and Third World nations will meet April 19 and 20 in Mexico to try and put the faltering Uruguay Round free trade talks back on track, officials said Friday.

The talks within the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade were launched in 1976 in the Uruguayan coastal resort of Punta del Este and are scheduled to conclude in December this year. A "draft package outline" is supposed to be ready by the end of July.

Serious deadlocks have occurred, however, especially on U.S. demands for reduced European Community farm subsidies and insistence by other advanced nations that Japan open up its markets.

Other major issues include U.S. and other rich-nation demands for freedom of service industries like banking and insurance with the Third World saying they in return must receive better deals for their primary goods and textiles.

Officials said these and other big problems cannot be resolved by the meeting next Monday to Wednesday in Geneva of the Uruguay Round supervisory Trade Negotiations Committee.

"People will spell out their complaints about what the other countries are failing to offer and declare what they want," one delegate said. "But this will at least make the major sticking points clear for the informal ministerial meeting in Mexico after Easter," the delegate said.

Officials said that so far 24 trade ministers intend to attend that meeting, representing key western and Third World trading nations. "It will be up to the ministers to decide on what instructions can be handed back to the negotiators if the end-of-July draft package deadline is to be met," another delegate said.

PASCAGOULA, MS (APRIL 6) UPI - Ingalls Shipbuilding, Mississippi's largest private employer with 11,700 workers, is moving full steam ahead with a work force expansion plan because of a $4.5 billion backlog of Navy and international shipbuilding contracts, a company executive said Friday.

President Jerry St. Pe' said Ingalls, a division of Litton Industries, plans to bring up the number of employees to 14,000 by next year to handle current contracts, future contracts and overhaul business.

"As a shipyard, we must concentrate on the long-term future," St. Pe's said. "A planner asks, 'I wonder what to expect from tomorrow's market,' while the winner asks, 'What should I be doing today to make certain that I'm successful tomorrow.' We're taking the winner's approach," he said.

St. Pe' said Ingalls has 20 ships under contract with deliveries extending into the mid-1990s. The backlog includes six Arleigh Burke Class Aegis destroyers, three Wasp Class multipurpose amphibious assault ships, seven Ticonderoga Class Aegis cruisers, three SA'AR 5 Class corvettes for the Israeli Navy, and the overhaul of the Spruance Class multimission destroyer USS John Hancock. This is in addition to a number of engineering and support contract, St. Pe' said.

St. Pe' said Aegis destroyers and amphibious assault ships (LHD) compromise a major portion of Ingalls' future business opportunities. He said the next bid for a Wasp Class ship will be LHD 5, occurring in Fiscal 1991, while LHD 6 is scheduled for funding in Fiscal, 1993. The Navy plans to build as many as 11 LHDs, he said.

"USS Wasp stands today as this country's most technologically-advanced amphibious assault ship," St. Pe' said. "The lead ship of the class is earning for herself, for the Navy and for our shipyard, and its employees an outstanding reputation."

He said the Aegis cruiser program is almost two years ahead of schedule. Of the seven Aegis cruisers Ingalls has to deliver, two will be turned over to the Navy within the next 12 months, and the last five will be completed by late 1993.

In addition to the three corvettes under cotract for the Israeli Navy, St. Pe' said an option for a fourth will be exercised before 1992. He said

Israel plans to build eight to ten corvettes.

"The corvette is a ship for many countries. The level of interest in that ship internationally has been phenomenal," he said. "The foreign market is going to play an increasing role in the future of our company."

St. Pe' also said the overhaul business will play a vital role in the company's future. "The future market will be different and we will change with it," he said. "We will market the capabilities of this shipyard to a much greater degree. The long-term future of our shipyard will require changes, and we must be ready to make those changes."

MEMPHIS, TN (APRIL 6) UPI - Margaret Polk, the "Memphis Belle" whose romance with a World War II bomber pilot turned into an international love story, died Thursday following a bout with cancer. She was 67.

Polk for the last 46 years was the namesake of the Memphis Belle, a B-17 bomber flown by Robert Morgan of Asheville, N.C., in 1942. Morgan is credited with flying the first B-17 to complete 25 missions over Nazi territory in Europe.

Morgan and his crew named their plane the Memphis Belle in 1942 after the romance generated international headlines. Although the couple was engaged they never married and Polk remained single. Morgan says the long separation cooled the romance.

"She was a courageous lady and I'd like for her to be remembered as an upbeat person who never had a bad word for anybody," said Morgan, who plans to attend Polk's funeral.

Polk later said she was the most romantic of the pair but said her ardor cooled in 1943 when she called Morgan's hotel room in Denver and another woman answered the phone. However, it wasn't easy to break the engagement. "The publicity had gone so far I had to get written permission from the War Department to break the engagement," Polk said.

Morgan and Polk remained friends and Morgan, 69, said he last saw her three years ago during a Memphis Belle ceremony on Mud Island in Memphis.

After the romance ended, Margaret Polk returned to school and later became a flight attendant. She also became an alcoholic and became known for her work with people stricken with the disease. Services for Polk will be held Saturday in Memphis.

DANBURY, CT (APRIL 6) UPI - Pop singer-songwriter Neil Sedaka was in good condition Friday in Danbury Hospital, where he was considering surgery to relieve inflammation of the colon, a spokesman said.

Sedaka, 51, who lives in the affluent New York City suburb of Westport, was admitted Tuesday for treatment of diverticulitis, said hospital spokesman John Morgan. Doctors were not sure when Sedaka might be released Morgan said.

Sedaka began composing popular music at age 16 and Connie Francis turned his first song, "Stupid Cupid," into a hit. He went on to fame and fortune with hits of his own, including "Breaking Up Is Hard to Do," "Sweet Sixteen," "Calendar Girl" and "I'm Living Right Next Door to an Angel."

Between 1959 and 1963 alone, Sedaka sold more than 25 million records as a singer and songwriter. Sedaka made a comeback as a performer in the 1970s, including his pop duet "Bad Blood" with Elton John and began recording again. He also has appeared as a single act in nightclubs.

NEWARK, NJ (APRIL 6) UPI - The Atlantic 10 Conference's athletic directors have voted to keep Penn State University as a full-time member for another season, reversing a previous decision.

The athletic directors, meeting for eight hours at a Newark hotel, on Thursday voted 7-1 with one abstention, to keep a full schedule of men's basketball games with the Nittany Lions for the 1990-91 season.

West Virginia University's AD Ed Pastilong, voted against the decision and Duquesne University's Brian Colleary abstained, which is considered a ''no'' vote.

In December, the athletic directors voted to boot the Nittany Lions because they will join the Big Ten. Penn State, which isn't expected to compete in men's basketball in the Big Ten until 1992-93, will participate next season in the Atlantic 10 Conference's 12 men's and women's championships sponsored by the league.

''It was a complete reversal,'' Colleary said of Thursday's vote.

Pastilong said WVU has no animosity toward Penn State, but the decision to play the Lions twice instead of once puts a hardship on the Morgantown, W.Va., school.

''We had set our plans in motion in terms of our basketball scheduling and this will cause us to alter our plans,'' Pastilong said. ''We will go along with the Atlantic 10, but I will say we were not one to support the move.''

League Commissioner Ron Bertovich said he was satisfied with Thursday's vote, saying Penn State won't be a lame-duck member.

''They're a full member in good standing,'' he said.

Bertovich described the meeting as very business-like and ''somewhat cordial.'' But the discussions reportedly became heated as Rutgers and Temple lobbied to keep Penn State as a member.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 6) UPI - Prince Michael of Sachsen-Weimar Eisenach, the doyen of the German aristocracy, made it clear Friday he had renounced claims on his ancestral property in East Germany.

In publicly stating he would not seek the return of the famed Wartburg Castle, the aging aristocrat followed the lead given by major West German companies that said they would start fresh in East Germany.

In a letter received Friday by the foundation that now runs his ancestral family home, Prince Michael denied a report in the West German Bunte magazine that said he had demanded the return of the castle seized after the Communist takeover of East Germany 40 years ago.

He termed the claims as ''coarse lies.''

''Since my abdication after the November 1918 revolution there have been no legal claims to the Wartburg,'' he said.

Prince Michael also described as ''made-up'' West German newspaper reports that he had legal right to claim 14 castles and palaces in East Germany.

''In 1945 my family had no further properties in the territory that became East Germany,'' he said.

The prince's announcement follows statements by leading West German companies and financial institutions saying that they would not seek compensation for lost assets.

Dresdner Bank A.G., West Germany's second largest bank and the first West German financial institution to open offices in East Germany, has repeatedly stressed it had no claims on former property.

Even in the triumphant return to Dresden, the city where the bank was founded over 100 years ago, executives were careful to make arrangements to move into new headquarters rather than claim luxurious former property.

The mammoth Daimler-Benz concern, manufacturer of the Mercedes-Benz, has also announced that it will not seek to regain its former assets in East Germany.

But the apparent aristocratic and corporate generosity did not extend to the level of smaller West German investors.

Officials said thousands of claims have been lodged by West Germans for the return of houses, apartment buildings and businesses which were taken over by the state.

Stories abound of silent, well-dressed men quickly getting out of West German limousines to photograph houses in Leipzig or Jena in the south of the country. Several residents said they lived in terror that the price of German reunification will mean the loss of the place they know as home.

CAIRO, EGYPT (APRIL 6) UPI - A Czechoslovak diplomat was found dead on a Red Sea beach, it was reported Friday.

State-run Cairo Radio reported that the diplomat, Giefl Giri, was the Czech military attache in Egypt but a spokesman for the Egyptian Interior Ministry said the dead man was believed to have held another diplomatic post.

''We do not believe this man is the military attache,'' the spokesman said. ''A body was definitely found and we think it is a Czechoslovak diplomat. That's all we can say now.''

There was no one available Friday for comment in the Czechoslovak Embassy in Cairo, and a security guard said there would be no statement before Sunday.

It was not immediately known if foul play was involved. Cairo Radio, quoting Egypt's official Middle East News Agency, said the diplomat ''suffocated while swimming in the Red Sea.'' It said examination of the body showed ''obvious bruises on his face and different parts of the body as a result of friction against coral reefs in the Red Sea.''

The radio report did not provide an exact cause of death. It said the diplomat's disappearance was reported by an unidentified Czechoslovak national in Port Safaga, a Red Sea resort about 300 miles southeast of Cairo.

(APRIL 6) UPI - The district attorney in Redding, California, says NO criminal charges will be filed in the death of a striking Greyhound driver. He was crushed by a bus while picketing March 3rd, the day after the strike began. Shasta County District Attorney Stephen Carlton says the death of union member Robert Waterhouse was a ''tragic accident''- NOT the result of malice or negligence by the bus driver.

A court order limits the picketing by employees striking against Kaiser Permanente's Southern California hospitals. Contract talks resumed yesterday in the strike, now in its fifth day. About 11-thousand 200 service, clerical and technical employees at seven Southern California Kaiser hospitals and 45 clinics are on strike... curtailing medical care for the H-M-O's members.

Moslem fundamentalists kidnapped and beat three people they caught eating during Ramadan, the Moslem fasting time. WASHINGTON (APRIL 6) UPI - Seven members of the House Armed Services Committee's military construction subcommittee will travel to the Pacific and East Asia April 7-17 to look at possible alternatives to U.S. bases in the Philippines, Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., said Friday.

The delegation also will visit Vietnam and Cambodia to see the extent to which the Soviet Union has reduced aircraft and ships at Cam Rahn Bay, a former U.S. naval base abandoned after the fall of Vietnam.

They will also explore the status of the Vietnamese withdrawal of troops from Cambodia, the establishment of a new government in Cambodia, the return of the remains of American soldiers and normalization of relations.

Schroeder, the head of the subcommittee and the only Democrat making the trip, said the group will explore alternatives to Clark Air Base and the Subic Bay Naval Base in the Philippines. A lease agreement is drawing to a close and is being renegotiated, but there is rising opposition within the Philippines to a renewal of the agreement and some sentiment in the United States that if lease rates go up the United States should leave.

The group will first stop in Hawaii for a briefing by the head of U.S. forces in the Pacific, and then go to Guam, a U.S. territory 1,500 miles east of the Philippines and a potential site for relocating the bases. However, there is strong pressure in Guam for the United States to relinquish excess federal land for commercial development.

After stopping in Guam, the delegation goes to Singapore, 1,500 miles southwest of the Philippines, and then to Bangkok, Vietnam and Cambodia. They will also visit Jakarta, Indonesia, and stop on Johnston Atoll, a tiny South Pacific island where the Army runs a plant to destroy chemical weapons.

Others on the trip include Reps. Norm Sisisky, D-Va., Jim Courter, R-N.J., James Hansen, R-Utah, Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., and Guam's non-voting delegate to Congress, Republican Ben Blaz.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (APRIL 6) UPI - Final preparatory talks for a major September conference on the distress of the world's 42 poorest countries ended Friday without agreement on the main issues of future financial aid and debt relief.

A draft Program of Action adopted by delegates from 105 nations for the Sept. 3-14 ministerial level conference in Paris did include a draft commitment by the least developed countries to try and reduce high birth rates.

"Population questions are now mentioned which was previously taboo," said John Sankey, the British ambassador in Geneva and chairman of the two-week preparatory session.

Population growth in the least developed countries averaged 2.9 percent a year in the 1980s, against economic growth of 2.2 percent and negative agricultural growth of minus 0.8 percent, according to the host organization, the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development.

The draft document for Paris also stressed a need to better "mobilize" private savings for national economic advantage "whether they be in Swiss banks or under a bed in Burundi," Sankey told reporters.

But there was "a wide range of differences" on several major issues, he said, and especially on U.S. insistence that the least developed countries make political and economic reforms to adopt multi-party and private enterprise systems.

Sankey said the two biggest unresolved questions concerned financial aid targets for the 1990s and how to handle the debt burden of the poor nations.

Also unresolved was the issue of increasing debt and debt service burdens, with the poorest countries asking for but Western industrial countries opposing the writing off most and in some cases all outstanding debts.

WARSAW, POLAND (APRIL 6) UPI - A young Pole protesting the U.S. refusal to formally recognize Lithuania's rebel government ended an 11-day hunger strike in front of the U.S. Embassy Friday, saying he had achieved his goals.

Andrzej Pietruczanis, 23, said he collected 3,000 signatures on a petition urging recognition of the Baltic republic's independence ''by governments of the civilized world.''

The petition was delivered to the embassy with a letter to President Bush, he said.

''We have achieved our aim,'' Pietruczanis said. ''The protest was heard and moved public opinion, which now exerts pressure on President Bush to take a stand.''

The United States never recognized the Soviet Union's annexation of Lithuania during World War II and considers the republic a sovereign state but has not formally recognized the government that declared its independence last month.

Pietruczanis began his fast March 28, staying in a small tent with a cot pitched outside the embassy gates.

He said he was persuaded to end the fast by the president of the London-based Polish government-in-exile, Ryszard Kaczorowski. Pietruczanis belongs to the Federation of Fighting Youth, which recognizes only the government in exile.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (APRIL 6) UPI - President Corazon Aquino accepted Friday the resignation of her controversial agrarian reform secretary and appealed for unity in backing a land redistribution program considered crucial to defeating a communist insurgency.

Aquino named undersecretary Benjamin Leung in an acting capacity to succeed Florencio Abad, who resigned Thursday after the Congress refused to confirm his nomination on grounds he was biased against landlords and industrialization.

''It pained her to let him go,'' Deputy Press Secretary Lourdes Sytangco said. ''But what is important is the (agrarian reform) program.''

She said Aquino spoke with Abad by telephone Friday and asked him to reconsider his decision but he refused.

Abad's confirmation was ''bypassed'' for the eighth time Wednesday because of opposition from congressmen belonging to the Democratic Filipino Party, or LDP, the main political party in Aquino's ruling coaliton.

Abad, a former congressman, is a member of the rival Liberal Party.

Aquino, in an interview on state radio, blamed politics for the non-implementation of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program, which she signed in June 1988 as the centerpiece of her social justice program.

Observers said Abad's resignation and the frequent changes in secretaries have delayed enforcement of the program considered vital in defusing the 21-year-old communist insurgency waged by the 18,000-strong New Peoples Army.

''We have only two more years left,'' Aquino said, referring to the end of her term in 1992. ''We have wasted so much time because Abad had to face the hearings (for three months) instead of devoting that time in the implementation of the agrarian reform program.''

''I am appealing to all our countrymen, most especially to those in power, that if possible we should forget about politics and help our people so that our country can progress,'' she said.

Abad, who was appointed in a Cabinet revamp following the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt, is the fourth secretary to quit the post in four years.

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) UPI - A young escape artist who said he would "laugh at death" celebrated Houdini's 116th birthday Friday by escaping from a locked box thrown into the icy East River.

Laurice, clad in a wet suit and shackled with chains, was out of the box before its bottom was barely soaked by the 43-degree salt water under the Manhattan Bridge.

Houdini's best time was 59 seconds - but his box sank like a stone.

Laurice appeared from under his box seven seconds after it hit the water. "I saw my life flash before my eyes," the shivering Laurice told a crowd of rain-drenched and slightly cynical reporters and photographers as he was hauled out on a pier.

Laurice, who refuses to give the rest of his name, his age, or anything else except that he comes from Staten Island and is a "seventh-generation magician," said he wanted to pull off the stunt to call attention to the pollution in New York's waterways. "I've done underwater escapes before but never in this sewer," he said before he was dumped in.

"The cold was extreme," he said. "It almost pushed me into unconsciousness." Charitably, no one mentioned the time Houdini escaped from under an ice-covered river.

The hyped-up stunt was announced in a hush-hush memo Thursday to the city's news media ("please do not reveal location and time)." The appointed time was 7 a.m., but by the time TV crews straggled in and Laurice repeated his spiel, 9 a.m. was approaching and his aides were looking around nervously as an occasional police car cruised by.

Finally, as a police car stopped and officers got out, Laurice's assistants hurriedly put on handcuffs and wrapped chains around his ankles and chest.

They placed him in the coffin-like box, hammered it shut, locked the locks and lowered the box into the river. Then - pow! - out swam Laurice from under the box, and it sank under the waves.

The box was made by cabinet maker Dean Dooley, who said he built it on a challenge from Laurice who promised to pay him $125,000 if he couldn't excape. Dooley said the bottom of the box was glued and strapped with metal. "I don't undertstand it," he said, gazing down at the bubbles from his vanished box.

Laurice, however, was not through for the week. Saturday night he was to appear at the Roxy disco in Manhattan where one of his acts involved him "laying on on a bed of spikes as Basheba, the 300-pound cave woman jumps on top of him." Let's hope Basheba is not cold.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (APRIL 6) UPI - The government of Prime Minister V.P. Singh opposes a refund of the $470 million paid by Union Carbide if the accord on compensation in the 1984 Bhopal gas leak disaster is overturned, Attorney General Soli Sorabjee said Friday.

Sorabjee made the statement on the second day of hearings by a special Supreme Court panel reviewing petitions seeking to annul the Feb. 14, 1989 agreement between the U.S. corporation and the administration of Singh's predecessor, Rajiv Gandhi.

Singh's minority National Front government, which took power Dec. 2, has joined a number of victims' rights groups in challenging the validity of the accord, reached on the orders of another Supreme Court tribunal.

Opponents of the agreement charge that the Gandhi government, the sole legal representative of survivors of history's worst industrial disaster, violated the constitution by failing to consult victims before entering the agreement.

Sorabjee told the special five-judge appeals panel that should it overturn the agreement, the $470 million paid by Union Carbide would be retained pending a resolution of the original civil liability suit in which India sought $3 billion.

He was asked by Chief Justice Sabyachi Mukherjee if the credibility of the Supreme Court tribunal that approved the settlement would be harmed if the accord was overturned and the money retained.

Sorabjee replied, ''The settlement was nothing more than a compromise between the parties concerned. There is no question of the court's honor being affected if the Union of India decided to retain the money.''

Under the accord, Union Carbide paid $470 million in return for an end to all civil and criminal litigation arising from the Dec. 3, 1984, leak of poisonous fumes from the company's now-defunct pesticide plant in Bhopal, the capital of Madhya Pradesh state.

The leak has claimed more than 3,300 lives and tens of thousands of people remain partially or permanently disabled. Doctors say up to five people continue to die weekly from the effects of the gas.

The Gandhi government charged that the firm's negligence led to the release of the vapors from an underground tank that held 40 tons of methyl isocyanate.

Union Carbide claimed the leak resulted from sabotage by a disgruntled employee and it filed a countersuit in which it argued that the central and Madhya Pradesh governments shared some liability for the disaster.

The settlement provoked strong condemnation by survivors of the accident and Gandhi administration opponents, who alleged that it was achieved through illegal payoffs. No evidence has been presented to support the charges and the administration and Union Carbide denied them.

VATICAN CITY (APRIL 6) UPI - Pope John Paul II met with Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat Friday and said he hopes negotiations will enable Israelis and Palestinians ''to live in peace, liberty, dignity and tranquility,'' each in their own country.

A statement issued by the Vatican also recalled that the pope has frequently expressed the need to avoid any ''recourse to arms and especially violence exercised through terrorist means and reprisal.''

Arafat, dressed in a military uniform, met the white-robed pope for 20 minutes in the pontiff's Vatican apartment with only an interpreter present.

It was the third time Arafat, who is on a two-day official visit to Italy, has had a private audience with the pope. The previous audiences were on Sept. 15, 1982, and Dec. 23, 1988.

Chief Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro Valls issued a formal statement summarizing the Vatican view of the audience.

''For the two peoples who live in the Holy Land, the Israeli people and the Palestinian people, the pope repeated his profound conviction that only a sincere will for mutual understanding, of respect for the rights and fears of the other, can launch the path of negotiations,'' the Vatican statement said.

''This path can put an end to the sufferings and permit each people to live in peace, liberty, dignity and tranquility in its own country, open to collaboration with the other peoples of the region,'' it said.

The pope for years has publicly backed proposals for a Palestinian homeland, saying in 1988 that Palestinians and Israel have an ''identical fundamental right to have their own country in which to live in liberty, dignity and security, in harmony with neighboring peoples.''

At a news conference, Arafat expressed ''warm thanks'' for the pope's position. He said his conversation with John Paul was ''as always, very warm'' and that they discussed all aspects of the Palestinian question and efforts to establish ''a just and global peace in Palestine, the land of peace.''

He said they also discussed ''the question of the holy city of Jerusalem.''

''We talked about the dangerous demographic changes which are distorting the historic character of the city,'' Arafat said, an apparent reference to the Israeli settlement of Soviet Jews in East Jerusalem and the territories occupied after the 1967 Six Day War.

Pope John Paul has frequently called for some form of international status for Jerusalem that would guarantee access to shrines that are sacred to Christians, Moslems and Jews.

The Vatican has never established diplomatic relations with Israel, largely because of the Jerusalem issue, but also has not recognized the Palestinian state proclaimed by the Palestinian National Council at the end of 1988.

The Vatican statement said the pope recalled that the audience took place at a time when Jewish, Christian and Moslem believers all are marking or preparing for periods of special prayer: Passover, Easter and Ramadan.

''The pope expressed the keen hope that almighty and merciful God will heed the prayers of so many believers, and particularly the peoples of the Middle East, and grant them the much-desired peace, in justice and security,'' the Vatican statement said.

It said Arafat had requested the audience and the pope granted it, ''considering it a fundamental part of his ministry to encourage every positive attitude in the search for peace, and in particular to strengthen the will for dialogue as the only valid means of finding adequate solutions to conflicts.''

It recalled that in the nearly 11 1/2 years of his pontificate, the pope ''has many times stressed the need to exclude in the most absolute manner any recourse to arms and especially violence exercized through terrorist means and reprisal.''

In a brief reference to Lebanon, the statement said the pope ''stressed that with arms it will not be possible to give back to the country its dignity and concrete sovereignty.''

BEIJING (APRIL 6) UPI - Teenage gangs committing robbery and extortion by knifepoint are on the rise in Beijing schools, the official press reported Friday, blaming the phenomenon on overexposure to pornography and lax ideological indoctrination.

Beijing police have broken up several middle school gangs, among them the Iron Fist Gang, the Thunder and Lightning Gang, and a group calling itself The 18 Brave Warriors, according to the daily Beijing Youth News.

Armed with knives, teenage gang members rob, extort money in return for permission to cross their ''turf'' and molest female classmates in emulation of ancient feudal Chinese and ''international'' underground societies, the report said.

Chinese middle school students are 12 to 18 years old.

''According to Public Security sources, middle school gangs are increasing rapidly in Beijing, endangering society and causing great alarm among educational authorities,'' the paper said.

The increase was attributed to ''the bad effect of pornographic and violent magazines and films, as well as the relaxing of ideological education.''

Most of a group of 50 gang members arrested recently were found to be ''doubly lacking'' in both scholarship and ideological indoctrination, the report said.

Government authorities have called for strengthened Marxist indoctrination at all educational levels, from elementary schools to advanced research institutes, as part of the fallout from the violent crackdown on last spring's democracy movement.

The suppression of political dissent has been accompanied by a much publicized anti-pornography campaign, during which even elementary school students have been encouraged to turn in ''obscene'' materials. Some responded by handing in their own baby pictures.

LONDON (APRIL 6) UPI - Stock prices closed lower in moderate trading Friday on the London International stock exchange after a new poll showed the ruling Conservative Party trailing by more than 24 points.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 7.9 points Thursday, fell 18.4 points to 2,221.7. For the week, the key index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, lost 26.8 points.

The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 16.1 points to 1,740.2 and posted a loss of 28.5 points for the week.

Volume amounted to around 579 million shares, compared with 499 million shares changing hands Thursday.

Analysts said prices slipped as a wide range of factors, including some caution ahead of the weekend meeting in Paris of the Group of Seven finance ministers, influenced the market.

Market watchers also said the approaching Easter break and an opinion poll which showed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to be the most unpopular British prime minister since 1938 sent many large institutional investors to the sidelines.

The Gallup poll, which showed Mrs. Thatcher's approval rating falling to 24 percent, came just one month before British local government elections.

The political news raised uncertainties about the Labor Party's policy on privatized industries. The water companies' share package lost 22 cents to $23.40 on the news.

Cable and Wireless, the telecommunications company which recently raised its stake in Hong Kong Telecom, lost 18 cents to $8.03 on worries over political trouble in China.

Boots eased 5 cents to $4.10 after announcing that 500 employees, mostly junior shop managers, will be laid off. The major retailer said Thursday the managing director of its Halfords subsidiary was resigning, and some analysts recently downgraded profit forecasts for the group.

Laing Properties climbed 83 cents to $11.60. Pall Mall, which is bidding for Laing, said it bought another 10 percent, raising its interest to more than 40 percent.

Among some of the day's other highlights, British Land gained 22 cents to $6.11 and Hammerson Properties gained 14 cents to $11.64.

Elsewhere in Europe, stocks ended lower on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange in sluggish trading.

The German Stock Index, which slipped 4.86 points Thursday, fell 10.55 points to 1,947.84. For the week, the closely watched index posted a loss of 20.71 points.

Traders said prices eased on reports that General Electric Co. has filed a suit against Daimler-Benz to block its planned jet engine alliance with United Technologies' Pratt & Withney unit, leading to profit taking among some blue-chip stocks.

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 6) UPI - With a name like Bill Smitrovich, an actor has to be good. Names like Smitrovich or Smuckers tend to make people hide their grins. Maybe that's why Issur Danielovitch changed his name to Kirk Douglas, or Malden Sekulovich adopted the name Karl Malden.

Apparently Smitrovich is made of sterner stuff. He kept his name, which now adorns the credits of the movie "Crazy People" starring Dudley Moore, as well as the TV series "Life Goes On" in the role of Drew Thatcher.

Smitrovich definitely is not getting by on his catchy name or because he is a Tom Selleck clone. So you know he's a good and capable actor who understudied 26 roles in the New York production of Arthur Miller's play "The American Clock."

It is common for an actor to understudy one or two roles then sit around in a dressing room praying one of his fellow cast members to be stricken with cholera just before the curtain rises.

But 26? How starved must an actor get before learning every word and bit of business for an entire cast? Including one black character? And what if everyone was felled by the flu? Would Smitrovich have been called upon to put on a one-man show?

Undaunted with his death-wish to become an actor, Smitrovich accepted the challenge and encamped himself in the dressing room. "It was my first professional credit and I would have done anything," he said. "I'd have understudied 56 roles if necessary.

"I had the advantage of sitting in the audience watching rehearsals, so I knew the flow of the story and the performances. There weren't 26 actors to begin with. All the actors played several parts, which meant if one of them got sick, then I might have to play three or four parts as the understudy. As it happened, several days after opening night the lead got sick and I filled in for two or three performances. It was the biggest high of my life."

Happily, the lead actor did not suffer cholera and Smitrovich returned to waiting for another act of devine intercession. Providence provided. Later in the run another actor, this one 20 years older, fell ill and Smitrovich jumped into the breach once again.

"I was definitely prepared to play any role, no matter how elderly," he said. "I was even prepared to play the black role, but as another minority. I had the talent to pull it off, but today I couldn't do it."

In "Crazy People" Smitrovich plays a single character, a guy named Bruce, a very crazy person incarcerated in a laughing academy. Bruce is a conglomerate of a lot of people I knew when I worked in a veteran's hospital and with mentally and emotionally damaged children," he said.

"But this movie isn't an introspection into mental health. I know quite a bit about mental health. I've been involved with that problem over the years. This picture doesn't make fun of such people. I take it all very personally.

"The film walks the line and we hope no one will take offense. After all, I work with Chris Burke in 'Life Goes On' every week. Chris is retarded and we are very good friends. He's a wonderful young man.

"This movie is an allegory, a fantasy about an advertising executive (Moore) who tells the truth about his clients' products, so naturally everyone thinks he's crazed. When they put him in the sanitarium the residents help him write hilariously truthful ads, which are a great success. It's a lot of fun.

"The inmates are an interesting ensemble of guys with various quirks and disorders. They could be compared to the group in 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest,' but I don't like that because 'Cuckoo's Nest' was dark and introspective. This is a luxury sanitarium for well-to-do eccentrics. We function as sort of a joke-telling unit that comes up with the incredibly funny ad campaigns."

There were some not-so-funny things about "Crazy People," including the fact that John Malcovich starred as the avid ad man for three weeks before he was replaced by Dudley Moore, and Tony Bill took over as director from Mitch Markowitz. "It all worked out," Smitrovich said. "I didn't understudy anybody."

SOFIA, BULGARIA (APRIL 6) UPI - A minority rights group threatened Friday to stage protests next week to press demands for the return of property abandoned by ethnic Turks who fled persecution under former leader Todor Zhivkov.

The protests will include hunger strikes, walkouts and a mass rally by as many as 30,000 people next Saturday in the Bulgarian capital, a spokesman for the Movement for Freedom and Rights said.

A small hunger strike already was underway Friday in Sofia. The 10 participants were camped out on benches outside the National Assembly building under banners that read, ''Give us back our homes'' and ''We want our jobs.''

The protests are centered around demands for the return of houses and other properties that were abandoned or sold at a fraction of their value by members of Bulgaria's Turkish-speaking Moslem minority.

An estimated 330,000 ethnic Turks fled Bulgaria for Turkey in 1989 alone to escape Zhivkov's forced assimiliation campaign, under which it became illegal for them to use their Moslem names.

As many as one-third have returned to Bulgaria since pro-reform communists overthrew Zhivkov and halted the repressive measures. And many are now hoping to reclaim their old jobs and property.

The ruling council of the Movement for Freedom Rights, a group that defends the interests of ethnic Turks, said the protest campaign was expected to begin Monday with hunger strikes and demonstrations at provincial government buildings across the country.

Council members said the protests would continue until the minority's demands are met.

Deputy Prime Minister Nora Ananieva said the government has already taken steps to address the grievances of ethnic Turks but said there were legal complications to returning houses and jobs now possessed by other Bulgarians.

''The hunger strikers want the government, in a single act, to invalidate all contracts with respect to their dwellings, so they can immediately recover their homes,'' Ananieva said.

She said the government was setting up special panels to examine each claim and would try to find the ''least painful solution'' that meets the requirements of the law.

NEW YORK (APRIL 6) UPI - A bank manager who holds a would-be robber hostage, an expensive missile system that doesn't work and a general who has a secret face-lift - those are among the headlines in the Washington Capital.

That's a fictional newspaper where the ensemble cast works in the new ABC series "Capital News," to debut as a two-hour movie on Monday, April 9, 9-11 p.m. Eastern time. The show goes into its regular series slot Monday, April 16, 10-11 p.m. Eastern time, and it has the fast pace and fine performances to be a hit

Lloyd Bridges cracks the whip as Jo-Jo Turner, the editor of the paper patterned after The Washington Post. Christian Williams, the show's co-executive producer, worked for the Post for many years.
